Census population (1993), 7,293,390 (3,742,593 females). Estimate (1996), 8,088,900 (64·4% urban in 1999).

The UN gives a projected population for 2010 of 9·62m.

Population of the main towns (1991 estimate, in 1,000): Santo Domingo, the capital, 3,523 (1999); Santiago de los Caballeros, 1,289 (1995); La Vega, 189; San Francisco de Macorís, 162; San Pedro de Macorís, 137; La Romana, 136.

The population is mainly composed of a mixed race of European (Spanish) and African blood. The official language is Spanish; about 0·15m. persons speak a Haitian-French Creole.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

1996 births, 190,000; deaths, 46,000. Rates, 1996: birth, 23·5 (per 1,000 population); death, 5·7. Annual population growth rate, 1990–99, 1·8%. Life expectancy, 1999, 65·0 years for males and 70·0 for females. Infant mortality, 1999, 10·2 per 1,000 live births. Fertility rate, 1999, 2·7 children per woman.

CLIMATE

A tropical maritime climate with most rain falling in the summer months. The rainy season extends from May to Nov. and amounts are greatest in the north and east. Hurricanes may occur from June to Nov. Santo Domingo, Jan. 75°F (23·9°C), July 81°F (27·2°C). Annual rainfall 56" (1,400 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The constitution dates from 28 Nov. 1966. The President is elected for four years, by direct vote, and has executive power. A constitutional amendment of Aug. 1994 prohibits the president from serving consecutive terms. In 1994 the constitution was amended to allow for a second round of voting in a presidential election, when no candidate secures an absolute majority in the first ballot. There is a bicameral legislature, the Congress, comprising a 30-member Senate (one member for each province and one for the National District of Santo Domingo) and a 149-member Chamber of Deputies, both elected for four-year terms. Citizens are entitled to vote at the age of 18, or less when married.

National Anthem. 'Quisqueyanos valientes, alcemos' ('Valiant Quisqueyans, Let us raise our voices'); words by E. Prud'homme, tune by J. Reyes.

RECENT ELECTIONS

Presidential elections were held on 16 May 2000. Turn-out was 76·1%. The Partido Revolucionario Dominicana (Dominican Revolutionary Party/PRD) candidate, Hipólito Mejía, won 49·9% of the vote, the Partido de la Liberación Domincana (Dominican Liberation Party/PLD) candidate Danilo Medina 30·4% and the Partido Reformista Social Cristiano (Social Christian Reform Party/PRSC) candidate 92-year-old former president Joaquín Balaguer 24·6%. Medina withdrew from the run-off, paving the way for Mejía to take office.

Parliamentary elections were held on 16 May 2002. In the election to the Chamber of the Deputies the PRD won 73 seats, the PLD 41 and the PRSC 36. In the Senate elections on the same day, the PRD won 29 seats, the PLD 1 and the PRSC 1.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. The road network in 1996 totalled 12,600 km, of which 6,225 km were surfaced. In 1996 there were 224,000 passenger cars (29·8 per 1,000 inhabitants), 137,000 trucks and vans, and 14,550 buses and coaches.

Rail. In 1995 the total length was 757 km, comprising 375 km of the Central Romana Railroad, 142 km of the Dominican Republic Government Railway between Guayubin and the port of Pepillo, and 240 km operated by the sugar industry.

Civil Aviation. There are international airports at Santo Domingo (Las Americas), Puerto Plata, La Romana and Punta Cana. Dominican Airlines ceased operations in 1995 and was put up for privatization. Aerolíneas Santo Domingo and Air Atlantic Dominicana operate scheduled domestic and international services. In 2000 Santo Domingo was the busiest airport, handling 4,652,000 passengers, followed by Puerto Plata (estimated at 2,023,000 passengers) and Punta Cana (1,745,000).

Shipping. The main ports are Santo Domingo, Puerto Plata, La Romana and Haina. In 1998 the merchant marine totalled 9,000 GRT. In 1994 vessels totalling 10,821,000 net registered tons entered and vessels totalling 10,683,000 NRT cleared.

Telecommunications. In 2000 there were 894,200 telephone main lines in use (104·5 for every 1,000 inhabitants). Mobile phone subscribers numbered 255,900 in 1998 and there were 2,500 fax machines in 1995. The number of Internet users in April 1999 was 25,000.

Postal Services. In 1995 there were 215 post offices.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. The judicial power resides in the Supreme Court of Justice, the courts of appeal, the courts of first instance, the communal courts and other tribunals created by special laws, such as the land courts. The Supreme Court, consisting of a president and eight judges chosen by the Senate, and the procurator-general, appointed by the executive, supervises the lower courts. Each province forms a judicial district, as does the National District, and each has its own procurator fiscal and court of first instance; these districts are subdivided, in all, into 97 municipalities, each with one or more local justices. The death penalty was abolished in 1924.

The population in penal institutions in June 1997 was 11,114 (135 per 100,000 of national population).

Religion. The religion of the state is Roman Catholic; there were 6·65m. adherents in 1999.

Education. Primary instruction is free and compulsory for children between seven and 14 years of age; there are also secondary, normal, vocational and special schools, all of which are either wholly maintained by the State or state-aided. In 1996–97 there were 1·36m. primary school pupils, and 313,840 pupils at secondary level. There are 4 universities, 3 Roman Catholic universities, 1 Adventist university, 3 technological universities and 1 Roman Catholic university college, and 5 other higher education institutions. Adult literacy was 83·2% in 1999 (83·2% among both males and females).

In 1997 expenditure on education came to 2·3% of GNP and 13·8% of total government spending.

Health. In 1992 there were 11,130 doctors, 1,898 dentists and 6,035 nurses. There were 723 government hospitals in 1992.

CULTURE

Broadcasting. There were (1994) more than 170 broadcasting stations in Santo Domingo and other towns; this includes the two government stations. There were seven television stations (colour by NTSC). In 1997 there were 1·44m. radio and 770,000 television receivers.

Press. In 1996 there were 12 dailies with a combined circulation of 416,000.

Tourism. There were 2,649,000 foreign tourists in 1999 (394,000 cruise ship arrivals in 1998). Tourism receipts in 1999 totalled US$2,524m. For some 15 years the Dominican Republic has been experiencing annual growth of 10% or more in both tourist arrivals and hotel capacity. In Dec. 1998 there were 41,600 hotel rooms (11,400 in 1987).

Festivals. The Festival Presidente de Música Latina, featuring musicians from all over Latin America, is held in June.

EAST TIMOR

República Democrática de Timor-Leste
(Democratic Republic of East Timor)

Capital: Dili
Population estimate, 2000: 983,000
GDP per capita: not available

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Portugal abandoned its former colony, with its largely Roman Catholic population, in 1975, when it was occupied by Indonesia and claimed as the province of Timor Timur. The UN did not recognize Indonesian sovereignty over the territory. An independence movement, the Revolutionary Front for an Independent East Timor (FRETILIN), maintained a guerrilla resistance to the Indonesian government which resulted in large-scale casualties and alleged atrocities. On 24 July 1998 Indonesia announced a withdrawal of troops from East Timor and an amnesty for some political prisoners, although no indication was given of how many of the estimated 12,000 troops and police would pull out. On 5 Aug. Indonesia and Portugal reached agreement on the outlines of an autonomy plan which would give the Timorese the right to self-government except in foreign affairs and defence.

In a referendum on the future of East Timor held on 30 Aug. 1999 the electorate was some 450,000 and turn-out was nearly 99%. 78·5% of voters opted for independence, but pro-Indonesian militia gangs wreaked havoc both before and after the referendum. The militias accused the UN of rigging the poll. There was widespread violence in and around Dili, the provincial capital, with heavy loss of life, and thousands of people were forced to take to the hills after intimidation. East Timor's first democratic election took place on 30 Aug. 2001 in a ballot run by the UN, with FRETILIN winning 57% of the vote and 55 of the 88 seats in the new constituent assembly. East Timor became an independent country on 20 May 2002 but unrest continues.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

East Timor has a total land area of 17,222 sq. km (6,649 sq. miles), consisting of the mainland (14,609 sq. km), the enclave of Oscússu-Ambeno in West Timor (2,461 sq. km), and the islands of Ataúro to the north (144 sq. km) and Jaco to the east (8 sq. km). The mainland area incorporates the eastern half of the island of Timor. Oscússu-Ambeno lies westwards, separated from the main portion of East Timor by a distance of some 100 km. The island is bound to the south by the Timor Sea and lies approximately 500 km from the Australian coast.

The UN population estimate for mainland East Timor in 1999 was 920,000; Oscússu-Ambeno has an estimated population of 55,000 and Ataúro an estimated population of 8,000. Population density for East Timor, 53 per sq. km.

The largest city is Dili, East Timor's capital. In 1999 its population was an estimated 180,000.

The ethnic East Timorese form the majority of the population. Non-East Timorese, comprising Portuguese and West Timorese as well as persons from Sumatra, Java, Sulawesi and other parts of Indonesia, are estimated to constitute approximately 20% of the total population.

During Indonesian occupation the official language was Bahasa Indonesia. East Timor's new constitution designates Portuguese and Tetum (the region's lingua franca) as the official languages, and English and Bahasa Indonesia as working languages.

Dili: East Timor's capital is located on the north coast of the island on the Ombai Strait. Historically it is the chief port and commercial centre of East Timor although much of the city was burnt to the ground during the violence ensuing from the 1999 referendum.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Based on UN figures for the period 1995–2000: birth rate, 32 per 1,000; death rate, 15 per 1,000; fertility rate, 4·3 births per woman; annual population growth rate, 1·7%; life expectancy at birth, 48 years.

From having the world's highest rate of infant mortality in the early 1980s, East Timor's infant mortality rate has dropped to around 60 per 1,000 live births in 1999, although the figure varies widely between urban and rural areas.

CLIMATE

In the north there is an average annual temperature of over 24°C (75°F), weak precipitation—below 1,500 mm (59") annually—and a dry period lasting five months. The mountainous zone, between the northern and southern parts of the island, has high precipitation—above 1,500 mm (59")—and a dry period of four months. The southern zone has precipitation reaching 2,000 mm (79") and is permanently humid. The monsoon season extends from Nov. to May.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The 88-seat Constituent Assembly is formed from a national and district assembly, which have 75 and 13 seats respectively. The President, who is elected for a period of five years, is appointed by the Constituent Assembly.

National Anthem. 'Eh! Foho Ramelau, Foho Ramelau !' ('Hey, Mount Ramelau, Mount Ramelau!'); words by F. Borja da Costa, tune by A. Araujo.

RECENT ELECTIONS

Presidential elections were held on 14 April 2002. Former separatist guerrilla leader Xanana Gusmão (FRETILIN) won a landslide victory with 82·6% of votes cast against 17·3% for Xavier do Amaral, his single rival. Turn-out was 86%. Amaral, who served as president of East Timor for nine days in 1975, in the short period between Portuguese withdrawal and Indonesian occupation, declared that his intention to run for the presidency was solely to provide the electorate with a choice of candidates.

Elections to the 75-member national assembly took place on 30 Aug. 2001, the anniversary of the referendum for independence two years earlier. The Frente Revolucionária do Timor Leste Independente (FRETILIN; Revolutionary Front for an Independent East Timor) won 57·37% of the vote and took 43 seats with 208,531 votes. The Partido Democrático (PD; Democratic Party) won 8·72% of votes cast and 7 seats; the Partido Social Democrata (PSD; Social Democratic Party) won 8·18% and 6 seats; the Associação Social-Democrata Timorense (ASDT) 7·84% and 6 seats; the União Democrática Timorense (UDT) 2·36% and 2 seats; the Partido do Povo de Timor (PPT) 2·01% and 2 seats. Other parties won less than 2% of the vote. In elections to the district assembly, held on the same day, FRETILIN secured 12 of the 13 seats, giving them a total of 55 seats in the 88-seat constituent assembly. Turn-out for the elections was 91·3%. 23 of the seats went to women.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

President: Xanana Gusmão; b. 1946 (ind.; sworn in 20 May 2002).

In March 2003 the government was comprised as follows:

Prime Minister and Minister for Development and the Environment: Marí Bim Amude Alkatiri (FRETILIN).

Deputy Prime Minister: Ana Maria Pessoa Pereira da Silva Pinto.

Minister for Foreign Affairs and Co-operation: José Ramos Horta. Justice: Domingos Maria Sarmento. Finance: Madalena Brites Boavida. Internal Administration: Rogerio Tiago Lobato. Health: Rui Maria de Araujo. Education, Culture and Youth: Armindo Maia. Agriculture and Fisheries: Estanislau Aleixo da Silva. Transportation, Communications and General Employment: Ovidio Amaral.

UN Transitional Administration: http://www.un.org/peace/etimor/etimor.htm

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS
East Timor is a member of the UN, the IMF and the Asian Development Bank.

ECONOMY

Currency. The official currency is the US dollar. The Australian dollar and the Indonesian rupiah, both previously used, no longer serve as legal tender.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Electricity. In 1996 only a quarter of households in East Timor had electricity.

Oil and Gas. Although current production is small, the Timor Gap, an area of offshore territory between East Timor and Australia, is one of the richest oil fields in the world outside the Middle East. Potential revenue from the area is estimated at US$11bn. The area is split into three zones with a central 'zone of occupation' (occupying 61,000 sq. km). Royalties on oil discovered within the central zone were split equally between Indonesia and Australia following the Timor Gap Treaty which came into force on 9 Feb. 1991. Questions over East Timor's rights to oil revenue from the area have arisen following the 1999 independence referendum.

Minerals. Gold, iron sands, copper and chromium are present.

Agriculture. Although the presence of sandalwood was one of the principal reasons behind Portuguese colonization, its production has declined in recent years. Coffee is grown extensively.

Fisheries. The total fish catch in 1999 was estimated at 513 tonnes.

INDUSTRY

Labour. In 2000 the unemployment rate exceeded 80% of the labour force.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Imports and Exports. All basic goods such as rice, sugar and flour are imported. Coffee and cattle are important exports.

COMMUNICATIONS

Civil Aviation. There is an international airport at Dili.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Religion. Over 90% of East Timor's population are Roman Catholic, with Protestants, Muslims, Hindus and Buddhists accounting for the remainder.

DIPLOMATIC REPRESENTATIVES
Of the United Kingdom in East Timor (Pantai Kelapa, PO Box 194, The Post Office, Dili)

ECUADOR

République del Ecuador

Capital: Quito
Population estimate, 2000: 12·65m.
GDP per capita, 2000: (PPP$) 3,203
HDI/world rank: 0·732/93

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

In 1532 the Spaniards founded a colony in Ecuador, then called Quito. In 1821 a revolt led to the defeat of the Spaniards at Pichincha and thus independence from Spain. On 13 March 1830, Quito became the Republic of Ecuador. Political instability was endemic. From the mid-1930s, President José Maria Velasco Ibarra gave more continuity to the presidential regimes, although he was deposed by military coups from four of his five presidencies.

From 1963 to 1966 and from 1976 to 1979 military juntas ruled the country. The second of these juntas produced a new constitution which came into force on 10 Aug. 1979. Since then presidencies have been more stable but civil unrest continued in the wake of economic reforms and attempts to combat political corruption.

In Jan. 2000 President Mahaud declared a state of emergency as protesters demanded his resignation over his handling of the country's economic crisis. There was a coup on 21 Jan., but after five hours in control the military junta handed power to the former vice-president, Gustavo Noboa.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Ecuador is bounded in the north by Colombia, in the east and south by Peru and in the west by the Pacific ocean. The frontier with Peru has long been a source of dispute. It was delimited in the Treaty of Rio, 29 Jan. 1942, when, after being invaded by Peru, Ecuador lost over half her Amazonian territories. Ecuador unilaterally denounced this treaty in Sept. 1961. Fighting between Peru and Ecuador began again in Jan. 1981 over this border issue but a ceasefire was agreed in early Feb. Following a confrontation of soldiers in Aug. 1991 the foreign ministers of both countries signed a pact creating a security zone, and took their cases to the UN in Oct. 1991. On 26 Jan. 1995 further armed clashes broke out with Peruvian forces in the undemarcated mutual border area ('Cordillera del Cóndor'). On 2 Feb. talks were held under the auspices of the guarantor nations of the 1942 Protocol of Rio de Janeiro (Argentina, Brazil, Chile and the USA), but fighting continued. A ceasefire was agreed on 17 Feb., which was broken, and again on 28 Feb. On 25 July 1995 an agreement between Ecuador and Peru established a demilitarized zone along their joint frontier. The frontier was re-opened on 4 Sept. 1995. Since 23 Feb. 1996 Ecuador and Peru have signed three further agreements to regulate the dispute. The dispute was settled in Oct. 1998. Confirming the Peruvian claim that the border lies along the high peaks of the Cóndor, Ecuador gained navigation rights on the Amazon within Peru.

No definite figure of the area of the country can yet be given. One estimate of the area of Ecuador is 275,830·0 sq. km, excluding the litigation zone between Peru and Ecuador, which is 190,807 sq. km, but including the Galápagos Archipelago (8,010 sq. km), situated in the Pacific ocean about 960 km west of Ecuador, and comprising 13 islands and 19 islets. These were discovered in 1535 by Fray Tomás de Berlanga and had a population of 10,207 in 1996. They constitute a national park, and had about 80,000 visitors in 1995.

The population is an amalgam of European, Amerindian and African origins. Some 40% of the population is Amerindian: Quechua, Swiwiar, Achuar and Zaparo. In May 1992 they were granted title to the 1m. ha of land they occupy in Pastaza.

The official language is Spanish. Quechua and other languages are also spoken.

Census population in 1990, 9,648,189. Estimate, 1996, 11,698,400; density, 42 per sq. km.

The UN gives a projected population for 2010 of 14·90m.

In 1999, 64·3% lived in urban areas.

The population was distributed by provinces as follows in 1996:

SOCIAL STATISTICS

1995: births, 408,983; deaths, 50,867; marriages, 70,480. Rates, 1995 (per 1,000 population): birth, 35·7; death, 4·4; marriage, 6·2. Life expectancy at birth, 1999, was 67·6 years for males and 72·8 years for females. Annual population growth rate, 1990–99, 2·1%. Infant mortality, 1999, 24·6 per 1,000 live births; fertility rate, 1999, 3·0 children per woman. In 1998 the most popular age for marrying was 20–24 for both men and women.

CLIMATE

The climate varies from equatorial, through warm temperate to mountain conditions, according to altitude, which affects temperatures and rainfall. In coastal areas, the dry season is from May to Dec., but only from June to Sept. in mountainous parts, where temperatures may be 20°F colder than on the coast. Quito, Jan. 59°F (15°C), July 58°F (14·4°C). Annual rainfall 44" (1,115 mm). Guayaquil, Jan. 79°F (26·1°C), July 75°F (23·9°C). Annual rainfall 39" (986 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

A new constitution came into force on 10 Aug. 1998. It provides for an executive president and a vice-president to be directly elected by universal suffrage. The president appoints and leads a Council of Ministers, and determines the number and functions of the ministries that comprise the executive branch. The new constitution strengthened the executive branch by eliminating mid-term congressional elections and by restricting congress' power to challenge and remove cabinet ministers.

Legislative power is vested in a 125-member National Congress, 105 members in two- or multi-seat constituencies and 20 members elected at large by proportional representation. Voting is obligatory for all literate citizens of 18–65 years.

National Anthem. 'Salve, Oh Patria, mil veces, Oh Patria' ('Hail, Oh Fatherland, a thousand times, Oh Fatherland'); words by J. L. Mera, tune by A. Neumane.

RECENT ELECTIONS

Dissatisfaction with President Fabián Alarcón led to presidential elections in 1998. Jamil Mahuad, candidate of the centre-right Popular Democracy party (DP), won in the second round of the presidential election on 12 July 1998, with 51·3% of the votes, against 48·7% for Alvaro Noboa, a populist businessman. In the first round on 31 May he had defeated five other candidates to win 35·3% of the vote. After a coup in Jan. 2000 Noboa (who was elected vice-president) replaced Jamil Mahuad as president. In the first round of presidential elections held on 20 Oct. 2002 Col. Lucio Gutiérrez (the instigator of the coup) won 20·3% of the vote, against 17·4% for Alvaro Noboa. In the run-off held on 24 Nov. 2002 Gutiérrez won 54·3% against 45·7% for Noboa.

In National Congress elections on 31 May 1998 the People's Democracy–Christian Democrat Union (DP–UDC) won 35 seats, the Social Christian Party (PSC) 26, Ecuadorian Roldosist Party (PRE) 25, the Party of the Democratic Left (ID) 17 and Pluri–National Pachakutik Movement–New Country (MUPP–NP) 6. No other party won more than three seats.

Elections to the 70-member Constitutional Assembly (members of the National Congress) were held on 30 Nov. 1997. The Social Christian Party won 20 seats and the People's Democracy–Christian Democrat Union 10 seats, with the remaining 40 seats going to 15 other parties.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

President: Col. Lucio Gutiérrez; b. 1957 (sworn in on 15 Jan. 2003, having previously been in power as one of the leaders of the coup that deposed democratically-elected president Jamil Mahuad on 21 Jan. 2000 only to be forced to stand down less than a day later).

Vice-President: Alfredo Palacio.

In March 2003 the cabinet comprised:

DEFENCE

Military service is selective, with a one-year period of conscription. The country is divided into four military zones, with headquarters at Quito, Guayaquil, Cuenca and Pastaza.

In 2000 defence expenditure totalled US$314m. (US$25 per capita), representing 1·6% of GDP.

Army. Strength (1999) 50,000, with about 100,000 reservists.

Navy. Navy combatant forces include two diesel submarines and two ex-UK frigates. The Maritime Air Force has 11 aircraft but no combat aircraft. Naval personnel in 1999 totalled 3,000 including some 1,500 marines.

Air Force. The Air Force had a 1999 strength of about 3,000 personnel and 78 combat aircraft, and includes Jaguars, Mirage F-1s and Kfirs.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

Ecuador is a member of the UN, WTO, OAS, Inter-American Development Bank the Andean Group, LAIA, IOM and the Antarctic Treaty.

ECONOMY

Agriculture accounted for 12·9% of GDP in 1998, industry 35·2% and services 50·2%.

Overview. A reform programme was announced in 1992, including the privatization of 20 state-owned enterprises. A new economic plan was promulgated in Nov. 1996, envisaging privatization of the oil and electricity sectors, but in 1998 privatization was put on hold as the sale of 35% of state telecommunications companies was suspended in April 1998 owing to a lack of serious bidders. Congress approved the Economic Transformation Law on 1 March 2000 to introduce flexibility into the labour market and encourage further private investment in the oil, electrical and telecommunications sectors.

Currency. The monetary unit is the US dollar. Inflation was 96·2% in 2000 but was brought down to 37·7% in 2001. In March 2000 the government passed a law to phase out the former national currency, the sucre, to be replaced by the US dollar, and in April bank cash machines began dispensing dollars instead of sucres. On 11 Sept. 2000 the dollar became the only legal currency. Foreign exchange reserves were US$880m. in June 2002 and gold reserves 845,000 troy oz.

Budget. Total revenue and total expenditure from 1991 to 1995 (in 1bn. sucres) was as follows:

Revenue	1,907	3,096	4,371	5,374	8,030
Expenditure	1,739	3,145	4,166	5,717	8,451

The budget deficit in 1998 was nearly 6% of GDP.

In 2000 VAT was increased from 10% to 12% and corporate tax from 15% to 25%.

Performance. Real GDP growth was negative in 1999, at –7·3%, partly owing to years of mismanagement and partly to El Niño. There was a recovery in 2000, however, with the growth rate reaching 2·3%. In 2001 growth was 5·4%, the highest in Latin America. Total GDP in 2001 was US$18·0bn.

Banking and Finance. The Central Bank of Ecuador (President of the Directorate, Mauricio Yépez Najas), the bank of issue, with a capital and reserves of US$1,557m. at 31 Dec. 1995, is modelled after the Federal Reserve Banks of the USA; through branches opened in 16 towns, it now deals in mortgage bonds. All commercial banks must be affiliated to the Central Bank. Legislation of May 1994 liberalized the financial sector.

There are stock exchanges in Quito and Guayaquil.

Weights and Measures. The metric system is the legal standard but English and old Spanish measures are still in use. A case (caja) of bananas = 18·14 kg.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Environment. According to the World Bank Atlas Ecuador's carbon dioxide emissions were the equivalent of 2·2 tonnes per capita in 1998.

Electricity. Installed capacity was 2·75m. kW in 1996. Production was 9·66bn. kWh in 1998; consumption per capita was 625 kWh.

Oil and Gas. Production of crude oil in 1996 was 141m. bbls. Estimated reserves, 1999, 2,100m. bbls. In 1996 natural gas production was 45 petajoules.

Minerals. Main products are silver, gold, copper and zinc. The country also has some iron, uranium, lead, coal, cobalt, manganese and titanium.

Agriculture. There were 1·57m. ha of arable land in 1998 and 1·43m. ha of permanent crops. In 1995, 28·8% of the economically active population worked in agriculture.

50,000 ha of rich virgin land in the Santo Domingo de los Colorados area has been set aside for settlement by medium and large landowners. A law of 1994 restricts the redistribution of land to small farmers to land which has lain fallow for more than three years.

The staple export products are bananas and coffee. Main crops, in 1,000 tonnes, in 2000: bananas, 6,816; sugarcane, 6,200; rice, 1,520; potatoes, 788; maize, 747; plantains, 476; palm oil, 268; cassava, 184; soybeans, 170; oranges, 157; coffee, 133. Ecuador's annual banana crop is exceeded only by that of India.

Livestock, 2000: cattle, 5·11m.; sheep, 2·13m.; pigs, 2·87m.; horses, 521,000; goats, 284,000; asses, 269,000; chickens, 130m.

Forestry. Excepting the agricultural zones and a few arid spots on the Pacific coast, Ecuador is a vast forest. 11·13m. ha, or 40·2% of the land area, was forested in 1995, but much of the forest is not commercially accessible. In 1990, 12·08m. ha and 43·6% of the land area had been under forests. In 1999, 11·34m. cu. metres of roundwood were produced.

Fisheries. In 1993 primary sea export products were valued at US$498·9m. Fish landings in 1999 were 497,872 tonnes (almost entirely from sea fishing).

INDUSTRY

Manufacturing showed an annual average increase of 3·2% from 1991 to 1996, accounting for around 15·4% of GDP in 1997. Service industries accounted for 46·1% of GDP in 1996. Main products include (1997, in 1,000 tonnes): residual fuel oil, 3,728; cement, 2,688; distillate fuel oil, 1,912; petrol, 1,324.

Labour. Out of 2,697,000 people in urban employment in 1997, 983,200 were in community, social and personal services, 870,900 in trade, restaurants and hotels, and 475,300 in manufacturing industries. In June 2001, 10·4% of the workforce was unemployed, down from 14·1% in June 2000.

Trade Unions. The main trade union federation is the United Workers' Front.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Most restrictions on foreign investment were removed in 1992 and the repatriation of profits was permitted. Foreign debt was US$13,281m. in 2000.

Imports and Exports. Imports and exports for calendar years, in US$1m.:

	1995	1996	1997	1998	1999
Imports f.o.b.	4,057	3,680	4,666	5,198	2,786
Exports f.o.b.	4,381	4,873	5,264	4,203	4,451

Ecuador is the world's leading exporter of bananas (US$845m. in 1995). Other major exports (1995, in US$1m.): shrimps, 673; coffee beans, 244; cocoa beans and products, 133; cut flowers, 79. Main export markets, 1995 (in US$1m.): USA, 1,847 (42%); Colombia, 246; Chile, 193; Germany, 166; Spain, 149. Main import suppliers: USA, 1,290 (32%); Colombia, 396; Japan, 328; Germany, 192; Brazil, 187.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. In 1998 there were estimated to be 43,197 km of roads. A trunk highway through the coastal plain, currently under construction, will link Machala in the extreme southwest with Esmeraldas in the northwest, and with Quito and the northern section of the Pan-American Highway. In 1997 there were 483,900 passenger cars (40·5 per 1,000 inhabitants) and 41,330 lorries and vans. There were 1,258 fatalities in road accidents in 1997.

In 1998 storms and floods on the coast, caused by El Niño, resulted in 2,000 km of roads being damaged or destroyed.

Rail. The railway was closed in 1995.

Civil Aviation. There are international airports at Quito (Mariscal Sucre) and Guayaquil (Simon Bolivar). The national carriers are Tame Linea Aerea del Ecuador (955,200 passengers in 1999), SAETA (274,500 passengers in 1999) and Ecuatoriana (157,000 passengers in 1999). In 2000 Quito handled 1,953,859 passengers (1,036,578 on domestic flights) and 111,867 tonnes of freight, and Guayaquil handled 1,285,583 passengers (686,964 on domestic flights) and 38,471 tonnes of freight.

Shipping. Ecuador has three major seaports, of which Guayaquil is the most important, and six minor ones. In 1998 the merchant navy totalled 171,000 GRT of ocean-going vessels, including oil tankers 93,000 GRT. In 1997 vessels totalling 3,263,000 NRT entered ports and vessels totalling 18,277,000 NRT cleared.

Telecommunications. In 2000 there were 1,265,200 main telephone lines, equivalent to 100·0 for every 1,000 persons, and 275,000 PCs were in use (21·7 for every 1,000 persons). Mobile phone subscribers numbered 383,200 in 1999 and there were 30,000 fax machines in 1995. Ecuador had approximately 180,000 Internet users in Dec. 2000.

Postal Services. In 1995 there were 267 post offices.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. The Supreme Court in Quito, consisting of a President and 30 Justices, comprises six chambers each of five Justices. It is also a Court of Appeal. There is a Superior Court in each province, comprising chambers (as appointed by the Supreme Court) of three magistrates each. The Superior Courts are at the apex of a hierarchy of various tribunals. There is no death penalty.

The population in penal institutions in Dec. 1996 was 9,961 (85 per 100,000 of national population).

Religion. The state recognizes no religion and grants freedom of worship to all. In 1997 there were 11·04m. Roman Catholics and 0·9m. followers of other faiths.

Education. In 1997–98 there were 167,582 pre-primary pupils with 10,992 teachers. Primary education is free and compulsory. Private schools, both primary and secondary, are under some state supervision. In 1996–97 there were 17,367 primary schools with 1·88m. pupils; and, in 1995, 2,965 secondary schools. In the public sector in 1995–96 there were: 9 universities, 3 Roman Catholic, 12 technical, 1 agricultural and 2 polytechnical universities, 2 institutes of technology and 1 military polytechnic; and in the private sector: 2 universities, 1 Roman Catholic and 1 technological university. Adult literacy was 91·0% in 1999 (male, 92·8%; female, 89·1%).

Health. In 1993 there were 12,149 doctors and 433 hospitals, 1,542 dentists and 906 pharmacists.

CULTURE

Broadcasting. There were 4·15m. radio sets and 1·55m. TV receivers in 1997 (colour by NTSC).

Press. There were 29 daily newspapers in 1996, with a circulation of 820,000.

Tourism. Foreign tourists numbered 509,000 in 1999, with spending of US$343m.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

There is evidence of Neolithic habitation along the Nile and there was agricultural activity by 6000 BC. Around 3100 BC Menes united Upper and Lower Egypt and so began the rule of 31 successive pharaonic dynasties. This period may be divided into three broad phases. The Old Kingdom, which lasted from c. 2575–2150 BC, was governed centrally from Memphis and saw the construction of the Giza pyramids. The Middle Kingdom (c. 2050–1650 BC) saw Egypt reach its zenith culturally and intellectually. The era finished with the incursions of the Hyksos, a nomadic Asiatic tribe. The New Kingdom came into being with the expulsion of the Hyksos around 1550 BC and lasted until 1050 BC. It saw Egypt achieve its greatest territorial dominance, with Syria, Palestine and northern Iraq all under Egyptian jurisdiction.

The last Pharaoh was ousted by Persian invading forces under Cambyses in 525 BC. The Persians remained in power until overrun by Alexander the Great around 330 BC. He founded the port city of Alexandria, including its great lighthouse, and made it the commercial and cultural centre of the Greek world. On his death in 305 BC, Ptolemy of Macedonia seized power, establishing a dynasty which lasted until 30 BC and the suicide of Cleopatra. Egypt then became a province of the Roman empire until Islamic forces took control in AD 642.

Under the successive rule of Turkish, Arabic and Mameluke leaders, Egypt gained an increasingly Arabic Islamic culture. In 1517 it was absorbed into the Ottoman empire. Napoleonic forces seized the country between 1798 and 1801, but were forced to flee by a combined Anglo-Ottoman force. Muhammad Ali (1805–40) succeeded in establishing a hereditary dynasty of Khedives but with the opening of the Suez Canal in 1869 and Britain's purchase of the Khedives' shares, Egypt's strategic importance paved the way for foreign intervention and domination.

In the Second World War (1939–45) Egypt supported the Allies. Following a revolution in July 1952 led by Gen. Neguib, King Farouk abdicated in favour of his son but in 1953 the monarchy was abolished. Neguib became president but encountered opposition from the military when he attempted to move towards a parliamentary republic. Col. Gamal Abdel Nasser became head of state on 14 June 1954 (president from 1956), and remained in office until he died on 28 Sept. 1970. In 1956 Egypt nationalized the Suez Canal, a move which led Britain, France and Israel to mount military attacks against Egypt until forced by the UN and the USA to withdraw.

The 1960s and 1970s saw constant conflict with Israel until President Muhammad Anwar Sadat, who succeeded Nasser, made a dramatic peace treaty with Israel in March 1979. Sadat was assassinated on 6 Oct. 1981, and was succeeded by the vice-president, Lieut.-Gen. Muhammad Hosni Mubarak.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Egypt is bounded in the east by Israel and Palestine, the Gulf of Aqaba and the Red Sea, south by Sudan, west by Libya and north by the Mediterranean. The total area is 997,739 sq. km, but the cultivated and settled area, that is the Nile Valley, Delta and oases, covers only 35,189 sq. km. A number of new desert cities are being developed to entice people away from the overcrowded Nile valley. Population density in this latter, 1992, 1,557·9 per sq. km. In 1999, 55% of the population were rural. In 1997 the population was 61,404,000.

The UN gives a projected population for 2010 of 79·26m.

2·3m. Egyptians were living abroad in 1997.

Principal cities, with estimated 1998 populations (in 1,000): Cairo, 7,109; Alexandria, 3,485; Giza, 2,326; Shubra Al Khayma, 912; Port Said, 492; Suez, 437.

Smaller cities, with 1996 populations (in 1,000): Mahalla Al Kubra, 395; Hulwan, 372; Tanta, 371; Mansura, 369; Luxor (Uqsur), 361; Asyut, 343; Zagazig, 267; Fayum, 261; Ismailia, 254; Kafr Ad Dawwar, 232; Aswan, 219; Damanhur, 212; Menia, 201; Beni Suef, 172; Qena, 171; Suhag, 170; Shibin Al Kom, 160.

Cairo: The Romans occupied a town called Babylon (now the Misrah al-Qadimar quarter) on the site of Cairo and contemporary Cairo sprang from the town of Al-Fustat. Successive dynasties added royal suburbs until 969 when the Fatmids established a rectangular walled city initially named al-Mausuriyah, re-named al-Qahira in 973–974. In Greater Cairo is one of the Seven Wonders of the World, the Great Pyramids, and not far away on the Giza platform is the Sphynx.

The official language is Arabic, although French and English are widely spoken.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Births, 1997, 1,654,695 (27·5 per 1,000 population); deaths, 389,301 (6·5). Marriages, 1994, 530,000 (rate per 1,000 population, 9·1); divorces, 90,000 (1·5). Annual population growth rate, 1990–99, 2·0%. In 1991 the average family size was 4·3 and 40% of the population was under 40 years. Life expectancy at birth, 1999, was 65·3 years for males and 68·5 years for females. Fertility rate, 1999, 3·2 births per woman; infant mortality, 1999, 41 per 1,000 live births. Egypt has made some of the best progress in recent years in reducing child mortality. The number of deaths per 1,000 live births among children under five was reduced from more than 100 in 1990 to only just over 50 in 1999.

In the Human Development Index, or HDI (measuring progress in countries in longevity, knowledge and standard of living), Egypt's index achieved the second largest improvement during the last quarter of the 20th century, rising from 0·430 in 1975 to 0·635 in 1999. Only Indonesia recorded a greater increase.

CLIMATE

The climate is mainly dry, but there are winter rains along the Mediterranean coast. Elsewhere, rainfall is very low and erratic in its distribution. Winter temperatures are comfortable everywhere, but summer temperatures are very high, especially in the south. Cairo, Jan. 56°F (13·3°C), July 83°F (28·3°C). Annual rainfall 1·2" (28 mm). Alexandria, Jan. 58°F (14·4°C), July 79°F (26·1°C). Annual rainfall 7" (178 mm). Aswan, Jan. 62°F (16·7°C), July 92°F (33·3°C). Annual rainfall (trace). Giza, Jan. 55°F (12·8°C), July 78°F (25·6°C). Annual rainfall 16" (389 mm). Ismailia, Jan. 56°F (13·3°C), July 84°F (28·9°C). Annual rainfall 1·5" (37 mm). Luxor, Jan. 59°F (15°C), July 86°F (30°C). Annual rainfall (trace). Port Said, Jan. 58°F (14·4°C), July 78°F (27·2°C). Annual rainfall 3" (76 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The Constitution was approved by referendum on 11 Sept. 1970. It defines Egypt as 'an Arab Republic with a democratic, socialist system' and the Egyptian people as 'part of the Arab nation'. The President is nominated by the People's Assembly and confirmed by plebiscite for a six-year term. The President may appoint one or more Vice-Presidents. The People's Assembly is a unicameral legislature consisting of 444 members directly elected from 222 constituencies for a five-year term, and ten members appointed by the President. There is a Constitutional Court.

The President appoints the Prime Minister and a Council of Ministers. It is traditional for two ministers to be Coptic Christians.

A 210-member consultative body, the Shura Council, was established in 1980. Two-thirds of its members are elected and one-third appointed by the President.

National Anthem. 'Biladi' ('My homeland'); words and tune by S. Darwish.

RECENT ELECTIONS

Elections for the People's Assembly were held in three rounds on 18 and 29 Oct. and 13 Nov. 2000. Turn-out was low. The National Democratic Party (NDP) gained 388 seats (including 35 'independents'); non-partisans, 37; Wafd, 7; Al-Tagamu, 6; Nasserites, 3; Liberal Party, 1.

On 26 Sept. 1999 a referendum was held to confirm the People's Assembly's nomination of Hosni Mubarak for a fourth term as president. Turn-out was 79% with Mubarak gaining 93·97% support.

DEFENCE

Conscription is selective, and for three years. Military expenditure totalled US$2,821m. in 2000 (US$45 per capita), representing 3·2% of GDP. According to Deadly Arsenals, published by the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace, Egypt has a chemical and biological weapons programme.

Army. Strength (1999) 320,000 (250,000 conscripts). In addition there were 150,000 reservists, a Central Security Force of 150,000, a National Guard of 60,000 and 20,000 Border Guards.

Navy. Major surface combatants include one destroyer and ten frigates. A small shore-based naval aviation branch operates 24 helicopters. There are naval bases at Alexandria, Port Said, Mersa Matruh, Port Tewfik, Hurghada and Safaqa. Naval personnel in 1999 totalled 20,000.

Air Force. Until 1979 the Air Force was equipped largely with aircraft of USSR design, but subsequent re-equipment involves aircraft bought in the West, as well as some supplied by China. Strength (1999) is about 30,000 personnel (10,000 conscripts), 129 attack helicopters and 523 combat aircraft including F-16s, F-4 Phantoms, MiG-21s, F-7s (Chinese MiG-21s) and Mirages.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

Egypt is a member of the UN, WTO, the League of Arab States, OAPEC (Organization of Arab Petroleum Exporting Countries), the African Union, African Development Bank, COMESA, IOM, OIC and the International Organization of the Francophonie.

ECONOMY

In 1998 services accounted for 50·2% of GDP, industry 32·3% and agriculture 17·5%.

Overview. With slowing growth since 2000, conditions have worsened with the fall in tourism revenues since 11 Sept. 2001. The service sector dominates the economy, and the tourism sector and the Suez Canal are important revenue earners. Egypt is chiefly a cash economy with basic banking services. There is a large informal market. Each year Egypt receives US$2bn. in military and civilian assistance from the USA. In Feb. 2002 foreign donors agreed US$10·3bn. in aid over three years. Excessive bureaucracy is a concern. Following reforms since the early 1990s, by 2000 around 50% of state-owned enterprises were fully privatized. By the end of 2000 a total of 172 state-owned enterprises had been sold, generating US$3·9bn. However, privatization has stalled. Foreign investment has financed a development project in the Sinai Peninsula and Upper Egypt that aims to increase the inhabited area of the country from 6% to 20% in 20 years.

Currency. The monetary unit is the Egyptian pound (EGP) of 100 piastres. Inflation was 2·4% in 2001. Faced with slowing economic activity, the country devalued the Egyptian pound four times in 2001. In Jan. 2003 the Egyptian pound was allowed to float against the dollar after years of a government-controlled foreign exchange regime. In May 2002 foreign exchange reserves were US$12,587m. and gold reserves 2·43m. troy oz. Total money supply in May 2002 was £E70,345m.

Budget. The financial year runs from 1 July. Revenues in 1997–98 were £E69,084m. and expenditure £E71,703m. Main sources of revenue were income and profits taxes, 22·7%; sales taxes, 18·3%; customs duties, 17·8%; oil revenue, 7·0%. Main items of expenditure were salaries and pensions, 31·0%; public debt interest, 21·5%.

Performance. Real GDP growth was 5·1% in 2000 and 3·3% in 2001. Total GDP in 2001 was US$98·5bn.

Banking and Finance. The Central Bank of Egypt (founded 1960) is the central bank and bank of issue. The Governor is Dr Mahmoud I. Abul-Eyoun.

In 1999, four major public-sector commercial banks accounted for some 70% of all banking assets: the National Bank of Egypt (the largest bank, with assets of nearly £E74bn.), the Banque Misr, the Bank of Alexandria and the Banque du Caïre. There were 40 other domestic commercial banks, 15 investment banks and 30 regional development banks, as well as foreign banks, branches and joint ventures. Foreign banks have only been allowed to operate since 1996.

There are stock exchanges in Cairo and Alexandria.

Weights and Measures. In 1951 the metric system was made official with the exception of the feddan and its subdivisions. However, other traditional measures are still in use: Kadah = 1/96th ardeb = 3·36 pints. Rob = 4 kadahs = 1·815 gallons. Keila = 8 kadahs = 3·63 gallons. Ardeb = 96 kadahs = 43·555 gallons, or 5·44439 bu., or 198 cu. decimetres. Rotl = 144 dirhems = 0·9905 lb. Oke = 400 dirhems = 2·75137 lb. Qantar or 100 rotls or 36 okes = 99·0493 lb. 1 Qantar of unginned cotton = 315 lb. 1 Qantar of ginned cotton = 99·05 lb. The approximate weight of the ardeb is as follows: wheat, 150 kg; beans, 155 kg; barley, 120 kg; maize, 140 kg; cotton seed, 121 kg. Feddan, the unit of measure for land = 4,200·8 sq. metres = 7,468·148 sq. pics = 1·03805 acres. 1 sq. pic = 6·0547 sq. ft = 0·5625 sq. metre.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Environment. According to the World Bank Atlas Egypt's carbon dioxide emissions in 1998 were the equivalent of 1·7 tonnes per capita.

Electricity. Installed capacity was 17m. kW in 1997. Electricity generated in 1998 was 57·8bn. kWh. Egypt now exports electricity to Jordan and Syria. Consumption per capita was 861 kWh in 1998. Electricity sector investments reached approximately £E25bn. in 1996–97. The use of solar energy is expanding.

Oil and Gas. Oil was discovered in 1909. Oil policy is controlled by the state-owned Egyptian General Petroleum Corporation, whole or part-owner of the production and refining companies. Oil reserves in 2000 were 8·2bn. bbls. Production of crude oil has been declining from a record 992,000 bbls. a day in 1996 to an estimated 770,000 bbls. a day in 1999.

As a result of a series of new discoveries in 1999 and 2000 gas reserves are thought to be as high as 3,400bn. cu. metres. Annual revenue from future natural gas exports could exceed US$1·5bn. 1999 total production amounted to 14·7bn. cu. metres. By 1995, 75% of power was gas-generated.

Water. The Aswan High Dam, completed in 1970, allows for a perennial irrigation system.

The Mubarak Pumping Station, the world's largest, has been operational since Jan. 2003. Located behind the Aswan High Dam at Lake Nasser, since its inauguration it has been pumping 14·5m. cu. metres of water per day into a 67 km canal to irrigate approximately 540,000 feddans of desert land in Toshka.

Minerals. Production (1993–94, in tonnes): phosphate, 0·86m.; iron ore (1995), 2·44m.; salt (1996), 1·53m.; kaolin (1995–96), 0·26m.; quartz (1995–96), 90,393; asbestos (1996), 1,836. Mining for uranium ore began near Aswan in May 1991.

Agriculture. There were 2·83m. ha of arable land in 1998 and 0·47m. ha of permanent crops. In 1996, of the total cultivated area 18·4% was reclaimed desert. Irrigation is vital to agriculture and is being developed by government programmes; it now reaches most cultivated areas and in 1998 covered 3·3m. ha. The Nile provides 85% of the water used in irrigation, some 55,000m. cu. metres annually. There were 90,000 tractors in 1998 and 2,370 harvester-threshers.

In 1994 there were 5,214 agricultural co-operatives. 0·71m. feddan of land had been distributed by 1991 to 0·35m. families under an agrarian reform programme. In 1995, 33·1% of the workforce were engaged in agriculture. Cotton, sugarcane and rice are subject to government price controls and procurement quotas.

Output (in 1,000 tonnes), 2000: sugarcane, 15,668; wheat, 6,564; maize, 6,395; tomatoes, 6,354; rice, 5,597; sugarbeets, 2,560; melons and watermelons, 2,225; potatoes, 1,784; oranges, 1,550; grapes, 1,008; dry onions, 1,000; sorghum, 950; dates, 890; pumpkins and squash, 650; seed cotton 644; bananas, 620; aubergines, 562; cabbages, 500; tangerines and mandarins, 450; apples, 410; peaches and nectarines, 400; cottonseed, 389; chillies and green peppers, 369; broad beans, 354; garlic, 301. Egypt is Africa's largest producer of a number of crops, including wheat, rice, tomatoes, potatoes and oranges.

Livestock, 2000: cattle, 3·18m.; sheep, 4·45m.; buffaloes, 3·20m.; goats, 3·30m.; asses, 3·05m.; camels, 120,000; chickens, 88m. Livestock products in 2000 (in 1,000 tonnes): buffalo milk, 2,079; cow milk, 1,645; meat, 1,391; eggs, 170. 464,000 tonnes of cheese were produced in 2000, making Egypt the largest cheese producer in Africa.

Forestry. In 1999, 2·88m. cu. metres of roundwood were produced.

Fisheries. The catch in 1999 was 380,504 tonnes, of which 225,300 tonnes were freshwater fish.

INDUSTRY

According to the Financial Times Survey (FT 500), the largest companies by market capitalization in Egypt on 4 Jan. 2001 were MobiNil (US$1,860·4m.), the Egyptian mobile phone provider; and Orascom Telecom (US$1,375·3m.).

Almost all large-scale enterprises are in the public sector, and these account for about two-thirds of total output. The private sector, dominated by food processing and textiles, consists of about 150,000 small and medium businesses, most employing fewer than 50 workers. Industrial production in 1997–98 showed a growth rate of 9% compared to 1996–97. Production during 1995–96 totalled £E74·1bn., compared to £E69·98bn. in 1994–95.

Production in 1997–98 (in 1,000 tonnes) included: fertilizers, 4,634; paper and paperboard (1998), 221; refined sugar, 1,352·5; tobacco, 595; cotton yarn, 275; cement (1997), 18,100. Cars, 36,713 units; refrigerators, 495,000 units; washing machines, 316,100 units.

Labour. In 1996–97 the workforce was 17·4m. (from 16·9m. in 1995–96). In 1995, 29·4% of the workforce were employed in agriculture; 22·5% in services, public administration and defence; 12·3% in manufacturing; 9·0% in trade; 5·5% in construction; 5·1% in transport and communications; and 1·6% in finance. Unemployment was to be 11·5% in 2000. The high birth rate of the 1980s has meant that there are now some 800,000 new entrants into the job market annually.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Foreign debt totalled US$28,957m. in 2000. Foreign direct investment in 1999 was US$1·5bn.

Imports and Exports. In 2000 exports (f.o.b.) were valued at US$7,061m.; imports (f.o.b.) were valued at US$15,382m. Services accounted for 64·1% of exports in 1998—mainly from travel and tourism—the highest percentage of any country.

Export of principal commodities in 1995–96: petroleum and petroleum products, 48·5%; cotton yarn, textiles and clothing, 12·5%; basic metals and manufactures, 5·4%. Imports: machinery and transport equipment, 29·7%; foodstuffs, 20·9%; iron and steel products, 9·5%; chemical products, 3·9%. Egypt exports less than 20% of its manufactured goods. Much higher exports are deemed necessary to accelerate growth and job creation.

Main export markets, 1998 (percentage share of total trade): Italy, 13·5%; USA, 13·0%; UK, 8·9%; Turkey, 7·3%. Main import suppliers in 1998: USA, 15·2%; Germany, 9·5%; Italy, 8·0%; France, 7·4%. Trade between Egypt and the European Union, which has been continuously increasing in recent years, now represents 42% of Egypt's foreign trade.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. In 1996 there were 26,000 km of highways and main roads, 25,000 km of secondary roads and 13,000 km of other roads. The road link between Sinai and the mainland across the Suez Canal was opened in 1996. Vehicles (in 1,000), 1996: passenger cars, 1,354 (22 per 1,000 inhabitants); trucks and vans, 397; motorcycles, 418; buses, 38.

Rail. In 1994 there were 5,024 km of state railways (1,435 mm gauge), of which 42 km were electrified. Passenger-km travelled in 1996 came to 55·6bn. and freight tonne-km to 4·1bn.

There are tramway networks in Cairo and Alexandria, and a metro (11 km) opened in Cairo in 1996.

Civil Aviation. There are international airports at Cairo, Luxor, Alexandria and a new one which opened at Marsa Alam in 2001. The national carrier is Egyptair, which flew 67·7m. km in 1999 and carried 4,620,100 passengers (3,064,000 on international flights). In 2000 Cairo handled 8,633,307 passengers (6,384,961 on international flights) and 170,329 tonnes of freight. Luxor was the second busiest in 2000, with 2,313,000 passengers.

Shipping. In 1998 the merchant marine totalled 1,368,000 GRT, including oil tankers 210,000 GRT. In 1997 vessels totalling 48,856,000 NRT entered ports and vessels totalling 40,924,000 NRT cleared. Dockyards for containerized shipping were constructed in Alexandria, Dekheila, Damietta and Port Said in 1995–96, with two more planned for Adabeya and the Suez Canal. Egypt's largest port is Damietta, which handles 14m. tonnes of cargo annually.

Suez Canal. The Suez Canal was opened for navigation on 17 Nov. 1869 and nationalized in June 1956. By the convention of Constantinople of 29 Oct. 1888, the canal is open to vessels of all nations and is free from blockade, except in time of war. It is 173 km long (excluding 11 km of approach channels to the harbours), connecting the Mediterranean with the Red Sea. It is being deepened from 16 to 17 metres and widened from 365 to 415 metres to permit the passage of vessels of 180,000 DWT.

In 1999, 13,490 vessels (net tonnage, 385m.) went through the canal. In 1995, 293m. tonnes of cargo were transported and in 1994 a total of 15,800 passengers were carried. Toll revenue in 1999 was US$1,824m. Tolls for tankers were reduced by 20% after Jan. 1996.

Telecommunications. In 2000 there were 5,483,600 telephone main lines (86·4 per 1,000 persons) and 1·4m. PCs were in use (22·1 per 1,000 persons). The planned privatization of Telecom Egypt remains on hold. In April 2001 mobile phone subscribers numbered 2·7m. (shared between Mobinil and Click Vodafone) and in Dec. 2001 Egypt had 600,000 Internet users. There were 31,000 fax machines in 1996.

Postal Services. There were, in 1993–94, 2,035 postal agencies, 1,972 mobile offices, 2,655 government and 2,472 private post offices.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. The court system comprises: a Court of Cassation with a bench of five judges which constitutes the highest court of appeal in both criminal and civil cases; five Courts of Appeal with three judges; Assize Courts with three judges which deal with all cases of serious crime; Central Tribunals with three judges which deal with ordinary civil and commercial cases; Summary Tribunals presided over by a single judge which hear minor civil disputes and criminal offences. Contempt for religion and what is judged to be a false interpretation of the Koran may result in prison sentences.

The population in penal institutions in 1996 was approximately 40,000 (60 per 100,000 of national population). The death penalty is in force. There were two confirmed executions in 2002.

Religion. Islam is constitutionally the state religion. In 1999 there were 57·5m. Muslims, mostly of the Sunni sect. Some 7% of the population are Coptic Christians, the remainder being Roman Catholics, Protestants or Greek Orthodox, with a small number of Jews. A Patriarch heads the Coptic Church, and there are 25 metropolitans and bishops in Egypt; 4 metropolitans for Ethiopia, Jerusalem, Khartoum and Omdurman, and 12 bishops in Ethiopia. The Copts use the Diocletian (or Martyrs') calendar, which begins in AD 284.

Education. The adult literacy rate in 1999 was 54·6% (66·1% among males and 42·8% among females). Free compulsory education is provided in primary schools (eight years). Secondary and technical education is also free. Approximately 98% of girls and 90% of boys are enrolled in the primary school system. In 1996–97 there were 2,367 pre-primary schools with 289,995 pupils and 12,050 teachers. In 1997–98 there were 7,499,303 primary school pupils and 310,116 teachers; and, in 1996–97, 6,726,738 secondary school pupils with 424,586 teachers.

Al Azhar institutes educate students who intend enrolling at Al Azhar University, one of the world's oldest universities and Sunni Islam's foremost seat of learning. In 1993–94 in the Al Azhar system there were 1,912 primary schools with 704,446 pupils, 1,030 preparatory schools with 147,762 pupils and 587 secondary schools with 165,829 pupils.

In 1993–94 there were 49,703 students in commerce institutes (24,906 women) and 31,259 in technical institutes (9,401 women). In 1995–96 there were 13 state universities, 1 American university and 1 academy of science and technology. There were 612,844 students (231,065 women) and 33,100 academic staff in 1993–94. Four private universities opened in 1996.

Education expenditure in 1998 was between 6% and 7% of GDP.

Health. In 1996 there were 129,000 doctors, and in 1992, 15,150 dentists, 34,700 pharmacists and 98,500 other medical personnel. In 1994 there were 6,332 treatment units (including 330 general hospitals) with 113,020 beds.

CULTURE

Broadcasting. Broadcasting is conducted by the government-controlled Egyptian Radio and TV Union. Number of radio receivers in 1997, 20·5m.; TV sets, 7·7m. Colour is by SECAM V.

Cinema. In 1994 there were 138 cinemas. 72 films were made in 1995.

Press. In 1996 there were 17 dailies with a total circulation of 2·4m. To set up a newspaper requires permission from the prime minister. In 1995 a total of 2,215 book titles were published in 92·35m. copies.

Tourism. There were a record 5,116,000 foreign tourists in 2000, spending US$4·34bn. As a consequence of the attacks on the US, however, 2001 saw a decline in numbers, with only 4·6m. visitors. Tourism is the leading source of foreign revenue and employs nearly 150,000 people. Expenditure by Egyptian tourists abroad in 1995 was US$1·28bn., up from US$52m. in 1986. No other country increased its overseas tourist expenditure at such a rate over the same 10-year period.

Libraries. In 1995 there were 187 public libraries and 60 National libraries. They held a combined 2,654,000 volumes.

HDI/world rank: 0·706/104

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Conquered by Spain in 1526, El Salvador remained under Spanish rule until 1821. Thereafter, El Salvador was a member of the Central American Federation comprising the states of El Salvador, Guatemala, Honduras, Nicaragua and Costa Rica until this federation was dissolved in 1839. In 1841 El Salvador declared itself an independent republic.

The country's history has been marked by political violence. The repressive dictatorship of President Maximiliano Hernandez Martínez lasted from 1931 to 1944 when he was deposed as were his successors in 1948 and 1960. The military junta that followed gave way to more secure presidential succession although left-wing guerrilla groups were fighting government troops in the late 1970s. As the guerrillas grew stronger and gained control over a part of the country, the USA sent economic aid and assisted in the training of Salvadorean troops. A new constitution was enacted in Dec. 1983 but the presidential election was boycotted by the main left-wing organization, the Favabundo Marti National Liberation Front (FMLN). Talks between the government and the FMLN in April 1991 led to constitutional reforms in May, envisaging the establishment of civilian control over the armed forces and a reduction in their size. On 16 Jan. 1992 the government and the FMLN signed a peace agreement.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

El Salvador is bounded in the northwest by Guatemala, northeast and east by Honduras and south by the Pacific Ocean. The area (including 247 sq. km of inland lakes) is 21,041 sq. km. Population (1992 census), 5,047,925 (female 52%); 1996 est., 5·79m., giving a population density of 275 per sq. km.

The UN gives a projected population for 2010 of 7·44m.

In 1999, 53·7% of the population were rural. In 1995, 1m. Salvadoreans were living abroad, mainly in the USA.

The republic is divided into 14 departments. Areas (in sq. km) and 1992 census populations:

Department	Area	Population	Chief town	Population
Ahuachapán	1,240	260,563	Ahuachapán	83,885

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

El Salvador is a member of the UN, WTO, OAS, Inter-American Development Bank, CACM, ACS and IOM.

ECONOMY

Agriculture accounted for 12·1% of GDP in 1998, industry 28·0% and services 59·9%.

Overview. An economic liberalization programme aims at raising exports, foreign investment and domestic savings.

Currency. The monetary unit is the colón (SVC) of 100 centavos. Since the beginning of 2001 the US dollar may also be used for salaries and pensions, and savings can be held in dollars. The colón is expected to disappear completely by the end of 2003. Inflation was 0·1% in 2001. Foreign exchange reserves were US$1,669m. and gold reserves 469,000 troy oz in June 2002. Total money supply was ₡9,608m. in Dec. 2000.

Budget. Central government budgetary revenue and expenditure in ₡1m. for calendar years:

Revenue	11,963·6	12,015·8	13,493·1
Expenditure	9,532·1	10,979·5	11,452·2

Performance. Real GDP growth was 2·2% in 2000 and 1·8% in 2001. Total GDP in 2001 was US$14·0bn.

Banking and Finance. The bank of issue is the Central Reserve Bank (President, Luz María Serpas de Portillo), formed in 1934 and nationalized in 1961. There are 15 commercial banks (two foreign). Individual private holdings may not exceed 5% of the total equity.

There is a stock exchange in San Salvador, founded in 1992.

Weights and Measures. The metric system is standard but other units are still commonly in use, of which the principal ones are as follows: Libra = 1·014 lb; quintal = 100 lb; arroba = 25·35 lb; fanega = 1·5745 bushels.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Environment. According to the World Bank Atlas El Salvador's carbon dioxide emissions were the equivalent of 1·0 tonnes per capita in 1998.

Electricity. Installed capacity in 1996 was 900,000 kW, around half of it hydro-electric. Production in 1996 was 3,340m. kWh; consumption per capita was 559 kWh in 1998.

Minerals. El Salvador has few mineral resources. Production (1993, in tonnes): limestone, 3·6m.; gypsum (1987), 4,500. Annual marine salt production averages 30,000 tonnes.

Agriculture. 27% of the land surface is given over to arable farming. In 1995, 32·4% of the working population was engaged in agriculture. Large landholdings have been progressively expropriated and redistributed in accordance with legislation initiated in 1980. By 1994 some 12,000 individuals had received plots of 4–5 ha.

Since the mid-19th century El Salvador's economy has been dominated by coffee. Cotton is the second main commercial crop. Production, in 1,000 tonnes (2000): sugarcane, 5,145; maize, 588; sorghum, 157; coffee, 138; coconuts, 86; dry beans, 71; bananas, 70; rice, 48.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Equatorial Guinea consists of the island of Bioko, for centuries called Fernando Po; other smaller islands and the mainland territory of Rio Muni. Fernando Po was named after the Portuguese navigator Fernão do Po. The island was then ruled for three centuries by Portugal until 1778 when it was ceded to Spain. For some decades after taking possession of Fernando Po, Spain did not effectively occupy it and allowed Britain to establish a naval base at Clarence (later Santa Isabel), which was important for the suppression of slave trading over a wide area. Spain asserted its rule from the 1840s. On Fernando Po the Spanish grew cocoa on European-owned plantations using imported African labour. This traffic led to an international scandal in 1930 when Liberians were found to be held in virtual slavery. Later many Nigerians were employed, often in poor conditions.

African nationalist movements began in the 1950s. Internal self-government was granted in 1963. In 1969 Spain suspended the constitution but then, under pressure to grant independence, agreed on condition of its approval by a referendum, which was given on 11 Aug. 1969. The two parts of Equatorial Guinea were united under Macías Nguema who established single-party rule. Up to a third of the population was killed or else left the country. Macías was declared President-for-Life in July 1972 but was overthrown by a military coup on 3 Aug. 1979.

A constitution approved by a referendum on 3 Aug. 1982 restored some institutions but a Supreme Military Council remained the sole political body until constitutional rule was resumed on 12 Oct. 1982.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The mainland part of Equatorial Guinea is bounded in the north by Cameroon, east and south by Gabon, and west by the Gulf of Guinea, in which lie the islands of Bioko (formerly Macías Nguema, formerly Fernando Póo) and Annobón (called Pagalu from 1973 to 1979). The total area is 28,051 sq. km (10,831 sq. miles) and the population at the 1983 census was 304,000. Estimate (July 1997), 443,000; density, 16 per sq. km. Another 110,000 are estimated to remain in exile abroad.

The UN gives a projected population for 2010 of 605,000.

In 1999, 54·1% of the population were rural.

The seven provinces are grouped into two regions—Continental (C), chief town Bata; and Insular (I), chief town Malabo—with areas and populations as follows:

	Sq. km	Census 1983	Chief town
Annobón (I)	17	2,006	San Antonio de Palea
Bioko Norte (I)	776	46,221	Malabo
Bioko Sur (I)	1,241	10,969	Luba
Centro Sur (C)	9,931	52,393	Evinayong
Kié-Ntem (C)	3,943	70,202	Ebebiyin
Litoral (C)	6,665[1]	66,370	Bata
Wele-Nzas (C)	5,478	51,839	Mongomo

[1]Including the adjacent islets of Corisco, Elobey Grande and Elobey Chico (17 sq. km).

In 1995 the capital, Malabo, had a population of 30,000.

The main ethnic group on the mainland is the Fang, which comprises 85% of the total population; there are several minority groups along the coast and adjacent islets. On Bioko the indigenous inhabitants (Bubis) constitute 60% of the population there, the balance being mainly Fang and coast people. On Annobón the indigenous inhabitants are the descendants of Portuguese slaves and still speak a Portuguese patois. The official language is Spanish.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

1997 births, 17,400; deaths, 6,100. Birth rate (per 1,000 population, 1997 estimate): 39·3; death, 13·7. Life expectancy (1999): male, 49·0 years; female, 52·2. Annual population growth rate, 1990–99, 2·6%. Infant mortality, 1999, 105 per 1,000 live births; fertility rate, 1999, 5·5 births per woman.

CLIMATE

The climate is equatorial, with alternate wet and dry seasons. In Rio Muni, the wet season lasts from Dec. to Feb.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

A Constitution was approved in a plebiscite in Aug. 1982 by 95% of the votes cast. It provided for an 11-member Council of State, and for a 41-member House of Representatives of the People, the latter being directly elected on 28 Aug. 1983 for a five-year term and re-elected on 10 July 1988. The President appointed and leads a Council of Ministers.

On 12 Oct. 1987 a single new political party was formed as the Partido Democrático de Guinea Ecuatorial.

A referendum on 17 Nov. 1991 approved the institution of multi-party democracy, and a law to this effect was passed in Jan. 1992. The electorate is restricted to citizens who have resided in Equatorial Guinea for at least ten years. A parliament created as a result, the National Assembly, has 80 seats.

National Anthem. 'Caminemos pisando las sendas' ('Let us journey treading the pathways'); words by A. N. Miyongo, tune anonymous.

RECENT ELECTIONS

At the National Assembly elections on 6 March 1999 the main opposition parties called for a boycott. 75 of the 80 seats went to the ruling Democratic Party of Equatorial Guinea (PDGE), 4 to the Popular Union and 1 to the Convergence for the Social Democracy.

Presidential elections were held on 15 Dec. 2002. President Nguema Mbasogo was re-elected with 97·1% of votes cast, against 2·2% for Celestino Bonifacio Bacalé. Opposition parties withdrew their candidates during polling, citing irregularities.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

President of the Supreme Military Council: Brig.-Gen. Teodoro Obiang Nguema Mbasogo; b. 1943 (PDGE; in office since 1979, most recently re-elected in 2002).

In March 2003 the government comprised:

ECONOMY

Industry accounted for 66·4% of GDP in 1998 (the highest percentage of any country), agriculture 21·8% and services 11·8%.

Overview. Overseas investment, particularly in the oil industry, has transformed the economy.

Currency. On 2 Jan. 1985 the country joined the Franc Zone and the ekpwele was replaced by the franc CFA (XAF) which now has a parity value of 655·957 francs CFA to one euro. Foreign exchange reserves were US$77m. in April 2002 and total money supply was 68,514m. francs CFA. Inflation in 2001 was 12·0%.

Budget. In 1995 the estimated total revenue was 13,542m. francs CFA and expenditure 13,400m. francs CFA, of which 12,170m. francs CFA were current expenditure.

Performance. Equatorial Guinea is the world's fastest growing economy thanks to the rapid expansion of its oil sector. The economy grew by more than nearly 30% in 1996 and by a record 71·2% in 1997. In 2001 the growth rate was 45·5%. Since 1997, except for 2000, Equatorial Guinea's real GDP growth has been the highest in the world. Between 1990 and 1996 the average annual real growth in GNP per capita was 15·9%—the highest of any country in the world over the same period. In 2001 total GDP was US$1·8bn.

Banking and Finance. The Banque des Etats de l'Afrique Centrale became the bank of issue in Jan. 1985. There is 1 commercial bank.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Environment. According to the World Bank Atlas carbon dioxide emissions in 1998 were the equivalent of 0·6 tonnes per capita.

Electricity. There are two hydro-electric plants. Installed capacity was 23,000 kW in 1995. Production was 21m. kWh in 1998; consumption per capita in 1997 was 48 kWh.

Oil and Gas. Oil production started in 1992, and by 2002 had reached 200,000 bbls. a day. Mobil is the biggest operator in the country but other US-based oil companies are investing heavily. Since oil in commercial quantities was discovered in 1995 Equatorial Guinea has attracted more than US$1bn. in foreign direct investment.

Natural gas reserves were 37bn. cu. metres in 1997.

Minerals. There is some small-scale alluvial gold production.

Agriculture. There were 130,000 ha of arable land in 1998 and 100,000 ha of permanent crops. Subsistence farming predominates, and in 1995 approximately 73% of the economically active population were engaged in agriculture. Production (in 1,000 tonnes, in 2000): cassava, 45; sweet potatoes, 36; bananas, 20; coconuts,

6; cocoa beans, 4; coffee, 4. Plantations in the hinterland have been abandoned by their Spanish former owners and, except for cocoa and coffee, commercial agriculture is under serious difficulties. Livestock (2000): cattle, 5,000; goats, 8,000; pigs, 5,000; sheep, 36,000.

Forestry. In 1995 forests covered 1·78m. ha, or 63·5% of the total land area (down from 65·2% of the land area in 1990). Timber production in 1999 totalled 811,000 cu. metres.

Fisheries. The total catch in 1999 was estimated to be 7,001 tonnes (84% from sea fishing). Tuna and shellfish are caught.

INDUSTRY

The once-flourishing light industry collapsed under the Macías regime. Oil production is now the major activity; production, 1996, 3m. bbls. Production of veneer sheets, 1997, 9,000 cu. metres. Food processing is also being developed.

Labour. In 1996 the labour force was 171,000 (65% males). The wage-earning non-agricultural workforce is small. The average monthly wage was 14,000 francs CFA in 1992.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Foreign debt was US$248m. in 2000.

Imports and Exports. Imports and exports for calendar years in US$1m.:

	1992	1993	1994	1995	1996
Imports f.o.b.	56·0	51·0	37·0	120·6	292·0
Exports f.o.b.	49·5	61·1	62·0	89·9	175·3

Main export markets, 1995: USA, 34%; Japan, 16%; China, 12%. Main import suppliers: Spain, 51%; Cameroon, 21%; France, 6%; USA, 4%. Principal export commodities are petroleum, cocoa and timber; principal import commodities are machinery and transport equipment, and petroleum and petroleum products.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. Length of network, 1996, 2,880 km. Most roads are in a state of disrepair. Vehicles in use numbered 2,040 (1,520 passenger cars, or 3·3 per 1,000 inhabitants, and 540 vans and trucks) in 1996.

Civil Aviation. There is an international airport at Malabo. There were international flights in 1998 to Abidjan, Brazzaville, Cotonou, Douala, Lagos, Libreville, Madrid, Paris, Pointe Noire, São Tomé, Yaoundé and Zürich. In 1998 Malabo handled 54,000 passengers.

Shipping. Bata is the main port, handling mainly timber. The other ports are Luba, formerly San Carlos (bananas, cocoa), in Bioko, and Malabo, Evinayong and Mbini on the mainland. Ocean-going shipping totalled 59,000 GRT in 1998.

Telecommunications. Telephone services are rudimentary. In 2000 there were 6,100 main telephone lines in use (13·5 for every 1,000 persons) and in 1995 around 100 fax machines. In May 1999 there were 600 Internet users; the number of PCs in use in 1999 was 1,000 (2·3 per 1,000 persons).

Postal Services. There were 23 post offices in 1994.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. The Constitution guarantees an independent judiciary. The Supreme Tribunal, the highest court of appeal, is located at Malabo. There are Courts of First Instance and Courts of Appeal at Malabo and Bata.

Religion. Christianity was proscribed under President Macías but reinstated in 1979. In 1999 there were 430,000 Roman Catholics and 30,000 followers of other religions.

Education. In 1993–94 there were 85 pre-primary schools with 171 teachers for 3,788 pupils; 781 primary schools with 1,381 teachers for 75,751 pupils; and 16,616 secondary pupils with 588 teachers. In 1993 there were 2 teacher training colleges, 2 post-secondary vocational schools and 1 agricultural institute. Adult literacy was 82·2% in 1999 (male, 91·9%; female, 73·3%). The rate for males is second only to Zimbabwe among African countries.

Health. In 1990 there were 99 doctors, 154 nurses and 55 midwives.

CULTURE

Broadcasting. Two radio programmes are broadcast by the state-controlled Radio Nacional de Guinea Ecuatorial and Televisión Nacional. There is also a commercial radio network, and a cultural programme produced with Spanish collaboration. In 1997 there were 180,000 radio and 4,000 TV receivers (colour by SECAM).

Press. In 1996 there was one daily newspaper with a circulation of 2,000, at a rate of 4·9 per 1,000 inhabitants.

Tourism. Foreign tourists brought in revenue of US$2m. in 1998.

HDI/world rank: 0·421/157

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Italy was the colonial ruler from 1890 until 1941 when Eritrea fell to British forces and a British protectorate was set up. This ended in 1952 when the UN sanctioned federation with Ethiopia. In 1962 Ethiopia became a unitary state and Eritrea was incorporated as a province. Eritreans began an armed struggle for independence under the leadership of the Eritrean People's Liberation Front (EPLF) which culminated successfully in the capture of Asmara on 24 May 1991. Thereafter the EPLF maintained a de facto independent administration recognized by the Ethiopian government. Sovereignty was proclaimed on 24 May 1993. In 1999 fighting broke out along the border with Ethiopia. After the failure of international mediation, the 13-month long-truce between Eritrea and Ethiopia ended in May 2000. Ethiopia launched a major offensive in the ongoing war over territorial disputes and claimed victory. In June both sides agreed to an Organization of African Unity peace deal to end the two-year border war.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Eritrea is bounded in the northeast by the Red Sea, southeast by Djibouti, south by Ethiopia and west by Sudan. Some 300 islands form the Dahlak Archipelago, most of them uninhabited. For the dispute with Yemen over the islands of Greater and Lesser Hanish see YEMEN: Territory and Population. Its area is 93,679 sq. km (36,171 sq. miles). Population, 1995, 3,434,500 (81·6% rural in 1999); density, 27·6 per sq. km.

The UN gives a projected population for 2010 of 5·03m.

1m. Eritreans lived abroad in 1995, 0·5m. as refugees in Sudan. A UN Programme for Refugee Reintegration and Rehabilitation of Resettlement Areas in Eritrea (PROFERI) is in operation.

There are ten provinces: Akele Guzai, Asmara, Barka, Denkel, Gash-Setir, Hamasien, Sahel, Semhar, Senhit and Seraye. The capital is Asmara (1999 population, 514,000). Other large towns (with 1992 populations) are Assab (50,000), Keren (40,000) and Massawa (40,000). An agreement of July 1993 gives Ethiopia rights to use the ports of Assab and Massawa.

48% of the population speak Tigrinya and 31% Tigré, and there are seven other indigenous languages. Arabic is spoken on the coast and along the Sudanese border, and English is used in secondary schools. Arabic and Tigrinya are the official languages.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Births, 1995, 131,000; deaths, 48,000. Rates, 1995 (per 1,000 population): birth, 41·4; death, 15·2. Annual population growth rate, 1990–99, 2·8%. Life expectancy at birth, 1999, was 50·4 years for males and 53·2 years for females. Infant mortality, 1999, 66 per 1,000 live births; fertility rate, 1999, 5·6 births per woman.

CLIMATE

Massawa, Jan. 78°F (25·6°C), July 94°F (34·4°C). Annual rainfall 8" (193 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

A referendum to approve independence was held on 23–25 April 1993. The electorate was 1,173,506. 99·8% of votes cast were in favour.

The transitional government has a four-year term and consists of the President and a 130-member National Assembly. The latter consists of the members of the People's Front for Democracy and Justice (PFDJ; until Feb. 1994 EPLF) Central Committee and 60 other deputies (including 11 seats reserved for women). It elects the President, who in turn appoints the State Council made up of 14 ministers and the governors of the ten provinces. The President chairs both the State Council and the National Assembly.

National Anthem. 'Ertra, Ertra, Ertra' ('Eritrea, Eritrea, Eritrea'); words by S. Beraki, tune by I. Meharezghi and A. Tesfatsion.

RECENT ELECTIONS

In the presidential and legislative elections in May 1997, President Afewerki was re-elected to office. National assembly elections, postponed in 1998, are set to take place before the end of 2003. In the meantime several dissident politicians have been jailed.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

President: Issaias Afewerki; b. 1945 (PFDJ; elected 22 May 1993 and re-elected in May 1997).

In March 2003 the ministers in the State Council were:

Minister of Agriculture: Arefaine Berhe. Construction: Abraha Asfaha. Defence: Sebhat Ephrem. Education: Osman Saleh. Energy and Mining: Tesfai Ghebreselassie. Finance: Berhane Abrehe. Fisheries and Maritime Resources: Ahmed Haj Ali. Foreign Affairs: Ali Said Abdella. Health: Saleh Meki. Information: Naizghi Kiflu. Justice: Fozia Hashim. Labour and Human Welfare: Askalu Menkerios. Land, Water and Environment: Woldemichael Ghebremariam. Tourism: Amna Nur Husayn. Trade and Industry: Giorgis Teklemikael. Transport and Communications: Woldemikael Abraha.

DEFENCE

Conscription for 18 months was introduced in 1994 for all Eritreans between the ages of 18 and 40, with some exceptions. The total strength of all forces was estimated at 180,000–200,000 in 1999.

Defence expenditure totalled US$173m. in 2001 (US$45 per capita and 20·9% of GDP—the highest percentage of any country in the world).

Army. The army had a strength of around 180,000 in 1999. There were an additional 120,000 reservists available.

Navy. Most of the former Ethiopian Navy is now in Eritrean hands. The main bases and training establishments are at Massawa and Assab. Personnel numbered 1,100 in 1999.

Air Force. Personnel numbers were estimated at 1,000 in 1999. There were over 19 combat aircraft including MiG-23s, MiG-21s and MiG-29s.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

A border dispute between Eritrea and Ethiopia broke out in May 1998. Eritrean troops took over the border town of Badame after a skirmish between Ethiopian police units and armed men from Eritrea. Ethiopia maintained that Badame and Sheraro, a nearby town, had always been part of Ethiopia and called Eritrea's action an invasion. An agreement ending hostilities was signed in June 2000, followed by a peace accord in Dec. A buffer zone has been created to separate the armies.

Eritrea is a member of the UN, the African Union, African Development Bank, COMESA, the Intergovernmental Authority on Development and is an ACP member state of the ACP-EU relationship.

ECONOMY

In 1997 agriculture accounted for 9·3% of GDP, services 61·2% and industry 29·5%.

Eritrea's resources are meagre, the population small and poorly-educated; communications are difficult and there is a shortage of energy.

Currency. A new currency, the nakfa, has replaced the Ethiopian currency, the birr. However, its introduction led to tensions with Ethiopia, adversely affecting cross-border trade. Inflation was 14·6% in 2001.

Budget. Revenues in 1996 were US$226m. and expenditure US$453m. Over 40 enterprises are scheduled for privatization.

Performance. Total GDP in 2001 was US$0·7bn. The economy contracted by 12·1% in 2000, as a result of the conflict with neighbouring Ethiopia, but then expanded by 9·7% in 2001 following the end of hostilities.

Banking and Finance. The central bank is the National Bank of Eritrea (Governor, Tequie Beyene). All banks and financial institutions are state-run. There is a Commercial Bank of Eritrea with 15 branches, an Eritrean Investment and Development Bank with 13 branches, a Housing and Commercial Bank of Eritrea with seven branches and an Insurance Corporation.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Electricity. Installed capacity was 73 MW in 1995. Electricity is provided to only some 10% of the population.

Minerals. There are deposits of gold, silver, copper, zinc, sulphur, nickel, chrome and potash. Basalt, limestone, marble, sand and silicates are extracted. Oil exploration is taking place in the Red Sea. Salt production totals 200,000 tonnes annually.

Agriculture. Agriculture engaged approximately 79% of the economically active population in 1997. Several systems of land ownership (state, colonial, traditional) co-exist. In 1994 the PFDJ proclaimed the sole right of the state to own land. There were 391,000 ha of arable land in 1998 and 2,000 ha of permanent crops. Main agricultural products, 2000 (in 1,000 tonnes): sorghum, 100; potatoes, 35; barley, 25; millet, 25; maize, 12; wheat, 10. Livestock, 2000: cattle, 1·80m.; sheep, 1·54m.; goats 1·50m.; camels, 73,000; chickens, 1m.

Forestry. In 1995 forests covered 282,000 ha, or 2·8% of the total land area. Timber production in 1999 was 2·29m. cu. metres.

Fisheries. The total catch in 1999 was 7,042 tonnes, exclusively from marine waters, but a joint French–Eritrean project to assess fish stocks in the Red Sea suggests a sustainable yield of up to 70,000 tonnes a year.

INDUSTRY

Light industry was well developed in the colonial period but capability has declined. Processed food, textiles, leatherwear, building materials, glassware and oil products are produced. Industrial production accounted for nearly 30% of GDP in 1997, with the manufacturing sector providing over 15%.

Labour. In 1996 the labour force was 1,649,000 (53% males).

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Eritrea is dependent on foreign aid for most of its capital expenditure. Total external debt in 2000 was US$311m.

Imports and Exports. In 1996 exports were valued at 520·4m. birr and imports at 3,062·8m. birr. The main exports are drinks, leather and products, textiles and oil products. The leading imports are machinery and transport equipment, basic manufactures, and food and live animals. Principal import suppliers: Saudi Arabia, Italy, UAE, Germany. Principal export markets: Ethiopia, Sudan, Yemen, Saudi Arabia. Until the outbreak of hostilities, Ethiopia had been Eritrea's leading trading partner, followed by Sudan.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. There were some 4,010 km of roads in 1996, around 875 km of which were paved. A tarmac road links the capital Asmara with one of the main ports, Massawa. In 1996 passenger cars in use numbered 5,940 (1·5 per 1,000 inhabitants). About 500 buses operate regular services.

Rail. In Jan. 2000 the reconstruction of the 117 km Massawa–Asmara line reached Embatkala, thus opening up an 80 km stretch from Massawa on the coast.

Civil Aviation. There are international airports at Asmara (Yohannes IV Airport) and Assab. In 1998 there were flights to Cairo, Djibouti, Dubai, Frankfurt, Jeddah and Riyadh. In 2000 Asmara handled 103,000 passengers (88,000 on international flights) and 7,300 tonnes of freight.

Shipping. Massawa is the main port; Assab used to be the main port for imports to Ethiopia. Both were free ports for Ethiopia until the onset of hostilities. Merchant shipping totalled 7,000 GRT in 1998.

Telecommunications. International telephone links were restored in 1992. In 2000 there were 30,600 telephone main lines (8·0 for every 1,000 inhabitants) and some 1,300 fax machines. In Dec. 2000 there were 5,000 Internet users. There were 6,000 PCs in use (1·6 per 1,000 inhabitants) in 2000.

Postal Services. In 1995 there were 35 post offices, equivalent to one for every 95,000 persons.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. The legal system derives from a decree of May 1993.

Religion. Half the population are Sunni Muslims (along the coast and in the north), and half Coptic Christians (in the south).

Education. Adult literacy was about 52·7% in 1999 (66·5% among males and 39·4% among females). In 1996–97 there were 549 primary schools with 240,737 pupils and 5,476 teachers, and 89,087 pupils at secondary schools with 2,071 teachers. There is one university, with 3,200 students and 250 academic staff in 1994–95.

Health. In 1993 there were 10 small regional hospitals, 32 health centres, 65 medical posts, 68 doctors (equivalent to one for every 46,200 persons), 488 nurses, 33 midwives and 850 auxiliary medical personnel.

CULTURE

Broadcasting. There is daily radio and TV broadcasting. In 1997 there were 1,000 TV receivers and 345,000 radio receivers.

Press. There is a government daily in Arabic and Tigrinya. In Sept. 2001 the government closed down the country's eight independent newspapers. A number of journalists have been jailed.

Tourism. There were 57,000 foreign tourists in 1999. Receipts totalled US$28m.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Estonia was part of the Holy Roman Empire until it became a Swedish possession in the 17th century. On Sweden's defeat by Peter the Great, Estonia passed to the Russian Empire in 1721. The workers' and soldiers' Soviets, which came to prominence in 1917, were overthrown with the assistance of British naval forces in May 1919 and a democratic republic proclaimed. In March 1934 this regime was, in turn, overthrown by a fascist coup. The secret protocol of the Soviet-German agreement of 23 Aug. 1939 assigned Estonia to the Soviet sphere of interest. An ultimatum (16 June 1940) led to the formation of the Estonian Soviet Socialist Republic. At a referendum in March 1991, 77·8% of votes cast were in favour of independence. A fully independent status was conceded by the USSR State Council on 6 Sept. 1991. Estonia was admitted to the Council of Europe in 1993, and in 2002 was invited to join both NATO and the EU in 2004.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Estonia is bounded in the west and north by the Baltic Sea, east by Russia and south by Latvia. There are 1,541 offshore islands, of which the largest are Saaremaa and Hiiumaa, but only 14 are permanently inhabited. Area, 45,227 sq. km (17,462 sq. miles); population, 1,370,052 (2000 census), giving a density of 30·3 per sq. km.

The UN gives a projected population for 2010 of 1·25m.

As of 1 Jan. 2000, 69·1% of the population lived in urban areas. Of the whole population, Estonians accounted for 67·9%, Russians 25·6%, Ukrainians 2·1%, Belorussians 1·3% and Finns 0·9%. The capital is Tallinn (population, 408,329 or 29·2%). Other large towns are Tartu (101,169), Narva (68,680), Kohtla-Järve (47,679) and Pärnu (45,500). There are 15 counties, 47 towns and 207 rural municipalities.

The official language is Estonian.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

2001 births 12,720; deaths, 18,627. Rates (per 1,000 population): birth, 9·6, death, 13·5. There were 12,743 induced abortions in 2000. Expectation of life in 2000 was 65·1 years for males and 76·0 for females. Infant mortality in 2000 was 8·4 per 1,000 births. Total fertility rate was 1·39 births per women.

CLIMATE

Because of its maritime location Estonia has a moderate climate, with cool summers and mild winters. Average daily temperatures in 2000: Jan. –2·5°C; July 16·3°C. Rainfall is heavy, 500–700 mm per year, and evaporation low.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

A draft constitution drawn up by a constitutional assembly was approved by 91·1% of votes cast at a referendum on 28 June 1992. Turn-out was 66·6%. The constitution came into effect on 4 July 1992. It defines Estonia as a 'democratic state guided by the rule of law, where universally recognized norms of international law are an inseparable part of the legal system.' It provides for a 101-member national assembly (Riigikogu) elected for four-year terms. There are 11 electoral districts with eight to 11 mandates each. Candidates may be elected: a) by gaining more than 'quota', i.e. the number of votes cast in a district divided by the number of its mandates; b) by standing for a party which attracts for all of its candidates more than the quota, in order of listing; c) by being listed nationally for parties which clear a 5% threshold and eligible for the seats remaining according to position on the lists. The head of state is the President, elected by the Riigikogu for five-year terms. Presidential candidates must gain the nominations of at least 20% of parliamentary deputies. If no candidate wins a two-thirds majority in any of three rounds, the Speaker convenes an electoral college, composed of parliamentary deputies and local councillors. At this stage any 21 electors may nominate an additional candidate. The electoral college elects the President by a simple majority.

Citizenship requirements are two years residence and competence in Estonian for existing residents. For residents immigrating after 1 April 1995, five years qualifying residence is required.

National Anthem. 'Mu isamaa, mu õnn ja rõõm' ('My native land, my pride and joy'); words by J. V. Jannsen, tune by F. Pacius (same as Finland).

RECENT ELECTIONS

Parliamentary elections were held on 2 March 2003; turn-out was 58·2%. The Estonian Centre Party (K) won 28 of the 101 seats (with 25·4% of the total votes); Res Publica (RESP), 28 seats (24·6%); Estonian Reform Party (RE), 19 seats (17·7%); Estonian People's Union, 13 (13·3%); Pro Patria Union (I), 7 seats (7·3%); Mõõdukad (M), 6 seats (7·0%).

A special government assembly elected the president after two rounds of votes on 21 Sept. 2001. There were four candidates. In the run-off for the presidency Arnold Rüütel won with 186 votes against 155 for Toomas Savi.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

President: Arnold Rüütel; b. 1928 (sworn in 8 Oct. 2001).

A new government was formed in April 2003 comprising:

Prime Minister: Juhan Parts; b. 1966 (RESP; in office since 10 April 2003).

Minister of Agriculture: Tiit Tammsaar. Culture: Urmas Paet. Defence: Margus Hanson. Economic Affairs and Communications: Meelis Atonen. Education: Toivo Maimets. Environment: Villu Reiljan. Finance: Tõnis Palts. Foreign Affairs: Kristiina Ojuland. Internal Affairs: Margus Leivo. Justice: Ken-Marti Vaher. Population and Ethnic Affairs: Paul-Eerik Rummo. Regional Affairs: Jaan Õunapuu. Social Affairs: Marko Pomerants.

Government Website: http://www.riik.ee

DEFENCE

The President is the head of national defence. Conscription is eight to 11 months for men and voluntary for women. Conscientious objectors may opt for 16 months civilian service instead.

Defence expenditure in 2001 totalled 1,639bn. krooni, representing 1·8% of GDP.

The Estonian Defence Forces (EDF) regular component is divided into the Army, the Air Force and the Navy.

Army. The army consists of 9 army-training battalions (6 for infantry, 1 for air defence, 1 for artillery and 1 for peace operations). Annually around 3,000 conscripts are trained for reserve. The total number of personnel in the Army in 2000 was 4,535 (1,420 officers and NCOs and contract soldiers; 2,290 conscripts and 825 civilians).

Navy. The Navy consists of the Naval Staff (Naval HQ), the Naval Base, and the Mine Countermeasures (MCM) Squadron. The total number of personnel in the Navy in 2000 was 385 (110 officers and NCOs and contract soldiers, 220 conscripts and 55 civilians).

Air Force. The Air Force consists of an Air Force Staff, Air Force Base, and Air Surveillance Battalion. The total number of personnel in the Air Force is 200 (120 officers and NCOs and contract soldiers, 50 conscripts and 30 civilians).

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

Estonia is a member of the UN, WTO, BIS, the NATO Partnership for Peace, the Council of Europe, OSCE and Council of the Baltic Sea States, is an associate member of the EU and is an associate partner of the WEU. Estonia applied to join the EU in Nov. 1995, and is scheduled to become a member on 1 May 2004, subject to a referendum.

ECONOMY

Services contributed 69% of GDP in 1999, industry 25% and agriculture 6%.

Overview. Privatization is managed by the Estonian Privatization Agency under the jurisdiction of the Ministry of Finance. It has now entered its final phase with only large-scale infrastructure companies left to be sold. By June 1997, 456 enterprises had been privatized, realizing 3,300m. krooni.

Currency. The unit of currency is the kroon (EKR) of 100 sents. The kroon is pegged to the euro at a rate of 15·6466 krooni to one euro. Foreign exchange reserves were US$914m. in June 2002 and gold reserves 8,000 troy oz. Inflation was 5·8% in 2001. Total money supply in June 2002 was 25,936m. krooni.

Budget. Government budgetary revenue and expenditure in 1m. krooni for calendar years:

Expenditure	17,713·7	20,551·8	24,103·3	26,815·5	27,373·3

In 2000 estimated sources of revenue included value added tax, 8,159m. krooni; and personal and corporate income tax, 3,605m. krooni. Items of expenditure: social welfare, 9,269m. krooni; health service, 4,458m. krooni; education, 3,057m. krooni; and recreational, cultural and arts affairs, 1,005m. krooni. VAT is 18%.

Performance. GDP growth rate was 6·9% in 2000 and 5·4% in 2001. Growth was supported by the increasing import demand of the European Union. Total GDP in 2001 was US$5·3bn.

Banking and Finance. A central bank, the Bank of Estonia, was re-established in 1990 (Governor, Vahur Kraft). The Estonian Investment Bank was established in 1992 to provide financing for privatized and private companies. Since 1 Jan. 1996 banks have been required to have an equity of at least 50m. krooni. As of Nov. 2000 there were 6 Estonian authorized commercial banks, 1 foreign bank's branch and 3 foreign bank's representative offices. As a result of a wave of mergers the two largest groups, Hansabank and the Union Bank of Estonia, control 80% of the market. Total assets and liabilities of commercial banks at Oct. 2000 were 55bn. krooni.

A stock exchange opened in Tallinn in 1996.

Weights and Measures. The metric system is in use.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Environment. According to the World Bank Atlas Estonia's carbon dioxide emissions in 1998 were the equivalent of 12·1 tonnes per capita.

Electricity. In 1999, 92% of electricity was produced by burning oil shale (down from 98% in 1996). Installed capacity was 3·3m. kW in 1999 and production was 8·52bn. kWh. Consumption per capita was 3,531 kWh in 1998. A pilot wind-turbine project was set up in 1996. Electricity production in power plants in 1999 was 8,265 GWh (9,217 GWh in 1997).

Oil and Gas. There are rich oil shale deposits estimated at 3,972m. tonnes in 1997. A factory for the production of gas from shale and a 208 km-pipeline from Kohtla-Järve supplies shale gas to Tallinn, and exports to St Petersburg. Natural gas is imported from Russia.

Water. A total of six isolated underground water complexes provide 75% of the water consumed.

Minerals. Oil shale is the most valuable mineral resource. Production volume has decreased (from 21·2m. tonnes in 1990 to 12m. tonnes in 1999) because of falls in exports and domestic electricity consumption, and an increase in the use of natural gas. There are extensive peat deposits, estimated at 1·5bn. tonnes in 1997. Phosphorites and super-phosphates are found and refined, and lignite, limestone, dolomite, clay, sand and gravel are mined.

Agriculture. In the course of the 1990s the proportion of agriculture in the gross national product decreased from 15% to 3·3%. Farming employs around 6% of the population. At 1 Jan. 1999 there were 11,700 private farms and 680 agricultural enterprises averaging 490 ha cultivable land. In 2000 there were 1·43m. ha of agricultural land of which 1·12m. ha were arable and 0·3m. ha were natural grassland. In 1995, 13·1% of the labour force was employed in agriculture. Minimum prices and the quantity of state purchases of agricultural produce were guaranteed by the government for 1997, along with agricultural supports of 332·81m. krooni. Gross agricultural output in 1999 was 5·6bn. krooni.

At 1 Jan. 2000 there were 267,300 cattle (138,400 milch cows), 28,200 sheep, 285,700 pigs and 2,461,800 poultry.

Output of main agricultural products (in 1,000 tonnes) in 2000: potatoes, 457; barley, 293; wheat, 149; oats, 129; rye, 62. Livestock products (in 1,000 tonnes), 2000: meat, 59; milk, 600; eggs, 17. Export of dairy products in 1999 comprised 35% of the year's volume.

Forestry. In 1999, 2·14m. ha were covered by forests, which provide material for sawmills, furniture, and the match and pulp industries, as well as wood fuel. Private, municipal and state ownership of forests is allowed. In 1999 there were 600,000 ha of privately owned forests out of a total of 2,143,000 ha. In 1999 the annual timber cut was 6·7m. cu. metres, of which 3·7m. cu. metres was from private forests.

Fisheries. Some 4,670 people are employed in the active fishing section of the industry and 4,870 in the fish-processing section. The total catch in 1999 was 86,008 tonnes, mainly from sea fishing. Export volumes of fishing products in 1999 was 71,760 tonnes.

INDUSTRY

The leading companies by market capitalization in Estonia, excluding banking and finance, in Jan. 2002 were: Eesti Telekom (12b. krooni); Norma (830m. krooni), a car seatbelt producer; and Merko Ehitus (719m. krooni), a construction company.

In Estonia the share of manufacturing in the GDP has been decreasing in recent years. The share of value added by the sectors of service activities and finance has grown more rapidly in comparison with the industrial sector.

Labour. The workforce in 2000 totalled 705,100, of whom 608,600 were employed. The monthly average wage in the 1st quarter of 2001 was 5,098 krooni. The unemployment rate was 9·1% in the third quarter of 2002, compared to 13·7% in 2000.

Retirement age was 63 years for both men and women in 1998.

Trade Unions. The main trade union organization in Estonia is the Estonian Association of Trade Unions, which represents the interests of industrial, service, trade, public and agricultural employees.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Free Trade agreements are in force with the EU, EFTA, Latvia, Lithuania, Czech Republic, Slovakia, Slovenia, Ukraine, Poland, Hungary, Faroe Islands and Turkey.

Direct investment position in Estonia by countries as of 30 Sept. 2000: Sweden, 39·2%; Finland, 31·1%; USA, 4·5%; Norway, 4·3%; Denmark, 4·1%; Germany, 2·7%; UK, 2·6%.

Estonia's direct investment position abroad by countries as of 30 June 2000: Latvia, 59·1%; Lithuania, 23·7%; Cyprus, 7·9%; Ukraine, 1·4%; and Sweden, 0·5%. Direct foreign investment in Estonia as at Sept. 2000 totalled 41,929·8m. krooni (14,454·4m. as at March 1997). Estonia's direct investment abroad as at Sept. 2000 totalled 6,542m. krooni. The foreign trade balance in 1999 was 17,192·9m. krooni. External debt was US$3,280m. in 2000.

Imports and Exports. Exports (in 1m. krooni) in 2000 (and 1999) were valued at 53,911·1 (43,173·7); imports, 72,215·4 (60,488·8). Main export markets, 1999: Finland, 8,378·5 (19·4% of the total); Sweden, 8,103·6 (18·8%); Russia, 3,969·8 (9·2%); Latvia, 3,766·3 (8·7%); Germany, 3,237·2 (7·5%); UK, 1,930·9 (4·5%); Denmark, 1,696·6 (3·9%); Lithuania, 1,675·2 (3·9%); Netherlands, 1,441·5 (3·3%); Ukraine, 1,234·4 (2·9%); USA, 1,056·6 (2·5%).

Main import suppliers, 1999: Finland, 13,769·9 (22·8% of total); Russia, 8,171·2 (13·5%); Germany, 5,621·9 (9·3%); Sweden, 5,603·8 (9·3%); Japan, 2,855·3 (4·7%); USA, 2,680·7 (4·4%); Italy, 1,915·9 (3·2%); Denmark, 1,505·8 (2·5%); Netherlands, 1,486·1 (2·4%); UK, 1,437·5 (2·4%); Latvia, 1,313·2 (2·2%).

Around 65% of Estonian trade is with EU member countries, and 50% with Finland and Sweden alone.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. As of 1 Jan. 2000 there were 16,430 km of state roads (50·8% paved). The road network is being developed under a 10-year plan inaugurated in 1995. In 1999 there were 458,700 passenger cars in use (312 per 1,000 inhabitants), plus 81,030 trucks and vans, 6,196 buses and coaches, and 6,699 motorcycles and mopeds. There were 284 fatalities in road accidents in 1998.

Rail. Length of railways on 1 Jan. 2000 was 968 km (1,520 mm gauge), of which 132 km was electrified. In 1999, 6·76m. passengers and 37·4m. tonnes of freight were carried. Domestic total volume of goods transported in 1999 (in tonnes), 7·5m.; international total volume (in tonnes), 29·9m.

Civil Aviation. There is an international airport at Tallinn (Ulemiste), which handled 554,898 passengers (550,255 on international flights) and 2,417 tonnes of freight in 2000. Estonian aviation companies handled 336,200 passengers and 5,500 tonnes of goods in 1999. The national carrier is Estonian Air, 34% state-owned. The smaller Estonian Aviation also provides international services. In 1999 Estonian Air operated services to Amsterdam, Copenhagen, Frankfurt, Hamburg, Helsinki, Kyiv, London, Minsk, Moscow, Oslo, Riga, Stockholm and Vilnius, with Estonian Aviation flying to Riga and Turku. In 1999 Estonian Air flew 6·0m. km, carrying 291,300 passengers (all on international flights). In Jan. 2000 there were 124 aircraft in Estonia.

Shipping. There are six major shipping companies, all of which are privatized. There were 542 registered vessels totalling 445,470 DWT at 1 Jan. 2000. There are ice-free, deep-water ports at Tallinn and Muuga (state-owned). Tallinn handled 85% of the total turnover of goods in Estonia in 2000. Central Port serves about 6m. passengers a year.

Telecommunications. Estonia had 522,800 telephone main lines in 2000 (363·3 per 1,000 persons) and 220,000 PCs (152·9 per 1,000 persons). There were 500,000 mobile phone subscribers in 1999 and 13,000 fax machines in 1995. In Feb. 2000 the Estonian parliament voted to guarantee Internet access to its citizens. The number of Internet users in Dec. 2001 was 429,700.

Postal Services. There were 12 postal service providers in 2000, the main provider being the state-owned Eesti Post. In 1999 there were 534 post offices.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. A post-Soviet criminal code was introduced in 1992. There is a three-tier court system with the State Court at its apex, and there are both city and district courts. The latter act as courts of appeal. The State Court is the final court of appeal, and also functions as a constitutional court. There are also administrative courts for petty offences. Judges are appointed for life. City and district judges are appointed by the President; State Court judges are elected by Parliament.

In 1999, 51,539 crimes were reported (including 200 murders), of which 34·5% were solved. The murder rate, at 13·9 per 100,000 population in 1999, is one of the highest in Europe. There are nine prisons; in Dec. 1999, 4,712 persons were in custody.

The death penalty was abolished for all crimes in 1998.

Religion. There are about 0·35m. Lutherans and a Methodist Church. The Estonian Orthodox Church owed allegiance to Constantinople until it was forcibly brought under Moscow's control in 1940; a synod of the free Estonian Orthodox Church was established in Stockholm. Returning from exile, it registered itself in 1993 as the Estonian Apostolic Orthodox Church. By an agreement in 1996 between the Moscow and Constantinople Orthodox Patriarchates, there are now two Orthodox jurisdictions in Estonia. In 2000 there were some 209,300 Christians of various denominations in 311 congregations, including the Estonian Evangelical Lutheran Church (membership: 180,000) and the Estonian Apostolic Orthodox Church (membership: 18,000).

Education. Adult literacy rate in 1998 was at least 99%. There are nine years of comprehensive school starting at age six, followed by three years secondary school.

In 1999 pupils in 706 primary, secondary and special schools numbered 215,841; of these general education schools, 586 were Estonian-language, 104 Russian-language and 16 mixed-language. In 1999, 64% of children between one and six years attended pre-school institutions. In 1999 there were 14 universities and 19 institutes of higher education with a total of 46,409 students, and 86 secondary vocational schools with 31,147 students.

In 1997 total expenditure on education came to 7·2% of GNP and 25·5% of total government spending.

In 2000 central government expenditure on education came to 3,333·9m. krooni.

Health. There were 78 state and 28 private hospitals in 1999, and 71·9 hospital beds per 10,000 population. In 1999 there were 4,426 state and 1,788 private doctors (in 1996, 4,457 state and 284 private doctors).

Welfare. In 1999 there were 0·37m. pensioners. The average monthly pension was 1,453 krooni in 1999. An official poverty line was introduced in 1993 (then 280 krooni per month). Persons receiving less are entitled to state benefit. Unemployment benefit was 400 krooni a month in 1999.

CULTURE

Broadcasting. There were over 30 radio stations in Estonia in 2000. Public service radio, Estonian Radio, operates four channels, three in Estonian and one in languages of national minorities, mainly Russian. In 2000 there were four TV channels with nationwide networks (colour by PAL): Estonian State Television and three commercial channels. The Broadcasting Council is the regulatory body for public service broadcasting and has nine members nominated by Riigikogu (the Estonian Parliament). There were 605,000 TV receivers and 1·01m. radio receivers in 1997.

Cinema. In 1995 there were 220 cinemas, three full-length films were made and gross box office receipts came to 16m. krooni. Attendances were 1m. in 1996.

Press. In 2000 there were 109 officially registered newspapers, including 82 in Estonian; and 956 periodicals, including 778 in Estonian. The Baltic Times is an English-language weekly.

Tourism. There were 3·18m. foreign visitors in 1999 who spent US$667·8m., 18% of Estonia's GDP.

Festivals. Festivals include: International Folklore Festival, BALTICA, which is staged every three years; Festival of Baroque Music; Jazz festival, JAZZKAAR; Pärnu International Documentary and Anthropology Film Festival and the Viljandi Folk Music Festival. Estonia's Song Festival, which was first held in 1869, is held every five years and is next scheduled to take place in 2004.

Baltoscandal, an international theatre festival which takes place every two years, celebrated its 7th staging in June 2002.

Libraries. The Eesti Rahvusraamatukogu (National Library of Estonia), opened in 1993, hosts exhibitions of local and international art. Other libraries include the Tallinn Tartu University Library (1802); Technical University Library (1919); and the Estonian Academic Library (1946). In 1997 there were 743 public libraries, 2 National libraries and 33 Higher Education libraries. They held a combined 18,116,000 volumes for 1,073,000 registered users.

Theatre and Opera. Most performances are in the Estonian language with the exception of the Russian Drama Theatre, and the Estonia Opera and Ballet Theatre which sometimes performs operas in their original language. There were nine state theatres and one municipal in 2000.

Population estimate, 2000: 62·91m.
GDP per capita, 2000: (PPP$) 668
HDI/world rank: 0·327/168

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The ancient empire of Ethiopia has its legendary origin in the meeting of King Solomon and the Queen of Sheba. The empire developed at Askum in the north in the centuries before and after the birth of Christ as a result of Semitic immigration from South Arabia. Ethiopia's subsequent history is one of sporadic expansion southwards and eastwards, checked from the 16th to early 19th centuries by devastating wars with Muslims and Gallas. Modern Ethiopia dates from the reign of the Emperor Theodore (1855–68). Menelik II (1889–1913) defeated the Italians in 1896 and thereby safeguarded the empire's independence in the scramble for Africa.

In 1923 the heir to the throne, Ras Tafari (crowned Emperor Haile Selassie five years later), succeeded in getting Ethiopia admitted as an independent country to the League of Nations. However, the League was ineffective in preventing a second Italian invasion in 1936. The emperor fled the country, only returning when the Allied forces defeated the Italians in 1941.

In 1950 the former Italian colony of Eritrea, from 1941 under British military administration, was handed over to Ethiopia. Thereafter, a secessionist movement fought a guerrilla war for independence under the Eritrean Peoples' Liberation Front (EPLF). A military government, known as the Dirgue, assumed power on 12 Sept. 1974 under the leadership of Lieut. Col. Mengistu Haile Miriam. It deposed the emperor, abolished the monarchy and mounted an agricultural collectivization programme. In 1977 Somalia invaded Ethiopia and took control of the Ogaden region. After a counter offensive with Soviet and Cuban support the area was recaptured. Following ever-increasing territorial gains by the insurgent Ethiopian People's Revolutionary Democratic Front (EPRDF) and the EPLF, Mengistu fled the country. In July 1991 a conference of 24 political groups, called to appoint a transitional government, agreed a democratic charter. Eritrea seceded, and became independent, on 24 May 1993. In 1999 fighting broke out along Ethiopia's border with Eritrea. After the failure of international mediation, the 13-month long-truce between Ethiopia and Eritrea ended in May 2000. Ethiopia launched a major offensive in the ongoing war over territorial disputes and claimed victory. In June both sides agreed to an Organization of African Unity peace deal to end the two-year border war. Economic progress, including market-led reforms, raised hopes of higher living standards until three successive years of drought left food resources seriously depleted. Widespread malnutrition was alleviated by international aid.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Ethiopia is bounded in the northeast by Eritrea, east by Djibouti and Somalia, south by Kenya and west by Sudan. It has a total area of 1,104,300 sq. km. The secession of Eritrea in 1993 left Ethiopia without a coastline. An Eritrean–Ethiopian agreement of July 1993 gives Ethiopia rights to use the Eritrean ports of Assab and Massawa.

The first census was carried out in 1984: population, 42,019,418 (without Eritrea, 39,570,266). 1994 census population: 49,218,178. Estimate (1995), 56·68m. (82·8% rural in 1999); density, 51 per sq. km.

The UN gives a projected population for 2010 of 79·85m.

The 1994 Constitution provides for a federation of nine regions: Afar, Amhara, Benshangi, Gambella, Harar, Oromia, the Peoples of the South, Somalia and Tigre.

The population of the capital, Addis Ababa, was 2,534,000 in 1999. Other large towns (1994 populations): Dire Dawa, 164,851; Nazret, 127,842; Harar, 122,932; Mekele, 119,779; Jimma, 119,717.

There are six major ethnic groups (in % of total population in 1996): Oromo, 31%; Amhara, 30%; Tigrinya, 7%; Gurage, 4·7%; Somali, 4·1%; Sidamo, 3·2%. There are also some 60 minor ethnic groups and 286 languages are spoken. The de facto official language is Amharic (which uses its own alphabet), though Oromo-speakers form the largest group.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Births, 1995, 2,741,000; deaths, 965,000. Rates per 1,000 population, 1995: births, 48·6; deaths, 17·1. Expectation of life at birth in 1999 was 43·3 years for males and 44·9 years for females. Annual population growth rate, 1990–99, 2·7%; infant mortality, 1999, 118 per 1,000 live births; fertility rate, 1999, 6·2 births per woman.

CLIMATE

The wide range of latitude produces many climatic variations between the high, temperate plateaus and the hot, humid lowlands. The main rainy season lasts from June to Aug., with light rains from Feb. to April, but the country is very vulnerable to drought. Addis Ababa, Jan. 59°F (15°C), July 59°F (15°C). Annual rainfall 50" (1,237 mm). Harar, Jan. 65°F (18·3°C), July 64°F (17·8°C). Annual rainfall 35" (897 mm). Massawa, Jan. 78°F (25·6°C), July 94°F (34·4°C). Annual rainfall 8" (193 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

A 548-member constituent assembly was elected on 5 June 1994; turn-out was 55%. The EPRDF gained 484 seats. On 8 Dec. 1994 it unanimously adopted a new federal Constitution which provides for the creation of a federation of nine regions based (except the capital and the southern region) on a predominant ethnic group. These regions have the right of secession after a referendum. The President, a largely ceremonial post, is elected by parliament, the 548-member Council of People's Representatives. There is also an upper house, the 108-member Federal Council.

National Anthem. 'Yazegennat keber ba-Ityop yachchen santo' ('In our Ethiopia our civic pride is strong'); words anonymous, tune by S. Lulu.

RECENT ELECTIONS

Elections to the Council of People's Representatives took place on 14 May 2000. The Oromo People's Democratic Organization (OPDO) took 177 seats; Amhara National Democratic Movement (ANDM) 134; Tigray People's Liberation Front (TPLF) 38; Walayta, Gamo, Gofa Dawro Konta People's Democratic Organization 27; Ethiopian People's Revolutionary Democratic Front (EPRDF) 19; Sidama People's Democratic Organization 18; Gurage Nationalities Democratic Movement 15. 19 other parties won 10 seats or fewer. Non-partisans took 8 seats. The main parliamentary parties belong to the Ethiopian People's Revolutionary Front.

DEFENCE

In 2000 defence expenditure totalled US$448m. (US$8 per capita), representing 6·8% of GDP.

Army. Following the overthrow of President Mengistu's government Ethiopian armed forces were constituted from former members of the Tigray Peoples' Liberation Front. The strength of the armed forces is estimated at 350,000 (1999).

Air Force. Due to its role in the war with Eritrea aircraft operability has improved. There were over 70 combat aircraft in 1999, including MiG-21s and MiG-23s, and 24 armed helicopters; and Russia has agreed to supply Su-27s. Personnel estimated at 2,500 in 1999. There were airfields at Debre Zeit, Asmara, Gode, Dire Dawa and Deke.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

A border dispute between Ethiopia and Eritrea broke out in May 1998. Eritrean troops took over the border town of Badame after a skirmish between Ethiopian police units and armed men from Eritrea. Ethiopia maintained that Badame and Sheraro, a nearby town, had always been part of Ethiopia and called Eritrea's action an invasion. An agreement ending hostilities was signed in June 2000, followed by a peace accord in Dec. A buffer zone has been created to separate the armies.

Ethiopia is a member of the UN, the African Union, African Development Bank, COMESA, the Intergovernmental Authority on Development and is an ACP member state of the ACP-EU relationship.

ECONOMY

Agriculture accounted for 49·8% of GDP in 1998, industry 6·7% and services 43·5%.

Overview. Following a long period of stagnation, the Ethiopian economy came to a turning point in 1991 when peace was restored. An Economic Reform Programme, instituted in 1992, aimed at stabilizing the economy and deregulating economic activities to prepare the ground for a free-market economy. Also in 1992, a government agency, the Ethiopian Investment Authority, was created to promote, facilitate and co-ordinate foreign investment in the country. An Economic Rehabilitation and Reconstruction Programme (ERRP), launched in 1991–92, eased foreign exchange regulations to allow for imports of raw materials and capital equipment. But economic growth has been hampered by three years of drought leading to widespread food shortages.

A privatization programme began in 1995. Since then more than 200 companies have been privatized, yielding some US$360m. In total around 300 companies are to be privatized.

Currency. The birr (ETB), of 100 cents, is the unit of currency. The birr was devalued in Oct. 1992. In May 2002 total money supply was 12,976m. birr, foreign exchange reserves were US$638m. and gold reserves 205,000 troy oz. There was deflation in 2001, of 7·1%.

Budget. The fiscal year ends on 6 July. Revenue, 1996–97, US$1bn.; expenditure, US$1·5bn.

Performance. Real GDP growth was 5·4% in 2000, rising to 7·7% in 2001. Total GDP was US$6·4bn. in 2001.

Banking and Finance. The central bank and bank of issue is the National Bank of Ethiopia (founded 1964; Governor, Teklewold Atnafu). The country's largest bank is the state-owned Commercial Bank of Ethiopia. The complete monopoly held by the bank ended with deregulation in 1994, but it still commands about 90% of the market share. On 1 Jan. 1975 the government nationalized all banks, mortgage and insurance companies.

Weights and Measures. The metric system is officially in use. Traditional units include the frasilla (= approximately 37½ lb), and the gasha, which can vary between 80 and 300 acres. The Julian calendar remains in use; the year has 13 months, and is seven years behind the Gregorian calendar.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Electricity. Installed capacity in 1991 was 630,000 kW. Production in 1998 was 1·36bn. kWh. Hydro-electricity accounts for 98% of generation. Consumption per capita was estimated to be 22 kWh in 1998. Supply: 220 volts; 50 Hz.

Oil and Gas. The Calub gas field in the southeast of Ethiopia has reserves estimated at 75bn. cu. metres.

Minerals. Gold and salt are produced. Lege Dembi, an open-pit gold mine in the south of the country, has proven reserves of over 62 tonnes and produces more than 3 tonnes a year.

Agriculture. Small-scale farmers make up about 85% of Ethiopia's population. There were 9·90m. ha of arable land in 1998 and 0·65m. ha of permanent crops. By 1993, 96% of agricultural land was worked by smallholdings averaging 0·5–1·5 ha. Land remains the property of the state, but individuals are granted rights of usage which can be passed to their children, and produce may be sold on the open market instead of compulsorily to the state at low fixed prices.

Coffee is by far the most important source of rural income. Main agricultural products (2000, in 1,000 tonnes): maize, 2,600; sugarcane, 2,300; wheat, 1,220; sorghum, 1,190; barley, 750; potatoes, 340; millet, 320; broad beans, 280; yams, 250; coffee, 230. Teff (Eragrastis abyssinica) and durra are also major products.

Livestock, 2000: cattle, 35·0m.; sheep, 21·0m.; goats, 16·8m.; asses, 5·20m.; horses, 2·75m.; camels, 1·06m.; chickens, 56m.

Forestry. In 1995 forests covered 13·58m. ha, representing 13·6% of the land area (13·89m. ha and 13·9% of the land area in 1990). Timber production in 1999 was 51·27m. cu. metres.

Fisheries. The catch in 1999 was approximately 15,858 tonnes, entirely from inland waters.

INDUSTRY

Most public industrial enterprises are controlled by the state. Industrial activity is centred around Addis Ababa. Processed food, cement, textiles and drinks are the main commodities produced.

In 1998 Ethiopia signed a US$500m. deal with the World Bank for power and road development projects.

Labour. The labour force in 1996 was 25,392,000 (59% males); it was estimated by the UN that 30% were unemployed. Coffee provided a livelihood to a quarter of the population.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Foreign debt was US$5,481m. in 2000.

Imports and Exports. Imports and exports for calendar years in US$1m.:

	1996	1997	1998	1999	2000
Imports f.o.b.	1,002·2	1,001·6	1,309·8	1,387·2	1,131·4
Exports f.o.b.	417·5	588·3	560·3	467·4	486·0

Principal exports (1994): coffee (64%); raw hides and skins (16%). Principal imports: refined petroleum products (12%); crude petroleum oils (9%); wheat and meslin (8%); motor vehicles for goods transport (7%).

Coffee accounts for about half of the country's export earnings. In 1997, 103,000 tonnes of coffee were exported, earning around US$360m. (£220m.) compared to just US$160m. (£100m.) in 1993. Other important exports include hides and skins, sugar, pulses and cattle.

Main export markets, 1997: Germany, 22%; Japan, 12%; Italy, 9%; UK, 5%. Main import suppliers, 1997: Italy, 10%; USA, 9%; Japan, 8%; Jordan, 5%.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. There were 28,500 km of roads in 1996, only about 4,275 km of which are paved. Passenger cars in use in 1998 numbered 55,644 (less than one per 1,000 inhabitants) and there were also 28,170 trucks and vans, and 14,622 buses and coaches.

In 1998 a US$500m. deal was signed with the World Bank for road and power development projects.

Rail. The Ethiopian-Djibouti Railway Corp. (782 km, metre-gauge) in 1993 carried 0·24m. tonnes of freight and 0·71m. passengers.

Civil Aviation. There are international airports at Addis Ababa (Bole) and Dire Dawa. The national carrier is the state-owned Ethiopian Airlines.

In 1998 Ethiopian Airlines served 44 international and 35 domestic destinations. In 1999 scheduled airline traffic of Ethiopian-based carriers flew 28·5m. km, carrying 861,000 passengers (617,000 on international flights). In 2000 Addis Ababa (Bole) handled 1,040,623 passengers and 27,237 tonnes of freight.

Shipping. Merchant shipping totalled 83,000 GRT in 1998.

Telecommunications. All the main centres are connected with Addis Ababa by telephone or radio telegraph. In 2000 there were 231,900 telephone main lines (3·7 per 1,000 persons), three-quarters of which are in Addis Ababa. There were 60,000 PCs in use in 2000 (0·9 per 1,000 persons) and 2,000 fax machines in 1997. In Dec. 2000 Ethiopia had 10,000 Internet users.

Postal Services. In 1995 there were 570 post offices, or one for every 97,000 persons.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. The legal system is based on the Justinian Code. A new penal code came into force in 1958 and Special Penal Law in 1974. Codes of criminal procedure, civil, commercial and maritime codes have since been promulgated. Provincial and district courts have been established, and High Court judges visit the provincial courts on circuit. The Supreme Court at Addis Ababa is presided over by the Chief Justice.

Religion. About 53% of the population are Christian, mainly belonging to the Ethiopian Orthodox Church, and 30% Sunni Muslims. Amhara, Tigreans and some Oromos are Christian. Somalis, Afars and some Oromos are Muslims. About 12% of the population follow traditional animist beliefs.

Education. The adult literacy rate in 1999 was 37·4% (42·8% among males and 31·8% among females). Primary education commences at seven years and continues with optional secondary education at 13 years. Up to the age of 12, education is in the local language of the federal region. Pupil/teacher ratio: 33. In 1996–97 there were 4,007,694 pupils at 10,256 primary schools with 92,775 teachers, and (1995–96) 819,242 pupils with 25,984 teachers at secondary schools. During the period 1990–95 only 19% of females of primary school age were enrolled in school. In 1994–95 there was one university with 19,200 students and 900 academic staff, and one agricultural university with 1,551 students and 324 academic staff. There were two institutes of health sciences and water technology; and two colleges—one of teacher training and one of town planning.

In 1996 expenditure on education came to 4·0% of GNP and 13·7% of total government spending.

Health. Population per hospital bed, 1994–95, 293,787; population per health centre, 22,242. In the period 1990–98 only 25% of the population had access to safe drinking water.

CULTURE

Broadcasting. The government-run Voice of Ethiopia broadcasts a national programme and an external service in English. Ethiopian Television (colour by PAL) transmits about 28 hours a week. In 1997 there were 11·75m. radio and 320,000 TV receivers.

Press. In 1996 there were four government-controlled daily newspapers with a combined circulation of about 86,000. In 1995 there were 17 non-dailies and periodicals.

Tourism. In 1998 there were 91,000 foreign visitors. Revenue from tourists in 1998 totalled US$11m.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The Fiji Islands were first recorded in detail by Capt. Bligh after the mutiny of the Bounty (1789). In the 19th century the demand for sandalwood attracted merchant ships. Deserters and shipwrecked men stayed. Tribal wars were bloody and general until Fiji was ceded to Britain on 10 Oct. 1874. Fiji gained independence on 10 Oct. 1970. It remained an independent state within the Commonwealth with a Governor-General appointed by the Queen until 1987. In the general election of 12 April 1987 a left-wing coalition came to power with the support of the Indian population who outnumbered the indigenous Fijians by 50% to 44%. However, it was overthrown in a military coup. A month later, Fiji declared itself a Republic and Fiji's Commonwealth membership lapsed.

In 1990 a new coalition restored civilian rule but made it impossible for Fijian Indians to hold power. A rapprochement with Indian leaders led to an agreement to restore multi-racial government in 1998. Fiji rejoined the Commonwealth in 1997. On 27 July 1998 a new constitution changed the country's name from Fiji to Fiji Islands.

A coup was staged in May 2000 under the leadership of George Speight, a failed businessman. His main aim was to exclude Indians from the government. An interim government, excluding Speight supporters, was appointed on 3 July 2000 to rule for 18 months. On 26 July George Speight and 400 of his supporters were arrested. On 18 Feb. 2002 Speight was sentenced to death although this was subsequently commuted to life imprisonment.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The Fiji Islands comprise 332 islands and islets (about one-third are inhabited) lying between 15° and 22° S. lat. and 174° E. and 177° W. long. The largest is Viti Levu, area 10,429 sq. km (4,027 sq. miles); next is Vanua Levu, area 5,556 sq. km (2,145 sq. miles). The island of Rotuma (47 sq. km, 18 sq. miles), about 12° 30' S. lat., 178° E. long., was added to the colony in 1881. Total area, 7,078 sq. miles (18,333 sq. km). Total population (1996 census), 775,077 (females, 381,146); ethnic groups: Fijian, 393,575; Indian, 338,818; part-European/European, 14,788; Chinese, 4,939; other Pacific islanders, 10,463; Rotuman, 9,727; other, 2,767. Population density (1996), 42·4 per sq. km. Of the total population, 51·4% lived in urban areas in 1999.

The UN gives a projected population for 2010 of 896,000.

Population estimate of the capital, Suva, in 1999 was 196,000. Other large towns, with 1996 populations, are Lautoka (42,917), Nadi (30,791) and Labasa (24,187).

English is the official language; Fijian and Hindustani are also spoken.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Births, 1998, 17,944; deaths, 5,241, marriages, 8,058. 1998 birth rate per 1,000 population, 22·5; death rate per 1,000 population, 6·6. Annual population growth rate, 1990–99, 1·2%. Life expectancy at birth in 1999 was 67·1 years for males and 70·7 years for females. Infant mortality, 1999, 18 per 1,000 live births; fertility rate, 1999, 2·7 births per woman.

CLIMATE

A tropical climate, but oceanic influences prevent undue extremes of heat or humidity. The S. E. Trades blow from May to Nov., during which time nights are cool and rainfall amounts least. Suva, Jan. 80°F (26·7°C), July 73°F (22·8°C). Annual rainfall 117" (2,974 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The executive authority of the State is vested in the President, who is appointed by the Bose Levu Vakaturaga (Great Council of Chiefs). The Prime Minister is appointed by the President. The Prime Minister must establish a multi-party cabinet. The President's term of office is five years.

The Upper House or Senate consists of 32 members of whom 14 are appointed by the President on the advice of Bose Levu Vakaturaga. Nine are appointed by the President on the advice of the Leader of the Opposition and one appointed by the President on the advice of the Council of Rotuma.

A new Constitution unanimously passed by Parliament and assented to by H.E. the President came into force on 27 July 1998. The country's name was changed from Fiji to Fiji Islands and the people were to be known as Fiji Islanders instead of Fijians. The new Constitution also does away with an indigenous Prime Minister and has a 71-seat House of Representatives (Lower House), with 46 elected on a communal role and 25 from an open electoral roll. Of the 46, 23 will be elected from a roll of voters registered as Fijians, 19 from a roll of voters registered as Indians, 1 from a roll of voters registered as Rotumans, and 3 from a roll of voters registered who are none of these. Parliament was reopened in Oct. 2001, having been suspended following the May 2000 coup.

National Anthem. 'Blessing grant, oh God of Nations, on the isles of Fiji'; words by M. Prescott, tune anonymous.

RECENT ELECTIONS

Mahendra Chaudhry, the Labour Party leader, became the country's first Indian prime minister in 1999, but was ousted in the coup of May 2000 after just over a year in office. In parliamentary elections held between 25 Aug.–2 Sept. 2001 Soqosoqo Duavata ni Leweniavanua (Fiji United Party) won 32 out of 71 seats ahead of the Fiji Labour Party with 27. Other parties won six seats or fewer.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

President: Ratu Josefa Iloilo; b. 1920 (appointed as interim president on 18 July 2000; re-appointed as president for a five-year term on 15 March 2001).

Vice President: Jope Seniloli.

In March 2003 the government comprised:

Prime Minister, Minister for National Reconciliation and Unity, Information and Media Relations, Fijian Affairs, Culture and Heritage: Laisenia Qarase (sworn in 10 Sept. 2001, having previously been interim prime minister from 4 July 2000 to 14 March 2001 and from 16 March 2001 until officially taking office). He named a cabinet that did not include any members of the Indian-dominated Labour party in defiance of the constitution, which states that any party with eight or more seats is entitled to ministerial positions.

DEFENCE

In 2000 defence expenditure totalled US$32m. (US$39 per capita), representing 2·1% of GDP.

Army. Personnel in (1999) numbered close to 3,200 including 300 recalled reserves. More than 800 of these are actively involved in peacekeeping duties with the United Nations in the Middle East. There was an additional reserve force of 6,000.

Navy. A small naval division of the armed forces numbered 300 in 1999.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

The Fiji Islands is a member of the UN, WTO, the Commonwealth, the Asian Development Bank, the Colombo Plan, the Pacific Community, the Pacific Islands Forum, and is an ACP member state of the ACP-EU relationship.

ECONOMY

Agriculture accounted for 19·5% of GDP in 1998, industry 31·0% and services 49·5%.

Operating revenue (1997), $F700·00m. Operating expenditure (1997), $F550·00m.

Currency. The unit of currency is the Fiji dollar (FJD) of 100 cents. In June 2002 total money supply was $F661m., foreign exchange reserves were US$332m. and gold reserves 1,000 troy oz. Inflation in 2001 was 2·3%. The Fiji dollar was devalued by 20% in Jan. 1998.

Budget. The financial year corresponds with the calendar year. Government revenue and expenditure (in $F1m.):

	1994	1995	1996	1997	1998
Revenue	689·02	710·18	736·18	794·09	848·65
Expenditure	786·20	801·14	881·44	770·30	1,029·46

VAT of 10% was introduced in 1992.

Performance. There was a recession in 2000, with the economy shrinking by 2·8%, although 2001 saw a recovery, with growth of 2·6%. Total GDP in 2001 was US$1·7bn.

Banking and Finance. The central bank and bank of issue is the Reserve Bank of Fiji (Governor, Savenaca Narube). Total assets were $F493·07m. in June 1996. The National Bank is a government-owned commercial bank. The Fiji Development Bank has assets totalling $F356·01m. There are six foreign banks in the country. Total assets of commercial banks were $F1,797·92m. in June 1996.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Environment. According to the World Bank Atlas carbon dioxide emissions in 1998 were the equivalent of 0·9 tonnes per capita.

Electricity. The Fiji Electricity Authority is responsible for the generation, transmission and distribution of electricity in the country. It operates six separate supply systems. The largest energy project is one of hydro-electricity generating 95% of the main island's electric needs. Two rural hydro schemes have been completed, one generating 100 kW and the other 800 kW. In 1994 there were seven thermal and one hydro-electric power stations.

Installed capacity in 1993 was 200,000 kW; production was 550m. kWh in 1998. Consumption per capita in 1997 was 693 kWh.

Minerals. The main gold-mine accounts for almost one tenth of the country's exports and employs about 1,700 people. Since the beginning of 1997 gold prices have been falling. However, a total of 2,000 tonnes have been sold since 1991. Net sales in 1996 were 239 tonnes (gross sales were 588 tonnes). Gold is likely to overtake sugar as the Fiji Islands' main export by 2005. Gold production, 1996, was 4,452 kg; silver production, 1995, 1,572 kg.

Agriculture. With a total land area of 1·8m. ha, only 16% is suitable for farming. Arable land: 24% sugarcane, 23% coconut, 53% other crops. Production figures for 2000 (in 1,000 tonnes): sugarcane, 2,250; coconut, 215; cassava, 30; taro, 27; rice, 18; copra, 14; sweet potatoes, 8. Ginger is the most successful diversification crop to date—1995 showed an increase of 1,000 tonnes; total export value for the 1995 crop was $F1,445,000. Fruits and vegetables were valued at $F1m. in 1995 for 1,000 tonnes of export.

Livestock (2000): cattle, 350,000; horses, 44,000; goats, 235,000; pigs, 115,000; chickens, 4m. Products, 2000 (in 1,000 tonnes): beef and veal, 10; pork, bacon and ham, 4; poultry meat, 8; eggs, 4. Total production of milk was 58,000 tonnes in 2000.

Forestry. Forests covered 835,000 ha—45·7% of the land area—in 1995 (most of it natural forest), compared to 853,000 ha and 46·7% in 1990. Forestry contributed around 1·2% of GDP in 1998. It is the fifth most important export commodity, valued at $F34m. in 1996. Hardwood plantations covered over 48,000 ha in 1996. In 2000 Fiji Pine Ltd had nearly 42,000 ha of softwood plantations, and aims eventually to have 52,000 ha. Log production in 1999 was 483,000 cu. metres.

Fisheries. The catch in 1999 was 36,713 tonnes, of which 31,091 tonnes came from sea fishing. Fisheries accounts for 2% of GDP. Mainstay of export fisheries are the skipjack and albacore tuna for canning. There was an increase in export of fresh and chilled tuna from 53 tonnes in 1989 to over 3,000 tonnes in 1995.

INDUSTRY

The Tax Free Factory scheme was instituted in 1987 as an encouragement to industry. A total of 133 Tax Free Factories (TFF) were in operation in 1996, a decline from 144 in 1995. Of the total, 68 factories were engaged in garment manufacturing. The garment industry earned $F141m. in 1996.

Output (in tonnes): sugar (1998), 277,900; coconut oil (1993), 6,017; flour (1994), 26,933; butter (1994), 1,477; cigarettes (1996), 481m. (units); animal feed (1994), 25,377; cement (1996), 84,000; soap, washing powder and detergents (1995), 7,000; beer (1995), 15m. litres.

Labour. Approximately 301,500 persons were in paid employment in 1996. There were 17,700 unemployed persons in 1998, or 5·4% of the workforce.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

The Tax Free Factory/Tax Free Zone Scheme was introduced in 1987 to stimulate investment and encourage export-oriented businesses.

Foreign debt was US$136m. in 2000.

Imports and Exports. Imports and exports for calendar years in US$1m.:

	1995	1996	1997	1998	1999
Imports f.o.b.	761·4	839·9	818·9	614·6	653·3
Exports f.o.b.	519·6	672·2	535·6	428·9	537·7

Chief exports are sugar, prepared and preserved fish, timber, ginger and molasses. Main export markets, 1996: Australia, 27·9%; UK, 14·4%; New Zealand, 12·4%; USA, 8·5%. Main import suppliers, 1996: Australia, 44·4%; New Zealand, 14·8%; USA, 9·3%; Japan, 5·7%.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. Total road length in 1996 was 3,440 km, of which almost half were sealed. There were a total of 30,000 passenger cars and 29,000 lorries and vans in 1996. In 1997, 73 fatalities were caused by road accidents.

Rail. Fiji Sugar Cane Corporation runs 600 mm gauge railways at four of its mills on Viti Levu and Vanua Levu, totalling 595 km.

Civil Aviation. There are international airports at Nadi and Suva. The national carrier is Air Pacific (78% government-owned). In 1998 it provided services to Australia, Japan, New Zealand, USA and a number of Pacific island nations. Air Fiji only operates on domestic routes. In 2000 Nadi handled 816,000 passengers (700,000 on international flights).

Shipping. The three ports of entry are Suva, Lautoka and Levuka. Ocean-going shipping totalled 29,000 GRT in 1998, including oil tankers 3,000 GRT. Inter-island shipping fleet is a mix of private and government vessels. A total of 620 foreign vessels called into the Suva port in 1995, 318 and 109 respectively in Lautoka and Levuka. Altogether 7,189 ships including local ships, yachts and foreign vessels called into the three major ports.

Telecommunications. The national telephone service had 86,400 telephone main lines in 2000 (106·2 for every 1,000 population). In 1998, 40% of subscribers were business customers and 60% residential. There were over 500 cardphones located around the country in 1998 and approximately 80 in rural areas. There were 3,800 fax machines in use in 1997, 8,000 mobile phone subscribers in 1998 and 45,000 PCs in use in 2000 (55·3 per 1,000 persons). Internet users numbered 7,500 in Dec. 1999.

Postal Services. In 1995, 19·6m. items were posted in the Fiji Islands for delivery to local addresses in addition to 4·76m. items posted for overseas destinations, making total posting of 24·45m. items. There are currently 50 major post offices and 108 postal agencies.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. An independent Judiciary is guaranteed under the constitution. A High Court has unlimited original jurisdiction to hear and determine any civil or criminal proceedings under any law. The High Court also has jurisdiction to hear and determine constitutional and electoral questions including the membership of the House of Representatives. The Chief Justice of the Fiji Islands is appointed by the President after consultation with the Prime Minister.

The Fiji Islands' Court of Appeal, of which the Chief Justice is ex officio President, is formed by three specially appointed Justices of Appeal, appointed by the President after consultation with the Judicial and Legal Services Commission. Generally, any person convicted of an offence has a right of appeal from the High Court of Appeal. The final appellant court is the Supreme Court. Most matters coming before the Superior Courts originate in Magistrates' Courts.

The population in penal institutions in 1997 was 1,091 (140 per 100,000 of national population).

Police. In 1997 the Royal Fiji Police Force had a total strength of 1,915.

Religion. In 1996 the population consisted of 52% Christians, 39·4% Hindus, 7·8% Muslims, 0·7% Sikhs and 0·1% others.

Education. Adult literacy rate was 92·6% in 1999 (94·7% among males and 90·5% among females). Total enrolment in 1996: primary schools, 142,781 (with 5,011 teachers); secondary schools, 70,098 (with 3,519 teachers); teacher training, 903 (with 92 teachers); vocational/technical education, 1,876. The number of registered schools totalled 1,261. Of these there were 391 pre-schools, 16 special schools, 698 primary schools, 151 secondary schools and 5 post secondary schools.

The University of the South Pacific, which is located in Suva, serves 12 countries in the South Pacific region. The Fiji Islands also has a college of agriculture, school of medicine and nursing, an institute of technology, a primary school teacher training college and an advanced college of education.

Health. In 1997 there were 25 hospitals with 1,805 beds; 409 doctors, 36 dentists and 1,742 nurses.

Through its national health service system, the government continues to provide the bulk of health services both in the curative and public health programmes. In 1998, 41% of adults in the Fiji Islands aged 15 and over smoked—the second highest percentage of any country, after Russia.

CULTURE

Broadcasting. There are two major radio stations, Island Network Corporation Ltd and Communications Fiji Ltd. Each has its own unique programmes to suit the culture, age and taste of the nation's radio audience. Fiji Television Company is a commercial network that has one free to air and two pay channels (colour by NTSC). In 1997 there were 21,000 TV receivers and 500,000 radio receivers.

Press. There are two daily newspapers, Fiji Times and Herald and The Daily Post. Vernacular newspapers are also published by these two, including Nai Lalakai, Nai Volasiga and Shanti Dut. Other locally produced periodicals are the Review, Island's Business, Fiji First, Pacific Islands Monthly and Marama Vou.

Tourism. Visitor arrivals in 1999 totalled a record high 409,955, earning US$541m. The inauguration of new flight routes and their associated promotions contributed to an increase in visitors.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Finland was part of Sweden until the 18th century when the southeast territory was conquered by Russia. The rest of the country was ceded to Russia by the treaty of Hamina in 1809 when Finland became an autonomous grand-duchy retaining its laws and institutions under a grand duke, the Emperor of Russia. The Diet, elected since 1906 on universal suffrage, produced in 1916 a social democrat majority, the first in Europe. After the Russian revolution Finland declared itself independent but civil war broke out in Jan. 1918 between the 'whites' and 'reds', the latter supported by Russian Bolshevik forces. The defeat of the red guards led to a peace treaty with Soviet Russia, signed in 1920. On 30 Nov. 1939 a Soviet invasion compelled Finland to cede 32,806 sq. km including the Carelian Isthmus, Viipuri and the shores of Lake Ladoga. When the German attack on the USSR was launched in June 1941 Finland was again involved in war against the USSR. On 19 Sept. 1944 an armistice was signed in Moscow. Finland agreed to cede more territory and to pay reparations. To pacify the USSR, the post-war premier and later president Juho Passikivi pursued a policy of neutralism favourable to the Russians. This policy, known as Finlandization, was continued under Presidents Urho Kekkonen (1956–81) and Mauno Koivisto (1981–94). With the collapse of the Soviet Union, Finland was able to adopt an independent foreign policy which led to EU admission in 1995.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Finland, a country of lakes and forests, is bounded in the northwest and north by Norway, east by Russia, south by the Baltic Sea and west by the Gulf of Bothnia and Sweden. In 2001 the rate per 1,000 population was: births, 11; deaths, 9; marriages, 5; infant deaths (per 1,000 live births), 3·2. Annual population growth rate, 1992–2001, 0·3%. In 2001 the suicide rate per 100,000 population was 36·8 among men and 10·2 among women, giving Finland the highest suicide rate in the European Union. Life expectancy at birth, 2001, 74·6 years for males and 81·5 years for females. In 2001 the most popular age range for marrying was 25–29 for both males and females. Fertility rate, 2000, 1·7 births per woman. In 2001 Finland received 1,651 asylum applications, equivalent to 0·3 per 1,000 inhabitants.

A UNICEF report published in 2000 showed that 4·3% of children in Finland live in poverty (in households with income below 50% of the national median), the third lowest percentage of any country behind Sweden and Norway.

CLIMATE

A quarter of Finland lies north of the Arctic Circle. The climate is severe in winter, which lasts about six months, but mean temperatures in the south and southwest are less harsh, 21°F (–6°C). In the north, mean temperatures may fall to 8·5°F (–13°C). Snow covers the ground for three months in the south and for over six months in the far north. Summers are short but quite warm, with occasional very hot days. Precipitation is light throughout the country, with one third falling as snow, the remainder mainly as rain in summer and autumn. Helsinki (Helsingfors), Jan. 30·2°F (–1·0°C), July 68·4°F (20·2°C). Annual rainfall 27·9" (708·7 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

Finland is a republic governed by the constitution of 1 March 2000 (which replaced the previous constitution dating from 1919). Although the president used to choose who formed the government, under the new constitution it is the responsibility of parliament to select the prime minister. The government is in charge of domestic and EU affairs with the president responsible for foreign policy ‘in co-operation with the government’.

Parliament consists of one chamber (Eduskunta) of 200 members chosen by direct and proportional election by all citizens of 18 or over. The country is divided into 15 electoral districts, with a representation proportional to their population. Every citizen over the age of 18 is eligible for parliament, which is elected for four years, but can be dissolved sooner by the president.

The president is elected for six years by direct popular vote. In the event of no candidate winning an absolute majority, a second round is held between the two most successful candidates.

National Anthem. ‘Maamme’/‘Vårt land’ (‘Our land’); words by J. L. Runeberg, tune by F. Pacius (same as Estonia).

RECENT ELECTIONS

Presidential elections were held on 16 Jan. 2000 with a second round on 6 Feb. In the first round SDP candidate Tarja Halonen came first with 40·0%, followed by Esko Aho (KESK) with 34·4%. There were five other candidates. In the run-off Halonen won with 51·6% against 48·4% for Aho. Turn-out was around 80%.

At the elections for the 200-member parliament on 16 March 2003, turn-out was 69·6%. The Centre Party (KESK) won 55 seats with 24·7% of votes cast (48 seats in 1999), the ruling Social Democratic Party (SDP) 53 with 24·5% (51 seats in 1999), the National Coalition Party 40 with 18·5%, the Left Alliance 19 with 9·9% (19), the Greens 14 with 8·0%, the Christian Democrats 7 with 5·3% and the Swedish People’s Party 8 with 4·6%. Turn-out was 69·6%. In Feb. 2002, 37·5% of the seats in parliament were held by women.

European Parliament. Finland has 16 representatives. At the June 1999 elections turn-out was 30·1%. The National Rally won 4 seats with 25·3% of votes cast (political affiliation in European Parliament: European Liberal, Democrat and Reform Party); Centre Party, 4 with 21·3% (European People’s Party); Social Democratic Party, 3 with 17·8% (Party of European Socialists); Green League, 2 with 13·4% (Greens); Left Wing League, 1 with 9·1% (Confederal Group of the European United Left/Nordic Green Left); Swedish People’s Party in Finland, 1 with 6·8% (European Liberal, Democrat and Reform Party); Christian League of Finland, 1 with 2·4% (European People’s Party).

DEFENCE

Conscript service is 6–12 months. Total strength of trained and equipped reserves is about 490,000 (to be 350,000).

Defence expenditure in 2001 totalled US$1,757m. (US$338 per capita), representing 1·2% of GDP.

Army. The Army consists of 1 armoured training brigade, 3 readiness brigades, 3 infantry training brigades, 3 jaeger regiments, 1 artillery brigade, 3 brigade artillery regiments, 2 air defence regiments, 1 engineer regiment (including ABC school), 3 brigade engineer battalions, 1 signals regiment, 4 brigade signals battalions and a reserve officer school. Total strength of 27,300 (21,600 conscripts).

Frontier Guard. This comes under the purview of the Ministry of the Interior, but is militarily organized to participate in the defence of the country. It is in charge of border surveillance and border controls. It is also responsible for conducting maritime search and rescue operations. Personnel, 2002, 3,200 (professional) with a potential mobilizational force of 22,000.

Navy. The organization of the Navy was changed on 1 July 1998. The Coastal Defence, comprising the coast artillery and naval infantry, was merged into the navy.

About 50% of the combatant units are kept manned, with the others on short-notice reserve and re-activated on a regular basis. Naval bases exist at Upinniemi (near Helsinki), Turku and Kotka. Naval Infantry mobile troops are trained at Tammisaari. Total personnel strength (2001) was 7,400, of whom 5,000 were conscripts.

Air Force. Personnel (2002), 4,300 (1,500 conscripts). Equipment included 63 F-18 Hornets.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

Finland is a member of the UN, WTO, BIS, NATO Partnership for Peace, OECD, EU, Council of Europe, OSCE, CERN, Nordic Council, Council of the Baltic Sea States, Inter-American Development Bank, Asian Development Bank, IOM and the Antarctic Treaty. Finland has acceded to the Schengen Accord, which abolishes border controls between Finland, Austria, Belgium, Denmark, France, Germany, Greece, Iceland, Italy, Luxembourg, the Netherlands, Norway, Portugal, Spain and Sweden.

ECONOMY

Services accounted for 63% of GDP in 2001, industry 34% and agriculture 3%.

According to the Berlin-based organization Transparency International, Finland has the least corruption in business and government of any country in the world. It received 9·7 out of 10 in a corruption perceptions index published in 2002.

Overview. Sound macroeconomic policies and economic openness have led the recovery from the recession of the early 1990s. A surplus in central government finances has been achieved by cutting taxes to boost the economy and by a tight control of expenditure. Fiscal policy in 2002 promoted growth in domestic demand. Income tax paid by households, pensioners' social security contribution and employers' national pension contributions have been reduced. In the last decade there has been a structural shift from a resource-based to a knowledge-based economy. The basic metals and forestry industry have given way to ICT (Information and Communications Technology). Finland ranks as one of the world's leading ICT producers.

Currency. On 1 Jan. 1999 the euro (EUR) became the legal currency in Finland; irrevocable conversion rate 5·94573 marks to one euro. The euro, which consists of 100 cents, has been in circulation since 1 Jan. 2002. There are seven euro notes in different colours and sizes denominated in 500, 200, 100, 50, 20, 10 and 5 euros, and eight coins denominated in 2 and 1 euros, then 50, 20, 10, 5, 2 and 1 cents. On the introduction of the euro there was a 'dual circulation' period before the mark ceased to be legal tender on 28 Feb. 2002. Euro banknotes in circulation on 1 Jan. 2002 had a total value of €8·0bn.

Inflation in 2001 was 2·6%, declining to 1·6% in 2002. Foreign exchange reserves were US$7,904m. in June 2002 and gold reserves 1·58m. troy oz. Total money supply was €5,189m. in June 2002.

Budget. Revenue and expenditure for the calendar years 1999–2003 in 1m. euros:

	1999	2000	2001	2002	2003[1]
Revenue	35,845	37,756	35,426	35,326	35,722
Expenditure	35,602	38,472	36,072	35,326	35,722

Of the total revenue in 2001, 36% derived from income and property tax, 29% from value added tax, 13% from excise duties, 5% from other taxes and similar revenue and 13% from miscellaneous sources. Of the total expenditure, 2001, 21% went to health and social security, 14% to education and culture, 7% to agriculture and forestry, 5% to defence, 5% to transport and 49% to other expenditure according to the budget.

VAT is 22% (reduced rates, 12% and 8%).

At the end of Dec. 2001 the central government debt totalled €61,760m. Domestic debt amounted to €5,323m.; foreign debt, 9,082m. marks.

Performance. Real GDP growth was 5·6% in 2000, but only 0·7% in 2001. It was forecast to be 1·6% in 2002. Total GDP was US$120·9bn. in 2001.

In 2000 the OECD reported that 'After expanding vigorously for several years, the Finnish economy experienced a temporary and mild slowdown in 1999 prompted by the global downturn in the wake of the financial crisis in Asia and Russia... Despite the slowdown in 1999, output growth outpaced the euro area average for the sixth successive year by a wide margin. Indeed, the rebound since the end of the deep recession of the early 1990s has been remarkably strong...' The report referred to the 'skilful macroeconomic management, moderate wage agreements, labour market reforms, the take-off of the electronic equipment industry (with output increasing by 25 per cent per year), rapid restructuring in other industries and a favourable international economic climate' as instrumental in economic growth. The report also cited the urgent need for reforms in the pension system and the need to lighten the Finnish tax burden (among the highest in the OECD).

Finland was placed second in the world in both the Growth Competitiveness Ranking and the Microeconomic Competitiveness Ranking in the World Economic Forum's Global Competitiveness Report 2002–03. In the 2002 World Competitiveness Yearbook, compiled by the International Institute for Management Development, Finland came second in the world ranking behind the USA.

Banking and Finance. The central bank is the Bank of Finland (founded in 1811), owned by the State and under the guarantee and supervision of Parliament. The Governor is Matti Vanhala. It is the only bank of issue, and the limit of its right to issue notes is fixed equal to the value of its assets of gold and foreign holdings plus 1,500m. marks.

At the end of 2001 the deposits in banking institutions totalled 359,474m. marks and the loans granted by them 408,416m. marks.

The most important groups of banking institutions in 2001 were:

	Number of institutions	Number of offices	Deposits (1m. marks)	Loans (1m. marks)
Commercial banks	9	724	209,346	252,063
Savings banks	40	254	29,520	27,328
Co-operative banks	287	626	110,555	104,678
Foreign banks	7	28	7,486	24,347

The three largest banks are Nordea Bank Finland (formed in 1997 as MeritaNordbanken when Nordbanken of Sweden merged with Merita of Finland), Sampo Bank (formerly Leonia) and OKO Bank. In March 2000 MeritaNordbanken acquired Denmark's Unidanmark, thereby becoming the Nordic region's biggest bank in terms of assets. It has also become Europe's leading Internet bank, by July 2000 having 1·4m. Internet banking clients. By early 2001 approximately 40% of the Finnish population were using e-banking, the highest percentage in any country.

There is a stock exchange in Helsinki, which is one of the best performers among small industrialized nations. In 1999 share prices rose by 125%.

In 1998 Finland received US$11bn. worth of foreign direct investment, equivalent to 8·9% of GDP. No other country received foreign investment totalling such a high proportion of its GDP.

Weights and Measures. The metric system is in use.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Environment. Finland's carbon dioxide emissions in 2001 were the equivalent of 11·6 tonnes per capita. An Environmental Sustainability Index compiled for the World Economic Forum meeting in Feb. 2002 ranked Finland first in the world, with 73·9%. The index measured the ability of countries to maintain favourable environmental conditions and examined various factors including pollution levels and the use or abuse of natural resources.

Electricity. Installed capacity was 17·24m. kW at the beginning of 2001. Production was 66,655m. kWh in 1999 (19% hydro-electric) and 67,278m. kWh in 2000 (21%). Consumption per capita in 2000 was an estimated 15,279 kWh. In 2001 there were four nuclear reactors, which contributed 32% of production. In May 2002 parliament approved the construction of a fifth reactor. Supply: 220 volts; 50 Hz.

Oil and Gas. There is no oil and gas production.

Water. Finland has abundant surface water and groundwater resources relative to its population and level of consumption. The total groundwater yield is estimated to be 10–30m. cu. metres a day, of which some 6m. is suitable for water supplies. Approximately 15% of this latter figure is made use of at the present time. A total of 2–4% of Finland's exploitable water resources are utilized each year.

Minerals. Notable of the mines are Pyhäsalmi (zinc–copper), Orivesi (gold ore), Hitura (nickel) and Keminmaa (chromium). In 2001 the metal content (in tonnes) of the output of copper ore was 11,600; of zinc ore, 20,100; of nickel ore, 2,000; and of chromium, 236,710.

Agriculture. The cultivated area covers only 7% of the land, and of the economically active population 6% were employed in agriculture and forestry in 2001. The arable area was divided in 2001 into 77,320 farms (including 1,001 farms with under one hectare of arable land). The distribution of this area by the size of the farms was: less than 5 ha cultivated, 6,605 farms; 5–20 ha, 29,758 farms; 20–50 ha, 29,474 farms; 50–100 ha, 9,651 farms; over 100 ha, 1,832 farms.

Agriculture accounted for 7·8% of exports and 8·6% of imports in 1997.

The principal crops (area in 1,000 ha, yield in 1,000 tonnes) were in 2001:

Crop	Area	Yield	Crop	Area	Yield
Barley	547·2	1,786·0	Hay	156·0	565·5
Oats	422·7	1,287·1	Wheat	144·6	488·9
Potatoes	30·0	732·8	Rye	29·0	64·1

The total area under cultivation in 2000 was 2,005,731 ha. Approximately 6·7% of all agricultural land is used for organic farming. Production of dairy butter in 2001 was 61,026 tonnes; and of cheese, 97,846 tonnes.

Livestock (2001): horses, 58,600 (including trotting and riding horses, and ponies); cattle, 1,037,400; pigs, 1,260,800; poultry, 4,244,700; reindeer (1998), 292,000.

Forestry. The total forest land amounts to 23·0m. ha. The productive forest land covers 20·2m. ha. Timber production in 1999 was 53·85m. cu. metres. Finland is one of the largest producers of roundwood in Europe. Finland's per capita consumption of roundwood is the highest in the world, at 11·5m. cu. metres per person in 2000.

Fisheries. The catch in 2000 was 115,400 tonnes, of which 110,041 tonnes came from sea fishing. In 2001 there were 247 food fish production farms in operation, of which 74 were freshwater farms. Their total production amounted to 15,739 tonnes. In addition there were 126 fry-farms and 301 natural food rearers, most of these in freshwater.

INDUSTRY

The leading companies by market capitalization in Finland, excluding banking and finance, in Jan. 2002 were: Nokia Oyj (€106bn.), the world's leading mobile phone producer; and Stora Enso Oyj (€14bn.) and UPM-Kymmene Corporation (€10bn.) world-class forest products companies.

Finland originally became industrialized by harnessing its forest resources. Over a century later, forests are still Finland's most crucial raw material resource, although the metal and engineering industry has long been Finland's leading branch of manufacturing, both in terms of value added and as an employer. Today Finland is a typical advanced industrial economy: two-thirds of its total output is generated in the service sector.

In 1999 there were 29,614 establishments in industry (of which 27,168 were manufacturing concerns) with 436,565 personnel (of whom 414,252 were in manufacturing). Gross value of industrial production in 1999 was 528,824m. marks, of which manufacturing accounted for 499,398m. marks.

Labour. In 2001 the labour force was 2,605,000 (52% males). In 2001, 66·8% of the economically active population worked in services, 21·0% in manufacturing and 15·1% in trade and restaurants. In 2001 unemployment was 9·1%, up from 3·2% in 1990, but down from 16·6% in 1994. In Jan. 2003 the rate dropped further still to 9·0%.

Trade Unions. There are three labour organizations: the Confederation of Unions for Academic Professionals—Akateemisten Toimihenkilöiden Keskusjarjesto (AKAVA); the Finnish Confederation of Salaried Employees—Toimihenkilokeskusjarjesto (STTK); and the Central Organization of Finnish Trade Unions (SAK). According to an incomes policy agreement reached by the central labour market organizations in Nov. 2002, which is in force until Feb. 2005, wages and salaries were to be raised by 1·8% in March 2003 and by 1·7% in March 2004. The government has undertaken to cut taxes on wages and salaries to support moderate pay increases.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

At the start of the 1990s a collapse in trade with Russia led to the worst recession in the country's recent history. Today, exports to Russia are about 6% of the total.

In 1960 wood and paper industry dominated exports with their 69% contribution, but today the metal and engineering industry is the largest export sector.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. In Jan. 2002 there were 78,059 km of public roads, of which 50,301 km were paved. At the end of 2001 there were 2,160,103 registered cars, 68,569 lorries, 243,988 vans and pick-ups, 9,769 buses and coaches, and 16,225 special automobiles. Road accidents caused 433 fatalities in 2001.

Rail. On 31 Dec. 2001 the total length of the line operated was 5,850 km (2,400 km electrified), all of it owned by the State. The gauge is 1,524 mm. In 2001, 55·0m. passengers and 41·7m. tonnes of freight were carried. There is a metro (17 km) and tram/light rail network (75·8 km) in Helsinki.

In 1995 the Finnish State Railways was transformed into a joint-stock company. Operations continue under the VR Group, the largest transport services group in Finland.

Civil Aviation. The main international airport is at Helsinki (Vantaa), and there are also international airports at Turku, Tampere, Rovaniemi and Oulu. The national carrier is Finnair. Scheduled traffic of Finnish airlines covered 83m. km in 2001. The number of passengers was 8·0m. and the number of passenger-km 13,211,000; the air transport of freight and mail amounted to 198·1m. tonne-km. Helsinki-Vantaa handled 10,030,918 passengers in 2001 (7,031,246 on international flights) and 84,850 tonnes of freight and mail. Oulu is the second busiest airport, handling 717,244 passengers in 2001, and Turku the third busiest, with 352,131 in 2001.

Shipping. The total registered mercantile marine on 31 Dec. 2001 was 611 vessels of 1,675,964 GRT. In 2001 the total number of vessels arriving in Finland from abroad was 29,246 and the goods discharged amounted to 44·9m. tonnes. The goods loaded for export from Finnish ports amounted to 37·1m. tonnes.

The lakes, rivers and canals are navigable for about 6,300 km. Timber floating has some importance, and there are about 8,894 km of floatable inland waterways. In 2000 bundle floating was about 1·0m. tonnes.

Telecommunications. In 2001 there were 2,806,000 telephone main lines in use and 4,175,600 mobile telephones. According to a survey conducted in Nov. 2002 around 90% of Finnish households own a mobile phone. The rate among 18- and 19-year-olds is almost 100%. Mobile subscribers account for 60% of all telephone subscribers—a percentage only exceeded in Cambodia. In mid-1999 approximately 19% of Finnish households only had a mobile phone and did not have a fixed-line phone at all. The Finnish company Nokia is the world's biggest manufacturer of mobile phones, making 41m. of the 163m. phones sold in 1998. It is by far the biggest company in Finland, accounting for 4·5% of the country's GDP in 2000 and more than half the value of its stock exchange. The biggest operator is Sonera (formerly Telecom Finland). Approximately 50% of all voice and data traffic streams through the company's networks, and approximately 60% of all mobile users are Sonera customers. In March 2002 Sonera and the Swedish telecommunications operator Telia announced merger plans. Finland has the lowest rates in Europe for both fixed and mobile phone calls.

There were 2·2m. PCs in use in 2001 (424·1 per 1,000 persons) and 198,000 fax machines in 1997. Finland had 2·55m. Internet users in June 2002. According to the World Economic Forum's Global Information Technology Report 2002–2003 Finland is the country best placed to reap the economic and social benefits of the Internet.

Postal Services. In 2001 there were 322 primary post offices and 1,102 agents providing postal services in Finland. Finland Post Group is now exposed to competition in its business operations, with the exception of addressed letter mail for which it holds a licence for nationwide delivery.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. The lowest court of justice is the District Court. In most civil cases a District Court has a quorum of three legally qualified members. In criminal cases as well as in some cases related to family law the District Court has a quorum with a chair and three lay judges. In the preliminary preparation of a civil case and in a criminal case concerning a minor offence, a District Court is composed of the chair only. From the District Court an appeal lies to the courts of appeal in Turku, Vaasa, Kuopio, Helsinki, Kouvola and Rovaniemi. The Supreme Court sits in Helsinki. Appeals from the decisions of administrative authorities are in the final instance decided by the Supreme Administrative Court, also in Helsinki. Judges can be removed only by judicial sentence. Two functionaries, the Chancellor of Justice and the Ombudsman or Solicitor-General, exercise control over the administration of justice. The former acts also as counsel and public prosecutor for the government; the latter is appointed by Parliament.

At the end of 2001 the daily average number of prisoners was 3,135 of which 159 were women. The number of convictions in 2001 was 303,053, of which 236,448 were for minor offences with a maximum penalty of fines, and 26,082 with penalty of imprisonment. 11,740 of the prison sentences were unconditional.

Religion. Liberty of conscience is guaranteed to members of all religions. National churches are the Lutheran National Church and the Greek Orthodox Church of Finland. The Lutheran Church is divided into eight bishoprics (Turku being the archiepiscopal see), 80 provostships and 595 parishes. The Greek Orthodox Church is divided into three bishoprics (Kuopio being the archiepiscopal see) and 27 parishes, in addition to which there are a monastery and a convent.

Percentage of the total population at the end of 2001: Lutherans, 84·9; Greek Orthodox, 1·6; others, 0·6; not members of any religion, 12·9.

Education. Number of institutions, teachers and students (2001).

Primary and Secondary Education:

	Number of institutions	Teachers[1]	Students
First-level Education (Lower sections of the comprehensive schools, grades I–VI)	4,394 (First- and Second-level combined)	49,592 (First- and Second-level combined)	405,880[2]
Second-level Education General education (Upper sections of the comprehensive schools, grades VII–IX, and upper secondary general schools)			318,489
Vocational and Professional Education	291[3]	12,606[3, 4]	157,545

[1]Data for teachers refers to 2000.
[2]Including pre-primary education (12,613 pupils) in comprehensive schools.
[3]Numbers of institutions for vocational and professional education refer to secondary and tertiary education.
[4]Number of teachers for vocational and professional education refer to secondary and tertiary education.

Tertiary Education. Vocational and professional education at tertiary education level was provided for 2,570 students in 2001. Polytechnic education was provided at 30 permanent and 1 experimental polytechnics with 118,013 students and 5,300 teachers (the latter only at permanent polytechnics). In 2001, 23·7% of the population aged 15 years or over had been through tertiary education.

[1]Participants are persons who have attended adult education courses run by educational institutions in the course of the calendar year. The same person may have attended a number of different courses and has been recorded as a participant in each one of them.
[2]Including study centres.
[3]Adult education at continuing education centres of universities.

In 1999 total expenditure on education came to 5·8% of GDP and represented 12·5% of total government expenditure.

The adult literacy rate in 2002 was almost 100%.

Health. In 2001 there were 16,115 physicians, 4,731 dentists and, in 2000, 43,250 hospital beds. The average Finnish adult smokes 2·2 cigarettes a day, compared to a European Union average of 4·5, and drinks 8·4 litres of alcohol a year, compared to a European Union average of 11·1 litres.

Welfare. The Social Insurance Institution administers general systems of old-age pensions (to all persons over 65 years of age and disabled younger persons) and of health insurance. An additional system of compulsory old-age pensions paid for by the employers is in force and works through the Central Pension Security Institute. Systems for other public aid are administered by the communes and supervised by the National Social Board and the Ministry of Social Affairs and Health.

The total cost of social security amounted to €33,068m. in 2000. Out of this €14,653m. (44%) was spent on old age and disability, €7,637m. (23%) on health, €5,283m. (16%) on family allowances and child welfare, €3,345m. (10%) on unemployment and €2,150m. (7%) on general welfare purposes and administration. Out of the total expenditure, 24·0% was financed by the State, 19·2% by local authorities, 37·7% by employers, 12·1% by the insured and 7·1% by property income.

CULTURE

Broadcasting. The Finnish Broadcasting Company, YLE, is the biggest national radio and television service provider. YLE operates two television channels (colour by PAL) with full national coverage. The second biggest television broadcaster, the privately owned Commercial MTV3, has one nationwide channel. A new private TV channel, Ruutunelonen, started in 1997. Television programmes from TV Sweden are transmitted over YLE's channel 4. There are some 30 local TV stations that mainly relay foreign and domestic programmes over cable and radio waves, in addition to locally produced material. The only radio broadcaster with full nationwide coverage is YLE. It transmits three national channels in Finnish and one in Swedish, as well as various regional channels, including one in Sami in Lapland. At the end of 2001 there were 57 local radio stations. Two of them, the news and music stations Nova and Classic, cover almost 60% of the population. There were 3·3m. TV receivers in 1999 and 7·7m. radio receivers in 1996. On 31 Dec. 2001 the number of television licences was 2,008,486.

Cinema. In Dec. 2001 there were 339 cinema halls with a seating capacity of 58,359. In 2001 total attendance was 6·5m. In 2000 gross box office receipts came to 277m. marks and nine full-length films were made.

Press. Finland has 54 newspapers that are published 4 to 7 times a week, 9 of which are in Swedish, and 154 with 1 to 3 issues per week. The total circulation of all newspapers is 2·3m. There are 5,158 registered periodicals with a total circulation of over 21m. In terms of total circulation of dailies relative to population, Finland ranks second in Europe after Norway. Most newspapers are bought on subscription rather than from newsstands. Only two newspapers depend entirely on newsstand sales. The five bestselling newspapers in 2001 were: Helsingin Sanomat (average daily circulation, 446,380 copies), Ilta-Sanomat (218,829), Aamulehti (135,478), Iltalehti (134,777) and Turun Sanomat (115,142). The bestselling newspaper in the Swedish language is Hufvudstadsbladet, 52,523. In 2001 a total of 12,090 book titles were published.

Tourism. There were 1,999,000 foreign tourists in 2001; the income from tourism was €1,609m. and the expenses were €2,070m.

Theme and amusement parks are popular tourism destinations for the Finns, while international tourists visit the country's nature attractions. Major international tourist attractions include Santa Park on the Polar Circle, the Kemi Snow Castle, and the Bomba House and Carelian Village in Nurmes. Helsinki's churches, the Sampo icebreaker in Kemi and the Sámi Museum in Inari are particularly popular among foreigners, who account for the majority of their visitors.

Festivals. Major festivals are Helsinki's Festival of Light, the Helsinki Festival Week, the Savonlinna Opera Festival, the Kuhmo Chamber Music Festival, Pori Jazz, Kaustinen Folk Music Festival, Tampere Theatre Festival, Kuopio Dance Festival and the Sodankylä Film Festival.

Libraries. The Helsinki University Library doubles as a National Library. The collections of the university libraries and major research libraries comprise in total 43·9m. volumes (of which the university libraries have 18·9m.). In total, they issued 10·4m. loans (university libraries 9·9m.) in 2001.

The revised Public Library Act, which came into force on 1 Jan. 1999, requires each municipality to provide basic library services free of charge. The public library network is comprehensive with 989 libraries altogether. These are complemented by 199 mobile units with over 16,000 service stops. The Helsinki City Library doubles as a Central Library in this sector. Additionally the country is divided into 19 regions with a Regional Central Library providing supplementary services. In 2001 there were over 2·4m. registered borrowers, who represent 47% of the population. The number of loans issued totalled 103·4m.

Theatre and Opera. A new Opera House and a new 14,000-seat Arena Show Hall opened in 1999 in Helsinki. The city hosts both the National Theatre and the National Opera. All major cities have theatres and showhalls. In the summer season open air theatres are very popular. In 2001 there were 13,460 performances in total with over 2·7m. tickets sold.

Museums and Galleries. The National Museum as well as the National Gallery (the Atheneum) are located in Helsinki. The new Museum of Modern Art (Kiasma) was opened in Helsinki in 1998 and a new Ethnographic Museum and a media centre, also in Helsinki, opened in 1999. Major cities all host their own art galleries and local museums. The Alvar Aalto Museum is located in Jyväskylä in central Finland. In 2001 there were 157 museums with full-time personnel. The number of exhibitions was 1,192 and there were 4·7m. visitors.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Gaul, the area that is now France, was conquered by Julius Caesar in the 1st century BC and became a part of the Roman Empire. In the 3rd and 4th centuries it was overrun by Germanic tribes and in the 10th century Norsemen invaded. There was a long period of conflict with England, typified by the Hundred Years' War (1337–1453); and this was followed by rivalry with Spain in the latter part of the 15th and in the 16th century. The Reformation caused a long religious civil war between 1562 and 1598, at the end of which the Huguenot leader Henry of Navarre was converted to Catholicism and reigned as the first Bourbon king, Henry IV. The two powerful ministers of the 17th century, Cardinal Richelieu and Mazarin, successively ensured that France, and not Spain, established itself as the dominant country in Europe. Militarily, this was achieved by the treaties of Westphalia (which ended the Thirty Years' War in 1648) and of the Pyrenees (1659).

The second half of the 18th century saw France defeated by England in the Seven Years' War (1756–63). The French Revolution began in 1789 when the 'Third Estate' assumed power as a National Assembly and overthrew the government. Riots and the storming of the Bastille were followed by the proclamation of a republic (1792) and the execution of the king, Louis XVI (1793). A Reign of Terror followed during which thousands were guillotined. After these excesses the Directory ruled from 1795 until 1799 when it was overthrown by Napoleon Bonaparte, who became First Consul and then Emperor (1804) of the first French Empire. Napoleon went on to gain control of most of Europe until he was finally defeated at the Battle of Waterloo in 1815. The monarchy was restored, with the Bourbon family reigning (officially from 1814). A revolution in 1830 brought Louis Philippe, son of the Duke of Orleans, to the throne as a constitutional monarch. This 'July Monarchy' was overthrown in 1848 and superseded by the Second Republic, with Louis Napoleon (nephew of Napoleon I) elected president. In 1852 he took the title of Emperor Napoleon III, and hence began the Second Empire. However, the early military failures of France in the Franco-Prussian War (1870–71) led to Napoleon being deposed and the proclamation of the Third Republic in 1870. This survived both the First World War, which was fought chiefly on French soil, and also 44 successive governments from the end of the war in 1918 until 1940. In 1940 German troops invaded France, the French government capitulated, and a pro-German government was established at Vichy. Gen. Charles de Gaulle headed a Free French government in London, while in France the Resistance continued to harass the German Army of Occupation.

When France was liberated in 1944 a provisional government under de Gaulle ruled the country until the Fourth Republic was established in 1946 and de Gaulle retired. The country now faced problems in Algeria and in Indo-China. There were many changes of government up to 1958. In that year de Gaulle was recalled as prime minister and then president of the Fifth Republic. He granted independence to Algeria (1962) and was successful in establishing a firm and stable government until rioting and strikes by students and workers led to his resignation in 1969. He was succeeded by Georges Pompidou, who died in 1974 and then by Giscard d'Estaing. Both presidents continued Gaullist policies but in 1981 François Mitterrand, a socialist, was elected to the presidency. For a time he had to govern in an uneasy relationship with a right-wing premier, Jacques Chirac. Mitterrand's period of office was clouded by charges of corruption. In 1995 Chirac was elected President in succession to the ailing Mitterrand, who died the following year. An ill-judged general election called by Chirac led to a socialist government headed by Lionel Jospin, who was frequently at odds with his right-wing President. In the 2002 presidential election the extreme right-wing National Front leader Jean-Marie Le Pen caused a sensation by pushing the socialist candidate, Prime Minister Lionel Jospin, into third place in the first round, thereby qualifying for the second round run-off against incumbent president Jacques Chirac. However, Chirac easily won a further term in the second round on 5 May 2002.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

France is bounded in the north by the English Channel (La Manche), northeast by Belgium and Luxembourg, east by Germany, Switzerland and Italy, south by the Mediterranean (with Monaco as a coastal enclave), southwest by Spain and Andorra, and west by the Atlantic Ocean. The total area is 549,090 sq. km. Paris is the most populous agglomeration in Europe, with a population of over 9·6m. More than 14% of the population of Paris are foreign and 19% are foreign born.

Population (1999 census), 58·52m.; density, 108 persons per sq. km.

The UN gives a projected population for 2010 of 59·94m.

In 1999, 75·4% of the population lived in urban areas.

The growth of the population has been as follows:

Census	Population	Census	Population	Census	Population
1801	27,349,003	1946	40,506,639	1975	52,655,802
1861	37,386,313	1954	42,777,174	1982	54,334,871
1901	38,961,945	1962	46,519,997	1990	56,615,155
1921	39,209,518	1968	49,778,540	1999	58,518,748

According to the 1999 census, there were 3·26m. people of foreign extraction in France (5·6% of the population). The largest groups of foreigners with residence permits in 1999 were: Portuguese (573,000), Algerians (545,000) and Moroccans (445,000). 116,194 persons were naturalized in 1997 (71,596 in 1992). France's Muslim population, at 5m., is the highest in Europe.

Controls on illegal immigration were tightened in July 1991. Automatic right to citizenship for those born on French soil was restored in 1997 by the new left-wing coalition government. New immigration legislation, which came into force in 1998, brought in harsher penalties for organized traffic in illegal immigrants and extended asylum laws to include people whose lives are at risk from non-state as well as state groups. It also extended nationality at the age of 18 to those born in France of non-French parents, provided they have lived a minimum of five years in France since the age of 11.

The areas, populations and chief towns of the 22 metropolitan regions at the 1999 census were as follows:

Paris: The capital of France since 987, Paris flowered as a centre of medieval commerce and scholasticism. Rebellion has marked its history, especially the revolutions of 1789, 1830 and 1848 and the Commune of 1871. Paris' reputation as a centre for the intellectual and artistic avant-garde was cemented during the Belle Epoque of the late 19th century. The Eiffel Tower, the Arc de Triomphe, the Louvre and the Cathedral of Notre Dame de Paris are among its most famous monuments.

France has 6 national parks, 35 regional national parks and 132 nature reserves.

Languages. The official language is French. Breton and Basque are spoken in their regions. The Toubon legislation of 1994 seeks to restrict the use of foreign words in official communications, broadcasting and advertisements (a previous such decree dated from 1975). The Constitutional Court has since ruled that imposing such restrictions on private citizens would infringe their freedom of expression.

Live birth rate (1999) was 12·7 per 1,000 population; death rate, 9·2; marriage rate, 4·9; divorce rate (1997), 2·0. 40·7% of births in 1998 were outside marriage. In 1995 the most popular age range for marrying was 25–29 for both males and females. Abortions were legalized in 1975; there were an estimated 220,000 in 1995. Life expectancy at birth, 1999, 74·5 years for males and 82·3 years for females (the highest in the EU). Annual population growth rate, 1990–99, 0·4%. From 1990–95 the suicide rate per 100,000 population was 20·1 (men, 29·6; women, 11·1). Infant mortality, 1999, 4·8 per 1,000 live births; fertility rate, 1999, 1·7 births per woman. In 2000 France received 38,590 asylum applications, equivalent to 0·65 per 1,000 inhabitants.

CLIMATE

The northwest has a moderate maritime climate, with small temperature range and abundant rainfall; inland, rainfall becomes more seasonal, with a summer maximum, and the annual range of temperature increases. Southern France has a Mediterranean climate, with mild moist winters and hot dry summers. Eastern France has a continental climate and a rainfall maximum in summer, with thunderstorms prevalent. Paris, Jan. 37°F (3°C), July 64°F (18°C). Annual rainfall 22·9" (573 mm). Bordeaux, Jan. 41°F (5°C), July 68°F (20°C). Annual rainfall 31·4" (786 mm). Lyons, Jan. 37°F (3°C), July 68°F (20°C). Annual rainfall 31·8" (794 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The Constitution of the Fifth Republic, superseding that of 1946, came into force on 4 Oct. 1958. It consists of a preamble, dealing with the Rights of Man, and 92 articles.

France is a republic, indivisible, secular, democratic and social; all citizens are equal before the law (Art. 1). National sovereignty resides with the people, who exercise it through their representatives and by referendums (Art. 3). Constitutional reforms of July 1995 widened the range of issues on which referendums may be called. Political parties carry out their activities freely, but must respect the principles of national sovereignty and democracy (Art. 4).

A constitutional amendment of 4 Aug. 1995 deleted all references to the ‘community’ (communauté) between France and her overseas possessions, representing an important step towards the constitutional dismantling of the former French colonial empire.

The head of state is the President, who sees that the Constitution is respected; ensures the regular functioning of the public authorities, as well as the continuity of the state; is the protector of national independence and territorial integrity (Art. 5). As a result of a referendum held on 24 Sept. 2000 the President is elected for five years by direct universal suffrage (Art. 6). Previously the term of office had been seven years. The President appoints (and dismisses) a Prime Minister and, on the latter’s advice, appoints and dismisses the other members of the government (Council of Ministers) (Art. 8); presides over the Council of Ministers (Art. 9); may dissolve the National Assembly, after consultation with the Prime Minister and the Presidents of the two Houses (Art. 12); appoints to the civil and military offices of the state (Art. 13). In times of crisis, the President may take such emergency powers as the circumstances demand; the National Assembly cannot be dissolved during such a period (Art. 16).

Parliament consists of the National Assembly and the Senate. The National Assembly is elected by direct suffrage by the second ballot system (by which candidates winning 50% or more of the vote in their constituencies are elected, candidates winning less than 12·5% are eliminated and other candidates go on to a second round of voting); the Senate is elected by indirect suffrage (Art. 24). Since 1996 the National Assembly has convened for an annual nine-month session. It comprises 577 deputies, elected by a two-ballot system for a five-year term from single-member constituencies (555 in Metropolitan France, 22 in the overseas departments and dependencies), and may be dissolved by the President.

The Senate comprises 321 senators elected for nine-year terms (one-third every three years) by an electoral college in each Department or overseas dependency, made up of all members of the Departmental Council or its equivalent in overseas dependencies, together with all members of Municipal Councils within that area. The Speaker of the Senate deputizes for the President of the Republic in the event of the latter’s incapacity. Senate elections were last held on 23 Sept. 2001.

The Constitutional Council is composed of nine members whose term of office is nine years (non-renewable), one-third every three years; three are appointed by the President of the Republic, three by the President of the National Assembly, three by the President of the Senate; in addition, former Presidents of the Republic are, by right, life members of the Constitutional Council (Art. 56). It oversees the fairness of the elections of the President (Art. 58) and Parliament (Art. 59), and of referendums (Art. 60), and acts as a guardian of the Constitution (Art. 61). Its President is Yves Guéna (app. 2000).

The Economic and Social Council advises on Government and Private Members' Bills (Art. 69). It comprises representatives of employers', workers' and farmers' organizations in each Department and Overseas Territory.

RECENT ELECTIONS

At the first round of presidential elections on 21 April 2002 Jacques Chirac gained the largest number of votes (19·87% of those cast) against 15 opponents. His nearest rivals were the National Front leader Jean-Marie Le Pen, who came second with 16·86% of votes cast, and incumbent prime minister Lionel Jospin, with 16·17%. The result caused a series of anti-Le Pen protest rallies across France. Socialist leaders urged their supporters to vote for Chirac in the second round run-off between Chirac and Le Pen in order that the extreme right-wing leader might be kept from gaining power. In the second round of voting, held on 5 May 2002, Jacques Chirac won a second consecutive presidential term in a landslide victory, with 82·21% of votes cast against 17·79% for Le Pen. Turn-out was 79·7%.

Elections to the National Assembly were held on 9 and 16 June 2002. The Union for the Presidential Majority (UMP), the allies of President Jacques Chirac, gained an overwhelming parliamentary majority with 357 seats, winning 33·7% of votes cast; the Socialist Party (PS), 140 seats with 24·1%; the Union for French Democracy (UDF), 29 seats with 4·8%; the Communist Party (PCF), 21 seats with 4·8%; the Greens, 3 seats with 4·5%. Despite winning 11·3% of votes cast, the National Front (FN) failed to gain a single seat. The result brought to an end five years of 'cohabitation', with a right-wing president and a socialist prime minister.

In March 2002 only 55 out of 564 deputies were women. The proportion of women deputies, at 9·8%, is the lowest of any EU-member country.

Following the election held on 23 Sept. 2001, the Senate was composed of (by group, including affiliates): RPR, 95; PS, 83; Union Centriste (UC), 53; Républicains et Indépendants (RI), 40; Rassemblement Démocratique et Europeén Social (RDES), 19; Républicain, Communiste et Citoyen (RCC), 23; Unattached, 6. In Oct. 1998 Christian Poncelet (RPR) was elected Speaker for a 3-year term. He was re-elected for a further term in Oct. 2001.

European Parliament. France has 87 representatives. At the June 1999 elections turn-out was 47·0%. The PS won 22 seats with 22·0% of votes cast (political affiliation in European Parliament: Party of European Socialists); RPFIE (Euro Sceptics RPF), 13 with 13·0% (Independents for a Europe of Nations); the RPR-DL (Gaullists), 12 with 12·8% (European People's Party); the Greens, 9 with 9·7% (Greens); UDF, 9 with 9·3% (European People's Party); PCF-Ind, 6 with 6·8% (Confederal Group of the European United Left); CPTN (Pro-Hunting Party), also 6 with 6·8% (Group for a Europe of Democracies and Diversities); the National Front, 5 with 5·7% (non-affiliated); LO-LCR (Communists), 5 with 5·2% (Confederal Group of the United European Left/Nordic Green Left).

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

President: Jacques Chirac; b. 1932 (RPR; sworn in 17 May 1995 and re-elected 5 May 2002).

After the second round of the presidential election on 5 May 2002 the Socialist Prime Minister Lionel Jospin formally resigned and an interim centre-right government was installed. Following the parliamentary elections of June 2002 all of the cabinet members were confirmed in their posts. In March 2003 the cabinet was composed as follows:

Prime Minister: Jean-Pierre Raffarin; b. 1948 (Liberal Democracy Party; sworn in 6 May 2002).

Minister of Interior, Domestic Security and Local Freedoms: Nicolas Sarkozy. Social Affairs, Employment and Solidarity: François Fillon. Justice and Keeper of the Seals: Dominique Perben. Foreign Affairs, Co-operation and Francophony: Dominique Galouzeau de Villepin. Defence and Veterans' Affairs: Michèle Alliot-Marie. National Education, Youth and Research: Luc Ferry. Economy, Finance and Industry: Francis Mer. Capital Works, Transportation, Housing, Tourism and Maritime Affairs: Gilles de Robien. Environment and Sustainable Development: Roselyne Bachelot-Narquin. Health, Family and the Disabled: Jean-François Mattei. Agriculture, Food, Fisheries and Rural Affairs: Hervé Gaymard. Culture and Communication: Jean-Jacques Aillagon. Civil Service, Administrative Reform and Land Management: Jean-Paul Delevoye. Overseas Departments and Territories: Brigitte Girardin. Sport: Jean-François Lamour.

DEFENCE

The President of the Republic is the supreme head of defence policy and exercises command over the Armed Forces. He is the only person empowered to give the order to use nuclear weapons. He is assisted by the Council of Ministers, which studies defence problems, and by the Defence Council and the Restricted Defence Committee, which formulate directives.

Legislation of 1996 inaugurated a wide-ranging reform of the defence system over 1997–2002, with regard to the professionalization of the armed forces (brought about by the ending of military conscription and consequent switch to an all-volunteer defence force), the modification and modernization of equipment and the restructuring of the defence industry. In 2001 defence expenditure totalled US$33,765m. (equivalent to US$570 per capita). Defence spending as a proportion of GDP has fallen from 4·0% in 1985 to 2·6% in 2001.

French forces are not formally under the NATO command structure, although France signed the NATO strategic document on eastern Europe in Nov. 1991. The Minister of Defence attends informal NATO meetings which have an agenda of French interest, but not the formal twice-yearly meetings. Since Dec. 1995 France has taken a seat on the NATO Military Committee. In 2001, 2,230 service personnel were stationed in Germany, 16,344 in the overseas departments and territories, 6,096 on UN peacekeeping missions and 977 constituted the 'French maritime presence' abroad.

Conscription was for ten months, but France officially ended its military draft on 27 June 2001 with a reprieve granted to all conscripts (barring those serving in civil positions) on 30 Nov. 2001.

Nuclear Weapons. Having carried out its first test in 1960, there have been 210 tests in all. The last French test was in 1996 (this compares with the last UK test in 1991 and the last US test in 1993). The nuclear arsenal consisted of approximately 348 warheads in Jan. 2002 according to the Stockholm International Peace Research Institute.

Arms Trade. France was the world's third largest exporter after the USA and the UK in 1999, with sales worth US$6,630m., or 12·4% of the world total). In 1987 sales had been worth US$8·3bn., but had only represented 9·0% of the world total.

Army. The Army comprises the Logistic Force (CFLT), based in Montlhéry with two logistic brigades, and the Land Force Command (CFAT), based in Lille. Apart from the Franco-German brigade, there are 12 brigades, each made up of between four and seven battalions, including 1 airmobile brigade.

Personnel numbered (2002) 168,126 (5,544 volunteers and 11,240 women) including 16,500 marines and a Foreign Legion of 8,000. There were 242,500 reserves in 2002. The 1997–2002 Programming Act provided for the following force at the end of the transitional period: 16,000 officers, 50,000 NCOs, 66,500 army enlistees, 5,500 volunteers, 34,000 civilians and 30,000 reservists. Equipment levels in 2001 included 809 main battle tanks and 410 helicopters.

Gendarmerie. The paramilitary police force exists to ensure public security and maintain law and order, as well as participate in the operational defence of French territory as part of the armed forces. It consisted in 2002 of 98,135 personnel including 15,203 volunteers, 5,705 women and 2,020 civilians. It comprises a territorial force of 69,000 personnel throughout the country, a mobile force of 17,025 personnel and specialized formations including the Republican Guard, the Air Force and Naval Gendarmeries, and an anti-terrorist unit.

Navy. The missions of the Navy are to provide the prime element of the French independent nuclear deterrent through its force of strategic submarines; to assure the security of the French offshore zones; to contribute to NATO's missions; and to provide on-station and deployment forces overseas in support of French territorial interests and UN commitments. French territorial seas and economic zones are organized into two maritime districts (with headquarters in Brest and Toulon).

The strategic deterrent force comprises four nuclear-powered strategic-missile submarines, including two of four new-generation ships of a new, much larger, class, Le Triomphant and Le Téméraire, which entered service in 1997 and 1999.

Until it was withdrawn from service in 2000, the Foch, of 33,000 tonnes, was the principal surface ship. The 40,000-tonne nuclear-powered replacement Charles de Gaulle, which was launched at Brest in 1994, commissioned in Oct. 2000. There is 1 cruiser, the Jeanne d'Arc, completed in 1964 and used in peacetime as a training vessel. Other surface combatants include four destroyers and 26 frigates.

The naval air arm, Aviation Navale, numbers some 6,800 personnel. Operational aircraft include Super-Etendard nuclear-capable strike aircraft, Etendard reconnaissance aircraft and US-built Crusader F-8P all-weather fighters. The maritime Rafale combat aircraft was scheduled to enter service on board the Charles de Gaulle. A small Marine force of 1,700 Fusiliers Marins provides assault groups.

Personnel in 2002 numbered 54,433, including 1,613 volunteers, 3,328 women and 10,157 civilians. There were 97,000 reserves in 2002.

Air Force. Created in 1934, the Air Force was reorganized in June 1994. The Conventional Forces in Europe (CFE) Agreement imposes a ceiling of 800 combat aircraft. In 2002 there were 355 combat aircraft, 100 transport aircraft and 290 aircraft for training purposes.

Personnel (2002) 69,667 (1,942 volunteers; 8,210 women; 6,003 civilians). Air Force reserves in 2002 numbered 79,500.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

France is a member of the UN, WTO, BIS, the Council of Europe, WEU, EU, OSCE, OECD, CERN, Inter-American Development Bank, Asian Development Bank, the Pacific Community, IOM, Antarctic Treaty and the International Organization of the Francophonie. France is a signatory to the Schengen Accord, which abolishes border controls between France, Austria, Belgium, Denmark, Finland, Germany, Greece, Iceland, Italy, Luxembourg, the Netherlands, Norway, Portugal, Spain and Sweden.

At a referendum in Sept. 1992 to approve the ratification of the Maastricht treaty on European union of 7 Feb. 1992, 12,967,498 votes (50·81%) were cast for and 12,550,651 (49·18%) against.

France is the focus of the Communauté Francophone (French-speaking Community) which formally links France with many of its former colonies in Africa. A wide range of agreements, both with members of the Community and with other French-speaking countries, extend to economic and technical matters, and in particular to the disbursement of overseas aid.

ECONOMY

Agriculture accounted for 2·3% of GDP in 1998, industry 26·2% and services 71·5%.

Overview. Between 1992 and 1998 privatization proceeds amounted to US$49bn. As monetary policy is set for the euro area as a whole, the government has only the budget as an instrument to influence domestic demand. The introduction of the euro stabilized the financial system and made it more efficient. The government is involved or directly responsible for many services, such as healthcare, education, telecommunications and the railways. Public expenditure has been put under pressure with healthcare and pensions running above budget.

Currency. On 1 Jan. 1999 the euro (EUR) became the legal currency in France; irrevocable conversion rate 6·55957 francs to one euro. The euro, which consists of 100 cents, has been in circulation since 1 Jan. 2002. There are seven euro notes in different colours and sizes denominated in 500, 200, 100, 50, 20, 10 and 5 euros, and eight coins denominated in 2 and 1 euros, then 50, 20, 10, 5, 2 and 1 cents. On the introduction of the euro there was a 'dual circulation' period before the franc ceased to be legal tender on 17 Feb. 2002. Euro banknotes in circulation on 1 Jan. 2002 had a total value of €84·2bn.

Foreign exchange reserves were US$23,338m. in June 2002 and gold reserves 97·25m. troy oz (81·89m. troy oz in 1997). Inflation was 1·7% in 2001. Total money supply was €62,266m. in June 2002.

Franc Zone. 13 former French colonies (Benin, Burkina Faso, Cameroon, Central African Republic, Chad, Comoros, the Republic of the Congo, Côte d'Ivoire, Gabon, Mali, Niger, Senegal and Togo), the former Spanish colony of Equatorial Guinea and the former Portuguese colony of Guinea-Bissau are members of a Franc Zone, the CFA (Communauté Financière Africaine). Comoros uses the Comorian franc. The franc CFA is pegged to the euro at a rate of 655·957 francs CFA to one euro. The franc CFP (Comptoirs Français du Pacifique) is the common currency of French Polynesia, New Caledonia and Wallis and Futuna. It is pegged to the euro at 119·3317422 francs CFP to the euro.

Budget. Receipts and expenditure in 1bn. francs:

	1998	1999	2000	2001
Revenue	1,420·6	1,494·5	1,508·4	1,537·6
Expenditure	1,672·9	1,709·8	1,700·9	1,745·0

The standard rate of VAT is 19·6% (reduced rate, 5·5%). In Aug. 2000 a series of tax cuts was announced, including the gradual reduction of the top rate of income tax from 54% to 52·5% by 2003 and of corporate tax from 36·6% to 33·3%.

Ministère de l'Economie, des Finances et du Plan. Le Budget de l'Etat: de la Préparation à l'Exécution. Paris, 1995

Performance. Real GDP growth averaged 3·3% annually between 1998 and 2000, but was only 1·8% in 2001. Total GDP in 2001 was US$1,303bn.

The OECD reported in 2000 that 'France has not enjoyed such a favourable economic situation for ten years. After performing poorly during 1990–96, the French economy benefited from rapidly growing activity, low inflation and growth that was richer in jobs, and entered the new millennium with an effervescent stock market and favourable prospects. After a temporary pause in the wake of the Asian and Russian crises, activity picked up again, and the outturn for 1999 as a whole exceeded most forecasts, with real GDP growing by 2·9 per cent.'

Banking and Finance. The central bank and bank of issue is the Banque de France (Governor, Jean-Claude Trichet, appointed 1993), founded in 1800, and nationalized on 2 Dec. 1945. In 1993 it received greater autonomy in line with EU conditions. The Governor is appointed for a six-year term (renewable once) and heads the nine-member Council of Monetary Policy.

The National Credit Council, formed in 1945 to regulate banking activity and consulted in all political decisions on monetary policy, comprises 45 members nominated by the government; its president is the Minister for the Economy; its Vice-President is the Governor of the Banque de France.

In 1996 there were 1,445 banks and other credit institutions, including 400 shareholder-owned banks and 342 mutual or savings banks. Four principal deposit banks were nationalized in 1945, the remainder in 1982; the latter were privatized in 1987. The banking and insurance sectors underwent a flurry of mergers, privatizations, foreign investment, corporate restructuring and consolidation in 1997, in both the national and international fields. The largest banks in 1998 (with assets in 1bn. francs) were: Crédit Agricole (2,565), Socété Générale (2,519), Banque Nationale de Paris (2,132), Groupe Paribas (1,627), Crédit Lyonnais (1,371). On 28 Aug. 1999 Banque Nationale de Paris merged with Paribas to create the BNP-Paribas Group, now the largest French bank both by market capitalization and assets.

The state savings organization Caisse Nationale d'Epargne is administered by the post office on a giro system. There are also commercial savings banks (c*aisses d'epargne et de prévoyance*). Deposited funds are centralized by a non-banking body, the Caisse de Dépôts et Consignations, which finances a large number of local authorities and state-aided housing projects, and carries an important portfolio of transferable securities.

There is a stock exchange (Bourse) in Paris; it is a component of Euronext, which was created in Sept. 2000 through the merger of the Paris, Brussels and Amsterdam bourses.

Weights and Measures. The metric system is in general use.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Environment. According to the World Bank Atlas France's carbon dioxide emissions in 1998 were the equivalent of 6·3 tonnes per capita. According to an Environmental Sustainability Index compiled for the World Economic Forum meeting in Feb. 2002 France ranked 33rd in the world, with 55·5%. The index measured the ability of countries to maintain favourable environmental conditions and examined various factors including pollution levels and the use or abuse of natural resources.

Electricity. The state-owned monopoly Electricité de France is responsible for power generation and supply under the Ministry of Industry. Installed capacity was 108,000 MW in 1997. Electricity production in 1998: 480·97bn. kWh, of which 76·2% was nuclear. Hydro-electric power contributes about 12·5% of total electricity output. Consumption per capita in 1998 was 6,287 kWh. In 1997 France was the European Union's biggest exporter of electricity with 71·4bn. kWh. Electricité de France is Europe's leading electricity producer, generating more than twice as much in 1998 (460bn. kWh) as the second largest producer.

France, not rich in natural energy resources, is at the centre of Europe's nuclear energy industry. In 2001 there were 59 nuclear reactors in operation—more than in any other country in the world apart from the USA—with a generating capacity in 1999 of 61,723 MW. Only Lithuania has a higher percentage of its electricity generated through nuclear power.

Oil and Gas. In 1996, 16m. bbls. of crude oil were produced. The greater part came from the Parentis oilfield in the Landes. Reserves in 1997 totalled 117m. bbls. The importation and distribution of natural gas is the responsibility of the government monopoly Gaz de France. Production of natural gas (1995) was 33,395m. cu. metres. Gas reserves were 19bn. cu. metres in 1997.

Minerals. France is a significant producer of nickel, uranium, iron ore, bauxite, potash, pig iron, aluminium and coal. Société Le Nickel extracts in New Caledonia and is the world's third largest nickel producer; France is the world's seventh largest uranium producer. The mining sector contributed 1% of GDP in 1994, and employed 0·8% of the workforce.

Coal production (1997): 7m. tonnes. Coal power generators contributed 6·2% of total energy consumption in 1994. Coal reserves in Jan. 1996: 139m. tonnes. Production of other principal minerals and metals (1994, in 1,000 tonnes): salt (1998), 7,000; iron ore (metal content), 708; aluminium (1998), 400; potash salts, 936; gold (1997), 4,350 kg.

Agriculture. France has the highest agricultural production in Europe, accounting for more than a fifth of the European Union total. In 2000 the agricultural sector employed about 885,000 people, down from 1,869,000 in 1980. Agriculture accounts for 14·5% of exports and 11·4% of imports.

In 2000 there were 664,000 holdings (average size 42 ha), down from over 1m. in 1988. Co-operatives account for between 30–50% of output. There were 1,270,000 tractors and 110,000 harvester-threshers in 1998. Although the total number of tractors has been declining steadily in recent years, increasingly more powerful ones are being used. In 1997, 368,000 tractors in use were of 80 hp or higher, compared to 96,000 in 1979.

Of the total area of France (54·9m. ha), the utilized agricultural area comprised 29·63m. ha in 2001. 18·45m. ha were arable, 10·05m. ha were under pasture, and 1·14m. ha were under permanent crops including vines (0·90m. ha).

Area under cultivation and yield for principal crops:

	Area (1,000 ha)			Production (1,000 tonnes)
	1998	1999	2000	1998	1999	2000
Wheat	5,235	5,114	5,266	39,809	37,002	37,529
Sugarbeets	456	442	414	31,156	32,919	31,454
Maize	1,797	1,759	1,834	15,191	15,656	16,469
Barley	1,631	1,534	1,573	10,591	9,539	9,927
Potatoes	164	171	169	6,053	6,645	6,652
Rapeseeds	1,145	1,369	1,225	3,734	4,469	3,572
Peas	640	510	465	3,775	3,179	2,507
Sunflower seeds	782	799	720	1,713	1,868	1,824

Production of principal fruit crops (in 1,000 tonnes) as follows:

	1998	1999	2000
Apples	2,210	2,643	2,537
Peaches	202	280	272
Melons	324	322	314
Pears	260	300	271
Plums	205	185	214

Total fruit and vegetable production in 2000 was 19,075,000 tonnes. Other important vegetables include tomatoes (898,000 tonnes in 2000), carrots (450,000 tonnes), cauliflowers (412,000 tonnes) and onions (361,000 tonnes). France is the world's leading producer of sugarbeets. Total area under cultivation and yield of grapes from the vine (2000): 745,000 ha; 7·63m. tonnes. Wine production (2000): 5,880,000 tonnes. France and Italy are by far the largest wine producers in the world. Italy was the leading producer in 1998, but France produced more in 1999 and 2000. Consumption in France has declined dramatically in recent times, from nearly 120 litres per person in 1966 to 60 litres per person in 1997.

Figures compiled by the Soil Association, a British organization, show that in 1999 France set aside 220,000 ha (1% of its agricultural land) for the growth of organic crops, compared to the EU average of 2·2%.

Livestock (2000, in 1,000): cattle, 20,527; pigs, 14,635; sheep, 10,004; goats, 1,191; horses, 349; asses and mules, 37; chickens, 233,000; turkeys, 42,000; ducks, 24,000. Livestock products (2000, in 1,000 tonnes): pork, bacon and ham, 2,315; beef and veal, 1,590; lamb and mutton, 130; poultry, 2,022; horse, 10; eggs, 1,050. Milk production, 2000: cow, 24,890; sheep, 247; goat, 483. Cheese production, 1,668,000 tonnes. France is the second largest cheese producer in the world after the USA.

Forestry. Forestry is France's richest natural resource and employs 550,000 people. In 2000 forest covered 15·05m. ha (27·4% of the land area). In 1990 the area under forests had been 14·23m. ha, or 25·9% of the land area. 73% of forest is private; 26% state-owned. Timber production in 1999 was 36·38m. cu. metres.

Fisheries. In 1998 there were 6,074 fishing vessels totalling (in 1996) 176,356 GRT, and 16,556 fishermen. Catch in 1999 was 578,071 tonnes, of which 573,571 tonnes were from marine waters.

INDUSTRY

The leading companies by market capitalization in France, excluding banking and finance, in Jan. 2002 were: Total Fina Elf SA (€115bn.), an integrated oil company; Aventis SA (€60bn.), a pharmaceutical and biotechnology company; and Sanofi-Synthélabo (€52bn.), a pharmaceutical group.

The industrial sector employs about 27% of the workforce. In Nov. 1997 capacity utilization in industry was approaching 85%. Chief industries: steel, chemicals, textiles, aircraft, machinery, electronic equipment, tourism, wine and perfume.

Industrial production (1997, in 1,000 tonnes): distillate fuel oil, 35,172; crude steel, 20,200 (1999); cement, 19,780; petrol, 18,894; pig iron, 13,428; residual fuel oil, 11,073; sulphuric acid, 2,382 (1995); caustic soda, 1,561 (1994). France is one of the biggest producers of mineral water, with output of 6,123m. litres in 1996.

Engineering production (1999, in 1,000 units): cars, 4,200; car tyres, 59,700; television sets (1994), 2,796.

Labour. Out of an economically active population of 23,529,000 in March 2000, 44·7% were women. By sector, 71·5% worked in services (58·1% in 1980), 24·4% in industry and construction (33·1% in 1980) and 4·1% in agriculture (8·8% in 1980). Some 5m. people work in the public sector at national and local level. It was estimated in 1997 that 51% of households have no-one working in the private sector.

A new definition of 'unemployed' was adopted in Aug. 1995, omitting persons who had worked at least 78 hours in the previous month. In Jan. 2003 the unemployment rate was 9·0%. In the year to March 2000 a total of 430,000 jobs were created, representing the biggest jump in employment for 30 years.

Conciliation boards (Conseils de Prud'hommes) mediate in labour disputes. They are elected for five-year terms by two colleges of employers and employees. Between 1989 and 1998 strikes cost France an average of 45 days per 1,000 employees a year, compared to the EU average of 85 per 1,000. In Jan. 2002 the minimum wage (SMIC) was €6·67 an hour (€1,126·40 a month); in Jan. 2000 it affected about 2·5m. wage-earners. The net average annual wage was 130,790 francs (€19,938) in 1999. Retirement age is 60, although in 1995 the average actual age for retirement among males was 59. A five-week annual holiday is statutory.

In May 1998 the national assembly approved a reduction in the working week from 39 to 35 hours. The main provisions obliged all companies employing more than 20 people to introduce the shorter working week from Feb. 2000 and all the rest from 2002.

Trade Unions. The main trade union confederations are as follows: the Communist-led CGT (Confédération Générale du Travail), founded 1895; the CGT-FO (Confédération Générale du Travail–Force Ouvrière) which broke away from the CGT in 1948; the CFTC (Confédération Française des Travailleurs Chrétiens), founded in 1919 and divided in 1964, with a breakaway group retaining the old name and the main body continuing under the new name of CFDT (Confédération Française Démocratique du Travail); and the CGC-CFE (Confédération Générale des Cadres-Confédération Française de l'Encadrement) formed in 1946, which represents managerial and supervisory staff. The main haulage confederation is the FNTR; the leading employers' association is the CNPF, often referred to as the Patronat. Unions are not required to publish membership figures, but in 1993 the two largest federations, the CGT and CFDT, had an estimated 0·63m. and 0·65m. members respectively.

Although France has the lowest rate of trade union membership in Europe (9% in 2000, compared to 29% in the UK, 30% in Germany and over 90% in Sweden), its trade unionists have considerable clout: they run France's welfare system; staff the country's dispute-settling industrial tribunals (conseils de prud'hommes); and fix national agreements on wages and working conditions. A union call to strike is invariably answered by more than a union's membership.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Imports and Exports. In 2000 imports (f.o.b.) totalled US$294·40bn.; exports (f.o.b.), US$295·53bn. Principal imports include: oil, machinery and equipment, chemicals, iron and steel, and foodstuffs. Major exports: metals, chemicals, industrial equipment, consumer goods and agricultural products.

Foreign trade by sector (1999, as % of total trade):

	% Imports	% Exports
Agriculture and foodstuffs	10·1	13·1
Energy	7·1	2·7
Cars	10·9	13·4
Producer durables	23·4	25·5
Intermediate goods	32·9	31·5
Consumer goods	15·6	13·8

In 1999 the chief import sources (as % of total imports) were as follows: Germany, 17·2%; Italy, 9·6%; USA, 8·8%; UK, 8·4%; Spain, 7·1%. The chief export markets (as % of total) were: Germany, 15·7%; UK, 10·3%; Italy, 9·4%; Spain, 9·1%; USA, 7·8%. Exports to other European Union members constituted 64·2% of the total, and imports from fellow European Union members accounted for 61·5% of all imports.

Trade Fairs. Paris ranked as the world's leading major convention city in 2001 by the Union des Associations Internationales (UAI).

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. In 1998 there were 893,300 km of road, including 10,300 km of motorway. France has the longest road network in the EU. Around 90% of all freight is transported by road. In 1998 there were 26,800,000 private cars and 5,418,000 lorries, 82,000 buses, and 870,000 motorcycles and scooters (1996). The average distance travelled by a passenger car in 1997 was 14,000 km. Road passenger traffic in 1998 totalled 753·1bn. passenger-km. In 2001 there were 8,160 road deaths, up from 8,079 in 2000.

Rail. In 1938 all the independent railway companies were merged with the existing state railway system in a Société Nationale des Chemins de Fer Français (SNCF), which became a public industrial and commercial establishment in 1983. Legislation came into effect in 1997 which vested ownership of the railway infrastructure (track and signalling) in a newly established public corporation, the National Railway Network (RFN). The RFN is funded by payments for usage from the SNCF, government and local subventions and authority capital made available by the state derived from the proceeds of privatization. The SNCF remains responsible for maintenance and management of the rail network. The legislation also envisages the establishment of regional railway services which receive funds previously given to the SNCF as well as a state subvention. These regional bodies negotiate with SNCF for the provision of suitable services for their area. SNCF is the most heavily indebted and subsidized company in France.

In 1997 SNCF totalled 33,769 km of track (one third of it electrified). High-speed TGV lines link Paris to the south and west of France, and Paris and Lille to the Channel Tunnel (Eurostar). The high-speed TGV line appeared in 1983; it had 2,110 km of track in 2001, and another 4,000 km planned by 2015. Services from London through the Channel Tunnel began operating in 1994. Rail passenger traffic in 1999 totalled 66·6bn. passenger km.

The Paris transport network consisted in 2000 of 211·3 km of metro (297 stations), 115 km of regional express railways and 20 km of tramway. There are metros in Lille (45·0 km), Lyons (29·4 km), Toulouse (10·0 km) and Marseilles (19·5 km), and tram/light railway networks in Grenoble (20·6 km), Lille (23·0 km), Lyons (18·7 km), Marseilles (3·1 km), Montpellier (15·2 km), Nantes (38·5 km), Orléans (17·9 km), Rouen (15·4 km), St Étienne (9·3 km) and Strasbourg (28·0 km).

Civil Aviation. The main international airports are at Paris (Charles de Gaulle), Paris (Orly), Bordeaux (Mérignac), Lyons (Satolas), Marseilles-Provence, Nice-Côte d'Azur, Strasbourg (Entzheim), Toulouse (Blagnac) and Nantes (Atlantique). The following had international flights to only a few destinations in 1998: Beauvais, Brest, Caen, Carcassonne, Clermont-Ferrand, Deauville, Le Havre, Le Touquet, Lille, Pau, Rennes, Rouen and Saint-Étienne. The national airline, Air France, is 54·4% state-owned, although there are plans to reduce this to under 20%. In 1999 it flew 636·8m. km, carrying 37,027,900 passengers (19,141,000 on international flights). In 2000 Charles de Gaulle airport handled 47,800,726 passengers (42,505,503 on international flights) and 1,019,311 tonnes of freight. Only Heathrow handled more international passengers in 2000. Orly was the second busiest airport, handling 25,378,013 passengers (19,285,061 on domestic flights) and 87,063 tonnes of freight. Nice was the third busiest for passengers, with 9,363,952 (4,934,161 on domestic flights).

Shipping. In 1998 the merchant fleet comprised 808 vessels (of 100 gross tons or more) totalling 4·85m. GRT, including 69 tankers of 2·83m. GRT. In 1997 vessels totalling 1,989·8m. NRT entered ports. In 1993 from a total of 215 vessels (all sizes; GRT: 3,928,000), 212m. tonnes of cargo were unloaded, including 130m. tonnes of crude and refined petroleum products, 93m. tonnes were loaded; total passenger traffic was 29·2m. Chief ports: Marseilles, Le Havre, Nantes, Bordeaux and Rouen.

France has extensive inland waterways. Canals are administered by the public authority France Navigable Waterways (FVN). In 1993 there were 8,500 km of navigable rivers, waterways and canals (of which 1,647 km were accessible to vessels over 3,000 tons), with a total traffic of 59·8m. tonnes.

Telecommunications. France Télécom became a limited company on 1 Jan. 1997. In 2000 there were 34·1m. telephone main lines, or 579·3 for every 1,000 inhabitants, and there were 18m. PCs in use (equivalent to 304·3 per 1,000 persons). In Nov. 2001 mobile phone subscribers numbered 33·72m. In 1997 there were 2·8m. fax machines in use. There were still 39,000 telex subscribers in 1996, although telex usage has declined considerably in recent years. France had 16·97m. Internet users in May 2002—just over 28% of the population.

Postal Services. There were 16,919 post offices in 1994. In 1995 a total of 24,391m. pieces of mail were processed, or 419 items per person. La Poste is a public enterprise under autonomous management responsible for mail delivery and financial services.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. The system of justice is divided into two jurisdictions: the judicial and the administrative. Within the judicial jurisdiction are common law courts including 473 lower courts (tribunaux d'instance, 11 in overseas departments), 181 higher courts (tribunaux de grande instance, 5 tribunaux de première instance in the overseas territories), and 454 police courts (tribunaux de police, 11 in overseas departments).

The tribunaux d'instance are presided over by a single judge. The tribunaux de grande instance usually have a collegiate composition, but may be presided over by a single judge in some civil cases. The tribunaux de police, presided over by a judge on duty in the tribunal d'instance, deal with petty offences (contraventions); correctional chambers (chambres correctionelles, of which there is at least one in each tribunal de grande instance) deal with graver offences (délits), including cases involving imprisonment up to five years. Correctional chambers normally consist of three judges of a tribunal de grande instance (a single judge in some cases). Sometimes in cases of délit, and in all cases of more serious crimes, a preliminary inquiry is made in secrecy by one of 569 examining magistrates (juges d'instruction), who either dismisses the case or sends it for trial before a public prosecutor.

Within the judicial jurisdiction are various specialized courts, including 191 commercial courts (tribunaux de commerce), composed of tradesmen and manufacturers elected for two years initially, and then for four years; 271 conciliation boards (conseils de prud'hommes), composed of an equal number of employers and employees elected for five years to deal with labour disputes; 437 courts for settling rural landholding disputes (tribunaux paritaires des baux ruraux, 11 in overseas departments); and 116 social security courts (tribunaux des affaires de sécurité sociale).

When the decisions of any of these courts are susceptible of appeal, the case goes to one of the 35 courts of appeal (cours d'appel), composed each of a president and a variable number of members. There are 104 courts of assize (cours d'assises), each composed of a president who is a member of the court of appeal, and two other magistrates, and assisted by a lay jury of nine members. These try crimes involving imprisonment of over five years. The decisions of the courts of appeal and the courts of assize are final. However, the Court of Cassation (cour de cassation) has discretion to verify if the law has been correctly interpreted and if the rules of procedure have been followed exactly. The Court of Cassation may annul any judgment, following which the cases must be retried by a court of appeal or a court of assizes.

The administrative jurisdiction exists to resolve conflicts arising between citizens and central and local government authorities. It consists of 35 administrative courts (tribunaux administratifs, 7 in overseas departments and territories) and 7 administrative courts of appeal (cours administratives d'appel). The Council of State is the final court of appeal in administrative cases, though it may also act as a court of first instance.

Cases of doubt as to whether the judicial or administrative jurisdiction is competent in any case are resolved by a Tribunal de conflits composed in equal measure of members of the Court of Cassation and the Council of State. In 1997 the government restricted its ability to intervene in individual cases of justice.

Penal code. A revised penal code came into force on 1 March 1994, replacing the Code Napoléon of 1810. Penal institutions consist of: (1) maisons d'arrêt, where persons awaiting trial as well as those condemned to short periods of imprisonment are kept; (2) punishment institutions – (a) central prisons (maisons centrales) for those sentenced to long imprisonment, (b) detention centres for offenders showing promise of rehabilitation, and (c) penitentiary centres, establishments combining (a) and (b); (3) hospitals for the sick. Special attention is being paid to classified treatment and the rehabilitation and vocational re-education of prisoners including work in open-air and semi-free establishments. Juvenile delinquents go before special judges in 139 (11 in overseas departments and territories) juvenile courts (tribunaux pour enfants); they are sent to public or private institutions of supervision and re-education.

The first Ombudsman (Médiateur) was appointed for a six-year period in Jan. 1973. The present incumbent is Bernard Stasi (app. 1998).

Capital punishment was abolished in Aug. 1981. In metropolitan France the detention rate in July 2001 was 84·3 prisoners per 100,000 population, up from 50 per 100,000 in 1975. The average period of detention in 1998 was 8·3 months. The principal offences committed were: theft, 27·2%; rape and other sexual assaults, 21·0%; drug-related offences, 16·8%. The population of the 186 penal establishments (3 for women) in July 2001 was 49,718 including 1,746 women.

Weston, M., English Reader's Guide to the French Legal System. Oxford, 1991

Religion. A law of 1905 separated church and state. In 1996 there were 95 Roman Catholic dioceses in metropolitan France and 112 bishops. In Feb. 2001 there were six Cardinals. In 1997 there were 44·86m. Roman Catholics (over 75% of the population), 3·24m. Muslims, 1·08m. Protestants and 0·61m. Jews. An estimated 6·26m. people were non-religious and there were 2m. atheists.

Education. The primary, secondary and higher state schools constitute the 'Université de France'. Its Supreme Council of 84 members has deliberative, administrative and judiciary functions, and as a consultative committee advises respecting the working of the school system; the inspectors-general are in direct communication with the Minister. For local education administration France is divided into 25 academic areas, each of which has an Academic Council whose members include a certain number elected by the professors or teachers. The Academic Council deals with all grades of education. Each is under a Rector, and each is provided with academy inspectors, one for each department.

Compulsory education is provided for children of 6–16. The educational stages are as follows:

1. Non-compulsory pre-school instruction for children aged 2–5, to be given in infant schools or infant classes attached to primary schools.
2. Compulsory elementary instruction for children aged 6–11, to be given in primary schools and certain classes of the lycées. It consists of three courses: preparatory (one year), elementary (two years), intermediary (two years). Physically or mentally handicapped children are cared for in special institutions or special classes of primary schools.
3. Lower secondary education (Enseignement du premier cycle du Second Degré) for pupils aged 11–15, consists of four years of study in the lycées (grammar schools), Collèges d'Enseignement Technique or Collèges d'Enseignement Général.
4. Upper secondary education (Enseignement du second cycle du Second Degré) for pupils aged 15–18: (1) Long, général or professionel provided by the lycées and leading to the baccalauréat or to the baccalauréat de technicien after three years; and (2) Court, professional courses of 3, 2 and 1 year are taught in the lycées d'enseignement professionel, or the specialized sections of the lycées, CES or CEG.

The following table shows the number of schools in 1994–95 and the numbers of teachers and pupil in 1995–96:

	Number of Schools[1]	Teachers	Pupils
Nursery	18,989	105,925	2,500,867
Primary	41,244	216,938	4,065,005
Secondary	11,212	478,592	5,980,518

[1]Includes vocational education institutions.

Higher education is provided by the state free of charge in the universities and in special schools, and by private individuals in the free faculties and schools. Legislation of 1968 redefined the activities and workings of universities. Bringing several disciplines together, 780 units for teaching and research (UER—Unités d'Enseignement et de Recherche) were formed which decided their own teaching activities, research programmes and procedures for checking the level of knowledge gained. They and the other parts of each university must respect the rules designed to maintain the national standard of qualifications. The UERs form the basic units of the 69 state universities and three national polytechnic institutes (with university status), which are grouped into 25 Académies. There are also five Catholic universities in Paris, Angers, Lille, Lyons and Toulouse; and private universities. There were 2,107,600 students at universities in 1994–95.

Outside the university system, higher education (academic, professional and technical) is provided by over 400 schools and institutes, including the 177 Grandes Écoles, which are highly selective public or private institutions offering mainly technological or commercial curricula. These have an annual output of about 17,000 graduates, and in 1994–95 there were also 71,271 students in preparatory classes leading to the Grandes Écoles; in 1993–94, 232,844 were registered in the Sections de Techniciens Supérieurs, 71,273 in the Écoles d'Ingénieurs.

Adult literacy rate in 1998 was at least 99%.

In 1995 total expenditure on education came to 6·1% of GNP and represented 11·1% of total government expenditure.

Health. Ordinances of 1996 created a new regional regime of hospital administration and introduced a system of patients' records to prevent abuses of public health benefits. In 1995 there were 160,235 doctors (equivalent to 1 for every 362 persons), 39,284 dentists, 53,085 pharmacists, 330,943 nurses and 11,957 midwives; and 3,810 hospitals, with a provision of 118 beds per 10,000 population.

In 2000 France spent 9·5% of its GDP on health, public spending amounting to 76·0% of the total. A survey published by the World Health Organization in June 2000 to measure health systems in all of the sovereign countries and find which country has the best overall health care ranked France in first place.

The average French adult smokes 4·0 cigarettes a day, compared to a European Union average of 4·5, and drinks 14·1 litres of alcohol a year, compared to a European Union average of 11·1 litres. France has the highest alcohol consumption per person of any EU member country. It has the lowest rate of cardiovascular disease in the EU, but the highest rate of cancer among men.

Welfare. An order of 4 Oct. 1945 laid down the framework of a comprehensive plan of Social Security and created a single organization which superseded the various laws relating to social insurance, workmen's compensation, health insurance, family allowances, etc. All previous matters relating to Social Security are dealt with in the Social Security Code, 1956; this has been revised several times. The Chamber of Deputies and Senate, meeting as Congress on 19 Feb. 1996, adopted an important revision of the Constitution giving parliament powers to review annually the funding of social security (previously managed by the trade unions and employers' associations), and to fix targets for expenditure in the light of anticipated receipts.

In 1997, 6m. people were dependent on the welfare system, which accounted for more than a quarter of GDP (US$333,000m.). The Social Security budget had a deficit of some 17,000m. francs in 1996, and a cumulative debt (1992–96) of 250,000m. francs. A special levy, the new social debt repayment tax (RDS), at 0·5% on all incomes including pensions and unemployment benefit, has been introduced to clear the cumulative debt.

Contributions. The general social security contribution (CSG) introduced in 1991 was raised by 4% to 7·5% in 1997 by the Jospin administration in an attempt to dramatically reduce the deficit on social security spending, effectively almost doubling the CSG. All wage-earning workers or those of equivalent status are insured regardless of the amount or the nature of the salary or earnings. The funds for the general scheme are raised mainly from professional contributions, these being fixed within the limits of a ceiling and calculated as a percentage of the salaries. The calculation of contributions payable for family allowances, old age and industrial injuries relates only to this amount; on the other hand, the amount payable for sickness, maternity expenses, disability and death is calculated partly within the limit of the 'ceiling' and partly on the whole salary. These contributions are the responsibility of both employer and employee, except in the case of family allowances or industrial injuries, where they are the sole responsibility of the employer.

Self-employed Workers. From 17 Jan. 1948 allowances and old-age pensions were paid to self-employed workers by independent insurance funds set up within their own profession, trade or business. Schemes of compulsory insurance for sickness were instituted in 1961 for farmers, and in 1966, with modifications in 1970, for other non-wage-earning workers.

Social Insurance. The orders laid down in Aug. 1967 ensure that the whole population can benefit from the Social Security Scheme; at present all elderly persons who have been engaged in the professions, as well as the surviving spouse, are entitled to claim an old-age benefit.

Sickness Insurance refunds the costs of treatment required by the insured and the needs of dependants.

Maternity Insurance covers the costs of medical treatment relating to the pregnancy, confinement and lying-in period; the beneficiaries being the insured person or the spouse.

Insurance for Invalids is divided into three categories: (1) those who are capable of working; (2) those who cannot work; (3) those who, in addition, are in need of the help of another person. According to the category, the pension rate varies from 30 to 50% of the average salary for the last ten years, with additional allowance for home help for the third category.

Old-Age Pensions for workers were introduced in 1910 and are now fixed by the Social Security Code of 28 Jan. 1972. Since 1983 people who have paid insurance for at least 37½ years (150 quarters) receive at 60 a pension equal to 60% of basic salary. People who have paid insurance for less than 37½ years but no less than 15 years can expect a pension equal to as many 1/150ths of the full pension as their quarterly payments justify. In the event of death of the insured person, the husband or wife of the deceased person receives half the pension received by the latter. Compulsory supplementary schemes ensure benefits equal to 70% of previous earnings.

Family Allowances. A controversial programme of means-testing for Family Allowance was introduced in 1997 by the new administration. The Family Allowance benefit system comprises: (a) Family allowances proper, equivalent to 25·5% of the basic monthly salary for two dependent children, 46% for the third child, 41% for the fourth child, and 39% for the fifth and each subsequent child; a supplement equivalent to 9% of the basic monthly salary for the second and each subsequent dependent child more than ten years old, and 16% for each dependent child over 15 years. (b) Family supplement for persons with at least three children or one child aged less than three years. (c) Ante-natal grants. (d) Maternity grant is equal to 260% of basic salary. Increase for multiple births or adoptions, 198%; increase for birth or adoption of third or subsequent child, 457%. (e) Allowance for specialized education of handicapped children. (f) Allowance for orphans. (g) Single parent allowance. (h) Allowance for opening of school term. (i) Allowance for accommodation, under certain circumstances. (j) Minimum family income for those with at least three children. Allowances (b), (g), (h) and (j) only apply to those whose annual income falls below a specified level.

Workmen's Compensation. The law passed by the National Assembly on 30 Oct. 1946 forms part of the Social Security Code and is administered by the Social Security Organization. Employers are invited to take preventive measures. The application of these measures is supervised by consulting engineers (assessors) of the local funds dealing with sickness insurance, who may compel employers who do not respect these measures to make additional contributions; they may, in like manner, grant rebates to employers who have in operation suitable preventive measures. The injured person receives free treatment, the insurance fund reimburses the practitioners, hospitals and suppliers chosen freely by the injured. In cases of temporary disablement, the daily payments are equal to half the total daily wage received by the injured. In case of permanent disablement, the injured person receives a pension, the amount of which varies according to the degree of disablement and the salary received during the past 12 months.

Unemployment Benefits vary according to circumstances (full or partial unemployment) which are means-tested.

CULTURE

Lille, along with Genoa in Italy, will be one of the European Capitals of Culture for 2004. The title attracts large European Union grants.

Broadcasting. The broadcasting authority (an independent regulatory commission) is the Conseil Supérieur de l'Audiovisuel (CSA). Public radio is provided by Radio France which broadcasts nationwide on France Info, France Inter, France Musique, France Culture, Radio Bleue and Le Mouv' and, locally, via 39 radio stations. In Oct. 1998 there were 3,229 private local radio stations. An external service, Radio-France Internationale, was founded in 1931 (as 'Poste Coloniale'), and broadcasts in 20 languages. Two of the state-owned TV channels are partly financed by advertising—FR2 and FR3—and there are four private terrestrial channels. Colour is by SECAM H. TV broadcasts must contain at least 60% EU-generated programmes and 50% of these must be French.

There are three state controlled national TV channels. Until the mid-1990s, French state controlled television was protected from competition by legislation but under pressure from the private sector and cable companies, the two public channels were re-named and France Television was created to manage them. The third channel, La Cinquième, started up in 1994, mainly as an education service. The four main terrestrial private channels broadcasting nationwide are: TF1, a former state channel privatized in 1987; M6, established in 1987; Arte, a joint Franco-German cultural channel; and Canal Plus, a subscription channel. There were 116 TV channels altogether in 1997, up from 32 in 1980.

France has been broadcasting via satellite since 1984 with a combined service relaying programmes from Belgian and Swiss as well as French satellites. More satellites have been added including TDF1and TDF2 broadcasting for Arte, Canal Plus and Radio France. Télécom A and Télécom B transmit for the principal TV stations and from 1995, Astra, Eutelsat and Télécom satellites have been broadcasting to the majority of households able to receive television. Digital Television arrived in 1996 and three new satellites, Canal Satellite, Télévision par Satellite and AB Sat, were launched. In 1999 there were 3·5m. satellite and cable TV subscribers.

In addition to specialized French national channels, foreign channels are also transmitted to approximately 1·5m. French households via cable.

There were about 58m. radio receivers in use in 1997 and 35·5m. TV sets.

Cinema. There were 4,762 cinemas in 1998. Attendances totalled 170m. in 1998 (130m. in 1995); gross box office receipts came to 4,523m. francs in 1995. A record 204 full-length films were made in 2001. In 1996 French films took 37% of the national market, but in 1998 this dropped to 27%. Around 360 new screens were to be opened between 1998 and 2000.

Press. There were about 80 daily papers (10 nationals, 70 provincials) in 1997. The leading dailies are: L'Équipe; Le Monde; Le Parisien-Aujourd'hui; Le Figaro-L'Aurore; Libération; France-Soir; Ouest France; Le Progrès; Centre France; Sud Ouest; Voix du Nord. The Journal de Dimanche is the only national Sunday paper. In 1995 total daily press circulation was 13·6m. copies, up from 10·3m. in 1980. In 1995 a total of 34,766 book titles were published.

Tourism. There were 75,000,000 foreign tourists in 2000; tourism receipts in 1999 were US$31·70bn. France is the most popular tourist destination in the world, and receipts from tourism in 1999 were exceeded only in the USA and Spain. The most visited tourist attractions in 1998 were Disneyland Paris (12·1m.), the Eiffel Tower (6·1m.) and the Louvre (5·7m.). Around 11m. foreigners a year visit Paris. Countries of origin (visitors, in 1,000) in 1993: Germany, 12,900; UK, 8,000; Netherlands, 7,100; Italy, 6,300; Spain, 3,000; Belgium, 2,000; USA, 1,900; Switzerland, 1,900;

Portugal, 1,700. There were 583,578 classified hotel rooms in 18,563 hotels in 2000. 39,000 new jobs were created in 2000 through tourism.

Festivals. Religious Festivals. Assumption of the Blessed Virgin Mary (15 Aug.) and All Saints Day (1 Nov.) are both Public Holidays.

Cultural Festivals. The Grande Parade de Montmartre, Paris (1 Jan.); the Carnival of Nice (Feb.–March); the Fête de la Victoire (8 May), celebrates victory in World War Two; the May Feasts take place in Nice regularly throughout May; the prestigious Cannes Film Festival, which has been running since 1946, lasts two weeks in mid-May; the Avignon Festival is a celebration of theatre that attracts average attendances of 140,000 each year and runs for most of July; Bastille Day (14 July) sees celebrations, parties and fireworks across the country. The Festival International d'Art Lyrique, focusing on classical music, opera and ballet, takes place in Aix-en-Provence every July. There are also annual festivals of opera at Orange (July–Aug.) and baroque music at Ambronay (Sept.–Oct.).

Libraries. In 1997 there were 2,577 public libraries, 2 National libraries and 186 Higher Education libraries; they held a combined 125,772,000 volumes. There were 295,229,000 visits to the libraries in 1997.

OVERSEAS DEPARTMENTS

FRENCH GUIANA

Guyane Française

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

A French settlement on the island of Cayenne was established in 1604 and the territory between the Maroni and Oyapock rivers finally became a French possession in 1817. Convict settlements were established from 1852, that on Devil's Island being the most notorious; all were closed by 1945. On 19 March 1946 the status of French Guiana was changed to that of an Overseas Department.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

French Guiana is situated on the northeast coast of Latin America, and is bounded in the northeast by the Atlantic Ocean, west by Suriname, and south and east by Brazil. It includes the offshore Devil's Island, Royal Island and St Joseph, and has an area of 85,534 sq. km. Population at the 1999 census: 157,213. The UN gives a projected population for 2010 of 223,000. In 1995, 76·4% lived in urban areas. The chief towns are (with 1999 census populations): the capital, Cayenne (50,594 inhabitants), Saint-Laurent-du-Maroni (19,210) and Kourou (19,107). About 58% of inhabitants are of African descent.

The official language is French.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

1998 estimates (per 1,000 population): birth rate, 23·7; death rate, 4·5. 49% of the population are migrants. Annual growth rate, 1995–99, 4·3%.

CLIMATE

Equatorial type climate with most of the country having a main rainy season between April and July and a fairly dry period between Aug. and Dec. Both temperatures and humidity are high the whole year round. Cayenne, Jan. 26°C, July 29°C. Annual rainfall 3,202 mm.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

French Guiana is administered by a General Council of 19 members directly elected for five-year terms, and by a Regional Council of 31 members. It is represented in the National Assembly by two deputies; in the Senate by one senator. The French government is represented by a Prefect. There are two arrondissements (Cayenne and Saint Laurent-du-Maroni) sub-divided into 22 communes and 19 cantons.

GUADELOUPE

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The islands were discovered by Columbus in 1493. The Carib inhabitants resisted Spanish attempts to colonize. A French colony was established on 28 June 1635, and apart from short periods of occupancy by British forces, Guadeloupe has since remained a French possession. On 19 March 1946 Guadeloupe became an Overseas Department.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Guadeloupe consists of a group of islands in the Lesser Antilles with a total area of 1,705 sq. km. The two main islands, Basse-Terre (to the west) and Grande-Terre (to the east), are joined by a bridge over a narrow channel. Adjacent to these are the islands of Marie-Galante (to the southeast), La Désirade (to the east), and the Îles des Saintes (to the south); the islands of St Martin and St Barthélemy lie 250 km to the northwest.

Island	Area (sq. km)	1999 populations	Chief town
St Martin[1]	53[2]	29,078	Marigot
St Barthélemy	21	6,852	Gustavia
Basse-Terre	848	172,693	Basse-Terre
Grande-Terre	590	196,767	Pointe-à-Pitre
Îles des Saintes	13	2,998	Terre-de-Bas
La Désirade	22	1,620	Grande Anse
Marie-Galante	158	12,488	Grand-Bourg

[1]Northern part only; the southern third is Dutch. [2]Includes uninhabited Tintamarre.

Population at the last census (1999), 422,496. The UN gives a projected population for 2010 of 460,000. An estimated 99·4% of the population were urban in 1995. Population of principal towns (1999): Les Abymes, 63,054; Saint-Martin, 29,078; Pointe-à-Pitre, 20,948; Basse-Terre, 12,410. Basse-Terre is the seat of government, while larger Pointe-à-Pitre is the department's main economic centre and port; Les Abymes is a 'suburb' of Pointe-à-Pitre.

French is the official language, but Creole is spoken by the vast majority, except on St Martin.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

1998: live births, 6,507; deaths, 2,514; marriages, 3,510. 1998 estimates (per 1,000 population): birth rate, 15·5; death rate, 6·0. Annual growth rate, 1995–99, 1·5%. Life expectancy at birth, 1990–95, 71·1 years for males and 78·0 years for females.

CLIMATE

Warm and humid. Pointe-à-Pitre, Jan. 74°F (23·4°C), July 80°F (26·7°C). Annual rainfall 71" (1,814 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

Guadeloupe is administered by a General Council of 42 members directly elected for six-year terms (assisted by an Economic and Social Committee of 40 members) and by a Regional Council of 41 members. It is represented in the National Assembly by four deputies; in the Senate by two senators; and on the Economic and Social Council by one councillor. Roads. There were, in 2001, 2,914 km of roads and 258,400 registered vehicles. In 1999 the County Council was operating bus services to all towns.

Civil Aviation. In 2000, 736,499 passengers and 17,206 tonnes of freight arrived at, and 730,980 passengers and 8,934 tonnes of freight departed from, Roland Garros Saint-Denis airport.

Shipping. 753 vessels visited the island in 2000, unloading 2,783,700 tonnes of freight and loading 482,300 tonnes at Port-Réunion.

Telecommunications. There were 269,500 telephone main lines in 1999, or 388·6 per 1,000 inhabitants, and 32,000 PCs in use (46·3 per 1,000 persons). There were 197,000 mobile phone subscribers in Sept. 2000, up from 26,700 in 1997. In 1995 there were 1,900 fax machines. Internet users numbered 10,000 in July 2000.

Postal Services. In 1996 there were 824 post offices.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. There are 3 lower courts (tribunaux d'instance), 2 higher courts (tribunaux de grande instance), 1 appeal, 1 administrative court and 1 conciliation board.

The population in penal institutions in Oct. 1998 was 1,019 (150 per 100,000 of national population).

Religion. In 1990, 95% of the population was Roman Catholic.

Education. In 1999–2000 there were 501 primary schools with 111,845 pupils. Secondary education was provided in 27 lycées, 73 colleges, and 13 technical lycées, with, altogether, 96,168 pupils. The Université Française de l'Océan Indien (founded 1971) had 13,371 students in 1999–2000.

Health. In 2000 there were 17 hospitals with 2,734 beds, 1,595 doctors, 364 dentists, 342 pharmacists, 221 midwives and 2,906 nursing personnel.

CULTURE

Broadcasting. Radiodiffusion Française d'Outre-Mer broadcasts in French on medium- and short-waves for more than 18 hours a day. There are two national television channels (RFD1, Tempo) and three independent channels (Antenne Réunion, Canal Réunion/Canal + and Parabole Réunion). Colour transmission is by SECAM V. In 1997 there were 127,000 TV receivers and 173,000 radio receivers.

Cinema. In 2000 there were 18 cinemas.

Press. There were (2000) 3 daily newspapers (Quotidien, Journal de l'Île, Témoignages), 2 weekly (Visu, Télé Magazine), 3 monthly (Memento, Via, l'Eco Austral) and 2 fortnightly magazines (Leader and Attitude), with a combined circulation of 57,000.

Tourism. Tourism is a major resource industry. There were 430,000 visitors in 2000 (81·6% French). Receipts (2000) totalled €276m. In Jan. 2001 accommodation included 60 hotels, 126 country lodges (gîtes ruraux), 269 bed and breakfast houses, 22 stopover lodges (gîtes d'étape) and 22 mountain huts.

Libraries. There were 58 libraries in 1999.

Theatre and Opera. There were six theatres in 2000.

DEPARTMENTAL COLLECTIVITIES

MAYOTTE

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Mayotte was a French colony from 1843 until 1914 when it was attached, with the other Comoro islands, to the government-general of Madagascar. The Comoro group was granted administrative autonomy within the French Republic and became an Overseas Territory. When the other three islands voted to become independent (as the Comoro state) in 1974, Mayotte voted against this and remained a French dependency. In Dec. 1976 it became (following a further referendum) a Territorial Collectivity. On 11 July 2001 Mayotte became a Departmental Collectivity—a constitutional innovation—as a result of a referendum. This was denounced by the Comorian authorities, who claim Mayotte as part of the Union of the Comoro Islands.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Mayotte, east of the Comoro Islands, had a total population at the 2002 census of 160,265 (population density of 426 persons per sq. km). The estimated population for 2003 is 183,400. The whole territory covers 376 sq. km (144 sq. miles). It consists of a main island (362 sq. km) with (2003 estimate) 158,500 inhabitants, containing the chief town, Mamoudzou (45,485 inhabitants in 2002); and the smaller island of Pamanzi (11 sq. km) lying 2 km to the east (24,900 estimated for 2003) containing the old capital of Dzaoudzi (12,066 in 2002).

The spoken language is Shimaoré (akin to Comorian, an Arabized dialect of Swahili), but French remains the official, commercial and administrative language.

CLIMATE

The dry and sunniest season is from May to Oct. The hot but rainy season is from Nov. to April. Average temperatures are 27°C from Dec. to March and 24°C from May to Sept.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The island is administered by a General Council of 17 members, directly elected for a six-year term. The French government is represented by an appointed Prefect. The legislation of 11 July 2001 stipulates that executive powers will be transferred from the prefect to the president of the General Council in March 2004. Mayotte is represented by one deputy in the National Assembly and by one member in the Senate. There are 17 communes, including two on Pamanzi.

RECENT ELECTIONS

At the General council elections on 23 March 1997 the Mouvement Populaire Mahorais (MPM) won 8 seats, the Rassemblement Mahorais pour la République (RPR) 5, the Parti Socialiste (PS) 1 and others 5.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

Prefect: Jean-Jacques Brot; b. 1956 (took office on 3 July 2002).

President of the General Council: Younoussa Bamana (MPM); since 1977.

ECONOMY

Currency. Since 1 Jan. 2002 the euro has been the official currency as in metropolitan France.

Banking and Finance. The Institut d'Emission d'Outre-mer and the Banque Française Commerciale both have branches in Dzaoudzi and Mamoudzou.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Agriculture. The area under cultivation in 1998 was 14,400 ha. Mayotte is the world's second largest producer of ylang-ylang essence. The chief cash crops (1997) were: cinnamon 27,533 kg, ylang-ylang 14,300 kg, vanilla 4,417 kg, coconut 2,060 kg. The main food crops (1997) were bananas (30,200 tonnes) and cassava (10,000 tonnes). Livestock (1997): cattle, 17,000; goats, 25,000; sheep, 2,000.

Forestry. There are some 19,750 ha of forest, of which 1,150 is primary, 15,000 secondary and 3,600 badlands (uncultivable or eroded).

Fisheries. A lobster and shrimp industry has been created. Fish landings in 1999 totalled approximately 1,500 tonnes.

INDUSTRY

Labour. In 1994, 18·5% of the active population was engaged in public building and works. Unemployment rate, 1997, 41%.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Imports and Exports. In 1997 exports of ylang-ylang totalled 5·5m. French francs; vanilla 763,023 French francs; coconut 2,075 French francs; cinnamon 201,319 French francs. Imports (1993–94) totalled 573·6m. French francs.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. In 2002 there were 224 km of main roads, all of which are paved, and 1,528 motor vehicles.

Civil Aviation. There is an airport at Pamandzi, with scheduled services in 2002 provided to the Comoros, Kenya, Madagascar, Mozambique, Réunion, Seychelles and South Africa.

Shipping. There are services provided by Tratringa and Ville de Sima to Anjouan (Comoros) and Moroni (Comoros).

Telecommunications. In 1999 there were 9,700 telephone main lines, or 72·7 per 1,000 inhabitants.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. There is a tribunal de première instance and a tribunal supérieur d'appel.

Religion. The population is 97% Sunni Muslim, with a small Christian (mainly Roman Catholic) minority.

Education. In 1994 there were 25,805 pupils in nursery and primary schools, and 6,190 pupils at seven collèges and one lycée at secondary level. There were also 1,922 pupils enrolled in pre-professional classes and professional lycées. There is a teacher training college.

Health. There were two hospitals with 100 beds in 1994. In 1985 there were 9 doctors, 1 dentist, 1 pharmacist, 2 midwives and 51 nursing personnel.

CULTURE

Broadcasting. Broadcasting is conducted by Radio-Télévision Française d'Outre-Mer (RFO-Mayotte) with one hour a day in Shimaoré. Télé Mayotte RFO on Petite Terre transmits from 6 a.m. to around midnight every day. There are two private radio stations. In 2000 there were an estimated 40,000 radio and 5,000 TV receivers; colour is by SECAM. Since 1999, two satellite TV programmes have been available.

Press. There are two newspapers: Kwezi, published twice a week, and Mayotte Hebdo, published once a week.

Tourism. In 2001 there were 23,000 visitors. In 1999, 44% came from Réunion, 42% from mainland France and 14% from other countries. The average length of stay was 11 to 14 days.

TERRITORIAL COLLECTIVITIES

NEW CALEDONIA

Nouvelle Calédonie et Dépendances

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

New Caledonia was discovered by James Cook on 4 Sept. 1774. The first settlers (English Protestants and French Catholics) came in 1840. New Caledonia was annexed by France in 1853 and, together with most of its former dependencies, became an Overseas Territory in 1958. In 1998 it became a Territorial Collectivity.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The territory comprises the New Caledonia mainland and various outlying islands, all situated in the southwest Pacific (Melanesia) with a total land area of 18,575 sq. km (7,172 sq. miles). The population (1996 census) was 196,836, including 67,151 Europeans (majority French), 86,788 Melanesians (Kanaks), 7,825 Vietnamese and Indonesians, 5,171 Polynesians, 17,763 Wallisians and Futunians, 1,318 others. Density, 10 per sq. km. In 1996 an estimated 60·4% of the population lived in urban areas. The estimated population at 1 Jan. 2001 was 212,709. The capital, Nouméa, had 76,293 inhabitants in 1996.

There are four main islands (or groups of):

New Caledonia mainland An area of 16,372 sq. km (about 400 km long, 50 km wide) with a population (1996 census) of 170,365. The east coast is predominantly Melanesian; the Nouméa region predominantly European; and the rest of the west coast is of mixed population.

Loyalty Islands 100 km (60 miles) east of New Caledonia, consisting of four large islands: Maré, Lifou, Uvéa and Tiga. It has a total area of 1,981 sq. km and a population (1996) of 20,877, nearly all Melanesians, except on Uvéa which is partly Polynesian. The chief culture in the islands is coconuts; the chief export is copra.

Isle of Pines A tourist and fishing centre 50 km (30 miles) to the southeast of Nouméa, with an area of 152 sq. km and a population (1996) of 1,671.

Bélep Archipelago About 50 km northwest of New Caledonia, with an area of 70 sq. km and a population (1996) of 923.

The remaining islands are very small and have no permanent inhabitants. The largest are the Chesterfield Islands, a group of 11 well-wooded coral islets with a combined area of 10 sq. km, about 550 km west of the Bélep Archipelago. The Huon Islands, a group of four barren coral islets with a combined area of just 65 ha, are 225 km north of the Bélep Archipelago. Walpole, a limestone coral island of 1 sq. km, lies 150 km east of the Isle of Pines; Matthew Island (20 ha) and Hunter Island (2 sq. km), respectively 250 km and 330 km east of Walpole, are spasmodically active volcanic islands. There are also Surprise and Beautemps-Beaupré Islands.

At the 1996 census there were 341 tribes (which have legal status under a high chief) living in 160 reserves, covering a surface area of 392,550 ha (21% of total land), and representing about 28·7% of the population. 80,443 Melanesians belong to a tribe.

New Caledonia has a remarkable diversity of Melanesian languages (29 vernacular), divided into four main groups (Northern, Central, Southern and Loyalty Islands). There were 53,556 speakers (1996). The three most spoken forms are Drehu (11,338), Nengone (6,377) and Paicî (5,498). A ministerial decision in 1991 introduced local languages into the baccalauréat system. In 2000 six Melanesian languages were taught in schools.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

2000: live births, 4,564; deaths, 1,075; marriages, 995; divorces, 159. Annual growth rate, 1·65%. Life expectancy at birth, 1990–95, 69·7 years for males and 74·7 years for females. Infant mortality, 1990–95, 22 per 1,000 live births; fertility rate, 2·7 births per woman.

CLIMATE

2000: Nouméa, Jan. 25·8°C, July 20·4°C (average temperature, 23·8°C; max. 33·5°C, min. 14·3°C). Annual rainfall 1,294 mm.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

Subsequent to the referendum law of 9 Nov. 1988, the organic and ordinary laws of 19 March 1999 define New Caledonia's new statute. Until then an 'Overseas Territory', New Caledonia became a Territorial Collectivity with specific status endowed with wide autonomy. New Caledonia's institutions comprise the congress, government, economic and social council (CES), the customary senate and customary councils. The three provinces and 33 municipalities are territorial collectivities of the French Republic, freely administrating themselves in assemblies elected by direct universal suffrage.

The congress is made up of 54 members called 'Councillors of New Caledonia', from the provincial assemblies. Each year it elects the members of its executive, standing committee, and internal committees.

The 11-member government is elected by congress on a proportional ballot from party lists. The president is elected by majority vote of all members. Each member is allocated to lead and control a given sector in the administration. The government's mandate ends when the mandate of the Congress that elected it comes to an end.

The economic and social council comprises 39 members, including 28 representatives directly involved in economic, social and cultural activities designated in the provinces (16 for the South, 8 for the North, and 4 for the Loyalty Islands), 2 members designated by the customary senate and 9 personalities designated by the government. CES is completely renewed every five years.

RECENT ELECTIONS

On 8 Nov. 1998 there was a referendum for the agreement of the Nouméa accords. The electorate was 106,716; turn-out was 74·2%. Nearly 71·9% of those who voted said 'Yes' to the question 'Do you approve the agreement on New Caledonia, signed in Nouméa on May 5 1998?' Voting was restricted to those people resident in New Caledonia before 1998.

In elections to the Territorial Congress on 9 May 1999, the conservative Rally for Caledonia in the Republic (RPCR) won 24 seats and the National Liberation Front of the Socialist Kanaks 18, with other parties and independents winning 4 seats or fewer.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

High Commissioner: Daniel Constantin.

President: Pierre Frogier (RPCR).

President of the Territorial Congress: Simon Loueckhote (RPCR).

ECONOMY

Currency. The unit of currency is the franc CFP (XPF), with a parity of 119·3317422 francs CPF to the euro. 211,396m. francs CFP were in circulation in Dec. 2000.

Budget. The budget for 2000 balanced at 74,904m. francs CFP.

Performance. In 1997 GDP was 349,260m. francs CFP; GDP per capita was 1·74m. francs CFP.

Banking and Finance. In 2000 the banks were: Banque Calédonienne d'Investissement (BCI), the Bank of Hawaii-Nouvelle-Calédonie (BoH-NC), the Banque Nationale de Paris/Nouvelle-Calédonie (BNP/NC), the Société Générale Calédonienne de Banque (SGCB) and the Caisse d'Epargne.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Environment. According to the World Bank Atlas carbon dioxide emissions in 1998 were the equivalent of 8·5 tonnes per capita.

Electricity. Production (2000): 1,645m. kWh.

Minerals. A wide range of minerals have been found in New Caledonia including: nickel, copper and lead, gold, chrome, gypsum and platinum metals. The nickel deposits are of special value, being without arsenic, and constitute between 20–40% of the world's known nickel resources located on the mainland.

Production of nickel ore (2000): 128,289 tonnes, of which garnieritic ore (108,302 tonnes) and lateritic ore (19,987). In 2000 the furnaces produced 57,463 tonnes, of which ferro-nickels (43,914 tonnes) and mattes (13,549 tonnes).

Agriculture. According to the 1996 census, 4,663 persons worked in the agricultural sector. In 1998 there were an estimated 7,000 ha of arable land and 6,000 ha of permanent crops. In 1999 livestock numbered: pigs, 38,252; goats, 16,498; horses, 11,245; deer, 12,523; poultry, 877,364; cattle (1994), 105,000. The chief products are beef, pork, poultry, coffee, copra, maize, fruit and vegetables. Production (1998 estimates, in 1,000 tonnes): coconuts, 17; yams, 11; cassava, 3; sweet potatoes, 3; maize, 2; potatoes, 2; taro, 2.

Livestock (1996): cattle, 113,000; pigs, 39,000; goats (1995), 17,000; poultry (1995), 1m.

Forestry. There were 698,000 ha of forest in 1995, or 38·2% of the total land area (down from 38·3% in 1990). Timber production (1999), 5,000 cu. metres.

Fisheries. In 1998 there were 291 fishing boats (1,950 GRT) and a catch (1999) of 3,152 tonnes. Aquaculture (consisting mainly of saltwater prawns) provides New Caledonia's second highest source of export income after nickel.

INDUSTRY

Up until the end of the 1970s the New Caledonia economy was almost totally dependent on the nickel industry. Subsequently transformation or processing industries gained in importance to reach levels similar to those in metallurgic industries.

However, small to medium size businesses are still absent in many sectors, in particular the majority of primary and capital goods industries. Among local production for consumption goods, the agri-foods industry is the most widely represented. Small in size, the production units largely work to satisfy the local market, through processing of imported raw materials, with only marginal production for exports.

Labour. The employed population (1996) was 64,377. In July 2001 the guaranteed monthly minimum wage was 100,000 francs CFP. In 1996 there were 30 industrial disputes and 13,826 working days were lost. There were 15,018 registered unemployed in 1997 (66% under 30 years of age).

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Imports and Exports. In 2000 the balance of trade showed a deficit of 41,312m. francs CFP. Imports and exports in 1m. francs CFP:

	1997	1998	1999	2000
Imports	97,700	99,531	112,887	119,766
Exports	55,912	40,621	52,387	78,454

In 2000, 38·8% of imports came from France, 16·8% from Australia and 14·9% from other countries of European Union. In 2000, 20·6% of exports went to France and 26·6% to Japan. Mining and metallurgic products accounted for 92·4% of exports: nickel ore, 21·1%; ferro-nickels, 57·2%; mattes, 14·1%.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. In 2000 there were 5,432 km of road and 83,554 vehicles. In 1999 road accidents inured 983 and killed 58 persons.

Civil Aviation. New Caledonia is connected by air routes with France, Australia, New Zealand, Japan, Vanuatu, Wallis and Futuna, Fiji Islands and French Polynesia. Regular domestic air services are provided by Air Calédonie from Magenta aerodrome in Nouméa. In 2000 there were 288,322 passengers recorded at Magenta Aerodrome. Internal services with Air Calédonie link Nouméa to a number of domestic airfields.

In 2000, 359,381 passengers and 5,243 tonnes of freight were carried via La Tontouta International Airport, near Nouméa.

Shipping. In 1999, 510 vessels entered New Caledonia, unloading 1,254,662 tonnes of freight, loading 4,007,049 tonnes (including 3·8m. tonnes of nickel ore).

Telecommunications. In 2000 there were 51,000 telephone main lines (236·9 per 1,000 inhabitants); in 1997, 5,100 mobile phone subscribers; and in 1995, 2,200 fax machines. New Caledonia has had Internet access since 1995. In Dec. 2000 there were 24,000 Internet users.

Postal Services. In 2000 there were 36 post offices.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. There are courts at Nouméa, Koné and Wé (on Lifou Island), a court of appeal, a labour court and a joint commerce tribunal. There were 4,054 cases judged in the magistrates courts in 1999; 280 went before the court of appeal, 26 were sentenced in the court of assizes.

The population in penal institutions in Oct. 1998 was 303 (155 per 100,000 of national population).

Religion. There were about 0·1m. Roman Catholics in 1994.

Education. In 1999 there were 36,667 pupils and 1,628 teachers in 284 primary schools; 27,877 pupils and 2,212 teachers in 85 secondary schools; and 1,866 students at university with 89 teaching staff. By decree of 1999 the New Caledonia campus of the French University of the Pacific (UFP), established in 1987, was separated from the campus, to become University of New Caledonia (UNC), a public establishment under shared authority of the French State and New Caledonia with responsibilities in tertiary education, research and international co-operation.

Health. In 1999 there were 418 doctors, 106 dentists, 91 pharmacists and 1,209 paramedical personnel. There were 26 socio-medical districts, with 4 hospitals, 3 private clinics for a total of 838 beds.

Welfare. There are two main forms of social security cover: Free Medical Aid provides total sickness cover for non-waged persons and low-income earners; the Family Benefit, Workplace Injury and Contingency Fund for Workers in New Caledonia (CAFAT). There are also numerous mutual benefit societies. In 1999 Free Medical Aid had 56,894 beneficiaries; CAFAT had approximately 150,000 beneficiaries.

CULTURE

Broadcasting. Television broadcasting was, for a long time, limited to one or two state-owned stations (today Télé Nouvelle-Calédonie and Tempo). A private channel (Canal+) began broadcasting in 1994, and in late 1999 a digital selection of 13 pay-channels (Canal'Sat) was launched. By the end of 2001 Canal Calédonie had 17,000 Canal'Sat and 18,000 Canal+ subscribers.

There were 90,000 TV sets and 107,000 radio receivers in 1997.

Cinema. In 1999 there were seven cinemas in New Caledonia including three in Nouméa and one drive-in in the Greater Nouméa.

Press. In 2001 there was one daily newspaper, Les Nouvelles Calédoniennes.

Tourism. In 2000 New Caledonia welcomed 109,587 tourists (Japan, 23·8%; France, 16·4%; Australia, 16·4%; New Zealand, 8·7%). In 1999 there were 82 hotels providing 2,398 beds.

Festivals. New Caledonia has been host to the Pacific Arts Festival and holds numerous cultural events including a biennial contemporary art exhibition and the Equinox Festival.

Museums and Galleries. In 1996 there were nine museums, including three in Nouméa.

ST PIERRE AND MIQUELON

Îles Saint-Pierre et Miquelon

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The only remaining fragment of the once-extensive French possessions in North America, the archipelago was settled from France in the 17th century. It was a French colony from 1816 until 1976, an overseas department until 1985, and is now a Territorial Collectivity.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The archipelago consists of two islands off the south coast of Newfoundland, with a total area of 242 sq. km, comprising the Saint-Pierre group (26 sq. km) and the Miquelon-Langlade group (216 sq. km). The population (1999 census) was 6,316 of whom 3,169 were female. This total population figure represents a decrease of 76 from the 1990 census. Approximately 88% of the population lives on Saint-Pierre. The chief town is St Pierre.

The official language is French.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

2000: births, 51; deaths, 35; marriages, 24; divorces, 7.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The Territorial Collectivity is administered by a General Council of 19 members directly elected for a six-year term. It is represented in the National Assembly in Paris by one deputy, in the Senate by one senator and in the Economic and Social Council by one councillor. The French government is represented by a Prefect.

RECENT ELECTIONS

At the General Council elections on 19 and 26 March 2000, 11 seats went to Défense des Intérêts de l'Archipel, 3 to Volonté Insulaire, 2 to Expérience et Innovation, 2 to Cap sur l'Avenir and 1 to Miquelon 2000.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

Prefect: Claude Valleix.

President of the General Council: Marc Plantegenest.

ECONOMY

Currency. Since 1 Jan. 2002 the euro has been the official currency as in metropolitan France.

Budget. The budget for 2000 balanced at 270m. French francs.

Banking and Finance. Banks include the Banque des Îles Saint-Pierre et Miquelon, the Crédit Saint-Pierrais and the Caisse d'Épargne.

A Development Agency was created in 1996 to help with investment projects.

Weights and Measures. The metric system is in use.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Electricity. Production (2000): 39m. kWh.

Agriculture. The islands, being mostly barren rock, are unsuited for agriculture, but some vegetables are grown and livestock is kept for local consumption.

Fisheries. In June 1992 an international tribunal awarded France a 24-mile fishery and economic zone around the islands and a 10·5-mile-wide corridor extending for 200 miles to the high seas. The 2000 catch amounted to 1,261 tonnes, chiefly snow crab, cod, lumpfish, shark and scallops. A Franco-Canadian agreement regulating fishing in the area was signed in Dec. 1994. The total annual catch has declined dramatically in the past 15 years.

INDUSTRY

In 1994 there were 351 businesses (including 144 services, 69 public works, 45 food trade, 8 manufacturing and 2 agriculture). The main industry, fish processing, resumed in 1994 after a temporary cessation due to lack of supplies in 1992. Diversification activities are in progress (aquaculture, sea products processing, scallops plant).

Labour. The economically active population in 2000 was 3,261. In Jan. 2002 the minimum wage (SMIC) was €6·67 an hour (€1,126·40 a month). In 1996, 11% of the labour force was registered as unemployed.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Imports and Exports. Trade in 1m. French francs (2000): imports, 371 (51% from Canada); exports, 50.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. In 2000 there were 117 km of roads, of which 80 km were surfaced. There were 2,508 passenger cars and 1,254 commercial vehicles in use.

Civil Aviation. Canadian Airlines International connects St Pierre with Montreal, Halifax, Sydney (Nova Scotia) and St John's (Newfoundland). In addition, a new airport capable of receiving medium-haul aeroplanes was opened in 1999.

Shipping. St Pierre has regular services to Fortune and Halifax in Canada. In 1999, 893 vessels called at St Pierre; 17,067 tonnes of freight were unloaded and 3,020 tonnes were loaded.

Telecommunications. There were 4,900 telephones in 2000.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. There is a court of first instance and a higher court of appeal at St Pierre.

Religion. The population is chiefly Roman Catholic.

Education. Primary instruction is free. In 2000 there were three nursery and five primary schools with 799 pupils; three secondary schools with 564 pupils; and two technical schools with 199 pupils.

Health. In 2000 there was one hospital with 45 beds, one convalescent home with 20 beds, one retirement home with 40 beds; 15 doctors and 1 dentist.

CULTURE

Broadcasting. Radio Télévision Française d'Outre Mer (RFO) broadcasts in French on medium waves and on two television channels (one satellite). In 2000 there were 35 cable television channels from Canada and USA. In 2000 there were also approximately 4,900 radio and 4,500 television sets in use.

Tourism. In 2000 there were 10,090 visitors.

Libraries. There is one municipal library in Saint-Pierre.

OVERSEAS TERRITORIES

FRENCH POLYNESIA

Territoire de la Polynésie Française

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

French protectorates since 1843, these islands were annexed to France 1880–82 to form ‘French Settlements in Oceania’, which opted in Nov. 1958 for the status of an overseas territory within the French Community.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The total land area of these five archipelagoes, comprising 130 volcanic islands and coral atolls (76 inhabited) scattered over a wide area in the eastern Pacific, is 4,167 sq. km. The population (1996 census) was 219,521 (105,587 females); density, 53 per sq. km. At Dec.1998 French forces stationed in Polynesia numbered 2,119 (based mostly on Tahiti and the Hao atoll) and employed 1,162 Polynesian citizens. In 1995 an estimated 56·4% of the population lived in urban areas.

The UN gives a projected population for 2010 of 271,000.

The official languages are French and Tahitian.

The islands are administratively divided into five circonscriptions as follows:

Windward Islands (Îles du Vent) (162,398 inhabitants, 1996) comprise Tahiti with an area of 1,042 sq. km and 150,707 inhabitants; Mooréa with an area of 132 sq. km and 11,682 inhabitants; Maiao (Tubuai Manu) with an area of 9 sq. km; and the smaller Mehetia and Tetiaroa. The capital is Papeete, Tahiti (79,024 inhabitants in 1996, including suburbs).

Leeward Islands (Îles sous le Vent) comprise the five volcanic islands of Raiatéa, Tahaa, Huahine, Bora-Bora and Maupiti, together with four small atolls (Tupai, Mopelia, Scilly, Bellinghausen), the group having a total land area of 404 sq. km and 26,838 inhabitants in 1996. The chief town is Uturoa on Raiatéa. The Windward and Leeward Islands together are called the Society Archipelago (Archipel de la Société). Tahitian, a Polynesian language, is spoken throughout the archipelago and used as a lingua franca in the rest of the territory.

Marquesas Islands 12 islands lying north of the Tuamotu Archipelago, with a total area of 1,049 sq. km and 8,064 inhabitants in 1996. There are six inhabited islands: Nuku Hiva, Ua Pou, Ua Uka, Hiva Oa, Tahuata, Fatu Hiva; and six smaller (uninhabited) ones; the chief centre is Taiohae on Nuku Hiva.

Austral or Tubuai Islands lying south of the Society Archipelago, comprise a 1,300 km chain of volcanic islands and reefs. There are five inhabited islands (Rimatara, Rurutu, Tubuai, Raivavae and, 500 km to the south, Rapa), with a combined area of 148 sq. km (6,563 inhabitants in 1996); the chief centre is Mataura on Tubuai.

Tuamotu Archipelago consists of two parallel ranges of 76 atolls (53 inhabited) lying north and east of the Society Archipelago, and has a total area of 690 sq. km, with 15,370 inhabitants in 1996. The most populous atolls are Rangiroa (1,913 inhabitants), Hao (1,356) and Manihi (769).

The Mururoa and Fangataufa atolls in the southeast of the group were ceded to France in 1964 by the Territorial Assembly, and were used by France for nuclear tests from 1966–96. The cessation of nuclear testing marked the end of activities of the Pacific Testing Centre (CEP) in French Polynesia. The CEP was entirely dismantled during 1998. A small military presence remains to ensure permanent radiological control.

The circonscription also includes the Gambier Islands further east, with an area of 36 sq. km; the chief centre is Rikitea on the group’s only inhabited island, Mangareva.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Annual population growth rate, 2·2%. Birth rate (1996) was 22·1 per 1,000 inhabitants; death rate, 4·7; marriage rate, 5·5. Life expectancy at birth, 1990–95, 68·3 years for males and 73·8 years for females. Infant mortality, 1990–95, 11 per 1,000 live births; fertility rate, 3·1 births per woman.

CLIMATE

Papeete. Jan. 81°F (27·1°C), July 75°F (24°C). Annual rainfall 83" (2,106 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

Under the 1984 Constitution, the Territory is administered by a Council of Ministers, whose President is elected by the Territorial Assembly from among its own members; the President appoints a Vice-President and 14 other ministers (16 ministers in total in 1999). There is an advisory Economic and Social Committee. French Polynesia is represented in the French Assembly by two deputies, in the Senate by one senator, in the Economic and Social Council by one councillor. The French government is represented by a High Commissioner. The Territorial Assembly comprises 41 members elected every five years from five constituencies by universal suffrage, using the same proportional representation system as in metropolitan French regional elections. To be elected a party must gain at least 5% of votes cast. The Assembly elects a head of local government.

A statute drafted at the end of 1995 proposes to create French Polynesia as an Autonomous Overseas Territory in which the President of the Council of Ministers will become the President of the territory.

RECENT ELECTIONS

Elections were held on 6 May 2001. The People's Front-Rally for the Republic, the party of President Gaston Flosse, won 28 seats. People's Servant won 13 and New Fatherland took 7 seats. In the presidential vote held on 18 May 2001 Flosse was re-elected, defeating Oscar Temaru by 29 votes to 13.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

High Commissioner: Michel Mathieu.

President of the Council of Ministers: Gaston Flosse (RPR).

ECONOMY

In decline since 1993, the economy has shown signs of recovery since 1997.

Currency. The unit of currency is the franc CFP (XPF). Up to 31 Dec. 1998, its parity was to the French franc: 1 franc CFP = 0·055 French francs; from 1 Jan. 1999 parity was linked to the euro: 119·3317422 francs CPF = one euro.

Budget. Total expenditure (1997), 10,416m. French francs, of which 6,744m. French francs comes directly from France.

Performance. In 1997 GDP was 21,600m. French francs (5·5% up on 1996); GDP per capita was 96,964 French francs.

Banking and Finance. There are four commercial banks: Banque de Tahiti, Banque de Polynésie, Société de Crédit et de Développement de l'Océanie, and the Banque Westpac. There are also 22 credit institutions, including SOFOTOM and the Agence Française de Développement (AFD).

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

French Polynesia is heavily dependent on external sources for its energy. Since the early 1980s efforts have been made to reduce this, which have included the development of solar energy. By 1999 it was estimated that production of solar energy was in the region of 2,700 hours a year.

Environment. According to the World Bank Atlas carbon dioxide emissions in 1998 were the equivalent of 2·5 tonnes per capita.

Electricity. Production (1998) was 360m. kWh, of which approximately 35% was hydro-electric. Consumption per capita (1995) was estimated to be 1,409 kWh. Between 1988 and 1997, 14,212 solar photovoltaic modules were installed in Polynesia.

Oil and Gas. In 1997 over 236,000 tonnes of combustible products were imported (with a value of 346m. French francs), mainly from Australia and Hawaii; 8,600 tonnes of gas was imported.

Agriculture. Agriculture used to be the primary economic sector but now accounts for only a modest 8% (1997) of GDP. An important product is copra (coconut trees cover the coastal plains of the mountainous islands and the greater part of the low-lying islands). A new and increasingly successful crop is the nono fruit, which has medicinal value. Production in 1,000 tonnes (1998 estimates): coconuts, 87; copra, 11; cassava, 6; potatoes, 5. Exports of the nono reached 15m. French francs in 1998. Tropical fruits, such as bananas, pineapples and oranges, are grown for local consumption.

Livestock (1996): cattle 7,000; pigs 42,000; goats (1995) 27,286; poultry (1995) 297,700.

Forestry. In 1999 there was between 4,000 and 5,000 ha of forest, around half of it exploitable. The industry remains embryonic.

Fisheries. Polynesia has an exclusive zone of 5·2m. sq. km, one of the largest in the world. The industry employs some 2,000 people, including 700 traditional fishermen. Catch (1997): 12,336 tonnes, almost exclusively from sea fishing. Subject to annual agreement, a Korean fleet of 70 ships operates in the Polynesian waters; it had a quota of 3,000 tonnes in 1998–99.

INDUSTRY

Some 2,218 industrial enterprises employ 5,800 people. Principal industries include food and drink products, cosmetics, clothing and jewellery, furniture-making, metalwork and shipbuilding. Commerce is an important sector of the economy, employing (1997) some 7,400 persons in 2,448 enterprises across 1,752 retail and 696 manufacturing businesses.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Imports and Exports. The trade balance is precarious: Polynesia imports a great deal and exports very little. The trade deficit in 1997 was 4·15m. French francs. Total imports (1997), 5·46m. French francs; total exports, 1·31m. French francs.

The chief exports are coconut oil, fish, nono juice, mother of pearl and cultured pearls. Pearl production in recent years has doubled, with 794m. French francs worth of pearls exported in 1998. Representing 27% of the world market, Polynesia is the world's second largest producer of pearls after Australia. It is the second largest industry in Polynesia after tourism, and employs some 4,000 islanders.

Major trading partners: France, Japan (66% of pearl exports), Hong Kong, the USA and the EU, with France accounting for over 38% of total imports and around 25% of exports in 1997, and the EU as a whole 52% of imports.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. There were estimated to be 2,590 km of roads in 1999, 67% bitumenized.

Civil Aviation. The main airport is at Papeete (Tahiti-Faa'a). Air France and eight other international airlines (including Air France, Air New Zealand and AOM French Airlines) connect Tahiti International Airport with Paris, Auckland, Honolulu, Los Angeles, Santiago, Sydney, Tokyo and many Pacific islands. Local companies, including Air Tahiti, connect the islands with services from 48 secondary airfields, including those at Bora-Bora, Rangiroa and Raiatea. In 2000 Papeete handled 1,553,132 passengers (849,540 on domestic flights) and 11,429 tonnes of freight.

Shipping. Ten shipping companies connect France, San Francisco, New Zealand, Japan, Australia, southeast Asia and most Pacific locations with Papeete. In 1997, 727,000 tonnes of cargo were unloaded and 28,000 tonnes loaded at Papeete's main port. Around 1·4m. people pass through the port each year.

Telecommunications. Number of telephone main lines in 2000 was 51,500 (220·7 per 1,000 inhabitants); mobile phones (1999), 21,900. In 1997 there were 2,900 fax machines. In Dec. 1999 there were 5,000 Internet users.

Postal Services. In 1999 there were 56 post offices, handling some 700 tonnes of post a year.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. There is a tribunal de première instance and a cour d'appel at Papeete. The population in penal institutions in Oct. 1998 was 280 (125 per 100,000 of national population).

Religion. In 1997 there were approximately 110,000 protestants (about 50% of the population) and 55,000 Roman Catholics (25%).

Education. In 1998–99 there were 77,300 pupils and 5,200 teachers in 316 schools (46,800 in 255 primary schools; 30,500 in secondary school). The French University of the Pacific (UFP), founded in 1987, has a campus on Tahiti. The South Pacific University Institute for Teacher Training, founded in 1992 (part of UFP), has three colleges: in French Polynesia, Wallis and Futuna, and in Nouméa (New Caledonia), where it is headquartered. In 1997–98, 2,200 students followed university courses.

Health. In 1999 there were 1 territorial hospital centre, 4 general hospitals, 1 specialist hospital and 2 private clinics, with a total of 855 beds. Medical personnel numbered 1,590 persons, including 384 doctors (175 per 100,000 inhabitants), 94 dentists and 51 pharmacists. Health spending accounted for 10·2% of GDP in 1997.

Welfare. In 1997, 202,760 people benefited from social welfare.

CULTURE

Broadcasting. There are three TV broadcasters (one public, two independent): Radio Télévision Française d'Outre-mer (RFO) which broadcasts on two channels in French, Tahitian and English; Canal + Polynésie; and Telefenua which broadcasts across 16 channels. There are also 11 private radio stations. Number of receivers (1999): radio, 40,350; TV, 40,000 (colour by SECAM H).

Cinema. There are four cinemas in Papeete.

Press. In 1999 there were two daily newspapers.

Tourism. Tourism is the main industry. There were 189,000 tourist arrivals in 1998. Total revenue (1997) 2m. French francs.

SOUTHERN AND ANTARCTIC TERRITORIES

Terres Australes et Antarctiques Françaises (TAAF)

The Territory of the TAAF was created on 6 Aug. 1955. It comprises the Kerguelen and Crozet archipelagoes, the islands of Saint Paul and Amsterdam (formerly Nouvelle Amsterdam), all in the southern Indian ocean, and Terre Adélie. Since 2 April 1997 the administration has had its seat in Saint-Pierre, Réunion; before that it was in Paris. The Administrator is assisted by a seven-member consultative council which meets twice yearly in Paris; its members are nominated by the government for five years. The 15-member Polar Environment Committee, which in 1993 replaced the former Consultative Committee on the Environment (est. 1982), meets at least once a year to discuss all problems relating to the preservation of the environment.

The French Institute for Polar Research and Technology was set up to organize scientific research and expeditions in Jan. 1992. The staff of the permanent scientific stations of the TAAF (120 in 1998) is renewed every 6 or 12 months and forms the only population.

Administrateur Supérieur. François Garde.

Kerguelen Islands Situated 48–50° S. lat., 68–70° E. long.; consists of one large and 85 smaller islands, and over 200 islets and rocks, with a total area of 7,215 sq. km (2,786 sq. miles) of which Grande Terre occupies 6,675 sq. km (2,577 sq. miles). It was discovered in 1772 by Yves de Kerguelen, but was effectively occupied by France only in 1949. Port-aux-Français has several scientific research stations (56 members). Reindeer, trout and sheep have been acclimatized.

Crozet Islands Situated 46° S. lat., 50–52° E. long.; consists of five larger and 15 tiny islands, with a total area of 505 sq. km (195 sq. miles). The western group includes Apostles, Pigs and Penguins islands; the eastern group, Possession and Eastern islands. The archipelago was discovered in 1772 by Marion Dufresne, whose first mate, Crozet, annexed it for Louis XV. A meteorological and scientific station (17 members) at Base Alfred-Faure on Possession Island was built in 1964.

Amsterdam and Saint-Paul Islands Situated 38–39° S. lat., 77° E. long. Amsterdam, with an area of 54 sq. km (21 sq. miles) was discovered in 1522 by Magellan's companions; Saint-Paul, lying about 100 km to the south, with an area of 7 sq. km (2·7 sq. miles), was probably discovered in 1559 by Portuguese sailors. Both were first visited in 1633 by the Dutch explorer, Van Diemen, and were annexed by France in 1843. They are both extinct volcanoes. The only inhabitants are at Base Martin de Vivies (est. 1949 on Amsterdam Island), including several scientific research stations, a hospital, communication and other facilities (20 members). Crayfish are caught commercially on Amsterdam.

Terre Adélie Comprises that section of the Antarctic continent between 136° and 142° E. long., south of 60° S. lat. The ice-covered plateau has an area of about 432,000 sq. km (166,800 sq. miles), and was discovered in 1840 by Dumont d'Urville. A research station (27 members) is situated at Base Dumont d'Urville, which is maintained by the French Institute for Polar Research and Technology.

WALLIS AND FUTUNA

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

French dependencies since 1842, the inhabitants of these islands voted on 22 Dec. 1959 by 4,307 votes out of 4,576 in favour of exchanging their status to that of an overseas territory, which took effect from 29 July 1961.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The territory comprises two groups of islands in the central Pacific (total area 240 sq. km, census population 14,166 in 1996). The projected population for 2000 was 15,000. The Îles de Hoorn lie 255 km northeast of the Fiji Islands and consist of two main islands: Futuna (64 sq. km, 5,000 inhabitants) and uninhabited Alofi (51 sq. km). The Wallis Archipelago lies another 160 km further northeast, and has an area of 159 sq. km (9,000 inhabitants). It comprises the main island of Uvéa (60 sq. km) and neighbouring uninhabited islands, with a surrounding coral reef. The capital is Mata-Utu (over 1,000 inhabitants in 1996) on Uvéa. Wallisian and Futunian are distinct Polynesian languages.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Estimates per 1,000 population, 1998: birth rate, 23·0; death rate, 4·8.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

A Prefect represents the French government and carries out the duties of head of the territory, assisted by a 20-member Territorial Assembly directly elected for a five-year term, and a six-member Territorial Council, comprising the three traditional chiefs and three nominees of the Prefect agreed by the Territorial Assembly. The territory is represented by one deputy in the French National Assembly, by one senator in the Senate, and by one member on the Economic and Social Council. There are three districts: Singave and Alo (both on Futuna), and Wallis; in each, tribal kings exercise customary powers assisted by ministers and district and village chiefs.

RECENT ELECTIONS

Territorial Assembly elections were held on 16 March 1997 and 6 Sept. 1998. In three of the five constituencies, elections had to be repeated after allegations of fraud. Official results are unavailable but it is generally agreed that right-wing candidates won around 14 seats while socialist and left-wing candidates won around 6.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

Chief Administrator: Christian Job.

President of the Territorial Assembly: Victor Brial (RPR).

ECONOMY

Currency. The unit of currency is the franc CFP (XPF), with a parity of 119·3317422 francs CPF to the euro.

Budget. The budget for 1997 balanced at 120,100m. French francs.

Banking and Finance. There is a branch of Banque Indosuez at Mata-Utu.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Electricity. There is a thermal power station at Mata-Utu.

Agriculture. The chief products are bananas, coconuts, copra, cassava, yams and taro.

Livestock (1996): 25,000 pigs; 7,000 goats.

Fisheries. The catch in 1999 was estimated at 206 tonnes.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. There are about 100 km of roads on Uvéa.

Civil Aviation. There is an airport on Wallis, at Hihifo, and another near Alo on Futuna. Five flights a week link Wallis and Futuna. Air Calédonie International operates two flights a week to Nouméa and one a week to French Polynesia.

Shipping. A regular cargo service links Mata-Utu (Wallis) and Singave (Futuna) with Nouméa (New Caledonia). In 1998 merchant shipping totalled 111,000 GRT.

Telecommunications. There were 1,400 main telephone lines in 1997.

Postal Services. There were six post offices in 1986.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. There is a court of first instance, from which appeals can be made to the court of appeal in New Caledonia.

Religion. The majority of the population is Roman Catholic.

Education. In 1993 there were 3,624 pupils in primary schools and 1,777 in secondary schools. The South Pacific University Institute for Teacher Training, founded in 1992 (part of the French University of the Pacific, UFP) has three colleges: in Wallis and Futuna, French Polynesia and Nouméa (New Caledonia), where it is headquartered.

Health. In 1991 there was 1 hospital with 60 beds, and 4 dispensaries.

CULTURE

Broadcasting. There were two radio stations in 1986.

DEPENDENCIES

BASSAS DA INDIA

Île Bassas da India

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS
The island was annexed by France in 1897. Its present status, an entity administered by France but not part of any other French territory, was established in 1960. The island is claimed by Madagascar.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION
Bassas da India is an uninhabited Indian Ocean atoll surrounded by reefs. It lies 380 km west of Madagascar and 460 km from the African mainland, and covers an area of 0·2 sq. km. The entire surface of the atoll is made of volcanic rock. Most of the island is submerged under water at high tide.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT
The island is administered from St Denis, in Réunion, although it is not legally part of that territory.

CLIPPERTON ISLAND

Île Clipperton

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS
In the 18th century the island was the hideout of a pirate, John Clipperton, for whom it was named. In 1855 it was claimed by France, and in 1897 by Mexico. It was awarded to France by international arbitration in 1935.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION
Clipperton Island is a Pacific atoll, 3 km long, some 1,120 km south-west of the coast of Mexico. It covers an area of 7 sq. km and is uninhabited.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT
The island is administered from Papeete, in French Polynesia, although it is not legally part of that territory.

ECONOMY
The island is occasionally visited by tuna fishermen.

EUROPA ISLAND

Île Europa

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS
The island was annexed by France in 1897. Its present status, an entity administered by France but not part of any other French territory, was established in 1960. The island is claimed by Madagascar.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION
The island, which lies 350 km west of Madagascar, is low and flat. It covers an area of 28 sq. km. There is no permanent population, although there is a small French military garrison and a meteorological station.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT
The island is administered from St Denis, in Réunion, although it is not legally part of that territory.

GLORIEUSES ISLANDS

Îles Glorieuses

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The islands were claimed by France in 1892. Their present status, an entity administered by France but not part of any other French territory, was established in 1960. The islands are claimed by Madagascar.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The Glorieuses Islands (also known as Glorioso) are two lush tropical islands, Ile du Lys and Grande Glorieuse, plus a number of rocky outcrops, Les Rochers. The group lies between Madagascar and Mayotte and have an area of 5 sq. km. There is no permanent population although there is a French military garrison, a meteorological station and a radio station on Grande Glorieuse.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The islands are administered from St Denis, in Réunion, although they are not legally part of that territory.

JUAN DE NOVA ISLAND

Île Juan de Nova

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The island was discovered by a 15th century Spanish navigator for whom it was named. In 1897 it was claimed by France. Its present status, an entity administered by France but not part of any other French territory, was established in 1960. The island is claimed by Madagascar.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Situated in the Mozambique Channel between Madagascar and Mozambique, the island has an area of 4·4 sq. km. There is no permanent population although there is a small French military garrison that runs a meteorological station. There is also a small civilian workforce to mine the island’s guano.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The island is administered from St Denis, in Réunion, although it is not legally part of that territory.

ECONOMY

About 12,000 tonnes of guano are mined annually and are taken to the jetty on what is probably the world’s shortest railway system.

TROMELIN ISLAND

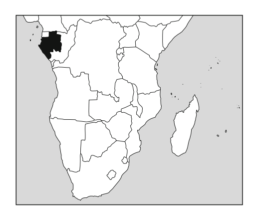
Île Tromelin

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The island was explored by French navigators in 1776. In 1814 it was claimed by France and annexed to Réunion. Its present status, an entity administered by France but not part of any other French territory, was established in 1960. The island is claimed by Madagascar.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Tromelin, which is 535 km north-west of Réunion, covers an area of 1 sq. km. There is no permanent population although there is a meteorological station.



CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The island is administered from St Denis, in Réunion, although it is not legally part of that territory.

GABON

République Gabonaise

Capital: Libreville
Population estimate, 2000: 1·23m.
GDP per capita, 2000: (PPP$) 6,237
HDI/world rank: 0·637/117

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Between the 16th and 18th centuries, the Fang and other peoples in the region of present-day Gabon were part of a federation of chiefdoms. The country's capital, Libreville, grew from a settlement of slaves who were rescued from captivity by the French in 1849. Colonized by France around this period, the territory was annexed to French Congo in 1888. There was resistance by the indigenous people between 1905 and 1911 to the depredations of colonial rule, but the country became a separate colony in 1910 as one of the four territories of French Equatorial Africa. Gabon became an autonomous republic within the French Community on 28 Nov. 1958 and achieved independence on 17 Aug. 1960.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Gabon is bounded in the west by the Atlantic Ocean, north by Equatorial Guinea and Cameroon and east and south by the Republic of the Congo. The area covers 267,667 sq. km. Its population at the 1993 census was 1,014,976; density, 3·8 per sq. km. In 1999, 80·3% of the population were urban. 1997 estimate, 1,190,000; density, 4·4 per sq. km.

The UN gives a projected population for 2010 of 1·57m.

The capital is Libreville (523,000 inhabitants, 1999 estimate), other large towns (1993 census) being Port-Gentil (80,841), Franceville (30,246), Oyem (22,669) and Moanda (21,921).

Provincial areas, populations (in 1,000) and capitals:

Province	Area in Sq. km	Population 1993 census	Capital
Estuaire	20,740	463,187	Libreville
Haut-Ogooué	36,547	104,301	Masuku
Moyen-Ogooué	18,535	42,316	Lambaréné
Ngounié	37,750	77,781	Mouila

The climate is equatorial, with high temperatures and considerable rainfall. Mid-May to mid-Sept. is the long dry season, followed by a short rainy season, then a dry season again from mid-Dec. to mid-Feb., and finally a long rainy season once more. Libreville, Jan. 80°F (26·7°C), July 75°F (23·9°C). Annual rainfall 99" (2,510 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

On 21 March 1997 the government presented to the Parliament legislation aimed at reforming the constitution in a number of key areas: notably, the bill mandated the creation of a Vice-President of the Republic, the extension of the presidential term of office from five to seven years, and the transformation of the Senate into an Upper Chamber of Parliament. The bicameral Chambers of Parliament consist of 120 members of the National Assembly and 91 members of the Senate. At a referendum on electoral reform on 23 July 1995, 96·48% of votes cast were in favour; turn-out was 63·45%. The 1991 Constitution provides for an Executive President directly elected for a five-year term (renewable once only). The head of government is the Prime Minister who appoints a Council of Ministers. The unicameral National Assembly consists of 120 members, directly elected for a five-year term. There is constitutional provision for the formation of an upper house.

National Anthem. 'Uni dans la concorde' ('United in concord'); words and tune by G. Damas.

ECONOMY

Agriculture accounted for 7·2% of GDP in 1998, industry 60·3% and services 32·5%. Only in Equatorial Guinea did industry contribute a greater share.

Overview. The Economic and Social Council was established in 1993 to advise the Council of Ministers. It comprises representatives of central government, local government, employers' groups, trade unions and other interest groups. Five-year development plans, of which there were five after 1966, have been replaced by three-year rolling investment plans.

Currency. The unit of currency is the franc CFA (XAF) with a parity of 655·957 francs CFA to one euro. Foreign exchange reserves were US$38m. in April 2002 and total money supply was 343,048m. francs CFA. Gold reserves were 13,000 troy oz in June 2002. Inflation was 2·1% in 2001.

Budget. In 1996 revenue was an estimated US$1·5bn. and expenditure US$1·3bn.

Performance. Gabon experienced a recession in 1999 and 2000, with the economy shrinking by 8·9% and 1·9% respectively. A slight recovery followed in 2001, with growth of 2·4%. Total GDP in 2001 was US$4·3bn.

Banking and Finance. The Banque des États de l'Afrique Centrale (Governor, Jean-Félix Mamalepot) is the bank of issue. There are nine commercial banks. The Banque Gabonaise de Développement and the Union Gabonaise de Banque are Gabonese-controlled.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Environment. According to the World Bank Atlas Gabon's carbon dioxide emissions in 1998 were the equivalent of 2·4 tonnes per capita.

Electricity. Installed capacity was 301,000 kW in 1992. The semi-public Société d'energie et d'eau du Gabon produced 1·02bn. kWh in 1998 (approximately 72% of which was from hydro-electric). Consumption per capita was 749 kWh in 1998.

Oil and Gas. Proven oil reserves (2001), 2·5bn. bbls. Production, 1996, 135m. bbls. Natural gas production (1997) was 26 petajoules.

Minerals. There are an estimated 200m. tonnes of manganese ore and 850m. tonnes of iron ore deposits; proven reserves of uranium, 35,000 tonnes. Gold, zinc and phosphates also occur. Output, 1996: manganese ore, 1·98m. tonnes; uranium (1999), 294 tonnes.

Agriculture. There were 325,000 ha of arable land in 1998 and 170,000 ha of permanent crops. The major crops (estimated production, 2000, in 1,000 tonnes) are: plantains, 280; cassava, 225; sugarcane, 176; yams, 150; taro, 59; maize, 31; groundnuts, 17; bananas, 12. Other important products include palm oil, sweet potatoes and soybeans.

Livestock (2000): 36,000 cattle, 198,000 sheep, 91,000 goats, 213,000 pigs.

Forestry. Equatorial forests covered 17·86m. ha in 1995, or 69·3% of the total land area (down from 71·1% in 1990). Timber production in 1999 was 5·4m. cu. metres.

In 2002 President Bongo announced that a tenth of the country would be transformed into 13 national parks covering nearly 30,000 sq. km. Gabon is likely to need US$85m. over a seven-year period to build the national parks.

Fisheries. In 1992 there were 14 fishing vessels over 100 GRT, totalling 2,141 GRT. Industrial fleets account for about 25% of the catch. The catch in 1999 was 52,882 tonnes, of which 44,882 tonnes were from marine waters.

INDUSTRY

Most manufacturing is based on the processing of food (particularly sugar), timber and mineral resources, cement and chemical production and oil refining. Production figures (1997) in 1,000 tonnes: residual fuel oil, 285; distillate fuel oil, 230; kerosene, 81; cement (1996), 185; sugar (1998), 17; beer (1995), 81·6m. litres; soft drinks (1995), 41·6m. litres.

Labour. The workforce in 1996 numbered 519,000 (56% males). Around 60% of the economically active population are engaged in agriculture. In 1993 the legal minimum monthly wage was 1,200 francs CFA. There is a 40-hour working week.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Foreign debt was US$3,995m. in 2000. The government retains the right to participate in foreign investment in oil and mineral extraction.

Imports and Exports. In 1999 imports (f.o.b.) totalled US$910·5m. and exports (f.o.b.) US$2,498·8m. The main exports in 1994 were worth, in millions of francs CFA: crude oil and natural gas, 1,004,387 (accounting for 74% of exports); timber and wood products, 195,677; manganese, 62,434; uranium, 20,069. Imports are mainly industrial goods. Main export markets, 1996: USA, 64·1%; France, 7·6%; China, 4·3%. Main import suppliers, 1996: France, 42·8%; USA, 10·4%; Japan, 6·0%.

THE GAMBIA

Republic of The Gambia

Capital: Banjul
Population estimate, 2000: 1·30m.
GDP per capita, 2000: (PPP$) 1,649
HDI/world rank: 0·405/160

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The Gambia was discovered by the early Portuguese navigators, but they did not settle. During the 17th century companies of merchants obtained trading charters and established a settlement on the river, which, from 1807, was controlled from Sierra Leone. The Gambia became an independent member of the Commonwealth on 18 Feb. 1965 and a republic within the Commonwealth on 24 April 1970.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The Gambia takes its name from the River Gambia, and consists of a strip of territory never wider than 10 km on both banks. It is bounded in the west by the Atlantic Ocean and on all other sides by Senegal. The area is 10,689 sq. km, including 2,077 sq. km of inland water. Population (census, 1993), 1,025,867. Estimate, 1995, 1,087,000; density, 102 per sq. km. In 1999, 68·2% of the population were rural.

The UN gives a projected population for 2010 of 1·63m.

The largest ethnic group is the Mandingo, followed by the Wolofs, Fulas, Jolas and Sarahuley. The country is administratively divided into the capital, Banjul (1999 estimate, 229,000), and the surrounding urban area, Kombo St Mary (1993 census, 228,214), plus five other administrative divisions in the rural areas.

The five rural divisions, with their areas, populations and chief towns are (listed west to east, or upriver):

Division	Area in sq. km	Population 1993 census	Chief town
Western	1,764	234,917	Brikama
North Bank	2,256	156,462	Kerewan/Farafenni
Lower River	1,618	65,146	Soma
Central River	2,894	156,021	Jangjangbureh
Upper River	2,069	155,059	Basse

The official language is English.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

1995 births, 46,000; deaths, 20,000. 1995 birth rate per 1,000 population, 41·6; death rate, 18·3. Annual population growth rate, 1990–99, 3·6%. Expectation of life, 1999, was 44·5 years for males and 47·3 for females. Fertility rate, 1999, 5·1 births per woman; infant mortality, 1999, 61 per 1,000 live births. The Gambia has made some of the best progress in recent years in reducing child mortality. The number of deaths per 1,000 live births among children under five was reduced from around 130 in 1990 to approximately 80 in 1999.

CLIMATE

The climate is characterized by two very different seasons. The dry season lasts from Nov. to May, when precipitation is very light and humidity moderate. Days are warm but nights quite cool. The SW monsoon is likely to set in with spectacular storms and produces considerable rainfall from July to Oct., with increased humidity. Banjul, Jan. 73°F (22·8°C), July 80°F (26·7°C). Annual rainfall 52" (1,295 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The 1970 constitution provided for an executive President elected directly for renewable five-year terms. The then President appoints a Vice-President who is the government's chief minister. The single-chamber House of Assembly has 51 members: 36 elected, 8 nominated (these are from different fields of work and are selected by the Head of State), 5 Head Chief members (nominated by the Head of State), the Attorney-General and the Speaker (both of whom are nominated).

A referendum of 8 Aug. 1996 approved a new constitution by 70·4% of votes cast. Under this the number of seats in parliament, now the National Assembly, is increased to 45 directly elected members and four nominated MPs, and the ban on political parties imposed in July 1994 is lifted. Members of the ruling Military Council resigned from their military positions before joining the Alliance for Patriotic Reorientation and Construction (APRC).

National Anthem. 'For The Gambia, our homeland'; words by V. J. Howe, tune traditional.

RECENT ELECTIONS

Presidential elections were held on 18 Oct. 2001. President Jammeh was re-elected against four opponents with 53·0% of votes cast. Turn-out was 89·9%.

Parliamentary elections were held on 17 Jan. 2002. The Alliance for Patriotic Reorientation and Construction (APRC) won 45 seats (33 of which were unopposed because of boycotting by opposition parties), the People's Democratic Organization for Independence and Socialism 2, and the National Reconciliation Party 1.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

President: Rtd Col. Yahya Jammeh; b. 1965 (APRC; seized power 22 July 1994; elected 26 Sept. 1996 and re-elected in 2001).

In March 2003 the government comprised:

Vice-President: Isatou Njie Saidy.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The independent Georgian Social Democratic Republic was declared on 26 May 1918 and was recognized by the Russian Soviet Federal Socialist Republic on 7 May 1920. In 1936 the Georgian Soviet Socialist Republic became one of the constituent republics of the USSR. Following nationalist successes at elections in Oct. 1990, the Supreme Soviet resolved on a transition to full independence and on 9 April 1991 unanimously declared the republic an independent state. President Zviad Gamsakhurdia was deposed by armed insurrection on 6 Jan. 1992 and a military council took control. After elections in which he gained 95% of votes cast, Eduard Shevardnadze became de facto head of state in Oct. 1992. On 22 Oct. 1993 Georgia joined the CIS. Supporters of the deposed president Gamsakhurdia were in intermittent conflict with the government, mainly in Mingrelia, but suffered heavy defeats once Russian support became available via the CIS. Ethnic conflict has been rife in the two autonomous republics of South Ossetia and Abhkazia. Civil war broke out with South Ossetia in 1990 and Abhkazia in 1992 and 1998, leading to thousands of refugees. Georgia has since moved closer to the West but economic reforms have been slow in coming and industry and agriculture are both in need of investment.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Georgia is bounded in the west by the Black Sea and south by Turkey, Armenia and Azerbaijan. Area, 69,700 sq. km (26,900 sq. miles). Its population in 1997 was estimated to be 5,316,000 (2,536,000 male); density, 76 per sq. km.

The UN gives a projected population for 2010 of 4·96m.

In 1999, 60·2% of the population lived in urban areas. The capital is Tbilisi (1999 population estimate, 1·31m.). Other important towns are Kutaisi (240,000; 1997), Rustavi (158,000; 1997), Batumi (136,000; 1991), Sukhumi (121,000; 1991), Poti (54,000; 1991), Gori (59,000; 1991).

Georgians accounted for 70·1% of the 1989 census population of 5,400,841; others included 8·1% Armenians, 6·3% Russians, 5·7% Azerbaijanis, 3% Ossetians, 1·9% Greeks, 1·8% Abkhazians and 1% Ukrainians. Georgia includes the Autonomous Republics of Abkhazia and Adjaria and the former Autonomous Region of South Ossetia.

Georgian is the official language. Armenian, Russian and Azeri are also spoken.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

1998 births, 57,300; deaths, 41,600. Rates, 1998 estimates: birth, 11·3 per 1,000 population; death, 8·2 per 1,000. Annual population growth rate, 1990–99, –1·0%. Life expectancy, 1999, 68·8 years for males and 77·0 years for females. Infant mortality, 1999, 19 per 1,000 live births; fertility rate, 1999, 1·9 births per woman.

CLIMATE

The Georgian climate is extremely varied. The relatively small territory covers different climatic zones, ranging from humid sub-tropical zones to permanent snow and glaciers. In Tbilisi summer is hot: 25–35°C. Nov. sees the beginning of the Georgian winter and the temperature in Tbilisi can drop to –8°C; however, average temperature ranges from 2–6°C.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

A new Constitution of 24 Aug. 1995 defines Georgia as a presidential republic with federal elements. The head of state is the President, elected by universal suffrage for not more than two five-year terms. The 235-member parliament is elected by a system combining 85 single-member districts with proportional representation based on party lists. There is a 5% threshold.

National Anthem. 'Dideba zetsit kurtheuls' ('Praise be to the Heavenly Bestower of Blessings'); words anonymous, tune by K. Potskhverashvili.

RECENT ELECTIONS

At the presidential election held on 9 April 2000 incumbent Eduard Shevardnadze was re-elected President with 79·8% of votes cast against five opponents. His nearest rival was Dzhumber Patiashvili who polled 16·7%.

At the parliamentary elections of 31 Oct. and 14 Nov. 1999 the ruling Citizens' Union won 41·7% of the vote (130 of the 235 seats) while Revival, the main opposition, obtained 25·2% (64 seats). Turn-out was 67·6%.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

DEFENCE

The total strength of the Armed Forces consists of 26,300 personnel. In 1999 some 5,000 Russian troops and 1,500 peacekeeping forces were stationed in Georgia. The UN has some 100 observers from 22 countries.

Defence expenditure in 2000 totalled US$116m. (US$23 per capita), representing 2·5% of GDP.

Army. The Army totals 12,600 although a force of 24,000 is planned. In addition there are 250,000 reservists and a paramilitary border guard estimated at 6,500.

Navy. Former Soviet facilities at Poti have been taken over. Personnel, 1999, 750.

Air Force. Personnel, 1999, 2,400. Equipment includes Su-17 and Su-25 fighter-bombers.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

Georgia is a member of the UN, WTO, CIS, NATO Partnership for Peace, Council of Europe, OSCE, WTO, BSEC and IOM.

ECONOMY

In 1998 agriculture accounted for 26·0% of GDP in 1998, industry 15·8% and services 58·2%.

Overview. A privatization programme was inaugurated in 1995.

Currency. The unit of currency is the lari (GEL) of 100 tetri, which replaced coupons at 1 lari = 1m. coupons on 25 Sept. 1995. Inflation was 4·7% in 2001, having been 163% in 1995 and 15,606% in 1994. Gold reserves are negligible. Total money supply was 394m. laris in June 2002.

Budget. Government revenue and expenditure (in 1m. laris):

	1997	1998	1999	2000
Revenue	568·8	591·4	674·6	625·9
Expenditure	788·7	761·5	849·1	737·7

Performance. Real GDP growth was 3·0% in 1999, 2·0% in 2000 and 4·5% in 2001. In both 1996 and 1997 growth had exceeded 10%, but prior to that the economy had suffered a sharp downturn, contracting by 45% in 1992, 29% in 1993 and 10% in 1994. Total GDP was US$3·1bn. in 2001.

Between 1990 and 1996 the average annual real growth in GNP per capita was –19·3% (the lowest of any country in the world).

Banking and Finance. The Governor of the Central Bank is Irakli Managadze. In 1996 there were 65 commercial banks. One foreign bank had a representative office.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Environment. According to the World Bank Atlas carbon dioxide emissions in Georgia were the equivalent of 1·0 tonnes per capita in 1998.

Electricity. The many fast-flowing rivers provide an important hydro-electric resource. Installed capacity was 5m. kW in 1997. Production in 1998 was 6·96bn. kWh; consumption per capita in 1998 was 1,257 kWh.

Oil and Gas. Output (1996) of crude petroleum, 3m. bbls.; natural gas (1995 estimate), 3·3m. cu. metres (excluding Abkhazia and South Ossetia). A 920 km long oil pipeline is under construction from an offshore Azerbaijani oil field in the Caspian Sea across Azerbaijan and Georgia to a new oil terminal at Supsa, near Poti, on the Black Sea Coast. The US$600m. pipeline started pumping oil in early 1999 and will have an ultimate capacity of some 15m. tonnes of oil a year. The pipeline allowed Georgia to create 25,000 new jobs. However, Georgia is still heavily dependent on Russia for natural gas. Accords for the construction of a second oil pipeline through Georgia and a gas pipeline were signed in Nov. 1999, to take oil from Azerbaijan to Turkey via Georgia and gas from Turkmenistan to Turkey via Azerbaijan and Georgia. Work on the oil pipeline, which is expected to become operational in 2005, began in Sept. 2002.

Minerals. Manganese deposits are calculated at 250m. tonnes. Other important minerals are coal, barytes, clays, gold, diatomite shale, agate, marble, alabaster, iron and other ores, building stone, arsenic, molybdenum, tungsten and mercury. Output of coal in 1996 was estimated to be 20,000 tonnes (excluding Abkhazia and South Ossetia).

Agriculture. Agriculture plays an important part in Georgia's economy, contributing 26·1% of GDP in 1998. In 1998 there were 781,000 ha of arable land and 285,000 ha permanent crops.

Output of main agricultural products (in 1,000 tonnes) in 2000: potatoes, 480; tomatoes, 325; maize, 225; grapes, 200; cabbages, 125; wine, 116; apples, 115; wheat, 84; watermelons (including melons, pumpkins and squash), 70.

Livestock, 2000: cattle, 1,122,000; sheep, 560,000; pigs, 411,000; chickens, 8m. Livestock products, 2000 (in 1,000 tonnes): meat, 105; milk, 721; eggs, 24.

Forestry. There were 2·99m. ha of forest in 1995, or 42·9% of the total land area.

Fisheries. The catch in 1999 was 1,500 tonnes, down from 147,688 tonnes in 1989.

INDUSTRY

Industry accounted for 9·8% of GDP in 1998. There is a metallurgical plant and a motor works. There are factories for processing tea, creameries and breweries. There are also textile and silk industries.

Production in 1995 (in tonnes): steel (1997), 103,000; fertilizer (1993), 60,000; cement (1997), 91,000; processed meat (1993), 700,000; textiles (1993), 16·6m. cu. metres; footwear (1994), 200,000 pairs; cigarettes (1997), 918m. units.

Labour. The total labour force in 1996 was 2·2m. (54% males). The unemployment rate was 5·6% in 1999. Approximately 500,000 Georgians, or a tenth of the population, work in Russia, but in Dec. 2000 Russia began requiring Georgians to have a visa to visit the country.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Total foreign debt was US$1,633m. in 2000. The debt was mainly as a result of the importing of natural gas from Turkmenistan.

Imports and Exports. In 2000 Georgian exports (f.o.b.) amounted to US$459·0m. and imports (f.o.b.) US$970·5m. Major commodities imported are fuel, grain and other foods, machinery and parts, and transport equipment. Major commodities for export are iron and steel products, food and beverages, machinery, textiles and chemicals. Main export markets, 1997: Russia, 27·4%; Turkey, 20·0%; Azerbaijan, 10·0%; Armenia, 7·6%. Main import suppliers, 1997: Russia, 15·2%; Azerbaijan, 12·3%; Turkey, 11·9%; USA, 7·4%.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. There were 20,700 km of roads in 1996 (19,355 km hard-surfaced). An estimated 427,000 passenger cars were in use in 1996 (79·7 per 1,000 inhabitants).

Rail. Total length is 1,583 km of 1,520 mm gauge (1,483 km electrified). In 1994 railways carried 2·7m. tonnes of freight and 9·8m. passengers.

Civil Aviation. The main airport is at Tbilisi (Novo-Alexeyevka). There are four Georgian air carriers—Georgian Airlines, Georgian Airways, Airzena Georgian Airlines and Air Georgia. In 1998 Georgian Airlines operated international flights to Adler/Sochi, Athens, Frankfurt, Kyiv, Moscow, Prague, Rostov, St Petersburg, Tel Aviv, Thessaloniki and Volgograd; Georgian Airways had international flights to Atyrau, Delhi, London and Tehran; Airzena Georgian Airlines had flights to Dubai, Tashkent and Vienna; Air Georgia had flights to Frankfurt and Moscow. In 2000 Tbilisi airport handled 271,820 passengers (270,011 on international flights) and 7,529 tonnes of freight.

Shipping. In 1998 sea-going shipping totalled 118,000 GRT, of which oil tankers accounted for 73,000 GRT.

Telecommunications. There were 757,500 telephone main lines in 2000, or 138·6 per 1,000 persons. Mobile phone subscribers numbered 60,000 in 1998 and there were 500 fax machines in 1995. In Dec. 1999 there were 20,000 Internet users.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. The population in penal institutions in May 1997 was 7,900 (145 per 100,000 of national population). The death penalty was abolished in 1997.

Religion. The Georgian Orthodox Church has its own organization under Catholicos (patriarch) Ilya II who is resident in Tbilisi.

Education. In 1996 there were 1,332 pre-primary schools with 10,491 teachers for 81,938 pupils. In 1996–97 there were 3,201 primary schools with 16,542 teachers for 293,325 pupils. There were 444,058 pupils at secondary level and, in 1996, 155,033 students at 76 technical colleges and 23 institutions of higher education. There is one university and one technical university, with a total of 34,590 students and 6,464 academic staff. Adult literacy rate in 1998 was over 99%.

Health. Georgia had 29,900 doctors and 57,100 hospital beds in 1994.

Welfare. In 1994 there were 804,000 age and 355,000 other pensioners.

CULTURE

Broadcasting. The government-controlled Georgian Radio broadcasts two national and three regional programmes, and a foreign service, Radio Georgia (English, Russian). There are local independent TV stations in ten towns (colour by SECAM V). In 1997 there were 3·02m. radio receivers and 2·57m. TV receivers.

Press. In 1995 there were 25 dailies and weeklies.

Tourism. Investment in tourism has increased substantially in recent years, and large numbers of hotels have been built. In 1999 there were 384,000 foreign tourists bringing in receipts of US$400m.

ABKHAZIA

Area, 8,600 sq. km (3,320 sq. miles); population (Jan. 1990), 537,500. Capital Sukhumi (1990 population, 121,700). This area, the ancient Colchis, saw the establishment of a West Georgian kingdom in the 4th century and a Russian protectorate in 1810. In March 1921 a congress of local Soviets proclaimed it a Soviet Republic, and its status as an Autonomous Republic, within Georgia, was confirmed on 17 April 1930 and again by the Georgian Constitution of 1995.

Ethnic groups (1989 census) Georgians, 45·7%; Abkhazians, 17·8%; Armenians, 14·6%; and Russians, 14·3%.

In July 1992 the Abkhazian parliament declared sovereignty under the presidency of Vladislav Ardzinba and the restoration of its 1925 constitution. Fighting broke out as Georgian forces moved into Abkhazia. On 3 Sept. and on 19 Nov. ceasefires were agreed, but fighting continued into 1993 and by Sept. Georgian forces were driven out. On 15 May 1994 Georgian and Abkhazian delegates under Russian auspices signed an agreement on a ceasefire and deployment of 2,500 Russian troops as a peacekeeping force. On 26 Nov. 1994 parliament adopted a new Constitution proclaiming Abkhazian sovereignty. CIS economic sanctions were imposed in Jan. 1996. Parliamentary elections were held on 23 Nov. 1996. Neither the constitution nor the elections were recognized by the Georgian government or the international community. Fighting flared up between rival militia forces again in May 1998 after Abkhazian forces ejected thousands of ethnic Mingrelian and Georgian refugees who had returned to the southern Abkhazian region of Gali. After the fighting in 1998, the worst in five years, both sides declared a ceasefire. Up to 20,000 Georgians lost their homes. Abkhazia has expressed a desire to join the Russian Federation, but Russia is wary of the request.

Abkhazia, and notably Sukhumi, the capital, have seen living standards plunge dramatically. There are no Internet links, no mobile phones and no hotels. There is very little work and practically no money.

Head of the Separatist Government. Vladislav Ardzinba (elected by parliament on 26 Nov. 1994).

The republic has coal, electric power, building materials and light industries. In 1985 there were 89 collective farms and 56 state farms; main crops are tobacco, tea, grapes, oranges, tangerines and lemons. Crop area 43,900 ha.

Livestock, 1 Jan. 1987: 147,300 cattle, 127,900 pigs, 28,800 sheep and goats.

In 1990–91 there were 16,700 children attending pre-school institutions. There is a university at Sukhumi with 3,000 students and 270 academic staff in 1995–96. In 1990 there were 2,100 students at colleges and 7,700 students at other institutions of higher education.

In Jan. 1990 there were 2,500 doctors and 6,600 junior medical personnel.

ADJARIA

Area, 2,900 sq. km (1,160 sq. miles); population: 396,400. Capital, Batumi (1990 population, 137,300). Adjaria fell under Turkish rule in the 17th century, and was annexed to Russia (rejoining Georgia) after the Berlin Treaty of 1878. On 16 July 1921 the territory was constituted as an Autonomous Republic within the Georgian SSR, a status confirmed by the Georgian Constitution of 1995.

Ethnic groups (1989 census): Georgians, 82·8%; Russians, 7·7%; and Armenians 4%.

Chairman of the Supreme Council of Adjaria. Aslan Abashidze.

Elections were held in Sept. 1996. A coalition of the Citizens' Union of Georgia and the All-Georgian Union of Revival gained a majority of seats.

Adjaria specializes in sub-tropical agricultural products. These include tea, citruses, bamboo, eucalyptus, tobacco, etc. Livestock (Jan. 1990): 112,300 cattle, 6,200 pigs, 7,000 sheep and goats. In 1980 there were 69 collective farms and 21 state farms.

There is a port and a shipyard at Batumi, oil-refining, food-processing and canning factories, clothing, building materials, pharmaceutical factories, etc.

The population is almost exclusively Sunni Muslim.

In 1990–91, 77,239 pupils were engaged in study at all levels.

In Jan. 1990 there were 1,700 doctors and 4,400 junior medical personnel.

SOUTH OSSETIA

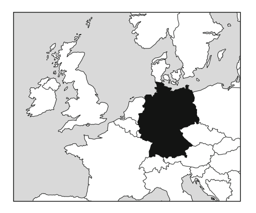
Area, 3,900 sq. km (1,505 sq. miles); population (Jan. 1990), 99,800 (ethnic groups at the 1989 census; Ossetians 66·2% and Georgians 29%). Capital, Tskhinvali (34,000). This area was populated by Ossetians from across the Caucasus (North Ossetia), driven out by the Mongols in the 13th century. The region was set up within the Georgian SSR on 20 April 1922. Formerly an Autonomous Region, its administrative autonomy was abolished by the Georgian Supreme Soviet on 11 Dec. 1990, and it has been named the Tskhinvali Region.

Fighting broke out in 1990 between insurgents wishing to unite with North Ossetia (in the Russian Federation) and Georgian forces. By a Russo-Georgian agreement of July 1992 Russian peacekeeping forces moved into a seven-km buffer zone between South Ossetia and Georgia pending negotiations. An OSCE peacekeeping force has been deployed since 1992.

At elections not recognized by the Georgian government on 10 Nov. 1996, Lyudvig Chibirov was elected president. Though maintaining a commitment to independence, President Chibirov came to a political agreement with the Georgian government in 1996 that neither force nor sanctions should be applied.

Presidential elections in Dec. 2001 were won by Eduard Kokoev.

Main industries are mining, timber, electrical engineering and building materials. Crop area, chiefly grains, was 21,600 ha in 1985; other pursuits are sheep-farming (128,500 sheep and goats on 1 Jan. 1987) and vine-growing. There were 14 collective farms and 18 state farms in 1985.



In 1989–90 there were 21,200 pupils in elementary and secondary schools. There were 6,525 children in pre-school institutions.

In Jan. 1987 there were 511 doctors and 1,400 hospital beds.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

At the outbreak of the Napoleonic wars Germany consisted of many small states, independent but loosely bound by a common allegiance to the Holy Roman Emperor, a title which for most of its history fell to the Austrian royal house of Hapsburg. In 1806 the Holy Roman Empire was destroyed by Napoleon who then combined 16 German states as the Confederation of the Rhine. Following Napoleon's defeat in 1815, a larger Confederation was formed with 38 members (39 after 1817). Austria remained the dominant power with a permanent right to the presidency. Prussia held the vice-presidency.

In 1848–50 attempts were made to draw up a constitution but the parliament which sat from 20 March to 29 April 1850 was neither recognized by Austria nor powerful enough to control the other dominant state, Prussia. The Federal Diet therefore resumed power and held it until 1866. In 1866 Prussia defeated Austria and formed the North German Confederation under her own control.

In 1870 Prussia went to war with France, rallied the German states in support and, following German victory, went on to the creation of the German Empire in 1871. The Empire included all German states except Austria and had, therefore, deep North-South, Protestant-Catholic divisions. It was dominated by Prussia, whose king became emperor. The imperial government led Germany into the First World War in 1914 and when defeated, national unity collapsed. The emperor abdicated on 28 Nov. 1918.

After an anarchic period a republican government attempted to restore the economy and political stability. But the onset of world depression and the loss of resources and territory through warfare were too much for the fledgling government to manage. In 1933 the National Socialist leader Adolf Hitler was appointed Chancellor. The National Socialist ('Nazi') party appealed to national pride and offered a return to self-respect after humiliation. Hitler became president of the Third Reich in 1934. Hitler's expansionism led to his annexation of Austria and of German-speaking Czechoslovakia (the Sudetenland) in 1938. In March 1939 he invaded Poland, attempting to restore the authority exercised there by Prussia before 1918. This precipitated the Second World War.

The War ended in German defeat in 1945. The Allied forces occupied Germany; the UK, the USA and France holding the west and the USSR the east. By the Berlin Declaration of 5 June 1945 these governments assumed authority; each was given a zone of occupation, and the zone commanders-in-chief together made up the Allied Control Council in Berlin. The area of Greater Berlin was also divided into four sectors.

By 1948 it had become clear that there would be no agreement between the occupying powers as to the future of Germany. Accordingly, the western allies united their zones into one unit. In protest, the USSR withdrew from the Allied Control Council, blockaded Berlin until May 1949, and consolidated control of eastern Germany, establishing the German Democratic Republic. A People's Council appointed in 1948 drew up a constitution which came into force in Oct. 1949, providing for a communist state of five Länder with a centrally-planned economy. In 1952 the government made a division between its own territory and that of the Federal Republic, with a three-mile cordon fenced and guarded along the frontier. Berlin was closed as a migration route by the construction of a concrete boundary wall in 1961. In 1954 the USSR ceased to collect reparation payments, and sovereignty was granted. The GDR signed the Warsaw Pact in 1955. Socialist policies were stepped up in 1958, leading to flight to the West of skilled workers.

Meanwhile, a constituent assembly met in Bonn in Sept. 1948 to draft a Basic Law which brought the Federal Republic of Germany into existence. The occupation forces retained some powers, however, and the Republic did not become a sovereign state until 1955.

Even before sovereignty the Republic had begun negotiations for a measure of European unity and joined in creating the European Coal and Steel Community in 1951 and the European Economic Community in 1957. In Jan. 1957 the Saarland was returned to full German control. In 1973 the Federal Republic entered the UN.

In the autumn of 1989 movements for political liberalization in the GDR and re-unification with Federal Germany gathered strength. Erich Honecker and other long-serving Communist leaders were replaced in Oct.–Nov. The Berlin Wall was opened on 9 Nov. Following the reforms in the GDR in Nov. 1989 the Federal Chancellor Helmut Kohl issued a plan for German confederation. On 18 May 1990 Federal Germany and the GDR signed a treaty extending Federal Germany's currency, its economic, monetary and social legislation to the GDR as of 1 July. German reunification took place on 3 Oct. 1990.

The Federal Assembly (Bundestag) moved from Bonn to the renovated Reichstag in Berlin in 1999.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Germany is bounded in the north by Denmark and the North and Baltic Seas, east by Poland, east and southeast by the Czech Republic, southeast and south by Austria, south by Switzerland and west by France, Luxembourg, Belgium and the Netherlands. Area: 357,023 sq. km. Population estimate, 31 Dec. 2000: 82,259,500 (42,103,700 females). Of the total population, 67,019,000 lived in the former Federal Republic of Germany (up from 66,834,000 in 1999) and 15,169,000 in the former German Democratic Republic (down from 15,253,000 in 1999); density, 230 per sq. km. In 1999, 87·3% of the population lived in urban areas. There were 37·80m. households in April 1999; 13·49m. were single-person, and 11·37m. had a female principal breadwinner.

The UN gives a projected population for 2010 of 81·35m.

On 14 Nov. 1990 Germany and Poland signed a treaty confirming Poland's existing western frontier and renouncing German claims to territory lost as a result of the Second World War.

The capital is Berlin; the Federal German government moved from Bonn to Berlin in 1999.

The Federation comprises 16 Länder (states). Area and population:

[3]Reconstituted in 1990 in the Federal Republic.

On 31 Dec. 2000 there were 7,296,800 resident foreigners, including 1,998,500 Turks, 662,500 Yugoslavs, 619,100 Italians and 365,400 Greeks. More than 1·6m. of these were born in Germany. Germany's Muslim population, at 3·2m., is the second highest in Europe after that of France. In 2001 Germany received 88,287 asylum applications (the highest number of any European country), compared to 438,200 in 1992. The main countries of origin in 2001 were Iraq, Turkey, Yugoslavia and Afghanistan. 186,688 persons were naturalized in 2000, of whom 82,861 were from Turkey and 4,583 from the former USSR (170,381 in 1998). In 2000 there were 674,000 emigrants and 841,200 immigrants. New citizenship laws were introduced on 1 Jan. 2000, whereby a child of non-Germans will have German citizenship automatically if the birth is in Germany, if at the time of the birth one parent has made Germany his or her customary legal place of abode for at least eight years, and if this parent has had an unlimited residence permit for at least three years. Previously at least one parent had to hold German citizenship for the child to become a German national.

Berlin: From a fishing village on the River Spree Berlin grew, and, in 1307, formed a union with its sister town of Cölln. After the founding of the German Empire in 1871 it became the capital of the new Germany. It had a turbulent history culminating in the building of the Wall dividing East and West in 1961. The Wall fell in 1989 and after re-unification of East and West Germany in 1990, Berlin was declared the capital. Berlin was immortalized in Christopher Isherwood's novel Goodbye To Berlin about his experiences in the twenties and thirties and on which the film Cabaret was based.

The official language is German. Minor orthographical amendments were agreed in 1995. An agreement between German-speaking countries in Vienna on 1 July 1996 provided for minor orthographical changes and established a Commission for German Orthography in Mannheim. There have been considerable objections within Germany, particularly in the North, and many Länder are to decide their own language programmes for schools. Generally, both old and new spellings are acceptable.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

2001	389,591	734,475	183,816	828,541	197,498

Of the 418,550 marriages in 2000, 31,324 were between foreign males and German females, and 33,433 vice-versa. The average age of bridegrooms in 2000 was 35·0 years, and of brides 31·9. The average first-time marrying age for men was 31·2 and for women 28·4.

Rates (per 1,000 population), 2000: birth, 9·3; marriage, 5·1; death, 10·2; infant mortality, 4·4 per 1,000 births; stillborn rate, 4·0 per 1,000 births. Life expectancy, 1999: men, 74·3 years; women, 80·6. Suicide rates, 2000, per 100,000 population, 13·5 (men, 20·3; women, 7·0). Annual population growth rate, 1990–99, 0·4%; fertility rate, 1999, 1·3 births per woman.

Legislation of 1995 categorizes abortions as illegal, but stipulates that prosecutions will not be brought if they are performed in the first three months of pregnancy after consultation with a doctor. The annual abortion rate, at under ten per 1,000 women aged 15–44, is among the lowest in the world.

Since 1 Aug. 2001 same-sex couples have been permitted to exchange vows at registry offices. The law also gives them the same rights as heterosexual couples in inheritance and insurance law.

A UNICEF report published in 2000 showed that 10·7% of children in Germany live in poverty (in households with income below 50% of the national median). The report also showed that the poverty rate of children in lone-parent families was 51·2%, compared to 6·2% in two-parent families.

CLIMATE

Oceanic influences are only found in the northwest where winters are quite mild but stormy. Elsewhere a continental climate is general. To the east and south, winter temperatures are lower, with bright frosty weather and considerable snowfall. Summer temperatures are fairly uniform throughout. Berlin, Jan. 31°F (–0·5°C), July 66°F (19°C). Annual rainfall 22·5" (563 mm). Cologne, Jan. 36°F (2·2°C), July 66°F (18·9°C). Annual rainfall 27" (676 mm). CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The Basic Law (Grundgesetz) was approved by the parliaments of the participating Länder and came into force on 23 May 1949. It is to remain in force until ‘a constitution adopted by a free decision of the German people comes into being’. The Federal Republic is a democratic and social constitutional state on a parliamentary basis. The federation is constituted by the 16 Länder (states). The Basic Law decrees that the general rules of international law form part of the federal law. The constitutions of the Länder must conform to the principles of a republican, democratic and social state based on the rule of law. Executive power is vested in the Länder, unless the Basic Law prescribes or permits otherwise. Federal law takes precedence over state law.

Legislative power is vested in the Bundestag (Federal Assembly) and the Bundesrat (Federal Council). The Bundestag is currently composed of 603 members and is elected in universal, free, equal and secret elections for a term of four years. A party must gain 5% of total votes cast in order to gain representation in the Bundestag, although if a party has three candidates elected directly, they may take their seats even if the party obtains less than 5% of the national vote. The electoral system combines relative-majority and proportional voting; each voter has two votes, the first for the direct constituency representative, the second for the competing party lists in the Länder. All directly elected constituency representatives enter parliament, but if a party receives more 'indirect' than 'direct' votes, the first name in order on the party list not to have a seat becomes a member—the number of seats is increased by the difference ('overhang votes'). Thus the number of seats in the Bundestag varies, but is 598 regular members (for the 2002 election, down from 656 for the previous elections since reunification) plus the 'overhang votes'. The Bundesrat consists of 69 members appointed by the governments of the Länder in proportions determined by the number of inhabitants. Each Land has at least three votes.

The Head of State is the Federal President, who is elected for a five-year term by a Federal Convention specially convened for this purpose. This Convention consists of all the members of the Bundestag and an equal number of members elected by the Länder parliaments in accordance with party strengths, but who need not themselves be members of the parliaments. No president may serve more than two terms. Executive power is vested in the Federal government, which consists of the Federal Chancellor, elected by the Bundestag on the proposal of the Federal President, and the Federal Ministers, who are appointed and dismissed by the Federal President upon the proposal of the Federal Chancellor.

The Federal Republic has exclusive legislation on: (1) foreign affairs; (2) federal citizenship; (3) freedom of movement, passports, immigration and emigration, and extradition; (4) currency, money and coinage, weights and measures, and regulation of time and calendar; (5) customs, commercial and navigation agreements, traffic in goods and payments with foreign countries, including customs and frontier protection; (6) federal railways and air traffic; (7) post and telecommunications; (8) the legal status of persons in the employment of the Federation and of public law corporations under direct supervision of the Federal government; (9) trade marks, copyright and publishing rights; (10) co-operation of the Federal Republic and the Länder in the criminal police and in matters concerning the protection of the constitution, the establishment of a Federal Office of Criminal Police, as well as the combating of international crime; (11) federal statistics.

In the field of finance the Federal Republic has exclusive legislation on customs and financial monopolies and concurrent legislation on: (1) excise taxes and taxes on transactions, in particular, taxes on real-estate acquisition, incremented value and on fire protection; (2) taxes on income, property, inheritance and donations; (3) real estate, industrial and trade taxes, with the exception of the determining of the tax rates.

Federal laws are passed by the Bundestag and after their adoption submitted to the Bundesrat, which has a limited veto. The Basic Law may be amended only upon the approval of two-thirds of the members of the Bundestag and two-thirds of the votes of the Bundesrat.

RECENT ELECTIONS

On 23 May 1999 Johannes Rau was elected President by the Federal Convention against two opponents, Dagmar Schipanski and Uta Ranke-Heinemann.

Bundestag elections were held on 22 Sept. 2002. The Social Democratic Party (SPD) of Chancellor Gerhard Schröder won 251 seats with 38·5% of votes cast (298 seats with 40·9% in 1998); the Christian Democratic Union/Christian Social Union (CDU/CSU; the CSU is a Bavarian party where the CDU does not stand) won 248 with 38·5% (245 with 35·2%); the Greens/Alliance 90, 55 with 8·6% (47 with 6·6%); the Free Democratic Party (FDP), 47 with 7·4% (44 with 6·2%); and the Party for Democratic Socialism (PDS; former Communists), 2 with 4·3% (35 with 5·2%). Turn-out was 79·1%. With the SPD renewing its alliance with the Greens, the new government had a 9-seat majority in the Bundestag.

European Parliament. Germany has 99 representatives. At the June 1999 elections turn-out was 45·2%. The CDU won 43 seats with 39·3% of votes cast (group in European Parliament: European People's Party); the SPD, 33 with 30·7% (Party of European Socialists); the CSU, 10 with 9·4% (European People's Party); the Greens, 7 with 6·4% (Greens); PDS, 6 with 5·8% (Confederal Group of the European United Left).

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

Federal President: Johannes Rau; b. 1931 (SPD; sworn in 1 July 1999).

Speaker of the Bundestag: Wolfgang Thierse (elected Oct. 1998).

In Oct. 1998 an SPD–Green party coalition was formed, the first time that the Green party had entered national government in Germany. Following elections in Sept. 2002 a new SPD–Green cabinet was formed. In March 2003 the cabinet was composed as follows:

Chancellor: Gerhard Schröder; b. 1944 (SPD; sworn in on 27 Oct. 1998 and re-elected in Sept. 2002).

Vice-Chancellor and Foreign Minister: Joschka Fischer (Greens/Alliance 90). Interior: Otto Schily (SPD). Justice: Brigitte Zypries (SPD). Finance: Hans Eichel (SPD). Economy and Labour: Wolfgang Clement (SPD). Consumer Protection, Food and Agriculture: Renate Künast (Greens/Alliance 90). Defence: Peter Struck (SPD). Family Affairs, Senior Citizens, Women and Youth: Renate Schmidt (SPD). Health and Social Security: Ulla Schmidt (SPD). Transport, Housing and Construction: Manfred Stolpe (SPD). Environment, Nature Conservation and Nuclear Safety: Jürgen Trittin (Greens/Alliance 90). Education and Research: Edelgard Bulmahn (SPD). Economic Co-operation and Development: Heidemarie Wieczorek-Zeul (SPD).

The leader of the opposition Christian Democratic Union (CDU) is Angela Merkel, an East German liberal, who was elected to succeed Wolfgang Schäuble in March 2000 in the wake of the financial scandal which had previously brought down Helmut Kohl. However, Edmund Stoiber of the Christian Social Union (the CDU's sister party in Bavaria) was chosen instead of Angela Merkel as the conservative challenger to Gerhard Schröder for the federal election of Sept. 2002.

DEFENCE

Conscription was reduced from ten months to nine months from Jan. 2002. In July 1994 the Constitutional Court ruled that German armed forces might be sent on peacekeeping missions abroad. Germany has increased the number of professionals available for military missions abroad and sent troops to Afghanistan as part of the international alliance against terrorism in the aftermath of 11 Sept. 2001. The first time that German armed forces have been deployed in this way since the Second World War, the move has provoked controversy in Germany. Germany has 10,000 troops on international missions, a figure exceeded only by the USA. Since Jan. 2001 women have been allowed to serve in all branches of the military on the same basis as men.

In 2001 defence expenditure totalled US$26,902m. (US$328 per capita), representing 1·5% of GDP.

Army. The Army is organized in the Army Forces Command. The equipment of the former East German army is in store. Total strength was (2002) 203,200 (conscripts 85,900, women 4,600). There are Army reserves of 317,050.

The Territorial Army is organized into five Military Districts, under three Territorial Commands. Its main task is to defend rear areas and remains under national control even in wartime.

Navy. The Fleet Commander operates from a modern Maritime Headquarters at Glücksburg, close to the Danish border.

The fleet includes 14 diesel coastal submarines, 2 destroyers and 12 frigates. The main naval bases are at Wilhelmshaven, Olpenitz, Kiel, Eckernförde and Warnemünde.

The Naval Air Arm, 3,700 strong, is organized into three wings and includes 66 combat aircraft (Tornados and Atlantics) and 43 armed helicopters.

Personnel in 2002 numbered 25,500, including 5,000 conscripts and 1,000 women.

Air Force. Since 1970 the Luftwaffe has comprised the following commands: German Air Force Tactical Command, German Air Force Support Command (including two German Air Force Regional Support Commands—North and South) and General Air Force Office. Personnel in 2002 was 67,300 (16,100 conscripts). There were 446 combat aircraft, including Tornados, F-4Fs and MiG-29s.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

A treaty of friendship with Poland signed on 17 June 1991 recognized the Oder-Neisse border and guaranteed minorities' rights in both countries.

Germany is a member of the UN, WTO, NATO, BIS, OECD, EU, Council of Europe, WEU, OSCE, CERN, Council of the Baltic Sea States, Danube Commission, Inter-American Development Bank, Asian Development Bank, IOM and the Antarctic Treaty. Germany is a signatory to the Schengen Accord which abolishes border controls between Germany, Austria, Belgium, Denmark, Finland, France, Greece, Iceland, Italy, Luxembourg, the Netherlands, Norway, Portugal, Spain and Sweden.

ECONOMY

Germany is the third largest economy in the world after the USA and Japan.

Services accounted for 68·7% of GDP in 2000, industry 30·1% and agriculture 1·2%.

According to the anti-corruption organization Transparency International, Germany ranked equal 18th in the world in a 2002 survey of the countries with the least corruption in business and government. It received 7·3 out of 10 in the annual index.

Overview. The German economy is described as a 'social market', in that it embraces industrial relations and company management, as well as social welfare and other aspects of government policy. The European Central Bank determines interest rates for the entire euro-zone, including Germany. The US economic slowdown has reduced demand for German exports. High inflation has been caused by high world oil prices. In 2001 a major income and business tax reform was introduced, the most ambitious in German post-war history.

Currency. On 1 Jan. 1999 the euro (EUR) became the legal currency in Germany; irrevocable conversion rate 1·95583 DM (deutschemark) to one euro. The euro, which consists of 100 cents, has been in circulation since 1 Jan. 2002. There are seven euro notes in different colours and sizes denominated in 500, 200, 100, 50, 20, 10 and 5 euros, and eight coins denominated in 2 and 1 euros, then 50, 20, 10, 5, 2 and 1 cents. It was still possible to make cash transactions in German marks until 28 Feb. 2002, although formally the mark had ceased to be legal tender on 31 Dec. 2001. Euro banknotes in circulation on 1 Jan. 2002 had a total value of €254·2bn.

Foreign exchange reserves were US$42,260m. in June 2002 and gold reserves were 110·79m. troy oz (95·18m. troy oz in 1997). Only the USA, with 262·00m. troy oz, had more in June 2002. Total money supply was €93,977m. in June 2002. Inflation was 1·3% in 2002, down from 2·5% in 2001.

Budget. In 2002 the budget deficit exceeded 3%, the target set by the European Stability and Growth Pact.

In July 2000 Chancellor Schröder pushed through the largest tax-cutting package in Germany's history. From 2001 corporation tax was cut from 40%/30% to 25%. The top rate of income tax was gradually to be reduced from 51% to 42% in 2005. In March 2003 Schröder announced 'Agenda 2010', a major economic reform package. It includes cuts in unemployment benefits, enhanced legislation to ease job protection rules and trimmed state pensions. The health system, among the world's most expensive, is also a core target. The boldest reform package in German post-war history, 'Agenda 2010' has encountered criticism from trade unionists and left-wingers within the SPD.

Since 1 Jan. 1979 tax revenues have been distributed as follows: Federal government. Income tax, 42·5%; capital yield and corporation tax, 50%; turnover tax, 67·5%; trade tax, 15%; capital gains, insurance and accounts taxes, 100%; excise duties (other than on beer), 100%. Länder. Income tax, 42·5%; capital yield and corporation tax, 50%; turnover tax, 32·5%; trade tax, 15%; other taxes, 100%. Local authorities. Income tax, 15%; trade tax, 70%; local taxes, 100%.

VAT is 16% (reduced rate, 7%).

Performance. Real GDP growth was 1·8% in 1999 and 3·0% in 2000, the highest rate since reunification. However, this was followed by growth of just 0·6% in 2001, and at the end of 2001 Germany went into a recession for the first time since 1993 following two successive quarters of negative growth. In 2002 growth was down to 0·2%. Growth in the Länder of the former German Democratic Republic was estimated to be around 0·6% lower than the overall national average in both 1997 and 1998, and GDP per capita in the former GDR is only two-thirds of that in the former West Germany. Total GDP in 2001 was US$1,873·9bn., the third highest behind the USA and Japan.

Banking and Finance. The Deutsche Bundesbank (German Federal Bank) is the central bank and bank of issue. Its duty is to protect the stability of the currency. It is independent of the government but obliged to support the government's general policy. Its Governor is appointed by the government for eight years. The President is Ernst Welteke. Its assets were US$874,706m. in June 2001. Ranked by total assets it is the third largest bank in the world. Its market capitalization in June 2001 was

US$45·7bn. The largest private banks are the Deutsche Bank, HypoVereinsbank, Dresdner Bank and Commerzbank. The former GDR central bank Staatsbank has become a public commercial bank. In April 2001 Dresdner Bank accepted a takeover offer from Allianz, the country's largest insurance company.

In 2001 there were 2,521 credit institutes, including 279 banks, 537 savings banks, 28 mortgage lenders and 1,619 credit societies. They are represented in the wholesale market by the 13 public sector Länder banks. Total assets, 2001, €6,386,110m. Savings deposits were €586,530m. in 2001. By Oct. 2000 approximately 6% of the German population were using e-banking.

A single stock exchange, the Deutsche Börse, was created in 1992, based on the former Frankfurt stock exchange in a union with the smaller exchanges in Berlin, Bremen, Düsseldorf, Hamburg, Hanover, Munich and Stuttgart. Share turnover on the Frankfurt stock exchange rose from 900bn. DM in 1992 to 2,200bn. DM in 1997, while trading on the other seven exchanges only rose from 340bn. DM in 1992 to 430bn. DM in 1997. Frankfurt processes 90% of equities trading in the country.

Germany attracted a record amount of foreign capital in 1999. The total of 96·2bn. DM was more than twice the 1998 total. France was the largest investor in 1999, with 50·9bn. DM, followed by Luxembourg with 17·8bn. DM and the USA with 17·4bn. DM. Investment abroad from Germany in 1999 was also a record high, at 172·1bn. DM, up from 146bn. DM in 1998, with Britain the leading target for investors (81·9bn. DM), followed by the USA (41·5bn. DM) and Sweden (10·4bn. DM).

Weights and Measures. The metric system is in force.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Environment. According to the World Bank Atlas Germany's carbon dioxide emissions were the equivalent of 10·1 tonnes per capita in 1998. An Environmental Sustainability Index compiled for the World Economic Forum meeting in Feb. 2002 ranked Germany 50th in the world, with 52·5%. The index measured the ability of countries to maintain favourable environmental conditions and examined various factors including pollution levels and the use or abuse of natural resources.

Germany is one of the world leaders in recycling. In 1996, 48% of all household waste was recycled. In 1998 recycling included 81% of glass, 81% of steel and 86% of aluminium cans.

Electricity. Installed capacity in 2000 was 120·86m. kW. In 2001 there were 19 nuclear reactors in operation, but in Dec. 2001 the German parliament decided to decommission the country's nuclear reactors over the next two decades. Production of electricity was 564·45bn. kWh in 2000, of which about 19% was nuclear. There is a moratorium on further nuclear plant construction. Consumption per capita was 5,681 kWh in 1998. In April 1998 the electricity market was liberalized, leading to huge cuts in bills for both industrial and residential customers. In June 2000 Veba and Viag merged to form E.ON, which became the world's largest private energy service provider.

By 2010 it is hoped that renewable energy sources, which currently account for 6% of electric power, will constitute 10% of the total.

Oil and Gas. The chief oilfields are in Emsland (Lower Saxony). In 2000, 3·12m. tonnes of crude oil were produced. Natural gas production was 16·9bn. cu. metres in 2000. Natural gas reserves were 330bn. cu. metres in 2000 and crude petroleum reserves 385m. bbls in 1997.

Wind. Germany is the world's leading producer of wind-power. By the end of 2001 there were 11,438 wind turbines with a total rated power of 8,753·8 MW.

Minerals. The main production areas are: North Rhine-Westphalia (for coal, iron and metal smelting-works), Central Germany (for lignite) and Lower Saxony (Salzgitter for iron ore; the Harz for metal ore).

Production (in tonnes), 2001: lignite, 175,360,537; coal, 27,361,098; salt, 6,537,000. In 2000 recoverable coal reserves were estimated at 67bn. tonnes. Germany is the world's largest lignite producer and the third largest salt producer after the USA and China.

Agriculture. In 1999 there were 11·82m. ha of arable land and 228,000 ha of permanent crops. Sown areas in 2001 (in 1,000 ha) included: wheat, 2,897·2; barley, 2,111·8; fodder, 1,538·7; rape, 1,138·0; rye, 837·0; sugarbeets, 447·7; maize, 396·5; potatoes, 282·1; oats, 233·3. Crop production, 2001 (and 1994) (in 1,000 tonnes): fodder, 53,968·1 (52,187·9); sugarbeets, 24,729·9 (24,211·3); wheat, 22,837·8 (16,480·5); barley, 13,494·6 (10,902·5); potatoes, 11,502·8 (9,668·6); rye, 5,132·3 (3,450·6); rapeseed, 4,160·1 (2,895·5); maize, 3,504·5 (2,446·0); oats, 1,151·0 (1,663·0). Germany is the world's largest producer of hops (30,000 tonnes in 2000) and the second largest producer of both barley and rye.

Figures compiled by the Soil Association, a British organization, show that in 1999 Germany set aside 422,000 ha (3% of its agricultural land) for the growth of organic crops. Organic food sales for Germany in 2000 were valued at US$2·4bn. (the second highest in the world behind the USA).

In 2001 there were 448,936 farms, of which 75,677 were between 2 and 5 ha and 26,324 over 100 ha. In 2001 there were 413,400 farmers assisted by 446,600 household members and 462,700 hired labourers (274,000 of them seasonal). In the former GDR in 1990 state farms were leased to farmers until 2004 and will then be sold. Collective farms have continued operating as co-operatives or been turned over to their former members.

In 2000 wine production was 9,852,000 hectolitres.

Livestock, 2001 (in 1,000): beef cattle, 14,603·1, milch cows, 4,548·6; sheep, 2,771·1; pigs, 25,783·9; horses, 506·2; poultry, 109,992·9. Livestock products, 2001 (in 1,000 tonnes): milk, 28,191; meat, 5,362; cheese, 1,015,819; eggs 134,607.

Forestry. Forest area in 2001 was 8,984,600 ha, of which about half was owned by the State. Timber production was 49·11m. cu metres in 2000. In recent years depredation has occurred through pollution with acid rain.

Fisheries. The total catch in 2000 was 217,300 tonnes (204,100 tonnes from marine waters). In 2000 the fishing fleet consisted of 44 ocean-going vessels and 2,247 coastal cutters.

INDUSTRY

The leading companies by market capitalization in Germany, excluding banking and finance, in Jan. 2002 were: Vodafone AG, formerly the Mannesmann AG (€108bn.); SAP AG (Systeme Anwendungen Produkte in der Datenverarbeitung), a software and computer services company (€76bn.); and Siemens AG, an electronic and electric equipment producer (€63bn.).

In 2001 a total of 728,978 firms were registered, 563,305 of which were classified as sole traders.

Output of major industrial products, 2001 (in 1,000 tonnes): cement, 38,099 (1999); rolled steel, 23,757; household plastics, 12,665 (1999); crude steel, 12,072 (2000); paper, 9,177; flour, 4,383; nitrogenous fertilizers, 1,079; aluminium, 1,000; refined copper, 544; synthetic fibre, 112; cotton yarn, 89; passenger cars, 5,487,000 (units); refrigerators, 3,059,000 (units); glass bottles, 11,913m. (units); beer, 10,637m. litres; soft drinks (excluding milk-based beverages), 18,975m. litres.

Labour. Retirement age is normally 65 years. At April 2001 the workforce was 40·55m. (17·86m. females), of whom 36·82m. (16·19m. females) were working and 3·74m. (1·78m. females) were unemployed. In April 2001 there were 27·7m. employees, 4·07m. self-employed or helping other family members and 2·26m. civil servants. 2·81m. foreign workers were employed in 2001. Of the 2001 workforce the year average for the number of employees in each industry was as follows: 10,974,000 in the public and private service sector, 9,583,000 in the retail, hotel and catering industries, 8,522,000 in the mining, processing and manufacturing industries, 4,429,000 in real estate and corporate services, 2,736,000 in the civil service (2000), 2,582,000 in the construction industry, 2,098,000 in transport and communications, 1,281,000 in banking and insurance, 940,000 in agriculture, forestry and fisheries (2000) and 300,000 in energy and water services (2000). In April 2001 there were 506,141 job vacancies. By 2000 there was a shortfall of 75,000 people in the information technology industry. In Aug. 2000 Germany launched a 'Green Card' project, aimed at attracting 20,000 telecommunication and information technology specialists from non-European Union countries in a bid to make up for the shortfall in qualified personnel. The card will authorize the holder to unrestricted employment in Germany for five years. By Aug. 2001 more than 8,000 recruits had found work. The standardized unemployment rate was 8·6% in Jan. 2003; the rate in the former GDR is more than double that in the states of the former Federal Republic of Germany. In June 2001, 47% of those unemployed were women and 34·3% were long-term unemployed. The number of people in employment in March 2002 was 38,340,000.

Trade Unions. Germany's largest trade union is Vereinigte Dienstleistungs-gewerkschaft, or ver.di, created in March 2001 as a result of the merger of five smaller unions. Representing 3m. workers in the service industry, it is the largest trade union outside of China.

The majority of trade unions belong to the Deutscher Gewerkschaftsbund (DGB, German Trade Union Federation), which had 8,310,783 (2,534,063 women) members in 1998, including 4,960,852 (980,078) manual workers, 2,431,727 (1,283,369) white-collar workers and 622,765 (178,392) civil servants. It functions as an umbrella organization for its eight member unions. DGB unions are organized in industrial branches such that only one union operates within each enterprise. The official GDR trade union organization (FDGB) was merged in the Deutscher Gewerkschaftsbund. Trade union membership declined significantly during the 1990s, from 11·8m. in 1991 to 8·3m. in 1999. Strikes are not legal unless called by a union with the backing of 75% of members. Certain public service employees are contractually not permitted to strike. 26,833 days were lost through strikes in 2001, up from 16,102 in 1998 but down from 247,460 in 1995. Between 1989 and 1998 strikes cost Germany an average of 11 days per 1,000 employees a year, compared to the EU average of 85 per 1,000.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

In 2001 Germany had its highest ever annual trade surplus, at €95·5bn. for the year compared to €59·1bn. a year earlier.

Imports and Exports. Imports and exports in €1m.:

Imports				Exports

Most important trading partners in 2001 (trade figures in €1m.). Imports: France, 51,671; Netherlands, 46,280; USA, 45,454; UK, 38,204; Italy, 35,677; Belgium, 28,446; Japan, 22,599. Exports: France, 70,672; USA, 67,307; UK, 53,271; Italy, 47,516; Netherlands, 39,297; Austria, 32,645; Belgium, 31,386; Switzerland, 27,611.

Distribution of imports and exports by commodities in 2001 (in €1m.): finished goods, 384,657 and 545,512; semi-finished goods, 48,603 and 28,686; foodstuffs, 40,030 and 27,259; raw materials, 29,405 and 4,076; drinks and tobacco, 6,423 and 4,874; live animals, 440 and 460.

Germany is the second largest trading nation in the world after the USA.

Trade Fairs. Germany has a number of major annual trade fairs, among the most important of which are Internationale Grüne Woche Berlin (International Green Week Berlin—Exhibition for the Food Industry, Agriculture and Horticulture), held in Berlin in Jan.; Ambiente (for high quality consumer goods and new products), held in Frankfurt in Feb.; ITB Berlin (International Tourism Exchange), held in Berlin in March; CeBit (World Business Fair for Office Automation, Information Technology and Telecommunications), held in Hanover in March; Hannover Messe (the World's Leading Fair for Industry, Automation and Innovation), held in Hanover, in April; Internationale Funkausstellung Berlin (Your World of Consumer Electronics), held in Berlin in late Aug./early Sept.; and Frankfurter Buchmesse (Frankfurt Book Fair) held in Frankfurt in Oct. Hanover's trade fair site is the largest in Europe and Frankfurt's the second largest.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. In 2001 the total length of the road network was 230,774 km, including 11,712 km of motorway (Autobahn), 41,282 km of federal highways and 86,303 km of secondary roads. The motorway network is the largest in Europe. On 1 Jan.

2002 there were 53,305,900 motor vehicles, including: passenger cars, 44,383,300 (approximately one car for every two persons); trucks, 2,649,100; buses, 86,500; motorcycles, 3,557,400. In 2000, 7,943m. passengers were transported by long-distance road traffic. The estimated average distance travelled by a passenger car in the year 1997 was 12,700 km. In 2001, 336,625 motorists were arrested at the scene of an accident for driving offences, of which 16,151 were alcohol related and 68,063 for exceeding speed limits. Road casualties in 2001 (and 2000) totalled 501,752 (511,577), with 494,775 injured (504,074) and 6,977 killed (7,503).

Rail. Legislation of 1993 provides for the eventual privatization of the railways, but in 2001 DB Regio, part of Deutsche Bahn, still had more than 90% of the market. On 1 Jan. 1994 West German Bundesbahn and the former GDR Reichsbahn were amalgamated as the Deutsche Bahn, a joint-stock company in which track, long-distance passenger traffic, regional passenger traffic and goods traffic are run as four separate administrative entities. These were intended after 3–5 years to become themselves companies, at first under a holding company, and ultimately independent. Initially the government will hold all the shares. Length of railway in 2000 was 44,730 km (1,435 mm gauge) of which 19,518 km were electrified. There were 5,317 stations. 2,001m. passengers were carried in 2001 and 288·2m. tonnes of freight.

There are metros in Berlin (136 km), Hamburg (95 km), Frankfurt am Main (51 km), Munich (63 km) and Nuremberg (23 km), and tram/light rail networks in 56 cities.

Civil Aviation. Lufthansa, the largest carrier, was set up in 1953 and was originally 75% state-owned. The government sold its final shares in 1997. Other airlines include Condor, Deutsche-British Airways, Hapag Lloyd, Eurowings and LTU International Airways. Lufthansa flew 629·9m. km in 1999, carrying 41,892,700 passengers (27,276,400 on international flights). In 2001 civil aviation had 633 aircraft over 20 tonnes (583 jets).

In 2001 there were 71·41m. passenger arrivals and 71·50m. departures. Main international airports: Bremen, Cologne-Bonn, Düsseldorf, Frankfurt am Main, Hamburg (Fuhlsbüttel), Hanover, Leipzig, Munich, Nuremberg, Stuttgart and three at Berlin (Tegel, Tempelhof and Schönefeld). Airports at Dortmund, Dresden, Frankfurt (Hahn), Lübeck, Paderborn, Rostock and Saarbrücken are used for only a few scheduled international flights in addition to domestic flights.

In 2001 Frankfurt am Main handled 48,197,000 passengers (37,087,000 on international flights in 1999) and 1,466,455 tonnes of freight. It is the busiest airport in Europe in terms of freight handled. Munich was the second busiest German airport in terms of passenger traffic in 2001 (23·41m.) but third for freight. Cologne-Bonn was the second busiest in 2001 for freight, with 439,518 tonnes, but only seventh for passenger traffic.

Shipping. At 31 Dec. 2001 the mercantile marine comprised 1,114 ocean-going vessels of 6,530,000 GRT. Sea-going ships in 2001 carried 246·05m. tonnes of cargo. Navigable rivers and canals have a total length of 7,472 km. The inland-waterways fleet on 31 Dec. 2001 included 984 motor freight vessels totalling 1·16m. tonnes and 313 tankers of 460,060 tonnes. 236·10m. tonnes of freight were transported in 2001. In 1999 vessels totalling 320,033,000 NRT entered ports and vessels totalling 318,498,000 NRT cleared.

Telecommunications. Telecommunications were deregulated in 1989. On 1 Jan. 1995, three state-owned joint-stock companies were set up: Deutsche Telekom, Postdienst and Postbank. The partial privatization of Deutsche Telekom began in Nov. 1996.

In 2000 there were 50·2m. telephone main lines, equivalent to 610·5 per 1,000 population. In 2001, 96·4% of all households had a private telephone. There were 27·6m. PCs in use in 2000 (336 per 1,000 persons). In Nov. 2001 Germany had 55·06m. mobile phone subscribers, the highest number in any European country. Over 80% of users subscribe with either T-Mobile or D2 Vodafone. With 22·30m. subscribers in Nov. 2001 T-Mobile has the largest number of subscribers of any mobile telephone company in Europe. D2 Vodafone has the second highest number of subscribers, with 21·84m. Germany is the country with the second highest number of Internet users in Europe after the UK, with approximately 32·1m. in Aug. 2002 (nearly 39% of the population). In 1997 there were 5·6m. fax transmitters.

Postal Services. In 2000 there were 13,663 post offices and 8,073 affiliated agents. A total of 21,760m. pieces of mail were processed during the year.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. Justice is administered by the federal courts and by the courts of the Länder. In criminal procedures, civil cases and procedures of non-contentious jurisdiction the courts on the Land level are the local courts (Amtsgerichte), the regional courts (Landgerichte) and the courts of appeal (Oberlandesgerichte). Constitutional federal disputes are dealt with by the Federal Constitutional Court (Bundesverfassungsgericht) elected by the Bundestag and Bundesrat. The Länder also have constitutional courts. In labour law disputes the courts of the first and second instance are the labour courts and the Land labour courts, and in the third instance the Federal Labour Court (Bundesarbeitsgericht). Disputes about public law in matters of social security, unemployment insurance, maintenance of war victims and similar cases are dealt with in the first and second instances by the social courts and the Land social courts and in the third instance by the Federal Social Court (Bundessozialgericht). In most tax matters the finance courts of the Länder are competent, and in the second instance the Federal Finance Court (Bundesfinanzhof). Other controversies of public law in non-constitutional matters are decided in the first and second instance by the administrative and the higher administrative courts (Oberverwaltungsgerichte) of the Länder, and in the third instance by the Federal Administrative Court (Bundesverwaltungsgericht).

For the inquiry into maritime accidents the admiralty courts (Seeämter) are competent on the Land level and in the second instance the Federal Admiralty Court (Bundesoberseeamt) in Hamburg.

The death sentence was abolished in the Federal Republic of Germany in 1949 and in the German Democratic Republic in 1987.

The population in penal institutions in 2001 was 60,421. 1,658 prisoners were serving life sentences.

Religion. In 2000 there were 26,614,000 Protestants in 16,896 parishes, 26,817,000 Roman Catholics in 13,214 parishes; and in 2001, 93,326 Jews with 27 rabbis (in 2000) and 70 synagogues (in 2000).

There are five Roman Catholic archbishoprics (Bamberg, Cologne, Freiburg, Munich and Freising, Paderborn) and 23 bishoprics. Chairman of the German Bishops' Conference is Cardinal Karl Lehmann, Bishop of Mainz. A concordat between Germany and the Holy See dates from 10 Sept. 1933. In Feb. 2001 there were nine Cardinals.

The Evangelical (Protestant) Church (EKD) consists of 24 member-churches including 7 Lutheran Churches, 8 United-Lutheran-Reformed, 2 Reformed Churches and 1 Confederation of United member Churches: 'Church of the Union'. Its organs are the Synod, the Church Conference and the Council under the chairmanship of Rev. Manfred Kock. There are also some 12 Evangelical Free Churches.

Education. Education is compulsory for children aged 6 to 15. After the first four (or six) years at primary school (Grundschulen) children attend post-primary (Hauptschulen), secondary modern (Realschulen), grammar (Gymnasien), or comprehensive schools (Integrierte Gesamtschulen). Secondary modern school lasts six years and grammar school nine. Entry to higher education is by the final Grammar School Certificate (Abitur—Higher School Certificate). There are also schools for physically disabled children and those with other special needs (Sonderschulen).

In 2000–01 there were 3,649 kindergartens with 64,704 pupils and 4,619 teachers; 17,275 primary schools with 3,552,935 pupils and 191,102 teachers; 3,123 special schools with 420,427 pupils and 67,232 teachers; 11,402 secondary modern schools with 2,771,455 pupils and 174,832 teachers; 3,166 grammar schools with 2,256,861 pupils and 152,775 teachers; 964 comprehensive schools with 619,458 pupils and 47,841 teachers.

In 2000–01 there were 671,569 working teachers, of whom 441,250 were female.

The adult literacy rate in 1998 was at least 99%.

In 1998 total expenditure on education came to 155,049m. DM. In 1995 total expenditure on education came to 4·8% of GNP and represented 9·5% of total government expenditure.

Vocational education is provided in part-time, full-time and advanced vocational schools (Berufs-, Berufsaufbau-, Berufsfach- and Fachschulen, including Fachschulen für Technik and Schulen des Gesundheitswesens). Occupation-related, part-time vocational training of 6 to 12 hours per week is compulsory for all (including unemployed) up to the age of 18 years or until the completion of the practical vocational training. Full-time vocational schools comprise courses of at least one year. They prepare for commercial and domestic occupations as well as specialized occupations in the field of handicrafts. Advanced full-time vocational schools are attended by pupils over 18. Courses vary from six months to three or more years.

In 2000–01 there were 9,773 full- and part-time vocational schools with 2,681,837 students and 113,481 teachers.

Higher Education. In the winter term of the 2001–02 academic year there were 355 institutes of higher education (Hochschulen) with 1,860,698 students, including 91 universities (1,186,778 students), 7 polytechnics (Gesamthochschulen; 141,522 students), 6 teacher training colleges (15,029), 16 theological seminaries (2,408), 50 schools of art (30,646), 156 technical colleges (451,593) and 29 management schools (32,722). Only 290,530 students (15·6%) were in their first year.

Health. In 2000 there were 294,676 doctors (359 doctors for every 100,000 people), 63,156 dentists and 53,223 pharmacists. In 2000 there were 2,252 hospitals with 565,268 beds. In 2000 Germany spent 10·6% of its GDP on health, public spending amounting to 75·1% of the total.

Welfare. Social Health Insurance (introduced in 1883). Wage-earners and apprentices, salaried employees with an income below a certain limit and social insurance pensioners are compulsorily insured within the state system. Voluntary insurance is also possible.

Benefits: medical treatment, medicines, hospital and nursing care, maternity benefits, death benefits for the insured and their families, sickness payments and out-patients' allowances. Economy measures of Dec. 1992 introduced prescription charges related to recipients' income.

51·99m. persons were insured in 2001 (29·04m. compulsorily). Number of cases of incapacity for work (2000) totalled 37·18m., and the number of working days lost were 283·57m. (men) and 227·88m. (women). Total disbursements in 2000 were €125,943m.

Accident Insurance (introduced in 1884). Those insured are all persons in employment or service, apprentices and the majority of the self-employed and the unpaid family workers.

Benefits in the case of industrial injuries and occupational diseases: medical treatment and nursing care, sickness payments, pensions and other payments in cash and in kind, surviving dependants' pensions.

Number of insured in 2000, 57·96m.; number of current pensions, 1,143,131; total disbursements, €9,682m.

Workers' and Employees' Old-Age Insurance Scheme (introduced in 1889). All wage-earners and salaried employees, the members of certain liberal professions and—subject to certain conditions—self-employed craftsmen are compulsorily insured. The insured may voluntarily continue to insure when no longer liable to do so or increase the insurance.

Benefits: measures designed to maintain, improve and restore the earning capacity; pensions paid to persons incapable of work, old age and surviving dependants' pensions.

Number of insured in May 2000, 43·13m. (20·28m. women); number of current pensions (in July 2001), 23·26m.; pensions to widows and widowers, 5·44m. Total disbursements in 2000, €213,471m.

There are also special retirement and unemployment pension schemes for miners and farmers, assistance for war victims and compensation payments to members of German minorities in East European countries expelled after the Second World War and persons who suffered damage because of the war or in connection with the currency reform.

Family Allowances. €25,941m. were dispensed to 8·94m. recipients (0·96m. foreigners) in 2001 on behalf of 14·94m. children. Paid child care leave is available for three years to mothers or fathers.

Unemployment Allowances. In 2001, 1·72m. persons (0·73m. women) were receiving unemployment benefit and 1·48m. (0·63m. women) earnings-related benefit. Total expenditure on these and similar benefits (e.g. short-working supplement, job creation schemes) was 98,700m. DM in 2000.

Public Welfare (introduced in 1962). In 2000, €23·32m. were distributed to 2·68m. recipients (1·51m. women).

Public Youth Welfare. For supervision of foster children, official guardianship, assistance with adoptions and affiliations, social assistance in juvenile courts, educational assistance and correctional education under a court order. A total of €18,465m. was spent on recipients in 1999.

Pension Reform. A major reform of the German pension system became law on 11 May 2001. The changes entail a cut in the value of the average state pension from 70% to approximately 67% of average final earnings by 2030. There will be incentives in the form of tax concessions and direct payments to encourage individuals to build up supplementary provision by contributing up to 4% of their earnings into private-sector personal pensions. In the long term these could supply up to 40% of overall pension income, with 60% coming from the state as opposed to 85% prior to the changes.

CULTURE

Broadcasting. There are two public service broadcasting companies—ARD (Arbeitsgemeinschaft der öffentlich-rechtlichen Rundfunkanstalten der Bundesrepublik Deutschland) and ZDF (Zweites Deutsches Fernsehen)—plus many private and regional stations, notably RTL and SAT1. ARD is the co-ordinating body for television and radio. It represents public-right broadcasters and organizes co-operation between them. Deutsche Welle Fernsehen (DW-tv) is the foreign service broadcaster. Most German households now subscribe to cable television. In 2001 there were 35·50m TV licences. There were 17·3m. cable TV subscribers in 1997—52% of all households with licences had cable TV, compared to 67% in the USA and 11% in the UK.

Public service radio is provided by ARD and ZDF via DeutschlandRadio. Private radio stations also broadcast in the regions. Deutsche Welle (DW-radio) broadcasts overseas. In 2001 there were 40·25m. radio licences.

Cinema. In 2000 there were 4,612 cinemas with a total seating capacity of 870,150. In 2000, 75 feature films were made. A total of 152·5m. visits to the cinema were made in 2000; gross box office receipts came to €824·5m. in 2000. In 2001 German films took 18% of the national market, up from 10% in 1998.

Press. The daily press is mainly regional. The dailies with the highest circulation are (average figures for Jan.–March 2001): the tabloid Bild (Hamburg, 4·40m. copies per day); Westdeutsche Allgemeine Zeitung (Essen, 0·56m.); Süddeutsche Zeitung (Munich, 0·44m.); and Frankfurter Allgemeine Zeitung (0·41m.). Other important opinion leaders are the weeklies Die Zeit, Die Woche and Rheinischer Merkur. Bild has the highest circulation of any paper in Europe. In 2000, 355 newspapers and 408 newsstand magazines were published with respective circulations of 24m. and 127m. The seven main Sunday papers sold 4·5m. copies. The total circulation of daily newspapers in Germany is the highest in Europe. 78% of the population over the age of 14 regularly read a daily newspaper. There are also 230 online newspapers. Among magazines the most widely read are stern (7·51m. copies per issue according to figures published in July 2001), Focus and Der Spiegel. In 2001 a total of 68,399 book titles were published.

Tourism. In 2001 there were 54,553 places of accommodation with 2,494,462 beds (including 13,092 hotels with 923,787 beds). 16,886,643 foreign visitors and 90,506,261 tourists resident in Germany spent a total of 326,633,155 nights in holiday accommodation. Berlin is the most visited city with 4,929,578 visitors in 2001, and Bavaria the most visited Land with 22,748,035. More foreign visitors were from the Netherlands (2,053,500) than any other country. In 2001 tourism brought in €19,216m.

Festivals. The Munich Opera Festival takes place annually in June–July, and the Wagner Festspiele (the Wagner Festival) in Bayreuth is held from late July to the end of Aug. The Oberammergau Passion Play, which takes place every ten years, was last held in 2000. Karneval (Fasching in some areas), in Jan./Feb./March, is a major event in the annual calendar in cities such as Cologne, Munich, Düsseldorf and Mainz. The Berlin Love Parade, which takes place in mid-July, is Europe's second largest street party. Oktoberfest, Munich's famous beer festival which first began in 1810, takes place each year in late Sept. and early Oct. and regularly attracts 7m. visitors.

Libraries. In 2000 there were 11,332 public libraries, 7 national libraries and 237 Higher Education libraries; they and other libraries held a combined 322,636,000 volumes. There were 12,313,000 active users in 2000, with 375,108,000 loans.

Theatre and Opera. In 1999–2000 there were 153 theatre companies, performing on 731 stages. Audiences totalled 20·19m.

Museums and Galleries. In 2000 there were 4,716 museums which attracted 99,560,000 visitors.

THE LÄNDER

BADEN-WÜRTTEMBERG

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The Land is a combination of former states. Baden (the western part of the present Land) became a united margravate in 1771, after being divided as Baden-Baden and Baden-Durlach since 1535; Baden-Baden was predominantly Catholic, and Baden-Durlach predominantly Protestant. The margrave became an ally of Napoleon, ceding land west of the Rhine and receiving northern and southern territory as compensation. In 1805 Baden became a grand duchy and in 1806 a member state of the Confederation of the Rhine, extending from the Main to Lake Constance. In 1815 it was a founder-state of the German Confederation. A constitution was granted by the grand duke in 1818, but later rulers were less liberal and there was revolution in 1848, put down with Prussian help. The grand Duchy was abolished and replaced by a Land in 1919.

In 1949 Baden was combined with Württemberg to form three states; the three were brought together as one in 1952.

Württemberg, having been a duchy since 1495, became a kingdom in 1805 and joined the Confederations as did Baden. A constitution was granted in 1819 and the state remained liberal. In 1866 the king allied himself with Austria against Prussia, but in 1870 joined Prussia in war against France. The liberal monarchy came to an end with the abdication of William II in 1918, and Württemberg became a state of the German Republic. In 1945 the state was divided between Allied occupation authorities but the divisions ended in 1952.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Baden-Württemberg comprises 35,751 sq. km, with a population (at 30 June 2002) of 10,630,723 (5,415,363 females, 5,215,505 males).

The Land is divided into 4 administrative regions, 9 urban and 35 rural districts, and numbers 1,111 communes. The capital is Stuttgart.

BAVARIA

Bayern

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Bavaria was ruled by the Wittelsbach family from 1180. The duchy remained Catholic after the Reformation, which made it a natural ally of Austria and the Hapsburg Emperors.

The present boundaries were reached during the Napoleonic wars, and Bavaria became a kingdom in 1805. Despite the granting of a constitution and parliament, radical feeling forced the abdication of King Ludwig I in 1848. Maximilian II was followed by Ludwig II who allied himself with Austria against Prussia in 1866, but was reconciled with Prussia and entered the German Empire in 1871. In 1918 the King Ludwig III abdicated. The first years of republican government were filled with unrest, attempts at the overthrow of the state by both communist and right-wing groups culminating in an unsuccessful coup by Adolf Hitler in 1923.

The state of Bavaria included the Palatinate from 1214 until 1945, when it was taken from Bavaria and added to the Rhineland. The present Land of Bavaria was formed in 1948. Munich became capital of Bavaria in the reign of Albert IV (1467–1508) and remains capital of the Land.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Bavaria has an area of 70,550 sq. km. The capital is Munich. There are 7 administrative regions, 25 urban districts, 71 rural districts, 233 unadopted areas and 2,056 communes, 1,003 of which are members of 319 administrative associations (as of 31 Dec. 2001). The population (31 Dec. 2001) numbered 12,329,714 (6,029,762 males, 6,299,952 females).

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Statistics for calendar years:

	Live births	Marriages	Divorces	Deaths
1998	126,529	64,065	26,553	120,447
1999	123,244	65,489	25,438	119,519
2000	120,765	63,038	27,250	118,846
2001	115,964	60,226	28,347	117,930

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The Constituent Assembly, elected on 30 June 1946, passed a constitution on the lines of the democratic constitution of 1919, but with greater emphasis on state rights; this was agreed upon by the Christian Social Union (CSU) and the Social Democrats (SPD). Bavaria has six seats in the Bundesrat. The CSU replaces the Christian Democratic Party in Bavaria.

BERLIN

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

After the end of World War II, Berlin was divided into four occupied sectors, each with a military governor from one of the victorious Allied Powers (the USA, the Soviet Union, Britain and France). On 30 Nov. 1948 a separate municipal government was set up in the Soviet sector which led to the political division of the city. In contravention of the special Allied status agreed for the entire city, East Berlin became 'Capital of the GDR' in 1949 and thus increasingly integrated into the GDR as a whole. In West Berlin, the formal supreme authority of the western allies endured until 1990.

On 17 June 1953 the protest by workers in East Berlin against political oppression and economic hardship was suppressed by Soviet military forces. To stop refugees, the east German government erected the Berlin Wall to seal off West Berlin's borders on 13 Aug. 1961.

The Berlin Wall unexpectedly collapsed on 9 Nov. 1989 as the regime in the GDR bowed to the internal pressure which had been building for months. East and West Berlin were amalgamated on the re-unification of Germany in Oct. 1990. In April 1994 the Land governments of Berlin and Brandenburg agreed to merge the two Länder in 1999 or 2002, subject to the approval of their respective parliaments, and of their electorates in referendums held in May 1996. In Berlin 53·4% of votes were cast in favour, but in Brandenburg 62·8% were against. A further referendum on the proposed merger is likely to take place in the next few years.

With the move of the national government, the parliament (Bundestag), and the federal organ of the Länder (Bundesrat) in 1999, Berlin is once again a capital city.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The area is 891·76 sq. km. Population, 31 Dec. 2001, 3,388,434 (1,740,265 females), including 440,777 foreign nationals; density, 3,800 per sq. km.

2001	28,624	12,903	8,734	32,826

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

According to the constitutions of Sept. 1950 and Oct. 1995, Berlin is simultaneously a Land of the Federal Republic and a city. It is governed by a House of Representatives (of at least 130 members); executive power is vested in a Senate, consisting of the Governing Mayor, two Mayors and not more than eight senators. Since 1992 adherence to the constitution has been watched over by a Constitutional Court.

After a proposed merger was rejected by Brandenburg in the 1996 referendum, a Joint Berlin-Brandenburg Co-operation Council was set up.

Berlin has 4 seats in the Bundesrat.

RECENT ELECTIONS
In Dec. 1999 a CDU–SPD coalition government was formed, but the ‘grand coalition’ that had held power for more than ten years collapsed on 7 June 2001. The Social Democrats announced their withdrawal after the authorities had accumulated huge debts. At the elections of 21 Oct. 2001 turn-out was 68·1%. The Social Democratic Party (SPD) won 44 seats with 29·7% of votes cast; the Christian Democratic Union (CDU) 35, with 23·8%; the Party of Democratic Socialism (former Communists) 33, with 22·6%; the Free Democratic Party 15, with 9·9%; and the Greens 14, with 9·1%. Initially the SPD had coalition talks with the Free Democratic Party and the Greens, but these broke down. Thus the SPD formed a coalition with the Party of Democratic Socialism, the successor to the former German Democratic Republic’s Communist Party, who thereby had their first share of power in Berlin since the fall of the Wall.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION
The Governing Mayor is Klaus Wowereit (SPD).

BRANDENBURG

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

For the proposed merger with Berlin see BERLIN: Key Historical Events.

Brandenburg surrounds the new capital city of Germany, Berlin, but the people of the state voted against the recommendations of the Berlin House of Representatives and the Brandenburg State Parliament that the two states should merge around the year 2000. The state capital, Potsdam, is the ancient city of the Emperor Frederic II ‘The Great’ who transformed the garrison town of his father Frederic I ‘The Soldier’ into an elegant city.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The area is 29,476 sq. km. Population on 31 Dec. 2001 was 2,593,040 (1,312,548 females). There are 4 urban districts, 14 rural districts and 1,092 communes. The capital is Potsdam.

BREMEN

Freie Hansestadt Bremen

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The state is dominated by the Free City of Bremen and its port, Bremerhaven. In 1815, when it joined the German Confederation, Bremen was an autonomous city and Hanse port with important Baltic trade. In 1827 the expansion of trade inspired the founding of Bremerhaven on land ceded by Hanover at the confluence of the Geest and Weser rivers. Further expansion followed the founding of the Norddeutscher Lloyd Shipping Company in 1857. Merchant shipping, associated trade and fishing were dominant until 1940 but there was diversification in the post-war years. In 1939 Bremerhaven was absorbed by the Hanoverian town of Wesermünde. The combined port was returned to the jurisdiction of Bremen in 1947.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The area of the Land, consisting of the two urban districts and ports of Bremen and Bremerhaven, is 404 sq. km. Population, 31 Dec. 2001, 660,253 (318,637 males and 341,616 females).

HAMBURG

Freie und Hansestadt Hanburg

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Hamburg was a free Hanse town owing nominal allegiance to the Holy Roman Emperor until 1806. In 1815 it became part of the German Confederation, sharing a seat in the Federal Diet with Lübeck, Bremen and Frankfurt. During the Empire it retained its autonomy. By 1938 it had become the third largest port in the world and its territory was extended by the cession of land (3 urban and 27 rural districts) from Prussia. After World War II, Hamburg became a Land of the Federal Republic with its 1938 boundaries.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Total area, 755·3 sq. km (2001), including the islands Neuwerk and Scharhörn (7·6 sq. km). Population (31 Dec. 2001), 1,726,400 (837,700 males, 888,700 females). The Land forms a single urban district (Stadtstaat) with seven administrative subdivisions.

HESSEN

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The Land consists of the former states of Hesse-Darmstadt and Hesse-Kassel, and Nassau. Hesse-Darmstadt was ruled by the Landgrave Louis X from 1790. He became grand duke in 1806 with absolute power, having dismissed the parliament in 1803. However, he granted a constitution and bicameral parliament in 1820. Hesse-Darmstadt lost land to Prussia in the Seven Weeks' War of 1866, but retained its independence, both then and as a state of the German Empire after 1871. In 1918 the grand duke abdicated and the territory became a state of the German Republic. In 1945 areas west of the Rhine were incorporated into the new Land of Rhineland-Palatinate, areas east of the Rhine became part of the Land of Greater Hesse.

Hesse-Kassel was ruled by the Landgrave William IX from 1785 until he became Elector in 1805. In 1807 the Electorate was absorbed into the Kingdom of Westphalia (a Napoleonic creation), becoming independent again in 1815 as a state of the German Confederation. In 1831 a constitution and parliament were granted but the Electors remained strongly conservative.

In 1866 the Diet approved alliance with Prussia against Austria; the Elector nevertheless supported Austria. He was defeated by the Prussians and exiled and Hesse-Kassel was annexed to Prussia. In 1867 it was combined with Frankfurt and some areas taken from Nassau and Hesse-Darmstadt to form a Prussian province (Hesse-Nassau). In 1801 Nassau west of the Rhine passed to France; Napoleon also took the northern state in 1806. The remnant of the southern states allied in 1803 and three years later they became a duchy. In 1866 the duke supported Austria against Prussia and the duchy was annexed by Prussia as a result. In 1944 the Prussian province of Hesse-Nassau was split in two: Nassau and Electoral Hesse, also called Kurhessen. The following year these were combined with Hesse-Darmstadt as the Land of Greater Hesse which became known as Hessen.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Area, 21,115 sq. km. The capital is Wiesbaden. There are three administrative regions with 5 urban and 21 rural districts and 426 communes. Population, 31 Dec. 2001, was 6,077,826 (2,977,832 males, 3,099,994 females).

LOWER SAXONY

Niedersachsen

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The Land consists of the former states of Hanover, Oldenburg, Schaumburg-Lippe and Brunswick. It does not include the cities of Bremen or Bremerhaven. Oldenburg, Danish from 1667, passed to the bishopric of Lübeck in 1773; the Holy Roman Emperor made it a duchy in 1777. As a small state of the Confederation after 1815 it supported Prussia, becoming a member of the Prussian Zollverein (1853) and North German Confederation (1867). The grand duke abdicated in 1918 and was replaced by an elected government.

Schaumburg-Lippe was a small sovereign principality. As such it became a member of the Confederation of the Rhine in 1807 and of the German Confederation in 1815. Surrounded by Prussian territory, it also joined the Prussian-led North German Confederation in 1867. Part of the Empire until 1918, it then became a state of the new republic.

Brunswick, a small duchy, was taken into the Kingdom of Westphalia by Napoleon in 1806 but restored to independence in 1814. In 1830 the duke, Charles II, was forced into exile and replaced in 1831 by his more liberal brother, William. The succession passed to a Hanoverian claimant in 1913 but the duchy ended in 1918 with the Empire.

As a state of the republican Germany, Brunswick was greatly reduced under the Third Reich. Its boundaries were restored by the British occupation forces in 1945.

Hanover was an autonomous Electorate of the Holy Roman Empire whose rulers were also kings of Great Britain from 1714 to 1837. From 1762 they ruled almost entirely from England. After Napoleonic invasions Hanover was restored in 1815. A constitution of 1819 made no radical change and had to be followed by more liberal versions in 1833 and 1848. Prussia annexed Hanover in 1866; it remained a Prussian province until 1946. On 1 Nov. 1946 all four states were combined by the British military administration to form the Land of Lower Saxony.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Lower Saxony has an area of 47,616 sq. km, and is divided into 4 administrative regions, 8 urban districts, 38 rural districts and 1,023 communes; capital, Hanover.

Population, on 31 Dec. 2001, was 7,956,416 (3,893,308 males, 4,063,108 females).

MECKLENBURG-WEST POMERANIA

Mecklenburg-Vorpommern

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Pomerania was at one time under Swedish control while Mecklenburg was an independent part of the German Empire. The two states were not united until after the Second World War, and after a short period when it was subdivided into three districts under the GDR, it became a state of the Federal Republic of Germany in 1990. The people of the region speak a dialect known as Plattdeutsch (Low German). The four main cities of this state are Hanseatic towns from the period when the area dominated trade with Scandinavia. Rostock on the North Sea coast became the home of the GDR's biggest shipyards.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The area is 23,171 sq. km. It is divided into 6 urban districts, 12 rural districts and 989 communes. Population on 31 Dec. 2001 was 1,759,877 (898,648 females). It is the most sparsely populated of the German Länder, with a population density of 76 per sq. km in 2001. The capital is Schwerin.

NORTH RHINE-WESTPHALIA

Nordrhein-Westfalen

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Historical Westphalia consisted of many small political units, most of them absorbed by Prussia and Hanover before 1800. In 1807 Napoleon created a Kingdom of Westphalia for his brother Joseph. This included Hesse-Kassel, but was formed mainly from the Prussian and Hanoverian lands between the rivers Elbe and Weser.

In 1815 the kingdom ended with Napoleon's defeat. Most of the area was given to Prussia, with the small principalities of Lippe and Waldeck surviving as independent states. Both joined the North German Confederation in 1867. Lippe remained autonomous after the end of the Empire in 1918; Waldeck was absorbed into Prussia in 1929.

In 1946 the occupying forces combined Lippe with most of the Prussian province of Westphalia to form the Land of North Rhine-Westphalia. On 1 March 1947 the allied Control Council formally abolished Prussia.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The Land comprises 34,082 sq. km. It is divided into 5 administrative regions, 23 urban districts, 31 rural districts and 396 communes. Capital: Düsseldorf. Population, 31 Dec. 2001, 18,052,092 (8,782,352 males, 9,269,740 females).

RHINELAND-PALATINATE

Rheinland-Pfalz

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The Land was formed from the Rhenisch Palatinate and the Rhine valley areas of Prussia, Hesse-Darmstadt, Hesse-Kassel and Bavaria.

From 1214 the Palatinate was ruled by the Bavarian house of Wittelsbach, with its capital as Heidelberg. In 1797 the land west of the Rhine was taken into France, and Napoleon divided the eastern land between Baden and Hesse. In 1815 the territory taken by France was restored to Germany and allotted to Bavaria. The area and its neighbours formed the strategically important Bavarian Circle of the Rhine. The rule of the Wittelsbachs ended in 1918 but the Palatinate remained part of Bavaria until the American occupying forces detached it in 1946. The new Land, incorporating the Palatinate and other territory, received its constitution in April 1947.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Rhineland-Palatinate has an area of 19,853 sq. km. It comprises 12 urban districts, 24 rural districts and 2,306 other communes. The capital is Mainz. Population (at 31 Dec. 2001), 4,099,066 (2,063,389 females).

SAARLAND

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Long disputed between Germany and France, the area was occupied by France in 1792. Most of it was allotted to Prussia at the close of the Napoleonic wars in 1815. In 1870 Prussia defeated France and when, in 1871, the German Empire was founded under Prussian leadership, it was able to incorporate Lorraine. This part of France was the Saar territory's western neighbour so the Saar was no longer a vulnerable boundary state. It began to develop industrially, exploiting Lorraine coal and iron.

In 1919 the League of Nations took control of the Saar until a plebiscite of 1935 favoured return to Germany. In 1945 there was a French occupation, and in 1947 the Saar was made an international area, but in economic union with France. In 1954 France and Germany agreed that the Saar should be a separate and autonomous state, under an independent commissioner. This was rejected by referendum and France agreed to return Saarland to Germany; it became a Land of the Federal Republic on 1 Jan. 1957.

SAXONY

Freistaat Sachsen

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The former kingdom of Saxony was a member state of the German Empire from 1871 until 1918, when it became the state of Saxony and joined the Weimar Republic. After the Second World War it was one of the five states in the German Democratic Republic until German reunification in 1990. It has been home to much of Germany's cultural history. In the 18th century, the capital of Saxony, Dresden, became the cultural capital of northern Europe earning the title 'Florence of the North', and the other great eastern German city, Leipzig, was a lively commercial city with strong artistic trends. The three cities of Dresden, Chemnitz and Leipzig formed the industrial heartland of Germany which, after World War II, was the manufacturing centre of the GDR.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The area is 18,413 sq. km. It is divided into 3 administrative regions, 7 urban districts, 22 rural districts and 537 communes. Population on 31 Dec. 2001 was 4,384,192 (2,257,469 females, 2,126,723 males); density, 238 per sq. km. The capital is Dresden.

SCHLESWIG-HOLSTEIN

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The Land is formed from two states formerly contested between Germany and Denmark.

Schleswig was a Danish dependency ruled since 1474 by the King of Denmark as Duke of Schleswig. He also ruled Holstein, its southern neighbour, as Duke of Holstein, but he did so recognizing that it was a fief of the Holy Roman Empire. As such, Holstein joined the German Confederation which replaced the Empire in 1815.

Disputes between Denmark and the powerful German states were accompanied by rising national feeling in the duchies, where the population was part-Danish and part-German. There was war in 1848–50 and in 1864, when Denmark surrendered its claims to Prussia and Austria. Following her defeat of Austria in 1866 Prussia annexed both duchies.

North Schleswig (predominately Danish) was awarded to Denmark in 1920. Prussian Holstein and south Schleswig became the present Land in 1946.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The area of Schleswig-Holstein is 15,761 sq. km. It is divided into 4 urban and 11 rural districts and 1,132 communes. The capital is Kiel. The population (estimate, 31 Dec. 2001) numbered 2,804,249 (1,370,626 males, 1,433,623 females).

THURINGIA

Thüringen

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Thuringia with its capital Erfurt is criss-crossed by the rivers Saale, Werra and Weisse Elster and dominated in the south by the mountains of the Thuringian Forest. Martin Luther spent his exile in Eisenach where he translated the New Testament into German while he lived in protective custody in the castle. Weimar became the centre of German intellectual life in the 18th century. In 1919 Weimar was the seat of a briefly liberal Republic. Only ten miles from Weimar lies Buchenwald, the site of a war-time Nazi concentration camp, which is now a national monument to the victims of fascism.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The area is 16,172 sq. km. Population on 31 Dec. 2001 was 2,411,387 (1,229,210 females); density, 149 per sq. km. It is divided into 6 urban districts, 17 rural districts and 1,017 communes. The capital is Erfurt.

GHANA

Republic of Ghana

Capital: Accra
Population estimate, 2000: 18·80m.
GDP per capita, 2000: (PPP$) 1,964
HDI/world rank: 0·548/129

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

By the 17th century, strong chiefdoms and warrior states, notably the Ashanti, dominated the territory. The Ashanti state was strengthened by its collaboration with the slave trade but by 1874 it had been conquered by Britain and made a colony. The hinterland became a protectorate in 1901. British rule was challenged after the Second World War by Kwame Nkrumah and the Convention People's Party (CPP), formed in 1949. The state of Ghana came into existence on 6 March 1957 when the former Colony of the Gold Coast with the Trusteeship Territory of Togoland attained Dominion status. The country was declared a Republic within the Commonwealth on 1 July 1960 with Dr Kwame Nkrumah as the first President.

In 1966 the Nkrumah regime was overthrown by the military who ruled until 1969 when they handed over to a civilian regime under a new constitution. On 13 Jan. 1972 the armed forces regained power. In 1979 the Supreme Military Council (SMC) was toppled in a coup led by Flight-Lieut. J. J. Rawlings. The new government permitted elections already scheduled and these resulted in a victory for Dr Hilla Limann and his People's National Party. However, on 31 Dec. 1981 another coup led by Flight-Lieut. Rawlings dismissed the government and Parliament, suspended the constitution and established a Provisional National Defence Council to exercise all government powers. A new pluralist democratic constitution was approved by referendum in April 1992. The Fourth Republic was proclaimed on 7 Jan. 1993.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Ghana is bounded west by Côte d'Ivoire, north by Burkina Faso, east by Togo and south by the Gulf of Guinea. The area is 238,537 sq. km; the 2000 census population was 18,800,000, giving a density of 78·8 persons per sq. km.

The UN gives a projected population for 2010 of 23·94m.

In 1999, 62·6% of the population was rural. 1m. Ghanaians lived abroad in 1995.

Ghana is divided into 10 regions:

Regions	Area (sq. km)	Population census 1984	Capital
Ashanti	24,390	2,090,100	Kumasi
Brong-Ahafo	39,557	1,206,608	Sunyani
Central	9,826	1,142,335	Cape Coast
Eastern	19,977	1,680,890	Koforidua
Greater Accra	2,593	1,431,099	Accra
Northern	70,383	1,164,583	Tamale
Upper East	8,842	772,744	Bolgatanga
Upper West	18,477	438,008	Wa
Volta	20,572	1,211,907	Ho
Western	23,921	1,157,807	Sekondi-Takoradi

In 1999 the capital, Accra, had a population of 1,904,000. Other major cities with 1988 estimated populations: Kumasi, 385,192; Tamale, 151,069; Tema, 109,975; Sekondi-Takoradi, 103,653.

About 44% of the population are Akan. Other tribal groups include Moshi-Dagomba (16%), Ewe (13%) and Ga (8%). About 75 languages are spoken; the official language is English.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

1995 births, 676,000; deaths, 191,000. Birth rate (per 1,000 population), 1995: 39·3; death rate, 11·0. 1999 life expectancy, 55·3 years for men and 57·9 for women. Infant mortality, 63 per 1,000 live births (1999). Annual population growth rate, 1990–99, 3·0%; fertility rate, 1999, 5·0 births per woman.

CLIMATE

The climate ranges from the equatorial type on the coast to savannah in the north and is typified by the existence of well-marked dry and wet seasons. Temperatures are relatively high throughout the year. The amount, duration and seasonal distribution of rain is very marked, from the south, with over 80" (2,000 mm), to the north, with under 50" (1,250 mm). In the extreme north, the wet season is from March to Aug., but further south it lasts until Oct. Near Kumasi, two wet seasons occur, in May and June and again in Oct., and this is repeated, with greater amounts, along the coast of Ghana. Accra, Jan. 80°F (26·7°C), July 77°F (25°C). Annual rainfall 29" (724 mm). Kumasi, Jan. 77°F (25°C), July 76°F (24·4°C). Annual rainfall 58" (1,402 mm). Sekondi-Takoradi, Jan. 77°F (25°C), July 76°F (24·4°C). Annual rainfall 47" (1,181 mm). Tamale, Jan. 82°F (27·8°C), July 78°F (25·6°C). Annual rainfall 41" (1,026mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

After the coup of 31 Dec. 1981, supreme power was vested in the Provisional National Defence Council (PNDC), chaired by Flight-Lieut. Jerry John Rawlings.

A new constitution was approved by 92·6% of votes cast at a referendum on 28 April 1992. The electorate was 8,255,690; turn-out was 43·8%. The constitution sets up a presidential system on the US model, with a multi-party parliament and an independent judiciary. The President is elected by universal suffrage for a four-year term renewable once.

National Anthem. 'God bless our Homeland, Ghana'; words by the government, tune by P. Gbeho.

RECENT ELECTIONS

Presidential elections were held on 7 and 28 Dec. 2000. Turn-out was 61·8%. In the first round, John Agyekum Kufuor gained 48·4% of votes cast and John Atta Mills gained 44·8% against five other candidates. In the second round, John Agyekum Kufuor was elected by 57·2% of votes cast.

Parliamentary elections were held on 7 Dec. 2000 and 3 Jan. 2001. The New Patriotic Party (NPP) won, gaining 100 seats; the National Democratic Congress (NDC) gained 92 seats; two other parties and independents gained four seats or fewer.

John Kufuor's victory marked the first occasion in African history that power was being transferred from a Marxist to a free-market liberal.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

In March 2003 the government comprised the following:

President: John Agyekum Kufuor; b. 1938 (NPP; sworn in 7 Jan. 2001).

Vice-President: Aliu Mahama.

Secretary for Foreign Affairs: Hackman Owusu-Agyeman. Justice and Attorney-General: Nana Akufo Addo. Defence: Dr Kwame Addo Kufuor. Finance: Yaw Osafu-Marfo. Interior: Malik Alhassan Yakubu. Trade and Industries: Dr Kofi Konadu Apraku. Agriculture: Major Courage Quarshigah. Forestry and Lands: Kasim Kasanga. Local Government and Rural Development: Kwadwo Baah-Wiredu. Health: Dr Kweku Afriyie. Environment, Science and Technology: Dominic Fobih. Parliamentary Affairs: Papa Owusu-Ankoma. Information and Presidential Affairs: Jake Obetsebi-Lamptey. Women's Affairs: Gladys Asmah. Communication and Technology: Owusu Agyapong. Education: Christopher Ameyaw-Akumfi. Energy: Albert Kan-Dapaah. Roads and Transportation: Dr Richard Anane. Economic Planning and Regional Co-operation: Dr Kwesi Nduom. Mines: Kwadwo Adjei-Dako. Tourism: Hawa Yakubu. Manpower Development and Employment: Cecilia Bannerman. Works and Housing: Yah Barimah. Youth and Sport: Edward Osel Kwaku. Minister of the Northern Region: Imoro Andani. Minister Without Portfolio: Elizabeth Ohene.

DEFENCE

Defence expenditure totalled US$95m. in 2000 (US$5 per capita), representing 0·9% of GDP.

Army. Total strength (1999), 5,000.

Navy. The Navy, based at Sekondi and Tema, numbered 1,000 in 1999 including support personnel.

Air Force. There are air bases at Takoradi and Tamale. Personnel strength (1999), 1,000. There were 19 combat aircraft.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

In March 1998 the IMF removed barriers to the offer of financial support from aid donors totalling US$1·6bn. in 1998 and 1999.

Ghana is a member of the UN, WTO, the Commonwealth, the African Union, African Development Bank, ECOWAS and is an ACP member state of the ACP-EU relationship.

ECONOMY

Agriculture accounted for 10·4% of GDP in 1998, industry 6·9% and services 82·7%.

Overview. Ghana is committed to the reform programmes of the IMF and World Bank and is one of Africa's biggest borrowers. In 1996 aid amounted to 11% of GDP, or four times the value of Ghana's exports. A privatization programme was inaugurated in 1988. By April 2000, 132 state-owned enterprises had been sold off to become 232 privately-owned companies. A further 168 were set to be privatized. Privatization deals raised US$804m. between 1990 and 1996, including the Ashanti Goldfields sell-off worth more than US$400m. Only South Africa among sub-Saharan African nations has raised more from privatization. Building, tourism, technology and financial services account for more than 46% of national income.

Currency. The monetary unit is the cedi (GHC) of 100 pesewas (P). In 1995 inflation was running at nearly 60%. It was brought down to 12·4% in 1999, but rose again to 32·9% in 2001. Foreign exchange reserves were US$238m. in April 2002 and gold reserves 281,000 troy oz in May 2002. Total money supply in Sept. 2001 was ₵3,867·83bn.

Budget. The 1996 budget provided for (in ₵1,000m.): revenue, 2,328·3; expenditure, 2,169·5.

Performance. Average GDP growth in the 10 years to 1998 was 4·5%—almost twice the African average. Real GDP growth was 3·7% in 2000 and 4·2% in 2001. Total GDP was US$5·3bn. in 2001.

Banking and Finance. The Bank of Ghana (Governor, Dr Paul Acquah) was established in 1957 as the central bank and bank of issue. At Dec. 1995 its total assets were ₵3,272,946·6m. There are 3 large commercial banks, 7 secondary banks, 3 merchant banks and 100 rural banks. There are two discount houses. Banks are required to have a capital base of at least 6% of net assets. At Dec. 1995 assets of commercial banks totalled ₵1,900,327·1m.

Foreign investment is actively encouraged with the Ghana Free Zone Scheme offering particular incentives such as full exemption of duties and levies on all imports for production and exports from the zones, full exemption on tax on profits for ten years, and no more than 8% after ten years. It is a condition of the scheme that at least 70% of goods made within the zones must be exported. Within 18 months of the scheme being set up in 1995, 50 projects had been registered.

Ghana's stock exchange, which opened in 1990, was one of the world's best performing stock markets in 1998.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Ghana is facing an energy crisis, with power cuts of up to 12 hours a day because drought has caused the level of Lake Volta to drop to below the danger level.

Environment. Ghana's carbon dioxide emissions in 1998 were the equivalent of 0·2 tonnes per capita according to the World Bank Atlas.

Electricity. Installed capacity was 1m. kW in 1997. Production (1998) 6·21bn. kWh, mainly from two hydro-electric stations operated by the Volta River Authority, Akosombo (six units) and Kpong (four units). Consumption per capita was 289 kWh in 1998. A drought in 1998 caused power cuts, with over 99% of electricity being hydro-electric. It is planned that electricity production will become less dependent on hydro-electric stations and more so on gas, with the construction of a 600 km pipeline forming part of the proposed West African Gas Pipeline Project.

Oil and Gas. Ghana is pursuing the development of its own gas fields and plans to harness gas at the North and South Tano fields located off the western coast. Natural gas reserves, 1997, totalled 6bn. cu. metres. Oil reserves in 1997 were 129·6m. bbls.

Minerals. Gold is one of the mainstays of the economy; Ghana ranks second only to South Africa among African gold producers. Production in 1998 was 2·3m. troy oz (1997, 1·6m. troy oz; 1996, 1·5m. troy oz). In 1998 diamond production was 800,000 carats; bauxite (1998), 443,000 tonnes; manganese (1993), 362,000 tonnes.

Agriculture. The rural poor earn little and many small farmers have reverted to subsistence farming. Around 2·5m. households were engaged in the agricultural sector in 1998. There were 3·60m. ha of arable land in 1998 and 1·70m. ha of permanent crops. In southern and central Ghana main food crops are maize, rice, cassava, plantains, groundnuts, yam and taro, and in northern Ghana groundnuts, rice, maize, sorghum, millet and yams. Agriculture presently operates at only 20% of its potential and is an area that is to be a major focus of investment.

Production of main food crops, 2000 (in 1,000 tonnes): cassava, 7,845; yams, 3,249; plantains, 2,046; taro, 1,707; maize, 1,014; cocoa beans, 398; coconuts, 305; sorghum, 302; chillies and green peppers, 270; oranges, 270. Cocoa is the main cash crop. The government estimates that more than 40% of the population relies either directly or indirectly on cocoa as a source of income. It contributes approximately 13% of GDP. Ghana is the second largest cocoa bean producer in the world after Côte d'Ivoire, and the second largest producer of both yams and taro, after Nigeria.

Livestock, 2000: cattle, 1·28m.; sheep, 2·56m.; pigs, 350,000; goats, 2·80m.; chickens, 18m.

Forestry. There were 9·02m. ha of forest in 1995, or 39·7% of the total land area (down from 42·2% in 1990). Reserves account for some 30% of the total forest lands. Timber production in 1999 was 21·9m. cu. metres.

Fisheries. In 1999 total catch was 492,776 tonnes, of which 418,276 tonnes came from sea fishing.

INDUSTRY

Ghana's industries include mining, lumbering, light manufacturing, aluminium and food processing.

Production of aluminium (1997) 151,600 tonnes.

Labour. In 1996 the labour force was 8,393,000. Females constituted 51% of the workforce in 1999. Only Cambodia had a higher percentage of females in its workforce.

In 1994 there were 37,000 persons registered as unemployed.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Foreign debt was US$6,657m. in 2000.

Imports and Exports. In 2000 exports (f.o.b.) totalled US$1,898·4m.; imports (f.o.b.) were valued at US$2,741·3m. Principal exports, 1995: gold, 1,539,000m. oz valued at US$635·90m.; cocoa and products, 236,255 tonnes valued at US$364·63m.; timber valued at US$190m.; plus tuna, bauxite, aluminium, manganese ore and diamonds. The value of gold exports has risen since 1995, being worth US$710m. in 1999. Principal imported commodities: capital equipment, petroleum, consumer goods, food. Main export markets, 1997: Togo, 13·0%; UK, 12·0%; Germany, 10·0%; USA, 9·0%. Main import suppliers: UK, 15·0%; Nigeria, 14·0%; USA, 10·0%; Germany, 6·0%.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. In 1996 there were approximately 30 km of motorway, 5,230 km of primary roads, 9,620 km of secondary roads and 22,900 km of other roads. About 24·1% of all roads, including 21 km of expressway, are hard-surfaced. A Road Sector Strategy and Programme to develop the road network ran from 1995 to 2000. There were 90,000 passenger cars in use in 1996, equivalent to 4·7 per 1,000 inhabitants.

Rail. Total length of railways in 1993 was 953 km of 1,067 mm gauge. In 1994 railways carried 0·7m. tonnes of freight and 2·3m. passengers.

Civil Aviation. There is an international airport at Accra (Kotoka). The national carrier is the state-owned Ghana Airways. In 1999 scheduled airline traffic of Ghana-based carriers flew 9·1m km, carrying 304,000 passengers (all on international flights). Accra handled 602,000 passengers (592,000 on international flights) in 2000.

Shipping. The chief ports are Takoradi and Tema. In 1995, 1·2m. tonnes of cargo were unloaded at Takoradi and 3·9m. tonnes at Tema. There is inland water transport on Lake Volta. In 1998 the merchant marine totalled 115,000 GRT. The Volta, Ankobra and Tano rivers provide 168 km of navigable waterways for launches and lighters.

Telecommunications. Ghana Telecom was privatized in 1996. In 2000 Ghana had 237,200 telephone main lines, or 11·7 for every 1,000 inhabitants, and there were 60,000 PCs in use (3·0 per 1,000 persons). Mobile phone subscribers numbered 132,000 in Sept. 2000 and there were 30,000 Internet users in Dec. 2000. In 1995 there were 4,500 fax machines.

Postal Services. In 1995 there were 1,001 post offices.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. The Courts are constituted as follows:

Supreme Court. The Supreme Court consists of the Chief Justice who is also the President, and not less than four other Justices of the Supreme Court. The Supreme Court is the final court of appeal in Ghana. The final interpretation of the constitution is entrusted to the Supreme Court.

Court of Appeal. The Court of Appeal consists of the Chief Justice with not less than five other Justices of the Appeal court and such other Justices of Superior Courts as the Chief Justice may nominate. The Court of Appeal is duly constituted by three Justices. The Court of Appeal is bound by its own previous decisions and all courts inferior to the Court of Appeal are bound to follow the decisions of the Court of Appeal on questions of law. Divisions of the Appeal Court may be created, subject to the discretion of the Chief Justice.

High Court of Justice. The Court has jurisdiction in civil and criminal matters as well as those relating to industrial and labour disputes including administrative complaints. The High Court of Justice has supervisory jurisdiction over all inferior Courts and any adjudicating authority and in exercise of its supervisory jurisdiction has power to issue such directions, orders or writs including writs or orders in the nature of habeas corpus, certiorari, mandamus, prohibition and quo qarrantto. The High Court of Justice has no jurisdiction in cases of treason. The High Court consists of the Chief Justice and not less than 12 other judges and such other Justices of the Superior Court as the Chief Justice may appoint.

Under the Provisional National Defence Council which ruled from 1981 to 2001 public tribunals were established in addition to the traditional courts of justice.

The population in penal institutions in 1996 was 7,076 (40 per 100,000 of national population).

Religion. An estimated 30% of the population are Muslim and 24% Christian, with 38% adherents to indigenous beliefs and 8% other religions.

Education. Schooling is free and compulsory, and consists of six years of primary, three years of junior secondary and three years of senior secondary education. In 1990, 75% of eligible children attended primary, and 39% secondary, school. In 1994–95 there were 2·15m. pupils in 12,134 primary schools with 71,863 teachers; in 1990–91, 768,603 in general education at secondary schools. University education is free. There are two universities, one university each for development studies, and science and technology. In 1994–95 there were 11,225 university students and 779 academic staff. There were also 6 polytechnics, 7 colleges and 38 teacher training colleges. Adult literacy in 1999 was 70·3% (79·4% among men and 61·5% among women). In 1970 adult literacy was just 31%.

Health. Provision of doctors, 1994: one per 22,970 population. Provision of hospital beds, 1994: one per 638 population. At the end of 1995 there were 15,890 cases of AIDS, mainly women.

Ghana has made more progress in the reduction of undernourishment in the past 20 years than any other country in the world. Between 1980 and 1996 the proportion of undernourished people declined from 61% of the population to just 11%. The proportion of the population with access to safe water increased from 35% in 1980 to 65% in 1996.

CULTURE

Broadcasting. The Ghana Broadcasting Corporation is an autonomous statutory body. There are five national radio programmes. There were 1·73m. TV receivers (colour by PAL) and 4·4m. radio receivers in 1997.

Press. There were (1996) four daily newspapers with a combined circulation of 250,000.

Tourism. There were 335,000 foreign tourists in 1998, spending US$274m. A Ministry of Tourism was established in 1994. A five-year Tourism Development Plan was instituted in 1996. Many new hotels are planned including two five-star 400-room hotels.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The land which is now Greece was first inhabited between 2000–1700 BC by tribes from the North. This period was followed by the Mycenaean Civilization which was overthrown by the Dorians at the end of the 12th century BC. Its dominant citadels were at Tiryns and Mycenae. What little is known about this period is from stories such as those by Homer written in the 9th or 8th century BC.

The following period, known as the Greek Dark Ages, ended by the 6th century BC when the polis, or city state, was formed. Built mainly on coastal plains, the two principal cities were Sparta and Athens. Based on ideas of democracy and meritocracy, and rich in theatre, art and philosophy, the polis was the pinnacle of the Greek Classical Age. It was the era of Euripydes, Theusidades and Socrates. With strong trade links, Greece also had territories in Southern Italy, Sicily, Southern France and Asia Minor.

Two Persian invasions in the 5th century were checked at Marathon (490 BC) and Thermopylae (480 BC) where Spartans held off a great force of Persian soldiers. In 431 BC rivalry between the dominant city states erupted into the Peloponnesian War. Eventually in 404 BC Sparta emerged victorious against Athens, but in the next century Sparta itself fell to Thebes (371 BC).

Led by Philip II of Macedon, the Macedonians defeated the city states in 338 BC. The poleis were forced to unify under his rule. With Plato and Aristotle active at this time, the latter serving as a tutor to Philip's son Alexander, this was a period of rich cultural heritage. When Philip was assassinated in 336 BC, Alexander succeeded him at the age of 20. He spent the next thirteen years on a relentless campaign to expand the Macedonian territories. The Greek Empire stretched to the edge of India and encompassed most of the known civilized world.

Following Alexander's death in 323 BC, the empire gradually disintegrated. By the end of the 2nd century AD, the Romans had defeated the Macedonians and Greece was incorporated into the Roman Empire. It remained in Roman hands until it became part of the Byzantine Empire in the 4th century AD. Byzantium was populated with Greek-speaking Christians with its power base in Constantinople.

Over the next six centuries Greece was invaded by Franks, Normans and Arabs but remained part of the Byzantine Empire. Following the Empire's decline in the 11th century, Greece was incorporated into the Ottoman Empire in 1460. Apart from a period under Venetian control between 1686–1715, Greece was part of Turkey until the Greek War of Independence.

Greece broke away from the Ottoman Empire in the 1820s and was declared a kingdom under the protection of Great Britain, France and Russia. Many Greeks were left outside the new state but Greece's area increased by 70%, the population growing from 2·8m. to 4·8m., after the Treaty of Bucharest (1913) recognized Greek sovereignty over Crete.

King Constantine opted for neutrality in the First World War, while Prime Minister Venezelos favoured the Entente powers. This National Schism led to British and French intervention which deposed Constantine on 11 June 1917. When his son Alexander died on 25 Oct. 1920, he returned and reigned until 1922. He was forced to abdicate by a coup after defeat by Turkey and the loss of Smyrna. The Treaty of Lausanne (1923) recognized Smyrna as Turkish with Eastern Thrace and the islands of Imvros and Tenedos, all of which had been ceded to Greece by the 1920 Treaty of Sevres. An exchange of Christian and Muslim populations followed. Resistance to Italian demands brought Greece into the Second World War when Germany had to come to the aid of the hard-pressed Italians. Athens was occupied on 27 April 1941. The occupation lasted until 15 Oct. 1944.

A communist led insurrection in 1946–47 was put down with the help of British and, later, US troops. Peace came after 1949.

The late 1950s saw the emergence of the Left, capitalizing on the movement for union with Cyprus and unease over NATO membership (1952). A military coup in 1967 led to the authoritarian rule of the 'Colonels' headed by George Papadopoulos. A republic was declared on 29 July 1973. The dictatorship collapsed in 1974 giving way to a civilian government of national unity. The monarchy was abolished by a referendum on 8 Dec. 1974. The 1981 election brought Andreas Papandreou to power and the head of a socialist government. Earlier that year Greece had become the tenth member of the EU. Re-elected in 1985, Papandreou imposed economic austerity to combat inflation and soaring budgets but industrial unrest and evidence of widespread corruption led to his fall and a succession of weak governments. Papandreou returned to power in Oct. 1993 but ill-health forced his resignation two years later. His successor Constantinos Simitis took a more pro-European stance instituting economic reforms to prepare the way for entry into European Monetary Union (EMU).

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Greece is bounded in the north by Albania, the Former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia (FYROM) and Bulgaria, east by Turkey and the Aegean Sea, south by the Mediterranean and west by the Ionian Sea. The total area is 131,957 sq. km (50,949 sq. miles), of which the islands account for 25,042 sq. km (9,669 sq. miles).

The population was 10,259,900 (5,204,492 females) according to the census of March 1991. 1998 estimate: 10,516,000; density, 80 per sq. km.

The UN gives a projected population for 2010 of 10·58m.

In 1999, 59·9% of the population lived in urban areas. There were 166,031 resident foreign nationals in 1991. A further 5m. Greeks are estimated to live abroad.

In 1987 the territory of Greece was administratively reorganized into 13 regions comprising in all 51 departments. Areas and populations according to the 1991 census:

[1]Attica is both region and department. [2]Without Attica.

The largest cities (1991 census populations) are Athens (the capital), 772,072 (total agglomeration of Greater Athens, 3,072,922; up to 3,112,000 in 1999); Thessaloniki (agglomeration), 749,048 (768,000 in 1995); Piraeus (municipality), 182,671; Patras (agglomeration), 170,452; Peristerion (municipality), 137,288; Heraklion (agglomeration), 126,907; Larissa, 112,777; Kallithea, 114,233. Greater Athens, composed of the capital city, the port of Piraeus and a number of suburbs, contains about one third of the Greek population. It also contains about 50% of the country's industry and is the principal commercial, financial and diplomatic centre. Efforts have, however, been made to decentralize the economy. The second city, Thessaloniki, with its major port, has grown rapidly in population and industrial development. Other important towns are Patras (agglomeration, 170,452 inhabitants; department, 300,078), Larissa (city, 112,777 inhabitants; department, 270,612), Volos (agglomeration, 116,031 inhabitants) and Heraklion on the island of Crete.

The Monastic Republic of Mount Athos (or Agion Oros, i.e. 'Holy Mountain'), the easternmost of the three prongs of the peninsula of Chalcidice, is a self-governing community composed of 20 monasteries. The peninsula is administered by a Council of four members and an Assembly of 20 members, one deputy from each monastery. The Constitution of 1927 gives legal sanction to the Charter of Mount Athos, drawn up by representatives of the 20 monasteries on 20 May 1924, and its status is confirmed by the 1952 and 1975 Constitutions. Women are not permitted to enter. Population, 1991, 1,536.

The modern Greek language had two contesting literary standard forms, the archaizing Katharevousa ('purist'), and a version based on the spoken vernacular, 'Demotic'. In 1976 Standard Modern Greek was adopted as the official language, with Demotic as its core.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

1999: 116,038 live births; 104,190 deaths; 67,623 marriages; 9,500 divorces (1998); 597 still births (1998); 3,842 births to unmarried mothers (1998). 1999 rates: birth

(per 1,000 population), 10·9; death, 9·8; marriage, 6·4; divorce (1998), 0·9. Annual population growth rate, 1990–99, 0·4%. With only 3·8% of births to unmarried mothers, Greece has the lowest percentage of births out of wedlock of any EU member country. Over 1990–98 the suicide rate per 100,000 population was 3·8 (men, 6·1; women, 1·6). Expectation of life at birth, 1999, 75·5 years for males and 80·8 years for females. In 1998 the most popular age range for marrying was 25–29 for both males and females. Infant mortality, 1999, 5·5 per 1,000 live births; fertility rate, 1999, 1·3 births per woman. In 1998 Greece received 2,950 asylum applications, equivalent to 0·28 per 1,000 inhabitants.

CLIMATE

Coastal regions and the islands have typical Mediterranean conditions, with mild, rainy winters and hot, dry, sunny summers. Rainfall comes almost entirely in the winter months, though amounts vary widely according to position and relief. Continental conditions affect the northern mountainous areas, with severe winters, deep snow cover and heavy precipitation, but summers are hot. Athens, Jan. 48°F (8·6°C), July 82·5°F (28·2°C). Annual rainfall 16·6" (414·3 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

Greece is a presidential parliamentary democracy. A new Constitution was introduced in June 1975. The 300-member Chamber of Deputies is elected for four-year terms by proportional representation. There is a 3% threshold. Extra seats are awarded to the party which leads in an election. The Chamber of Deputies elects the head of state, the President, for a five-year term.

National Anthem. 'Imnos eis tin Eleftherian' ('Hymn to Freedom'); words by Dionysios Solomos, tune by N. Mantzaros.

RECENT ELECTIONS

Parliamentary elections were held on 9 April 2000. Turn-out was 75%. Seats gained (and % of vote): Pasok (Panhellenic Socialist Movement), 158 (43·8%); New Democracy, 125 (42·7%); Communist Party, 11 (5·5%); Coalition of the Left and Progress, 6 (3·2%).

European Parliament. Greece has 25 representatives. At the June 1999 elections turn-out was 70·1%. New Democracy won 9 seats with 36·0% of votes cast (group in European Parliament: European People's Party); Pasok, 9 with 32·8% (Party of European Socialists); Communist Party, 3 with 8·7% (Confederal Group of the European United Left); Dikki, 2 with 6·9% (European United/Nordic Green Left); SYN, 2 with 5·2% (Confederal Group of the European United Left).

DEFENCE

Prior to 2001 conscription was generally: (Army) 18 months, (Navy) 21 months, (Air Force) 20 months. However, a gradual shortening of military service is now taking place and during 2003 conscription is set to be reduced to 12 months in the Army, 14 in the Air Force and 16 in the Navy. There are plans for 50% of the armed forces to be professional by 2005.

In 2000 defence expenditure totalled US$5,457m. (US$513 per capita), representing 4·9% of GDP (the highest percentage in the EU).

Army. The Field Army is organized in 3 military regions, with 1 Army, 5 corps and 4 divisional headquarters. Total Army strength (1999) 116,000 (88,500 conscripts, 2,700 women). There is also a Territorial Defence Force/National Guard of 35,000 whose role is internal security.

Navy. The current strength of the Hellenic Navy includes 8 diesel submarines, 4 destroyers and 11 frigates. Main bases are at Salamis, Patras and Soudha Bay (Crete). Personnel in 1999 totalled 19,500 (9,800 conscripts, 1,300 women).

Air Force. The Hellenic Air Force (HAF) had a strength (1999) of 30,170 (7,521 conscripts, 1,520 women). There were 458 combat aircraft including F-4s, F-5s, F-16s, Mirage F-1s and Mirage 2000s. The HAF is organized into Tactical and Air Support Commands.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

Greece is a member of the UN, WTO, BIS, NATO, OECD, EU, WEU, Council of Europe, OSCE, CERN, BSEC, IOM and the Antarctic Treaty. Greece is a signatory to the Schengen Accord which abolishes border controls between Greece, Austria, Belgium, Denmark, Finland, France, Germany, Iceland, Italy, Luxembourg, the Netherlands, Norway, Portugal, Spain and Sweden.

ECONOMY

Agriculture accounted for 10·6% of GDP in 1998 (the highest percentage in the EU), industry 17·7% and services 71·7%.

Overview. In the late 1990s Greek growth rates were among the highest in the EU. Besides a restrictive incomes policy, the government has announced a number of structural reforms, including measures to enhance the flexibility of the labour market, improve the social security system, restructure public sector enterprises and speed up privatization.

Currency. In June 2000 EU leaders approved a recommendation for Greece to join the European single currency, the euro, and on 1 Jan. 2001 the euro (EUR) became the legal currency; irrevocable conversion rate 340·750 drachmas to 1 euro. The euro, which consists of 100 cents, has been in circulation since 1 Jan. 2002. There are seven euro notes in different colours and sizes denominated in 500, 200, 100, 50, 20, 10 and 5 euros, and eight coins denominated in 2 and 1 euros, then 50, 20, 10, 5, 2 and 1 cents. On the introduction of the euro there was a 'dual circulation' period before the drachma ceased to be legal tender on 28 Feb. 2002. Euro banknotes in circulation on 1 Jan. 2002 had a total value of €13·4bn.

Inflation was 2·9% in 2000. Foreign exchange reserves were US$6,509m. and gold reserves 3·86m. troy oz in June 2002. Total money supply in June 2002 was €7,683m.

Budget. Estimated revenue 1999 (in 1,000m. drachmas): 11,090; expenditure: 13,489.

VAT is 18% (reduced rate, 8%).

Performance. Real GDP growth was 4·1% in both 2000 and 2001. Greece has had economic growth above the EU average every year since 1996. Total GDP in 2001 was US$116·3bn.

Banking and Finance. The central bank and bank of issue is the Bank of Greece. Its Governor is Nicholas Garganas. There were 25 domestic banks in 1994, 8 private and the remainder in 4 state groupings. Total assets of all banks were 41,819bn. drachmas in 1999. The six leading banks in 2000 accounted for nearly 80% of assets of all Greek banks. Ranked by size of assets the largest banks were National Bank of Greece, Alpha Bank, Agricultural Bank, Commercial Bank of Greece, EFG Eurobank and Piraeus Bank.

There is a stock exchange in Athens.

Weights and Measures. The metric system was made obligatory in 1959; the use of other systems is prohibited. The Gregorian calendar was adopted in Feb. 1923.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Environment. According to the World Bank Atlas carbon dioxide emissions in Greece were the equivalent of 8·1 tonnes per capita in 1998.

Electricity. Installed capacity in 1997 was 9m. kW. 72% of power is supplied by lignite-fired power stations. A national grid supplies the mainland, and islands near its coast. Power is produced in remoter islands by local generators. Total production in 1998 was 43·68bn. kWh, with consumption per capita 3,739 kWh. Electricity supply is: domestic, 220v, 50 cycles AC; industrial, 280v, AC 3 phase.

Oil and Gas. Output of crude petroleum, 1996, 3m. bbls.; proven reserves, 1996, 12m. bbls. The oil sector plays a critical role in the Greek economy, accounting for more than 70% of total energy demand. Supply is mostly imported but oil prospecting is intensifying. Natural gas was introduced in Greece in 1997 through a pipeline from Russia, and an additional source of supply is liquefied natural gas from Algeria. Demand for natural gas is in its infancy. The public monopoly in natural gas, DEPA, has developed only a few sales contracts to some large industrial groups, outside a large contract with DEH.

Minerals. Greece produces a variety of ores and minerals, including (with production, 1995, in tonnes) asbestos (4,920,650), nickel ore (2,069,466), bauxite (1,823,000 in 1998), magnesite (532,500 in 1996), caustic magnesia (206,532), iron-pyrites (18,737), chromite (5,650 in 1993), marble (white and coloured) and various other earths. There is little coal, and the lignite is of indifferent quality (59·78m. tonnes, 1996). Salt production (1997) 150,000 tonnes.

Agriculture. In 1998 there were 2·85m. ha of arable land and 1·1m. ha of permanent crops.

The Greek economy was traditionally based on agriculture, with small-scale farming predominating, except in a few areas in the north. There were 819,000 farms in 1998. However, there has been a steady shift towards industry and although agriculture still employs nearly 17% of the population, it accounted for only 9% of GDP in 1997. Nevertheless, Greece has a higher percentage of its population working in agriculture than any other EU member country. Agriculture accounts for 33·1% of exports (the highest proportion of any EU member country) and 17·9% of imports.

Production (2000, in 1,000 tonnes):

Sugarbeets	2,906	Oranges	950
Olives	2,000	Peaches and nectarines	900
Tomatoes	1,960	Potatoes	890
Maize	1,850	Cottonseed	650
Wheat	1,770	Watermelons	650
Seed cotton	1,250	Olive oil	443
Grapes	1,200	Wine	430

Livestock (2000, in 1,000): 590 cattle, 9,041 sheep, 5,293 goats, 906 pigs, 78 asses, 37 mules, 33 horses, 28,000 poultry. Livestock products, 2000 (in 1,000 tonnes): milk, 1,990; meat, 499; cheese, 240.

Forestry. Area covered by forests in 1995 was 29,400 sq. km. Timber production in 1999 was 2·22m. cu. metres.

Fisheries. Total catch in 1999 was 136,699 tonnes, mainly from sea fishing. In 1998, 17,093 fishermen were active. 10,000 kg of sponges were produced in 1998.

INDUSTRY

The leading companies by market capitalization in Greece, excluding banking and finance, in Jan. 2002 were: Hellenic Telecommunications Organization SA (OTE) (€8bn.); Coca-Cola HBC SA (CCHBC), formerly the Hellenic Bottling Company (€3bn.); and Cosmote Mobile Telecommunications SA (€3bn.).

The main products are canned vegetables and fruit, fruit juice, beer, wine, alcoholic beverages, cigarettes, textiles, yarn, leather, shoes, synthetic timber, paper, plastics, rubber products, chemical acids, pigments, pharmaceutical products, cosmetics, soap, disinfectants, fertilizers, glassware, porcelain sanitary items, wire and power coils and household instruments.

Production, 1998 (provisional) in 1,000 tonnes: cement, 25,832; petroleum, 3,455 (1997); chemical acids, 1,364; fertilizers, 1,030; crude steel, 1,020 (1997); iron (concrete-reinforcing bars), 835; alumina, 648; packing materials, 302; soap, washing powder, detergents, 241; aluminium, 169; textile yarns, 149; beer, 370·5m. litres; bottled wine, 146,466 litres; cigarettes (1,000 units), 31,063; glass, 230,351 sq. metres.

Although manufacturing accounts for more than 21% of GDP, Greece's performance is hampered by the proliferation of small, traditional, low-tech firms, often run as family businesses. Food, drink and tobacco processing are the most important sectors, but there are also some steel mills and several shipyards. Shipping is of prime importance to the economy. In addition, there are major programmes under way in the fields of power, irrigation and land reclamation.

Labour. Of the total workforce of 4,445,702 in the period April–June 1998, 3,967,167 persons were employed. 704,204 were engaged in the primary sector (agriculture, animal breeding, etc.), 913,848 in the secondary sector (manufacturing, construction, etc.) and 2,349,115 in the tertiary sector. Automatic index-linking of wages was abolished at the end of 1990. Since 1989 a statutory minimum of wage-bills must be spent on training (0·45%). Retirement age is 65 years for men and 60 for women, although most men retire before the age of 60. Unemployment was 9·9% in Sept. 2002, with youth unemployment nearly 30%.

Greeks work an average of 44·9 hours a week, the longest working week in the European Union.

Trade Unions. The status of trade unions is regulated by the Associations Act 1914. Trade union liberties are guaranteed under the Constitution, and a law of June 1982 altered the unions' right to strike.

The national body of trade unions is the Greek General Confederation of Labour.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Following the normalization of their relations, Greece lifted its trade embargo (imposed in Feb. 1994) on Macedonia on 13 Oct. 1995. There are quarrels with Turkey over Cyprus, oil rights under the Aegean and ownership of uninhabited islands close to the Turkish coast.

Imports and Exports. In 2000 exports (f.o.b.) were valued at US$10,202m. and imports (f.o.b.) at US$30,440m. In 1998 principal exports (in 1m. drachmas) were: manufactured goods, 676,015·3; food and live animals, 589,712·3; machinery and transport equipment, 346,476·4; mineral fuels, lubricants and related minerals, 216,722·4; chemicals and related products, 209,031·7. Principal imports were: machinery and transport equipment, 2,764,327·5; manufactured goods, 1,536,599·3; chemicals and related products, 1,095,265·3; food and live animals, 976,668·9; mineral fuels, lubricants and related minerals, 654,467·0.

Services accounted for 63·1% of exports in 1998—mainly from travel and tourism—the second highest percentage of any country after Egypt.

In 2001 Germany was the leading export market (12·3% of the total), followed by Italy (9·2%), UK (6·4%) and USA (5·3%). Italy was the principal supplier of imports (13·5% of the total), ahead of Germany (13·4%), France (7·1%) and the Netherlands (5·7%). Fellow EU member countries accounted for 46·7% of exports in 2001 and 54·8% of all imports.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. There were, in 1996, 117,000 km of roads, including 470 km of motorways, 9,100 km of national roads, 31,300 km of secondary and 75,600 km of other roads. Number of motor vehicles in 1999: 2,928,881 passenger cars, 1,023,987 trucks and vans, 710,775 motorcycles and 26,769 buses. There are approximately 278 passenger cars per 1,000 population. There were 2,131 road deaths in 1999. Greece has among the highest death rates in road accidents of any industrialized country. Road projects include improved links to Turkey and Bulgaria.

Rail. In 1997 the state network, Hellenic Railways (OSE), totalled 2,503 km including 1,565 km of 1,435 mm gauge, 887 km of 1,000 mm gauge, and 51 km of 750 mm gauge. Railways carried 2·17m. tonnes of freight and 11·75m. passengers in 1998. The Greek Railways Organization is investing US$23bn. in the link from Athens to the northern Bulgarian border. An 18-km long metro opened in Athens in Jan. 2000.

Civil Aviation. There are international airports at Athens (Spata ‘Eleftherios Venizelos’) and Thessaloniki-Makedonia. The airport at Spata opened in March 2001 and is Europe’s newest airport. The old airport at Hellenikon has now closed down. The national carrier is Olympic Airways, serving some 30 towns and islands. Currently state-owned, Olympic Airways is set to be privatized but a second attempt to sell the carrier failed in Feb. 2003. Apart from the international airports, there are a further 25 provincial airports all connected by regular services operated by Olympic Airways. 6·27m. passengers were carried in 1999, of whom 3·64m. were on domestic and 2·63m. on international flights. Olympic Airways operates routes from Athens to all important cities of the country, Europe, the Middle East and USA. In 1999 Athens airport (Hellenikon) handled 10,335,000 passengers (6,164,000 on international flights).

Shipping. In 1998 the merchant navy totalled 25,225,000 GRT. Greek-owned ships under foreign flags numbered 127 of 2,785,865 GRT in 1997. In 1995 vessels totalling 38,573,000 NRT entered ports and vessels totalling 21,940,000 NRT cleared.

There is a canal (opened 9 Nov. 1893) across the Isthmus of Corinth (about 4 miles). The principal seaports are Piraeus, Thessaloniki, Patras, Volos, Igoumenitsa and Heraklion. Greece has 123 seaports with cargo and passenger handling facilities. Container terminals at the port of Piraeus are to be expanded to 1m. TEUs (twenty-foot equivalent units).

Telecommunications. In 2000 Greece had 5,659,300 telephone main lines (equivalent to 531·6 per 1,000 inhabitants) and 750,000 PCs were in use (or 70·5 per 1,000 persons). Mobile phone subscribers numbered 4·8m. in Nov. 2000 and there were 1·4m. Internet users in Dec. 2001. In 1996 there were 40,000 fax machines.

Postal Services. In 1996 there were 963 post offices with a staff of 11,520. A total of 465,274,000 letters and 3,186,000 parcels were dispatched worldwide in 1996. Total receipts were valued at 78,550m. drachmas and expenses at 92,515m. drachmas

Justice. Judges are appointed for life by the President after consultation with the judicial council. Judges enjoy personal and functional independence. There are three divisions of the courts—administrative, civil and criminal—and they must not give decisions which are contrary to the Constitution. Final jurisdiction lies with a Special Supreme Tribunal.

The first Ombudsman (Synigoros), Nikiforos Diamandouros, was appointed for a five-year term in Sept. 1998. In the two years from Oct. 1998–Sept. 2000 a total of 15,726 complaints were submitted, relating to: State–Citizen Relations (33·21%), Social Welfare (28·63%), Quality of Life (24·88%) and Human Rights (13·28%).

The population in penal institutions in Sept. 1997 was 5,577 (55 per 100,000 of national population). The death penalty was abolished for ordinary crimes in 1993.

Religion. The Christian Eastern (Greek) Orthodox Church is the established religion to which 98% of the population belong. It is under an archbishop and 67 metropolitans, 1 archbishop and 7 metropolitans in Crete, and 4 metropolitans in the Dodecanese. The head of the Greek Orthodox Church is Archbishop Christodoulos Paraskevaides of Athens and All Greece (b. 1939). Roman Catholics have 3 archbishops (in Naxos and Corfu and, not recognized by the State, in Athens) and 1 bishop (for Syra and Santorin). The Exarchs of the Greek Catholics and the Armenians are not recognized by the State. There were 0·15m. Muslims in 1995.

Complete religious freedom is recognized by the Constitution of 1974, but proselytizing from, and interference with, the Greek Orthodox Church is forbidden.

Education. Public education is provided in nursery, primary and secondary schools, starting at 5½–6½ years of age and free at all levels. Adult literacy rate, 1999, 97·1% (male 98·5%; female 95·8%).

In 1998–99 there were 5,576 nursery schools with 8,607 teachers and 141,658 pupils; 6,549 primary schools with 45,876 teachers and 646,559 pupils; 1,923 high schools with 31,662 teachers and 380,109 pupils; 1,244 general lycea with 18,206 teachers and 255,403 pupils; 48 multibranch lycea with 2,312 teachers and 10,388 pupils; 18 technical and ecclesiastical secondary schools of the first cycle with 52 teachers and 968 pupils; and 619 technical and ecclesiastical secondary schools of the second cycle with 11,218 teachers and 138,454 pupils. There was also 1 teacher training school with 159 teachers and 895 students; 14 technical education institutions (TEI) with 7,808 teachers and 64,671 students; 41 vocational and ecclesiastical schools with 710 teachers and 4,358 students. In 1998–99 there were 18 universities with 9,435 academic staff and 119,580 students.

In 1996 total expenditure on education came to 3·1% of GNP.

Health. Doctor and hospital treatment within the Greek national health system is free, but patients have to pay 25% of prescription charges. Those living in remote areas can reclaim a proportion of private medical expenses. In 1998 there were 341 hospitals and sanatoria with a total of 52,495 beds and 174 health centres. There were 43,030 doctors and 11,638 dentists (1997).

Greeks smoke on average 3,020 cigarettes a year—nearly twice the average for the European Union.

Welfare. The majority of employees are covered by the Social Insurance Institute, financed by employer and employee contributions. Benefits include pensions, medical expenses and long-term disability payments.

CULTURE

Greece will host the Olympic Games in 2004, from 13–29 Aug.

Broadcasting. Elliniki Radiophonia Tileorasis (ERT), the Hellenic National Radio and Television Institute, is the government broadcasting station. There are four national and regional programmes, and an external service, Voice of Greece (16 languages). ERT broadcasts two TV programmes (colour by SECAM H). Number of receivers: radio (1997), 5·02m.; television (1997), 2·5m. 97% of households have a radio, 75% have a colour TV set and 33% have a video recorder.

Cinema. There were 322 screens in 1995 and 8·5m. admissions. 17 full-length films were made.

Press. There were 31 daily newspapers published in Athens, 7 in Piraeus and 119 elsewhere in 1996. In 1996 a total of 4,225 book titles were published.

Tourism. Tourism is Greece's biggest industry with an estimated revenue for 1999 of US$8·77bn., contributing approximately 7% of GDP. Tourists in 1999 numbered 12·0m. There were 597,855 hotel beds in 1999 (285,956 in 1981). A total of 60,257,000 nights were spent in hotels in 1999 (provisional), 45,803,000 by foreigners and 14,454,000 by nationals.

Festivals. There are many festivals throughout the year, notably: The feast of St. Basil (1 Jan.); Gynaecocracy (8 Jan., female dominion); Carnival Season (mid-Feb. to mid-March); Independence Day (25 March); Feast of St George (23 April); Anastenaria (21–23 May, firewalking); Navy Week (end of June/beginning of July); Athens Lycabettus Theatre artistic performances (June–Aug.); Athens Festival (June–Sept.); Epidaurus Festival (July–Sept.); Philipi and Thasos Festival (July–Sept.); Dodoni Festival (July–Sept.); Athens Wine Festival and Ithaca Music Festival (end of July); Olympus Festival (Aug.); Epirotika Festival (Aug.); Kos Hippokrateia Festival (Aug.); Thessaloniki Film Festival and Festival of Popular Song (Sept.–Oct.); National Anniversary Procession (28 Oct.).

Libraries. In 1997 there were 829 public libraries, 2 National libraries and 64 Higher Education libraries; they held a combined 18,159,000 volumes. There were 7,521,000 visits to the libraries in 1997.

Theatre and Opera. There are two National Theatres and one Opera House.

Museums and Galleries. Amongst Greece's most important museums are the Acropolis Museum, the Museum of the City of Athens, the National Archaeological Museum and the National Historical Museum. In 1999 there were 89 museums and 182 galleries visited by 1,814,823 guests.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS
Grenada became an independent nation within the Commonwealth on 7 Feb. 1974. The 1973 Constitution was suspended in 1979 following a revolution. On 19 Oct. 1983 the army took control after a power struggle led to the killing of the prime minister. At the request of a group of Caribbean countries, Grenada was invaded by US-led forces on 25–28 Oct. On 1 Nov. a State of Emergency was imposed which ended with the restoration of the 1973 Constitution.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION
Grenada is the most southerly island of the Windward Islands with an area of 133 sq. miles (344 sq. km); the state also includes the Southern Grenadine Islands to the north, chiefly Carriacou (58·3 sq. km) and Petit Martinique. The total population at the 2001 census (provisional) was 100,895; density, 293 per sq. km.

In 1998, 63·0% of the population were rural. The Borough of St George's, the capital, had 35,559 inhabitants in 2001. 85% of the population is of African descent, 11% of mixed origins, 3% Indian and 1% white.

The official language is English. A French-African patois is also spoken.

SOCIAL STATISTICS
Births, 1996, 2,096; deaths, 782. Rates per 1,000 population, 1996: birth, 22·8; death, 8·5. Life expectancy, 1994, 72·0 years. Infant mortality, 1998, 23 per 1,000 live births. Annual population growth rate, 1990–99, 0·3%; fertility rate, 1999, 3·6 births per woman.

CLIMATE
The tropical climate is very agreeable in the dry season, from Jan. to May, when days are warm and nights quite cool, but in the wet season there is very little difference between day and night temperatures. On the coast, annual rainfall is about 60" (1,500 mm) but it is as high as 150–200" (3,750–5,000 mm) in the mountains. Average temperature, 27°C.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT
The head of state is the British sovereign, represented by an appointed Governor-General. There is a bicameral legislature, consisting of a 13-member Senate, appointed by the Governor-General, and a 15-member House of Representatives, elected by universal suffrage.

National Anthem. 'Hail Grenada, land of ours'; words by I. M. Baptiste, tune by L. A. Masanto.

RECENT ELECTIONS
At the elections of 14 Jan. 1999 for the House of Representatives the New National Party (NNP) won all 15 seats, with 62·4% of the votes cast.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION
Governor-General: Sir Daniel Williams.

In March 2003 the government comprised:

Prime Minister, Minister of Information and National Security: Dr Keith Mitchell; b. 1946 (NNP; in office since 22 June 1995).

Minister of Health and the Environment: Clarice Modeste-Curwen. Foreign Affairs, International Trade, Carriacou and Petit Martinique Affairs, and Legal Affairs: Elvin Nimrod. Finance, Industry, Trade and Planning: Anthony Boatswain. Agriculture, Lands, Forestry and Fisheries: Claris Charles. Education: Augustine

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

From 1524 Guatemala was part of a Spanish captaincy-general, comprising the whole of Central America. It became independent in 1821 and formed part of the Confederation of Central America from 1823 to 1839. The overthrow of the right-wing dictator Jorge Ubico in 1944 opened a decade of left-wing activity which alarmed the USA. In 1954 the leftist regime of Jacob Arbenz Guzmán was overthrown by a CIA-supported coup. A series of right-wing governments failed to produce stability while the toll on human life and the violation of human rights was such as to cause thousands of refugees to flee to Mexico. Elections to a National Constituent Assembly were held on 1 July 1984, and a new constitution was promulgated in May 1985. Amidst violence and assassinations, the presidential election was won by Marco Vinicio Cerezo Arévalo. On 14 Jan. 1986 Cerezo's civilian government was installed—the first for 16 years and only the second since 1954. Violence continued, however, and there were frequent reports of torture and killings by right-wing 'deathsquads'. The presidential and legislative elections of Nov. 1995 saw the return of open politics for the first time in over 40 years. Meanwhile the Guatemalan Revolutionary Unit (URNG) declared a ceasefire. On 6 May and 19 Sept. 1996 the government agreed reforms to military, internal security, judicial and agrarian institutions. A ceasefire was concluded in Oslo on 4 Dec. 1996 and a final peace treaty was signed on 29 Dec. 1996. In Nov. 1999 the country's first presidential elections took place since the end of the 36-year-long civil war, which had claimed over 200,000 lives, in 1996.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Guatemala is bounded on the north and west by Mexico, south by the Pacific ocean and east by El Salvador, Honduras and Belize, and the area is 108,889 sq. km (42,042 sq. miles). In March 1936 Guatemala, El Salvador and Honduras agreed to accept the peak of Mount Montecristo as the common boundary point.

The population was 11,277,600 in July 1996. Estimate (1997) 11,685,700; density, 107 per sq. km.

The UN gives a projected population for 2010 of 14·63m.

In 1999 the percentage of the population considered rural was 60·6%. In 1996, 44% were Amerindian, of 21 different groups descended from the Maya; 56% Mestizo (mixed Amerindian and Spanish). 60% speak Spanish, with the remainder speaking one or a combination of the 23 Indian dialects.

Guatemala is administratively divided into 22 departments, each with a governor appointed by the President. Population, 1995:

Departments	Area (sq. km)	Population	Departments	Area (sq. km)	Population
Alta Verapaz	8,686	670,815	Petén	35,854	310,008

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

A new Constitution, drawn up by the Constituent Assembly elected on 1 July 1984, was promulgated in June 1985 and came into force on 14 Jan. 1986. In 1993, 43 amendments were adopted, reducing inter alia the President's term of office from five to four years. The President and Vice-President are elected by direct election (with a second round of voting if no candidate secures 50% of the first-round votes) for a non-renewable four-year term. The unicameral Congress comprises 80 members, 64 elected locally and 16 from a national list, for four-year terms.

A referendum on constitutional reform was held on 30 Jan. 1994. The electorate was 3·4m.; turn-out was 17·5%. The reforms were approved by 83% of votes cast.

National Anthem. '¡Guatemala! Feliz' ('Happy Guatemala'); words by J. J. Palma, tune by R. Alvárez.

RECENT ELECTIONS

In a run-off for the presidency on 26 Dec. 1999 Alfonso Portillo Cabrera (FRG) won with 68·3% of the vote against Oscar Berger Perdomo (PAN). A further six candidates had participated in the first round of voting on 7 Nov. 1999.

Congressional elections were held on 7 Nov. 1999. The Guatemalan Republic Front (FRG) won 63 of a possible 113 seats, the National Progress Party (PAN) won 37 seats, the Guatemalan National Revolutionary Alliance 9, the Guatemalan Christian Democracy 2, the Progressive Liberator Party 1 and an alliance of the Green Organization and the Democratic Union 1.

GUINEA

République de Guinée

Capital: Conakry
Population estimate, 2000: 8·15m.
GDP per capita, 2000: (PPP$) 1,982
HDI/world rank: 0·414/159

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

In 1888 Guinea became a French protectorate, in 1893 a colony, and in 1904 a constituent territory of French West Africa. Forced labour and other colonial depredations ensued, although a form of representation was introduced in 1946. The independent Republic of Guinea was proclaimed on 2 Oct. 1958, after the territory of French Guinea had decided to leave the French community. Guinea became a single-party state. In 1980 the armed forces staged a coup and dissolved the National Assembly. Following popular disturbances a multi-party system was introduced in April 1992.

In 2000 fierce fighting broke out between Guinean government troops and rebels, believed to be a mix of Guinean dissidents and mercenaries from Liberia and Sierra Leone. More than 250,000 refugees were caught up in what the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees described as the world's worst refugee crisis.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Guinea is bounded in the northwest by Guinea-Bissau and Senegal, northeast by Mali, southeast by Côte d'Ivoire, south by Liberia and Sierra Leone, and west by the Atlantic Ocean.

The area is 245,857 sq. km (94,926 sq. miles). In 1996 the census population was 7,164,823 (density 29·1 per sq. km).

The UN gives a projected population for 2010 of 9·96m.

The capital is Conakry. In 1999, 68% of the population were rural.

The areas, populations and chief towns of the major divisions in 1991 were:

	Sq. km	1991 population	Chief town	Population (in year)
Conakry (city)	308	1,320,000	Conakry	1,764,000 (1999)
Guinée-Forestière	57,324	1,033,000	Nzérékoré	55,356 (1983)
Guinée-Maritime	43,980	975,000	Kindia	80,000 (1986)
Haute-Guinée	92,535	1,147,000	Kankan	70,000 (1992)
Moyenne-Guinée	51,710	1,262,000	Labé	110,000 (1986)

The country has since been divided into seven administrative regions: Boké, Faranah, Kankan, Kindia, Labé, Mamou and Nzérékoré.

The ethnic composition is Fulani (40·3%, predominant in Moyenne-Guinée), Malinké (or Mandingo, 25·8%, prominent in Haute-Guinée), Susu (11%, prominent in Guinée-Maritime), Kissi (6·5%) and Kpelle (4·8%) in Guinée-Forestière, and Dialonka, Loma and others (11·6%).

The official language is French.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Portugal was the major power in the area throughout the colonial period. In 1974, after the Portuguese revolution, Portugal abandoned the struggle to keep Guinea-Bissau and independence was formally recognized on 10 Sept. 1974. In 1975 Cape Verde also became independent but the two countries remained separate sovereign states. On 14 Nov. 1980 a coup d'état was in part inspired by resentment in Guinea-Bissau over the privileges enjoyed by Cape Verdians. Guineans obtained a more prominent role under the new government. On 16 May 1984 a new constitution was approved based on Marxist principles but after 1986 there was a return to private enterprise in an attempt to solve critical economic problems and to lift the country out of poverty. A year-long civil war broke out in 1998 between army rebels and the country's long-time ruler. Neighbouring Senegal and Guinea sent troops in to aid the government. On 7 May 1999 President João Bernardo Vieira was ousted in a military coup led by former chief of staff Gen. Ansumane Mané, whom the president had dismissed in 1998. Following the coup Mané briefly headed a military junta before National Assembly speaker Malam Bacai Sanhá took power as acting president. After presidential elections in Nov. 1999 and Jan. 2000 Kumba Ialá gained the presidency in a landslide victory. Marking a change towards a democratic future in Guinea-Bissau's politics, Ialá rejected a demand made by the outgoing junta for special consultative status following the elections.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Guinea-Bissau is bounded by Senegal in the north, the Atlantic Ocean in the west and by Guinea in the east and south. It includes the adjacent archipelago of Bijagós. Area, 36,125 sq. km (13,948 sq. miles). Population (1991 census), 983,367. Population estimate, 1997: 1,178,600 (606,800 female); density, 32·6 per sq. km. The capital, Bissau, had an estimated 274,000 inhabitants in 1999. In 1999, 76·7% of the population were rural.

The UN gives a projected population for 2010 of 1·53m.

The area, population, and chief town of the capital and the eight regions:

Region	Area in sq. km	Population (1991 census)	Chief town
Bissau City	78	197,610	—
Bafatá	5,981	143,377	Bafatá
Biombo	838	60,420	Bissau
Bolama	2,624	26,691	Bolama
Cacheu	5,175	146,980	Cacheu
Gabú	9,150	134,971	Gabú
Oio	5,403	156,084	Farim
Quinara	3,138	44,793	Fulacunda
Tombali	3,736	72,441	Catió

The main ethnic groups were (1998) the Balante (30%), Fulani (20%), Manjaco (14%), Mandingo (13%) and Papeis (7%). Portuguese remains the official language, but Crioulo is spoken throughout the country.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

First settled by the Dutch West Indian Company about 1620, the territory was captured by Britain to whom it was ceded in 1814 and named British Guiana. To work the sugar plantations African slaves were transported to Guyana in the 18th century and East Indian and Chinese indentured labourers in the 19th century. From 1950 the anti-colonial struggle was spearheaded by the People's Progressive Party (PPP) led by Cheddi Jagan and Forbes Burnham. By the time internal autonomy was granted in 1961 Burnham had split with Jagan to form the more moderate People's National Congress (PNC). Guyana became an independent member of the Commonwealth in 1966 with Burnham as the first prime minister, later president. By the 1980s, desperate economic straits had forced Guyana to seek outside help which came on condition of restoring free elections. Dr Jagan returned to power in 1992. Following his death in March 1997 his wife, Janet Jagan, was sworn in as President.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Guyana is situated on the northeast coast of Latin America on the Atlantic Ocean, with Suriname on the east, Venezuela on the west and Brazil on the south and west. Area, 83,000 sq. miles (214,969 sq. km). In 1991 the census population was 723,800; density 3·4 per sq. km. Estimated population (1997), 750,000.

The UN gives a projected population for 2010 of 783,000.

Guyana has the highest proportion of rural population in South America, with only 37·6% living in urban areas in 1999. Ethnic groups by origin: 49% Indian, 36% African, 7% mixed race, 7% Amerindian and 1% others. The capital is Georgetown (1999 population, 275,000); other towns are Linden, New Amsterdam, Rose Hall and Corriverton.

Venezuela demanded the return of the Essequibo region in 1963. It was finally agreed in March 1983 that the UN Secretary-General should mediate. There was also an unresolved claim (1984) by Suriname for the return of an area between the New River and the Corentyne River.

The official language is English.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Births, 1997, 29,000; deaths, 7,000. 1997 birth rate per 1,000 population, 34·7; death rate, 8·6. Life expectancy at birth in 1999, male 59·3 years and female 67·5 years. Overview. State control was reduced during the 1990s, with some privatization.

Currency. The unit of currency is the Guyana dollar (GYD) of 100 cents. Inflation was 2·7% in 2001. Foreign exchange reserves were US$280m. in June 2002 and total money supply was G$26·31bn.

Budget. Revenues in 1996–97 totalled G$36,293m. (current revenue, 94·3%) and expenditures G$42,305m. (current expenditure, 61·3%).

Performance. GDP growth in 2000 was negative, at –1·3%, but was followed by a slight recovery with growth in 2001 of 1·4%. Total GDP was US$0·7bn. in 2001.

Banking and Finance. The bank of issue is the Bank of Guyana (Governor, Dolly Singh), established 1965. Of the six commercial banks operating, two are foreign-owned. At March 1996 the total assets of commercial banks were G$62,587,892,000. Savings deposits were G$26,564·2m.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Environment. According to the World Bank Atlas Guyana's carbon dioxide emissions were the equivalent of 2·2 tonnes per capita in 1998.

Electricity. Capacity in 1995 was estimated at 157,000 kW; in 1998 production was 325m. kWh. Consumption per capita was 479 kWh in 1997.

Minerals. Placer gold mining commenced in 1884, and was followed by diamond mining in 1887. Output of bauxite in 1997 was 2,467,000 tonnes, and of gold 13,521 kg. Other minerals include copper, tungsten, iron, nickel, quartz and molybdenum.

Agriculture. Agricultural production, 2000 (in 1,000 tonnes): sugarcane, 3,000; rice, 600; coconuts, 56; cassava, 26; plantains, 14; bananas, 12; pineapples, 7.

Livestock (2000): cattle, 220,000; sheep, 130,000; goats, 79,000; pigs, 20,000; chickens, 13m. Livestock products, 2000 (in 1,000 tonnes): meat, 17; milk, 13; eggs, 7.

Forestry. In 1995 the area under forests totalled 18·58m. ha (94·4% of the land area), down from 18·62m. ha and 94·6% in 1990. In terms of percentage coverage, Guyana and Suriname were the world's most heavily forested countries in 1995. 25% of the country's energy needs are met by wood fuel. Timber production in 1999 was 467,000 cu. metres.

Fisheries. Fish landings in 1999 came to 53,844 tonnes, of which 99% was from sea fishing.

INDUSTRY

The main industries are agro-processing (sugar, rice, timber and coconut) and mining (gold and diamonds). There is a light manufacturing sector, and textiles and pharmaceuticals are produced by state and private companies. Production: sugar (1998), 263,010 tonnes; rum (1996), 237,200 hectolitres; beer (1995), 8·47m. litres; soft drinks (1996), 4,253,000 cases; textiles (1995), 322m. metres; footwear (1995), 54,132 pairs; margarine (1995), 1,262,420 kg; edible oil (1995), 2,388,120 litres; refrigerators (1995), 2,763 units; paint (1995), 923,847 litres.

Labour. In 1996 the labour force was 353,000 (67% males).

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Guyana's external debt in 2000 was US$1,455m.

Imports and Exports. In 1998 exports were valued at US$547·0m. and imports at US$601·2m. Principal commodities exported, 1996 (in US$1m.): sugar, 150·7; gold, 105·9; rice, 93·7; bauxite, 86·0. Other important export commodities included shrimps, timber and rum. Exports by volume, 1995: bauxite, 1,971,063 tonnes; sugar, 225,421 tonnes; rice, 200,544 tonnes; gold, 275,305 oz; shrimps, 827 tonnes; timber, 35,873 cu. metres. Major import suppliers: USA, Trinidad and Tobago, Netherlands Antilles; main export markets: Canada, UK, USA.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. In 1996 it was estimated there were 7,970 km of roads, of which 590 km were paved. Passenger cars numbered 24,000 in 1993 and commercial vehicles 9,000.

Rail. There is a government-owned railway in the North West District, while the Guyana Mining Enterprise operates a standard gauge railway of 133 km from Linden on the Demerara River to Ituni and Coomacka.

Civil Aviation. There is an international airport at Georgetown (Timehri). The national carrier is the state-owned Guyana Airways Corporation. In 1998 there were direct flights to Antigua, Barbados, Miami, New York, Paramaribo, Port of Spain and Toronto. In 1999 scheduled airline traffic of Guyana-based carriers flew 1·7m. km, carrying 70,000 passengers.

Shipping. The major port is Georgetown; there are two other ports. In 1995 sea-going shipping totalled 13,925 GRT. There are 217 nautical miles of river navigation. There are ferry services across the mouths of the Demerara, Berbice and Essequibo rivers.

Telecommunications. The inland public telegraph and radio communication services are operated by the Guyana Telephone and Telegraph Company Ltd. In 2000 there were 68,400 telephone main lines, equivalent to 79·4 per 1,000 population, and 22,000 PCs in use (or 25·6 for every 1,000 persons). Mobile phone subscribers numbered 1,500 in 1998. There were 3,000 Internet users in Dec. 1999.

Postal Services. In 1995 there were 85 post offices.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. The law, both civil and criminal, is based on the common and statute law of England, save that the principles of the Roman–Dutch law have been retained for the registration, conveyance and mortgaging of land.

The Supreme Court of Judicature consists of a Court of Appeal, a High Court and a number of courts of summary jurisdiction. Guyana was one of ten countries to sign an agreement in Feb. 2001 establishing a Caribbean Court of Justice to replace the British Privy Council as the highest civil and criminal court. The Court of Justice is expected to sit for the first time in the second half of 2003.

In 1996 there were 4,563 reported serious crimes, including 88 homicides. The population in penal institutions in Jan. 1998 was 1,697 (200 per 100,000 of national population).

Religion. In 1997, 57% of the population were Protestant and Roman Catholic, 33% Hindu, 9% Muslim and 1% other.

Education. In 1996–97 there were 365 pre-primary schools with 1,831 teachers for 30,736 pupils; 420 primary schools with 3,461 teachers for 102,000 pupils; and 62,043 pupils at secondary level. In 1995 there were 6,945 students at university level.

Adult literacy in 1999 was 98·4% (male, 98·8%; female, 97·9%). The rate of 98·4% is the highest in South America.

Health. In 1994 there were 30 hospitals (5 private), 162 health centres and 14 health posts. In 1997 there were 38·8 hospital beds per 10,000 population. There were (1993) 244 doctors, 34 dentists, 22 pharmacists, 172 midwives (1989) and 681 nursing personnel.

CULTURE

Broadcasting. The Guyana Broadcasting Corporation has two radio programmes. There were 46,000 TV receivers (colour by PAL) and 420,000 radio receivers in 1997. The Guyana Television Broadcasting Company (GTV) is state-owned and there are 12 private stations relaying US satellite services.

Cinema. In 1997 there were 18 cinemas.

Press. In 1996 there were two daily newspapers with a combined circulation of 42,000.

Tourism. There were 80,000 foreign visitors in 1998. Receipts totalled US$60m.

Festivals. There are a number of Christian, Hindu and Muslim festivals throughout the year.

Libraries. There is a National Library in Georgetown.

Museums and Galleries. The Guyana National Museum contains a broad selection of animal life and Guyanese heritage. Castellani House, the National Gallery, is home to the finest art collection in Guyana.

HDI/world rank: 0·471/146

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

In the 16th century, Spain imported large numbers of African slaves whose descendants now populate the country. The colony subsequently fell under French rule. In 1791 a slave uprising led to the 13-year-long Haitian Revolution. In 1801 Toussaint Louverture, one of the leaders of the revolution, succeeded in eradicating slavery. He proclaimed himself governor-general for life over the whole island. He was captured and sent to France, but Jean-Jacques Dessalines, one of his generals, led the final battle that defeated Napoleon's forces. The newly-named Haiti declared its independence on 1 Jan. 1804, becoming the first independent black republic in the world. Ruled by a succession of self-appointed monarchs, Haiti became a republic in the mid-19th century. From 1915 to 1934 Haiti was under United States occupation.

A corrupt regime was dominated by François Duvalier from 1957 to 1964 when he was succeeded by his son, Jean-Claude Duvalier. He fled the country on 7 Feb. 1986. After a period of military rule, Father Jean-Bertrand Aristide was elected president in Dec. 1990.

On 30 Sept. 1991 President Aristide was deposed by a military junta and went into exile. Under international pressure, parliament again recognized Aristide as president in June 1993. However, despite a UN led naval blockade, the junta showed no sign of stepping down. 20,000 US troops moved into Haiti on 19 Sept. in an uncontested occupation. President Aristide returned to office on 15 Oct. 1994 and on 1 April 1995 a UN peacekeeping force (MANUH) took over from the US military mission. Aristide was succeeded by René Préval who was generally assumed to be a stand-in for his predecessor. Jean-Bertrand Aristide subsequently won the presidential elections held in Nov. 2000. In Dec. 2001 there was an unsuccessful coup led by former police and army officers.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Haiti is bounded in the east by the Dominican Republic, to the north by the Atlantic and elsewhere by the Caribbean Sea. The area is 27,750 sq. km (10,714 sq. miles). The Île de la Gonave, some 40 miles long, lies in the gulf of the same name. Among other islands is La Tortue, off the north peninsula. Population (1996 est.), 7·3m. Population density, 263 per sq. km. In 1999, 64·9% of the population were rural.

The UN gives a projected population for 2010 of 9·50m.

Areas, populations (1995 estimates) and chief towns of the nine departments:

Department	Area (in sq. km)	Population	Chief town
Artibonite	4,895	1,013,800	Gonaïves
Centre	3,597	460,800	Hinche
Grande Anse	3,100	641,400	Jérémie
Nord	2,175	759,300	Cap Haïtien
Nord-Est	1,698	248,800	Fort-Liberté
Nord-Ouest	2,094	421,000	Port-de-Paix
Ouest	4,595	2,494,900	Port-au-Prince
Sud	2,602	653,400	Les Cayes
Sud-Est	2,077	457,000	Jacmel

The capital is Port-au-Prince (1999 population, 1,699,000); other towns are Cap Haïtien (100,638 in 1995); Gonaïves (63,291 in 1992), Les Cayes (45,904 in 1992) and Jérémie (43,277 in 1992). Most of the population is of African or mixed origin.

The official languages are French and Créole. Créole is spoken by all Haitians; French by only a small minority.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

1995 births, 247,000; deaths, 92,000. Birth rate (per 1,000 population), 1995, 34·7; death rate, 12·9. Annual population growth rate, 1990–99, 1·8%. Expectation of life at birth, 1999, 49·4 years for males and 55·4 years for females. Infant mortality, 1999, 83 per 1,000 live births; fertility rate, 1999, 4·3 births per woman.

In the Human Development Index, or HDI (measuring progress in countries in longevity, knowledge and standard of living), Haiti is the lowest-ranked country outside of Africa.

CLIMATE

A tropical climate, but the central mountains can cause semi-arid conditions in their lee. There are rainy seasons from April to June and Aug. to Nov. Hurricanes and severe thunderstorms can occur. The annual temperature range is small. Port-au-Prince, Jan. 77°F (25°C), July 84°F (28·9°C). Annual rainfall 53" (1,321 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The 1987 Constitution, ratified by a referendum, provides for a bicameral legislature (an 83-member Chamber of Deputies and a 27-member Senate), and an executive President, directly elected for a five-year term. The President can stand for a second term but only after a five-year interval.

National Anthem. 'La Dessalinienne'; words by J. Lhérisson, tune by N. Geffrard.

RECENT ELECTIONS

Presidential elections were held on 26 Nov. 2000. There were seven candidates. Jean-Bertrand Aristide was elected with 91·8% of votes cast. However, most opposition parties refused to recognize the result, with doubts being cast over the accuracy of the counting process.

Much delayed parliamentary elections were held on 21 May and 30 July 2000. In the vote for the Chamber of Deputies, Fanmi Lavalas (Water Fall Family/FL) won 72 of the available 82 seats, Mouvement Chrétien National (Christian National Movement/Mochrena) 3, Parti Louvri Baryé (Open the Gate Party/PLB), 2, Espace (Space/E) 2, Eskanp-Korega (EK) 1, Organisation de Peuple en Lutte (Organization of Struggling People/OPL) 1 and 1 seat went to a non-partisan. In elections for the Senate, FL claimed 18 of the 27 available seats, PLD took 1 and 9 seats were to be contested on 26 Nov. 2000.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

President: Jean-Bertrand Aristide; b. 1953 (FL; sworn in 7 Feb. 2001 for the fourth time).

In March 2003 the government comprised:

Prime Minister: Yvon Neptune; b. 1946 (FL; sworn in 15 March 2002).

Minister of Agriculture and Natural Resources and Rural Development: Sébastien Hilaire. Commerce and Industry: Leslie Gouthier. Culture and Communication: Lilas Desquiron. Economy and Finance: Faubert Gustave. Environment: Webster Pierre. Foreign Affairs and Religion: Joseph Philippe Antonio. Haitians Living Abroad: Leslie Voltaire. Interior and Territorial Collectivities: Jocelerme Privert. Justice: Delatour Calixte. National Education: Marie Carmelle Paul-Austin. Planning and External Co-operation: Paul Duret. Public Health and Population: Dr Henri Claude Voltaire. Public Works, Transport and Communications: Harry Clinton. Social Affairs: Eudes St Preux Craan. Tourism: Martine Deverson. Women's Affairs and Rights: Ginette Rivière Lubin.

DEFENCE

After the restoration of civilian rule in 1994 the armed forces and police were disbanded and a 3,000-strong Interim Public Security Force formed in 1995. In 2000 defence expenditure totalled US$48m. (US$6 per capita), representing 1·5% of GDP. For Police, see JUSTICE, below.

Army. The Army has effectively, although not formally, been disbanded. An Interim Public Security Force of 3,000 has been formed.

Navy. A small Coast Guard, based at Port-au-Prince, is being developed.

Air Force. The air force was disbanded in 1995.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

Although foreign aid has been promised, political infighting and corruption have held up US$340m. worth of aid. However, EU aid continues to arrive.

Haiti is a member of the UN, WTO, OAS, Inter-American Development Bank, ACS, CARICOM, IOM, International Organization of the Francophonie and is an ACP member state of the ACP-EU relationship.

ECONOMY

Agriculture accounted for 30·4% of GDP in 1998, industry 20·1% and services 49·6%.

Currency. The unit of currency is the gourde (HTG) of 100 centimes. Total money supply in June 2002 was 10,763m. gourdes. Inflation in 2001 was 16·7%. In April 2002 foreign exchange reserves were US$185m.

Budget. In 1996–97 revenues were US$284bn. and expenditure US$308m. No budget was voted for in the fiscal years 1997–98 or 1998–99 because of the absence of a prime minister or government.

Performance. Real GDP growth was 0·9% in 2000, but there was then a recession in 2001, with the economy contracting by 1·7%. Total GDP in 2001 was US$3·7bn.

Banking and Finance. The Banque Nationale de la République d'Haïti is the central bank and bank of issue (Governor, Fritz Jean). In 1999 there were 12 commercial banks.

Weights and Measures. The metric system and British imperial and US measures are in use.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Environment. According to the World Bank Atlas carbon dioxide emissions in 1998 were the equivalent of 0·2 tonnes per capita. An Environmental Sustainability Index compiled for the World Economic Forum meeting in Feb. 2002 ranked Haiti 137th in the world out of the 142 countries analysed, with 34·8%. The index measured the ability of countries to maintain favourable environmental conditions and examined various factors including pollution levels and the use or abuse of natural resources.

Electricity. Most of the country is only provided with around four hours of electricity a day, supplied by the state-owned Electricité d'Haiti. Installed capacity was 216,500 kW in 1995. Production in 1998 was 728m. kWh, with consumption per capita 33 kWh.

Minerals. Until the supply was exhausted in the 1970s, a small quantity of bauxite was mined.

Agriculture. There were 560,000 ha of arable land in 1998 and 350,000 ha of permanent crops. 65% of the workforce, mainly smallholders, make a living by agriculture carried on in seven large plains, from 0·2m. to 25,000 acres, and in 15 smaller plains down to 2,000 acres. Irrigation is used in some areas and in 1998 covered 75,000 ha. The main crops are (2000 production, in 1,000 tonnes): sugarcane, 800; cassava, 338; bananas, 323; plantains, 290; mangoes, 250; maize, 203; yams, 200; sweet potatoes, 180; rice, 130; sorghum, 98. Livestock (2000): cattle, 1·43m.; goats 1·94m.; pigs, 1·0m.; horses, 500,000; chickens, 6m.

Forestry. The area underforests in 1995 was 21,000 ha, or 0·8% of the total land area (25,000 ha and 0·9% in 1990). In 1999, 6·5m. cu. metres of roundwood were cut.

Fisheries. The total catch in 1999 was estimated to be 5,000 tonnes, of which 90% was from marine waters.

INDUSTRY

Manufacturing is largely based on the assembly of imported components: toys, sports equipment, clothing, electronic and electrical equipment. Textiles, steel, soap, chemicals, paint and shoes are also produced. Many jobs were lost to other Central American and Caribbean countries during the 1991–94 trade embargo, after President Aristide was deposed.

Labour. In 1996 the labour force was 3,209,000 (57% males). The unemployment rate in July 1998 was around 60%.

Trade Unions. Whilst at least six unions exist, their influence is very limited.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Foreign debt was US$1,169m. in 2000.

Imports and Exports. In 1998 exports (f.o.b.) totalled US$299·3m. and imports (f.o.b.) US$640·7m. The leading imports are petroleum products, foodstuffs, textiles, machinery, animal and vegetable oils, chemicals, pharmaceuticals, raw materials for transformation industries and vehicles. The USA is by far the leading trading partner, accounting for over 60% of both exports and imports. France, Germany and Italy are also important for exports and Japan, France and Germany for imports.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. Total length of roads was estimated at 4,160 km in 1996, of which 1,010 km were surfaced. There were 32,000 passenger cars in 1996 (4·4 per 1,000 inhabitants), plus 21,000 trucks and vans.

Civil Aviation. There is an international airport at Port-au-Prince. Cap Haïtien also has scheduled flights to the Turks and Caicos Islands and the Bahamas. In 1998 there were flights to Aruba, Cayenne, Curaçao, Fort de France, Miami, Montreal, New York, Panama City, Paris, Pointe-à-Pitre, St Maarten, St Martin, San Juan and Santo Domingo. In 2000 Port-au-Prince handled 924,000 passengers (781,000 on international flights) and 15,300 tonnes of freight.

Shipping. Port-au-Prince and Cap Haïtien are the principal ports, and there are 12 minor ports. In 1998 the merchant marine totalled 1,000 GRT. In 1997 vessels totalling 1,304,000 NRT entered ports.

Telecommunications. The state telecommunications agency is Teleco. Main telephone lines in 2000 numbered 72,500 (8·9 for every 1,000 inhabitants), and in 1999 there were 25,000 mobile phone subscribers. In Dec. 1999 there were approximately 6,000 Internet users.

Postal Services. There were 121 post offices in 1995. The postal service is fairly reliable in the capital and major towns. Many businesses, however, prefer to use express courier services (DHL and Federal Express).

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. The Court of Cassation is the highest court in the judicial system. There are four Courts of Appeal and four Civil Courts. Judges are appointed by the President. The legal system is basically French. In 1995 a new police force—Police Nationale d'Haiti (PNH)—was recruited from former military personnel and others not implicated in human rights violations. The PNH currently has about 5,000 members; there are plans to increase the size of the force in the near future.

The population in penal institutions in Feb. 1996 was 2,300 (30 per 100,000 of national population).

Religion. Since the Concordat of 1860 Roman Catholicism has been given special recognition, under an archbishop with nine bishops. The Episcopal Church has one bishop. 90% of the population are nominally Roman Catholic, while other Christian churches number perhaps 10%. Probably two-thirds of the population to some extent adhere to Voodoo, recognized as an official religion in 2003.

Education. The adult literacy rate in 1999 was 48·8% (51·1% among males and 46·8% among females). Haiti has the lowest literacy rate among males outside of Africa. Education is divided into nine years 'education fondamentale', followed by four years to 'Baccalaureate' and university/higher education. The school system is based on the French system and instruction is in French and Créole. About 20% of education is provided by state schools; the remaining 80% by private schools, including Church and Mission schools.

There are 360 primary schools (221 state, 139 religious), 21 public lycées, 123 private secondary schools, 18 vocational training centres and 42 domestic science centres.

There is a state university, several private universities and an Institute of Administration and Management.

Health. In 1994 there were 641 doctors, 95 dentists and 2,725 nurses, and 50 hospitals. There were ten beds per 10,000 population in 1994. In the period 1990–98 only 37% of the population had access to safe drinking water.

CULTURE

Broadcasting. Under the aegis of the Conseil National des Télécommunications, radio and TV programmes (colour by SECAM V) are broadcast by Radio Nationale and Télévision Nationale. There is a privately-owned cable TV company, and several privately-owned radio stations. There were 415,000 radio and 38,000 TV sets in 1997.

Cinema. There are ten cinemas in Port-au-Prince.

Press. There were two daily newspapers in 1998. In 1995 the press had a combined circulation of 45,000, at a rate of six per 1,000 inhabitants.

Tourism. In 1998 there were 150,000 foreign tourists, spending US$80m. Cruise ship arrivals numbered 246,000. There are only about 1,000 hotel rooms in the whole country.

Libraries. There is a public library, Bibliothèque Nationale, in Port-au-Prince. A private library open to scholars, Bibliothèque des Frères de l'Instruction Chrétienne, is nearby.

Theatre and Opera. The Théâtre National is in Port-au-Prince.

Museums and Galleries. The main museums are MUPANAH and the Musée de l'Art Haïtien, both in Port-au-Prince. There are at least 20 private art shops in Port-au-Prince and major towns.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Discovered by Columbus in 1502, Honduras was ruled by Spain until independence in 1821. Political instability was endemic throughout the 19th and most of the 20th century. The end of military rule seemed to come in 1981 when a general election gave victory to the more liberal and non-military party, PLH (Partido Liberal de Honduras). Considerable power, however, remained with the armed forces. Internal unrest continued into the 1990s with politicians and military leaders at loggerheads, particularly over attempts to investigate violations of human rights. In Oct. 1998 Honduras was devastated by Hurricane Mitch, the worst natural disaster to hit the area in modern times.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Honduras is bounded in the north by the Caribbean, east and southeast by Nicaragua, west by Guatemala, southwest by El Salvador and south by the Pacific Ocean. The area is 112,492 sq. km (43,433 sq. miles). In 1988 the census population was 4,248,561. The estimated population in 1997 was 5,751,400 (2,870,700 female), giving a density of 51 per sq. km. In 1999, 51·6% of the population were urban.

The UN gives a projected population for 2010 of 7·96m.

The chief cities (populations in 1,000, 1994) were Tegucigalpa, the capital (919, in 1999), San Pedro Sula (368·5), El Progreso (81·2), Choluteca (72·8), Danlí (43·3) and the Atlantic coast ports of La Ceiba (86·0), Puerto Cortés (33·5) and Tela (24·8); other towns include Comayagua (52·3), Siguatepeque (37·5), Juticalpa (25·6), Santa Rosa de Copán (23·4) and Olanchito (17·9).

Areas and 1991 populations estimates of the 18 departments and the Central District (Tegucigalpa):

Department	Area (in sq. km)	Population	Department	Area (in sq. km)	Population
Atlántida	4,251	255,000	Islas de la Bahía	261	24,000

DEFENCE

Conscription was abolished in 1995. In 2000 defence expenditure totalled US$93m. (US$14 per capita), representing 1·6% of GDP.

Army. The Army numbered (1999) 5,500. There is also a paramilitary Public Security Force of 6,000.

Navy. Personnel (1999), 1,000 including 400 marines. Bases are at Puerto Cortés and Amapala.

Air Force. There were 49 combat aircraft in 1999 including F-5E/F Tiger II fighters. Total strength was (1999) about 1,800 personnel.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

Honduras is a member of the UN, WTO, OAS, Inter-American Development Bank, CACM, ACS and IOM.

ECONOMY

Agriculture accounted for 20·3% of GDP in 1998, industry 30·9% and services 48·8%.

Currency. The unit of currency is the lempira (HNL) of 100 centavos. Foreign exchange reserves were US$1,526m. and gold reserves 21,000 troy oz in June 2002. Inflation was 9·7% in 2001. Total money supply in May 2002 was 11,610m. lempiras.

Budget. 1998 estimate: expenditure was US$1,152m. (including capital expenditures of US$150m.); revenues (1997) totalled US$655m.

Performance. Real GDP growth was 4·9% in 2000 and 2·6% in 2001. Total GDP in 2001 was US$6·4bn.

Banking and Finance. The central bank of issue is the Banco Central de Honduras (President, Maria Elena Mondragón de Villar). There is an agricultural development bank, Banadesa, for small grain producers, a state land bank and a network of rural credit agencies managed by peasant organizations. The Central American Bank for Economic Integration (BCIE) has its head office in Tegucigalpa. In 1999 there were 40 private banks, including four foreign.

There are stock exchanges in Tegucigalpa and San Pedro Sula.

Weights and Measures. The metric system has been legal since 1 April 1897, although there are still some minor traces of the Imperial and old Spanish systems.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Environment. Carbon dioxide emissions in 1998 were the equivalent of 0·8 tonnes per capita according to the World Bank Atlas.

Electricity. Installed capacity was 605,900 kW in 1995. Production in 1998 was 2·9bn. kWh (mainly hydro-electric); consumption per capita was 446 kWh.

Minerals. Output in 1998 (in 1,000 tonnes): lead, 10·4; zinc, 8·5. Silver, 15·3 tonnes. Small quantities of gold are mined, and there are also deposits of tin, iron, copper, coal, antimony and pitchblende.

Agriculture. There were 1·70m. ha of arable land in 1998 and 0·35m. ha of permanent crops. Legislation of 1975 provided for the compulsory redistribution of land, but in 1992 the grounds for this were much reduced, and a 5-ha minimum area for land titles abolished. Members of the 2,800 co-operatives set up in 1975 received individual shareholdings which can be broken up into personal units. Since 1992 women may have tenure in their own right. The state monopoly of the foreign grain trade was abolished in 1992. In 1996 the Agricultural Incentive Program was created (Ley de Incentivo Agrícola, LIA) which involves the redistribution of land for agricultural development.

Crop production in 2000 (in 1,000 tonnes): sugarcane, 3,896; maize, 534; bananas, 453; plantains, 250; coffee, 196; palm oil, 150; melons, 102; dry beans, 85; oranges, 80; pineapples, 71; sorghum, 65.

Livestock (2000): cattle, 1·95m.; pigs, 800,000; horses, 179,000; mules, 70,000; chickens, 18m.

Forestry. In 1995 forests covered 4·11m. ha, or 36·8% of the total land area (down from 41·3% of the land area in 1990). In 1999, 7·41m. cu. metres of roundwood were cut.

Fisheries. Shrimps and lobsters are important catches. The total catch in 1999 was 7,215 tonnes, almost entirely from sea fishing.

INDUSTRY

Industry is small-scale and local. 1995 output (in 1,000 tonnes): cement (1996), 952; raw sugar, 406; wheat flour, 216; fabrics, 11,641 metres; beer, 7,989,000 hectolitres; rum, 2·37m. litres.

Labour. The workforce was 1·9m. in 1999. In 1997, 36·9% of those in employment were in agriculture, forestry and fishing, 17·9% in community, social and personal services and 17·3% in manufacturing industries. Unemployment rate (1998 estimate): 6·5%.

Trade Unions. About 346,000 workers were unionized in 1994.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

In May 1992 Honduras, El Salvador and Guatemala agreed to create a free trade zone. Import duties are to be standardized. Foreign debt was US$5,487m. in 2000.

Imports and Exports. Imports (f.o.b.) in 2000 were valued at US$2,697·6m. and exports (f.o.b.) at US$2,039·2m.

Main exports are bananas, coffee, shrimps and lobsters, fruit, lead and zinc, timber, and refrigerated meats. Main imports are machinery and electrical equipment, industrial chemicals, and mineral products and lubricants. Principal export markets, 1995: USA, 42·7%; Germany, 19·3%; Japan, 6·7%; Spain, 3·9%. Principal import suppliers, 1995: USA, 46·6%; Netherlands, 7·5%; Guatemala, 6·8%; Mexico, 4·2%.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. Honduras is connected with Guatemala, El Salvador and Nicaragua by the Pan-American Highway. Out of a total of 15,400 km of roads (1996), 3,110 km were paved. In 1996 there were 201,000 vehicles registered.

Rail. The small government-run railway was built to serve the banana industry and is confined to the northern coastal region and does not reach Tegucigalpa. In 1995 there were 595 km of track in three gauges, which in 1994 carried 1m. passengers and 1·2m. tonnes of freight.

Civil Aviation. There are four international airports: San Pedro Sula (Ramon Villeda) and Tegucigalpa (Toncontín) are the main ones, plus Roatún and La Ceiba, with over 80 smaller airstrips in various parts of the country. The Honduras-based carriers are Aero Lineas Sosa and Caribbean Air. In addition to domestic flights and services to other parts of central America and the Caribbean, there were flights in 1998 to Barcelona, Dallas/Fort Worth, Houston, Madrid, Miami, New Orleans, New York, Orlando and Quito. In 2000 San Pedro Sula handled 636,000 passengers (507,000 on international flights) and 20,500 tonnes of freight, and Tegucigalpa handled 499,000 passengers (281,000 on international flights) and 8,400 tonnes of freight.

Shipping. The largest port is Puerto Cortés on the Atlantic coast. There are also ports at Henecán (on the Pacific) and Puerto Castilla and Tela (northern coast). In 1998 the merchant marine totalled 1,083,000 GRT, including oil tankers 108,000 GRT. Honduras is a flag of convenience registry.

Telecommunications. In 2000 there were 298,700 telephone main lines, or 46·1 for every 1,000 persons, and 70,000 PCs were in use (10·8 for every 1,000 persons). There were 78,600 mobile phone subscribers in 1999. Honduras had 40,000 Internet users in Dec. 1999.

Postal Services. There were 435 post offices in 1995.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. Judicial power is vested in the Supreme Court, with nine judges elected by the National Congress for four years; it appoints the judges of the courts of appeal, and justices of the peace.

The population in penal institutions in Dec. 1996 was 9,457 (160 per 100,000 of national population).

Religion. Roman Catholicism is the prevailing religion (5,050,000 followers in 1997), but the constitution guarantees freedom to all creeds, and the State does not contribute to the support of any. In 1997 there were 600,000 Evangelical Protestants and 170,000 followers of other faiths.

Education. Adult literacy in 1999 was 74·0% (male, 73·9%; female, 74·1%). Education is free, compulsory (from 7 to 12 years) and secular. There is a high drop-out rate after the first years in primary education. In 1995 the 8,168 primary schools had 1,008,092 children (28,978 teachers); the 661 secondary, normal and technical schools had 184,589 pupils (12,480 teachers). There were eight universities or specialized colleges, with a total of 54,293 students and 3,676 academic staff. In addition, 73,491 children attended pre-primary school.

In 1995 expenditure on education came to 3·6% of GNP and 16·5% of total government spending.

Health. In 1993 there were 3,803 doctors, 622 dentists, 6,288 nurses and 975 pharmacists. In 1994 there were 29 public hospitals and 32 private, with 4,737 beds, and 849 health centres.

CULTURE

Broadcasting. There were six commercial TV channels in 1993 (colour by NTSC) and various radio stations (mostly local). There were 570,000 TV sets and 2·45m. radio receivers in 1997.

Press. Honduras had eight national daily papers in 1998, with a combined circulation of 240,000.

Tourism. In 1999 there were 371,000 foreign tourists, spending US$165m.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The Hungarians call themselves 'Magyars'; 'Hungarian' derives from the Turkic name ('On ogur', i.e. ten arrows) of the tribal federation on the Don which Árpád and his horde left in order to settle the sparsely inhabited middle Danubian basin in 896. As nomadism gave way to agriculture a feudal society developed led by nobility descended from the original conquerors. In 1301 Árpád's line died out. Henceforth, with two exceptions, the throne was held by foreigners, sometimes holding other thrones simultaneously. In the 15th century the expansionist Ottoman empire reached the southern borders of Hungary. This first incursion was repelled but in 1526 the Turks annexed southern and central Hungary. The western rump came under Hapsburg rule which was extended to most of Hungary with the expulsion of the Turks in 1699. After a national rising in 1703, Emperor Charles IV restored the constitution and the Hungarian assembly recognized the Emperor's claim to the Hungarian throne. Nationalist sentiments supported the radical democracy of Lájos Kossuth who set up a breakaway government. Ruthless repression followed but Austria's military defeats in Italy (1859) and against Prussia (1866) forced the emperor to moderate his absolutism. Under the Compromise (Ausgleich) of 1867 a Dual Monarchy was constituted; Hungary gained internal autonomy while foreign affairs and defence became joint Austro-Hungarian responsibilities.

Hungary entered World War I on Austria's side but after the armistice of 3 Nov. 1918 a National Council proclaimed an independent republic. Political and social unrest, however, were compounded by a Romanian invasion. After Béla Kun's Soviet republic antagonized most of the population, a counter-revolutionary government appointed Admiral Horthy as regent.

Hungary's desire to revise the Versailles peace settlements brought her into alignment with Germany in the 1930s. In 1940 Hungary adhered to the Tripartite pact and in June 1941 sent a force to join the German invaders of the Soviet Union. But pro-German sentiment was never wholehearted. In Oct. 1944 Horthy was forced to abdicate in favour of a fascist 'Arrow Cross' government but by then Soviet forces were well inside the frontiers. At the elections of Nov. 1945 the Communists polled only 17% of the vote; their way to power was to lie in their leader Rákosi's 'salami tactics' of divide and purge, backed up by their acquisition of key ministries under Soviet pressure. A Soviet-type constitution was adopted in Aug. 1949 and Rákosi embarked on a programme of ruthless collectivization. Removed from the premiership by the post-Stalin Soviet leadership, he intrigued against his successor Imre Nagy's more liberal 'new course'. In 1956 the attempted suppression of a student demonstration sparked off a 13-day revolution. Nagy became prime minister and János Kádár party leader. Nagy declared Hungary's neutrality and withdrawal from the Warsaw pact. The Soviet army crushed the revolt on 4 Nov. and installed Kádár in power. Nagy was arrested and later executed; the gains of the uprising were harshly suppressed. Cautious economic reforms were introduced in the mid-60s when liberalization brought higher living standards. A gathering reformist tendency within the Hungarian Socialist Workers' (i.e. Communist) Party culminated in its self-dissolution in Oct. 1989 and reconstitution as the Hungarian Socialist Party. The People's Republic was abolished on 23 Oct. 1989. The following year a multi-party democracy, committed to political and economic reforms, was instituted.

Hungary gained membership to NATO in 1999 and is scheduled to join the EU in 2004.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Hungary is bounded in the north by Slovakia, northeast by Ukraine, east by Romania, south by Croatia and Serbia and Montenegro, southwest by Slovenia and west by Austria. The peace treaty of 10 Feb. 1947 restored the frontiers as of 1 Jan. 1938. The area of Hungary is 93,036 sq. km (35,921 sq. miles).

At the census of 1 Jan. 1990 the population was 10,374,823 (5,389,919 females); 1 Feb. 2001 census population, 10,197,119.

The UN gives a projected population for 2010 of 9·49m.

Hungary's population has been falling at such a steady rate since 1980 that its 2000 population was the same as that in the mid 1960s.

63·8% of the population was urban (18·7% of the urban population lived in Budapest in 1996) in 1999; population density, 1996, 109·8 per sq. km. Ethnic minorities, 1995: Roma (Gypsies), 4%; Germans, 2·6%; Serbs, 2%; Slovaks, 0·8%; Romanians, 0·7%. A law of 1993 permits ethnic minorities to set up self-governing councils. There is a worldwide Hungarian diaspora of nearly 2·5m. (1·5m. in the USA; 200,000 in Israel; 140,000 in Canada; 140,000 in Germany), and Hungarian minorities (3·2m. in 1992) in Romania (1·7m.), Slovakia (0·6m.), Yugoslavia (0·35m., mainly in Vojvodina) and Ukraine (0·16m.).

Hungary is divided into 19 counties (megyék) and the capital, Budapest, which has county status.

Area (in sq. km) and population (in 1,000) of counties and county towns:

SOCIAL STATISTICS

2001: births, 97,047; deaths, 132,183; marriages, 43,583; divorces, 26,000 (1999). In 2000 the number of births rose for the first time in a decade. There were 3,328 suicides in 1999. Rates (per 1,000 population), 2001: birth, 9·5; death, 13·0; marriage, 4·3; divorce, 2·6 (1999). Annual population growth rate, 1990–99, –0·3%. In 1999 the suicide rate per 100,000 population was 33·1, with the rate among men nearly three times as high as that among women. In 1998 the most popular age range for marrying was 20–24 for both males and females. Expectation of life at birth, 1999, 66·8 years for males and 75·4 years for females (the lowest of any OECD member country). Infant mortality, 2001, 8 per 1,000 live births. Fertility rate, 1999, 1·3 births per woman.

CLIMATE

A humid continental climate, with warm summers and cold winters. Precipitation is generally greater in summer, with thunderstorms. Dry, clear weather is likely in autumn, but spring is damp and both seasons are of short duration. Budapest, Jan. 32°F (0°C), July 71°F (21·5°C). Annual rainfall 25" (625 mm). Pécs, Jan. 30°F (–0·7°C), July 71°F (21·5°C). Annual rainfall 26·4" (661 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

On 18 Oct. 1989 the National Assembly approved by an 88% majority a constitution which abolished the People's Republic, and established Hungary as an independent, democratic, law-based state.

The head of state is the President, who is elected for five-year terms by the National Assembly.

The single-chamber National Assembly has 386 members, made up of 176 individual constituency winners, 152 allotted by proportional representation from county party lists and 58 from a national list. It is elected for four-year terms. A Constitutional Court was established in Jan. 1990 to review laws under consideration.

National Anthem. 'Isten áldd meg a magyart' ('God bless the Hungarians'); words by Ferenc Kölcsey, tune by Ferenc Erkel.

RECENT ELECTIONS

Ferenc Mádl was elected President by the National Assembly on 6 June 2000 by 243 votes to 96. In two previous rounds he had failed to achieve the required two-thirds majority.

In the Hungarian parliamentary elections on 7 and 21 April 2002 the centre-right coalition of Fidesz-Hungarian Civic Party (Fidesz-MPP) and the Hungarian Democratic Forum (MDF) won 188 seats with 41·1% of the votes, against 178 seats and 42·1% for the Hungarian Socialist Party (MSzP). The remaining 20 seats in the 386-seat National Assembly went to the Alliance of Free Democrats (SzDSz) who received 5·5% of votes cast. Parties which failed to win seats included the Hungarian Justice and Life Party (4·4%), the Centre Party (3·9%), the Worker's Party (2·8%) and the Independent Party of Smallholders, Agrarian Workers and Citizens (0·8%). Turn-out was 70·5%. Following the elections, a coalition was formed between the Hungarian Socialist Party and the Alliance of Free Democrats, giving them a total of 198 seats. Fidesz-MPP leader Viktor Orbán conceded defeat and a government was subsequently formed with Péter Medgyessy as prime minister.

DEFENCE

The President of the Republic is C.-in-C. of the armed forces.

Men between the ages of 18 and 23 are liable for nine months' conscription, or two years of civilian service.

Defence expenditure in 2000 totalled US$777m., compared to US$3,517m. in 1985. Per capita spending in 2000 was US$77, down from US$330 in 1985. The 2000 expenditure represented 1·7% of GDP, compared to 7·2% in 1985.

Army. Hungary is divided into four army districts: Budapest, Debrecen, Kiskunfélegyháza and Pécs. The strength of the Army was (1999) 23,500 (including 17,800 conscripts). There is an additional force of 12,000 border guards and 2,000 paramilitary police.

Navy. The Danube Flotilla, the maritime wing of the Army, consisted of some 290 personnel in 1999. It is based at Budapest.

Air Force. The Air Force is under the control of the Army General Staff, with a strength (1999) of 11,500 (5,100 conscripts). There were 136 combat aircraft including MiG-21s, MiG-23s, MiG-29s, Su-22s and 86 attack helicopters.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

Hungary is a member of the UN, WTO, BIS, NATO, OECD, Council of Europe, OSCE, CEFTA, CERN, CEI, Danube Commission, IOM, Antarctic Treaty, and is an Associate Member of the EU and an Associate Partner of the WEU. In April 1994 Hungary applied to join the EU and is expected to become a member by 2004. A European Commission report endorsed in Dec. 1999 named Hungary (along with Poland) as the country from central and eastern Europe most likely to be the first to join the EU. Hungary held a referendum on EU membership on 12 April 2003, in which 83·8% of votes cast were in favour of accession, with 16·2% against, although turn-out was less than 46%. Hungary is scheduled to become a member of the EU on 1 May 2004. Hungary became a member of NATO on 12 March 1999. In 2000 Hungary introduced a visa requirement for Russians entering the country as one of the conditions for EU membership.

Hungary has had a long-standing dispute with Slovakia over the Gabčíkovo-Nagymaros Project, involving the building of dam structures in both countries for the production of electric power, flood control and improvement of navigation on the Danube as agreed in a treaty signed in 1977 between Hungary and Czechoslovakia. In late 1998 Slovakia and Hungary signed a protocol easing tensions between the two nations and settling differences over the dam.

ECONOMY

Agriculture accounted for 6% of GDP in 1997, industry 34% and services 60%. In 1999 the private sector was responsible for an estimated 80% of economic output.

Overview. Free market principles have been at the centre of economic policy since 1990. In 1995 the State Property Agency and the State Holding Company were merged in a new body charged with extending the private sector's share of former state assets to 80%. Legislation of June 1991 compensates former owners or their descendants for property nationalized after May 1939. A Small Shareholder Programme of Privatization was launched in April 1994.

The OECD reported in 1998 that 'the extensive macroeconomic package introduced in 1995 (which included the adoption of a crawling-peg exchange rate regime, an impressive programme of privatization and a substantial fiscal tightening), as well as the deepening of structural reforms implemented earlier, created the conditions for the remarkable progress of the Hungarian economy over the past two years.'

Currency. A decree of 26 July 1946 instituted a new monetary unit, the forint (HUF) of 100 fillér. The forint was made fully convertible in Jan. 1991, and in June 2001 it was floated. Inflation had been 28% in 1995, but in Nov. 2002 was at an annualized rate of 4·8%, the lowest rate since the political changes of 1989. Foreign exchange reserves were US$9,695m. in June 2002 and gold reserves 101,000 troy oz. Total money supply in April 2002 was 2,662·29bn. forints.

Budget. Government revenue and expenditure (in 1bn. forints), year ending 31 Dec.:

	1995	1996	1997	1998	1999	2000
Revenue	2,268·7	2,712·0	3,194·0	3,686·2	4,402·5	4,790·0
Expenditure	2,773·0	3.024·0	3,747·1	4,523·2	4,939·4	6,069·7

VAT is 25·0%.

Performance. Real GDP growth was 4·2% in 1999, rising in 2000 to an impressive 5·2%. The economy then grew by only 3·8% in 2001, but this was still more than double the EU average. Total GDP was US$52·4bn. in 2001.

Banking and Finance. In 1987 a two-tier system was established. The National Bank (Director, Zsigmond Járai) remained the central state financial institution, responsible for the circulation of money and foreign currency exchange, but also became a central clearing bank, with general (but not operational) control over commercial banks and development banks. There are over 40 commercial banks and 20 insurance companies based in Budapest. The largest bank is OTP Bank Rt. (the National Savings and Commercial Bank of Hungary), with assets in 2000 of US$5·8bn. A law of June 1991 sets capital and reserve requirements, and provides for foreign investment in Hungarian banks. Permission is needed for investments of more than 10%. Privatization of the banking system is well under way.

The Hungarian International Trade Bank opened in London in 1973. In 1980 the Central European International Bank was set up in Budapest with seven western banks holding 66% of the shares.

A stock exchange was opened in Budapest in Jan. 1989.

Weights and Measures. The metric system is in use.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Environment. According to the World Bank Atlas Hungary's carbon dioxide emissions in 1998 were the equivalent of 5·8 tonnes per capita. An Environmental Sustainability Index compiled for the World Economic Forum meeting in Feb. 2002 ranked Hungary 11th in the world, with 62·7%. The index measured the ability of countries to maintain favourable environmental conditions and examined various factors including pollution levels and the use or abuse of natural resources.

Electricity. Installed capacity in 1997 was 8m. kW, about a quarter of which is nuclear. There is an 880 mW nuclear power station at Paks with four reactors. It produced an estimated 38% of total output in 1999. In 1998, 35·1bn. kWh of electricity were produced (approximately 40% by nuclear power); in 1995, 4,400m. kWh were imported. Consumption per capita in 1998 was 2,888 kWh.

Oil and Gas. Oil and natural gas are found in the Szeged basin and Zala county. Oil production in 1996 was 11m. bbls.; gas production in 1999 was 3·0bn. cu. metres with proven reserves of 80bn. cu. metres.

Minerals. Production in 1997 (in 1,000 tonnes): lignite, 14,684; hard coal, 924; bauxite (1998), 908.

Agriculture. Agricultural land was collectivized in 1950. It was announced in 1990 that land would be restored to its pre-collectivization owners if they wished to cultivate it. A law of April 1994 restricts the area of land that may be bought by individuals to 300 ha, and prohibits the sale of arable land and land in conservation zones to companies and foreign nationals. Today, although 90% of all cultivated land is in private hands, most farms are little more than smallholdings. Under the 1999 budget, funding for agriculture increased by 40%, with subsidies favouring small family farms. In 1998 agricultural exports totalled US$3bn. (an increase of 10% on 1997), including grain exports of more than 4m. tonnes. 20,000 tonnes of sour cherry and 17,000 tonnes of plums were exported in 1998.

In 1996 the agricultural area was (in 1,000 ha) 6,179, of which 4,716 were arable, 1,148 meadows and pastures, 90 market gardens, and 225 orchards and vineyards.

Agricultural production has dropped drastically since 1989. Production figures (2000, in 1,000 tonnes): maize, 4,874 (6,747 in 1989); wheat, 3,709 (6,509 in 1989); sugarbeets, 1,980 (5,277 in 1989); barley, 905; potatoes, 768; apples, 520; grapes, 500; sunflower seeds, 488.

Livestock has also drastically decreased since 1989 from 7·7m. pigs to 5·3m. by 2000, from 1·6m. cattle to 857,000, and from 2·1m. sheep to 934,000. Thus the pig stock, cattle stock and sheep stock have all declined to levels not seen in fifty years.

The north shore of Lake Balaton and the Tokaj area are important wine-producing districts. Wine production in 2000 was 300,000 tonnes.

Forestry. The forest area in 1995 was 1,719,000 ha, or 18·6% of the land area (up from 1,675,000 ha and 18·1% in 1990). Timber production in 1999 was 4·29m. cu. metres.

Fisheries. There are fisheries in the rivers Danube and Tisza and Lake Balaton. In 1993 there were 27,100 ha of commercial fishponds. In 1999 total catch was 7,514 tonnes, exclusively from inland fishing.

INDUSTRY

The leading companies by market capitalization in Hungary, excluding banking and finance, in Jan. 2002 were: Magyar Távközlési Rt. (MATÁV), the telecommunications company (1trn. forints); MOL Magyar Olaj-és Gázipari Rt (Hungarian Oil and Gas Plc), 489bn. forints; and Richter Gedeon Rt. (335bn. forints), a pharmaceuticals company. In 1995 there were 18,921 limited liability companies, 1,475 co-operative societies and 81,433 individual businesses.

Important items include food and beverages, chemicals and chemical products, motor vehicles, refined petroleum products, base metals and computers. Output growth in 1996 saw highly variable trends among the individual sectors of the manufacturing industry. The most dynamic sector continues to be the engineering industry. Its performance was driven by the 35·6% increase in exports. The manufacturing of non-ferrous mineral products went up by 1·2% (exports rose by 11·1%). With the exception of the engineering industry and manufacturing of non-ferrous mineral products the output of each sector of manufacturing industry declined: the textile and clothing industry by 4·2% and chemical industry by 0·6%. Within this, the domestic sales of the textile and clothing industry dropped by 8·5% and that of the chemical industry by 6·7%, while the exports of both sectors rose (by 3·7% and 35·6% respectively).

Labour. In 2001 out of an economically active population of 4,093,000 there were 3,860,000 employed persons, of which 3,296,000 were employees. Among the employed persons, 59·6% worked in services, 34·2% in industry and construction, and 6·2% in agriculture. Average gross monthly wages in 2001: 103,558 forints. Minimum monthly wage, 2001, 40,000 forints. In Jan. 2003 Hungary had an unemployment rate of 5·8%. Retirement age: men, 60; women, 55. Hungary is one of the few industrialized countries in which women put in longer hours than men. In 1996, 83% of women but only 80% of men put in more than 40 hours a week.

Trade Unions. The former official Communist organization (National Council of Trade Unions), renamed the Confederation of Hungarian Trade Unions (MSZOSZ), groups 70 organizations and claimed 1m. members in 1993. A law of 1991 abolished its obligatory levy on pay packets; its assets derived from this period are to be distributed to other unions. Other unions are grouped in six federations (with 1993 membership): the Association of Autonomous Trade Unions (ASZOK, 0·3m.); Coalition of Christian Trade Unions (KESZOSZ, 0·15m.); Co-operation Forum of Trade Unions (SZEF, 0·5m.); Council of Intellectual Trade Unions (ÉSZT, 0·1m.); League of Independent Trade Unions (Liga, 0·25m.); Works Councils (60,000).

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Hungary is a member of CEFTA, along with the Czech Republic, Poland, Slovakia and Slovenia. Foreign debt was US$29,415m. in 2000. At the end of 1995 foreign investments totalled US$11,500m. An import surcharge imposed in March 1995 was abolished in July 1997.

Imports and Exports. In 2001 the value of exports was US$30,498m. and that of imports US$33,682m. (up from US$28,092m. and US$32,079m. respectively in 2000). Machinery and transport equipment accounted for 57·5% of exports and 51·5% of imports in 2001, and manufactured goods 31·0% of exports and 35·3% of imports. 75% of exports go to European Union member countries, the highest share of any of the central and eastern European countries hoping to join the EU. The share of CIS countries is only around 2%. In 2001, 34·9% of exports went to Germany and 26·4% of imports came from Germany. Italy was the second biggest supplier of imports in 2001 (8·3% of the total) and Austria the second biggest market for exports (8·7%). In 1999, 1·4% of exports went to Russia, down from 13·1% in 1992. An import surcharge which was imposed in March 1995 was abolished in July 1997.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. In 1998 there were 188,203 km of roads, including 438 km of motorways and 29,630 km of main roads. Passenger cars numbered (1998) 2,365,100; trucks, vans and special-purpose vehicles, 325,300; buses, 19,400; and motorcycles, 138,000. 40·9m. tonnes of freight and 494·7m. passengers were transported by road in 1994 (excluding intra-urban passengers). In 1998 there were 19,665 road accidents with 1,478 fatalities.

Rail. Route length of public lines in 1998, 7,873 km, of which 2,594 km were electrified. 49·5m. tonnes of freight and 156·6m. passengers were carried. There is a metro in Budapest (30·1 km), and tram/light rail networks in Budapest (161·2 km), Debrecen, Miskolc and Szeged.

Civil Aviation. Budapest airport (Ferihegy) handled 4,683,000 passengers in 2000 (all on international flights) and 40,100 tonnes of freight. The national carrier is Malév, 65% state-owned. It carried 2,019,000 passengers in 1999 (1,826,000 in 1998).

Shipping. Navigable waterways had (1993) a length of 1,622 km. River craft included: passenger ships, 63; tugs, 35; self-propelled barges and other ships, 21; barges, 170. In 1995, 3·52m. tonnes of cargo and 2·38m. passengers were carried. Merchant shipping totalled 15,000 GRT in 1998. The Hungarian Shipping Company (MAHART) has agencies at Amsterdam, Alexandria, Algiers, Beirut, Rijeka and Trieste. It has three sea-going ships.

Telecommunications. There were 3,798,300 main telephone lines in 2000, equivalent to 372·5 per 1,000 population, and 870,000 PCs in use (85·3 per 1,000 persons). Hungary had 1·8m. mobile phone subscribers in March 2000 (18% of the population) and 1·2m. Internet users in April 2001. In 1997 there were 120,000 fax machines.

Postal Services. In 2001 there were 2,581 post offices.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. The administration of justice is the responsibility of the Procurator-General, elected by Parliament for six years. There are 111 local courts, 20 labour law courts, 20 county courts, 6 district courts and a Supreme Court. Criminal proceedings are dealt with by the regional courts through three-member councils and by the county courts and the Supreme Court in five-member councils. A new Civil Code was adopted in 1978 and a new Criminal Code in 1979.

Regional courts act as courts of first instance; county courts as either courts of first instance or of appeal. The Supreme Court acts normally as an appeal court, but may act as a court of first instance in cases submitted to it by the Public Prosecutor. All courts, when acting as courts of first instance, consist of 1 professional judge and 2 lay assessors, and, as courts of appeal, of 3 professional judges. Local government Executive Committees may try petty offences.

Regional and county judges and assessors are elected by the appropriate local councils; members of the Supreme Court by Parliament.

The Office of Ombudsman was instituted in 1993. He or she is elected by parliament for a six-year term, renewable once.

There are also military courts of the first instance. Military cases of the second instance go before the Supreme Court.

The death penalty was abolished in Oct. 1990.

The population in penal institutions in Dec. 1997 was 13,405 (135 per 100,000 of national population). 88,436 sentences were imposed on adults in 1999, including 29,474 of imprisonment. There were 11,450 juvenile offenders and 2,250 juveniles were in prison in 1999.

Religion. Church-state affairs are regulated by a law of Feb. 1990 which guarantees freedom of conscience and religion and separates church and state by prohibiting state interference in church affairs. Religious matters are the concern of the Department for Church Relations, under the auspices of the Prime Minister's Office. State aid to all churches was 2,800m. forints in 1993.

In 1995, 67·5% of the population aged 14 and over were Roman Catholic, 20% Calvinist and 5% Lutheran.

The Primate of Hungary is Péter Erdő, Archbishop of Esztergom-Budapest, installed in Jan. 2003. There are 11 dioceses, all with bishops or archbishops. There is one Uniate bishopric.

In 1993 there were estimated to be 7m. Roman Catholics, 1·9m. Calvinists and 0·43m. Lutherans. 47 other sects had registered as churches. There were four Orthodox denominations with 40,000 members in 1979. The Unitarian Church had 10,000 members, 11 ministers and 6 churches. In 1991 there were 100,000 Jews (444,567 in 1937) with 136 synagogues, 26 rabbis and a rabbinical college that enrols ten students a year.

Education. Adult literacy rate in 1999 was 99·5% (male, 99·5%; female, 99·2%). Education is free and compulsory from 6 to 14. Primary schooling ends at 14; thereafter education may be continued at secondary, secondary technical or secondary vocational schools, which offer diplomas entitling students to apply for higher education, or at vocational training schools which offer tradesmen's diplomas. Students at the latter may also take the secondary school diploma examinations after two years of evening or correspondence study. Optional religious education was introduced in schools in 1990.

In 1999–2000 there were 4,643 kindergartens with 31,409 teachers and 365,700 pupils; in 1999–2000 there were 3,696 primary schools with 82,829 teachers and 960,600 pupils; 1,054 secondary schools with 32,317 teachers and 386,600 pupils; there were, in 1999–2000, 201 schools for special needs with 45,245 pupils and 7,244 teachers, and 356 trade training schools, with 109,500 apprentices and 5,002 teachers and instructors. In 1994–95 there were 317 vocational training schools with 1,305 teachers and 22,241 trainees. In 1999–2000 there were 89 higher education institutions, including 6 universities (Budapest, Pécs, Szeged, Debrecen, Miskolc and Veszprém). At these there were 21,138 teachers and 171,600 full-time students. The number of students in all forms of higher education doubled between 1994 and 2000, when 311,586 students were enrolled. In 1990 only 11% of 18- to 23-year-olds were enrolled in higher education. By 2000 the proportion had risen to 35% and the target for 2010 is 50%.

Schools for ethnic minorities, 1997–98: kindergartens, 386, with 20,440 pupils and 993 teachers; primary schools, 390, with 53,021 pupils and 1,357 teachers; secondary schools, 27, with 2,310 pupils and 179 teachers.

In 1996 total expenditure on education came to 4·6% of GNP.

Health. In 1999 there were 36,386 doctors and 84,247 hospital beds; in 1995 there were 5,069 dentists, 2,024 pharmacies and 2,414 midwives. While there is an excess supply of doctors, there are too few nurses and wages for both groups are exceptionally low. Reform of the healthcare system is one of the most urgent measures required before Hungary can become a member of the EU. Spending on health, which accounts for 4·5% of GDP, is set to increase to 6·5% by 2006.

Welfare. In 1998 the Hungarian parliament decided to place the financial funds of health and pension insurance under government supervision. The self-governing bodies which had previously been responsible for this were dissolved. Medical treatment is free. Patients bear 15% of the cost of medicines. Sickness benefit is 75% of wages, old age pensions (at 60 for men, 55 for women) 60–70%. In 1995, 582,200m. forints were paid out in pensions to 2·98m. pensioners (including old age, 1·6m.; disabled, 0·75m.; widows, 0·22m.). In 1995, 100,200m. forints in family allowances were paid to 1·4m. families on behalf of 2·36m. children. Monthly allowances (in forints) are: one child, 2,750; two, 3,250; three and more, 3,750 (more for single parents). Of nearly 2·5m. minors (aged 0–18), 40% live in poverty.

CULTURE

Broadcasting. The government network Magyar Rádio broadcasts four programmes on medium wave and FM and also regional programmes, including transmissions in German, Romanian and Serbo-Croat. There are four other networks, three of them commercial. Magyar Televizió operates two TV channels (colour by PAL). Duna Televizió broadcasts to Hungarians abroad. In 1996 there were 31 independent radio and 26 independent TV stations. There were 7·01m. radios in use and 4·45m. TV sets in 1997.

Cinema. There were 595 cinemas in 1995; attendance, 14m.; gross box office receipts came to 2,311m. forints; 12 full-length feature films were made.

Press. In 1996 there were 40 daily newspapers with a combined circulation of 1,895,000, at a rate of 186 per 1,000 inhabitants. The most widely read newspaper is Népszabadság, the one-time Communist Party newspaper. In 1995 there were 28 weeklies and in 2001 a total of 8,837 book titles were published in 32·62m. copies.

Tourism. In 1999 there were 12·93m. foreign tourists. 11·1m. Hungarians travelled abroad in 2001. Revenue from foreign tourists in 1999 was US$3·39bn. 8% of GDP is produced by tourism.

Festivals. The Budapest Spring Festival, comprising music, theatre, dance etc., takes place in March. The Balaton Festival is in May and the Szeged Open-Air Theatre Festival is in July–Aug.

Libraries. In 2001 there were 3,429 public libraries and three National libraries. They held a combined 45,630,000 volumes for 1,416,000 registered users.

Theatre and Opera. Hungary had 47 theatres in 1997.

Museums and Galleries. There were 776 museums and galleries in 1997.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The first settlers came to Iceland in 874. Between 930 and 1262 Iceland was an independent republic, but by the 'Old Treaty' of 1262 the country recognized the King of Norway. In 1380 Iceland, together with Norway, came under the Danish kings, but when Norway was separated from Denmark in 1814, Iceland remained with Denmark. The invention of motorized fishing boats in the late nineteenth century revolutionized the fishing industry and gave impetus to the campaign for self determination. After 1 Dec. 1918 Iceland was acknowledged as a sovereign state. It was united with Denmark only through the common sovereign until it was proclaimed an independent republic on 17 June 1944 following a referendum favouring severance from the Danish crown.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Iceland is an island in the North Atlantic, close to the Arctic Circle. Area, 103,000 sq. km (39,758 sq. miles).

There are eight regions:

Region	Inhabited land (sq. km)	Mountain pasture (sq. km)	Waste-land (sq. km)	Total area (sq. km)	Population (1 Dec. 2001)
Capital area / Southwest Peninsula	1,266	716	–	1,982	178,000 / 16,727
West	5,011	3,415	275	8,711	14,457
Western Peninsula	4,130	3,698	1,652	9,470	8,014
Northland West	4,867	5,278	2,948	13,093	9,310
Northland East	9,890	6,727	5,751	22,368	26,618
East / South	16,921	17,929	12,555	21,991 / 25,214	11,798 / 21,326
Iceland	42,085	37,553	23,181	102,819	286,250

Of the population of 286,250 in 2001, 18,149 were domiciled in rural districts and 264,588 (92·4%) in towns and villages (of over 200 inhabitants). Population density (2001), 3·0 per sq. km.

The UN gives a projected population for 2010 of 297,000.

The population is almost entirely Icelandic. In 2001 foreigners numbered 9,850 (1,666 Polish, 945 Danish, 601 US, 591 German, 547 Filipino, 501 Yugoslav, 481 Thai, 435 British, 316 Swedish, 314 Norwegian).

The capital, Reykjavík, had on 1 Dec. 2001 a population of 111,517; other towns were: Akranes, 5,520; Akureyri, 15,632; Bolungarvík, 958; Dalvík, 1,455; Eskifjörður, 958; Garðabær, 8,445; Grindavík, 2,336; Hafnarfjörður, 20,223; Húsavík, 2,413; Ísafjörður, 3,026; Keflavík, 7,932; Kópavogur, 24,229; Neskaupstaður, 1,411; Njarðvík, 2,889; Ólafsfjörður, 1,035; Sauðárkrókur, 2,584; Selfoss, 4,814; Seltjarnarnes, 4,662; Seyðisfjörður, 773; Siglufjörður, 1,508; Vestmannaeyjar, 4,458.

The official language is Icelandic.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Statistics for calendar years:

2001	4,091	11	1,484 (13 same sex)	551	1,725	11	968

2001 rates per 1,000 population: births, 14·3; deaths, 6·0. 63% of births are to unmarried mothers, the highest percentage in Europe. Annual population growth rate, 1990–2001, 1·0%. In 2001 the most popular age range for marrying was 25–29 for both males and females. Life expectancy, 2001: males, 78·1 years; females, 82·2. Infant mortality, 2000, 2·7 per 1,000 live births (one of the lowest rates in the world); fertility rate, 2001, 1·9 births per woman.

CLIMATE

The climate is cool temperate oceanic and rather changeable, but mild for its latitude because of the Gulf Stream and prevailing S.W. winds. Precipitation is high in upland areas, mainly in the form of snow. Reykjavík, Jan. 33·8°F (1·0°C), July 51·6°F (10·9°C). Annual rainfall 31·4" (792 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The President is elected by direct, popular vote for a period of four years.

The Alþingi (parliament) was elected by the former electoral law of 1984 but in the next elections a new electoral law will be used.

The new law, from 1999, provides for an Alþingi of 63 members. According to the new law the country is divided into a minimum of six and a maximum of seven constituencies. There are currently six constituencies: Northwest (10 seats); Northeast (10 seats); South (10); Southwest (11); Reykjavik north (11); and Reykjavik south (11).

National Anthem. 'Ó Guð vors lands' ('Oh God of Our Country'); words by M. Jochumsson, tune by S. Sveinbjörnsson.

RECENT ELECTIONS

President Ólafur Ragnar Grímsson was reappointed for a second term on 1 Aug. 2000, no opposing candidates having come forward.

In the parliamentary election held on 10 May 2003, the conservative Independence Party (SSF) of Prime Minister Davíð Oddsson won 22 of the 63 seats with 33·7% of the votes cast, the Alliance (SF)—consisting of the People's Alliance, the People's Party and the Alliance of the Women's List—20 with 31·0%, the Progressive Party (FSF) 12 with 17·7%, the Left-Green Alliance (VG) 5 with 8·8% and the Liberal Party (FF) 4 with 7·4%. DEFENCE

Iceland possesses no armed forces. Under the North Atlantic Treaty, US forces are stationed in Iceland as the Iceland Defence Force.

Navy. There is a paramilitary coastguard of 125.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

Iceland is a member of the UN, WTO, BIS, NATO, OECD, EFTA, OSCE, the Council of Europe, the Nordic Council and Council of the Baltic Sea States, and is an Associate Member of the WEU. Iceland has acceded to the Schengen Accord, which abolishes border controls between Iceland, Austria, Belgium, Denmark, Finland, France, Germany, Greece, Italy, Luxembourg, the Netherlands, Norway, Portugal, Spain and Sweden.

ECONOMY

Services contributed 62·6% of GDP in 2001, industry 23·5%, and agriculture and fishing 13·9%.

According to the anti-corruption organization Transparency International, Iceland ranked 4th in the world in a 2002 survey of the countries with the least corruption in business and government. It received 9·4 out of 10 in the annual index.

Currency. The unit of currency is the króna (ISK) of 100 aurar, (singular: eyrir). Foreign exchange markets were deregulated on 1 Jan. 1992. The krona was devalued 7·5% in June 1993. Inflation was 3·4% in 1999, 5·1% in 2000, 6·6% in 2001 and 4·8% in 2002; the average annual rate during the period 1992–2001 was 3·2%. Foreign exchange reserves were US$366m. and gold reserves 62,000 troy oz in June 2002. Note and coin circulation at 31 Dec. 2001 was 7,406m. kr.

Budget. Total central government revenue and expenditure for calendar years (in 1m. kr.):

	1997	1998	1999	2000	2001[1]	2002[2]
Revenue	151,300	170,500	197,000	209,600	223,100	236,600
Expenditure	148,500	164,300	181,500	193,300	218,100	233,000

[1]Estimated. [2]Budgeted figure.

Central government debt was, on 31 Dec. 2001, 298,300m. kr., of which the foreign debt amounted to 198,289m. kr.

VAT is 24·5%.

Performance. GDP in 2001 totalled US$7·5bn. Real GDP growth was 4·1% in 1999, 5·0% in 2000 and 3·6% in 2001.

Banking and Finance. The Central Bank of Iceland (founded 1961; Governor, Birgir Ísleifur Gunnarsson) is responsible for note issue and carries out the central banking functions. There are five commercial banks in Iceland, two of them partly government-owned, and 24 smaller savings banks. The government had by 2002 sold to the public a substantial share of the two banks in which it has held a stake and was in the process of selling off more shares.

On 31 Dec. 2001 the accounts of the Central Bank balanced at 116,144m. kr. Commercial bank deposits were 273,441m. kr., and deposits in the 29 savings banks 82,054m. kr.

There is a stock exchange.

Weights and Measures. The metric system is obligatory.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Environment. According to the World Bank Atlas Iceland's carbon dioxide emissions in 1998 were the equivalent of 7·6 tonnes per capita. An Environmental Sustainability Index compiled for the World Economic Forum meeting in Feb. 2002 ranked Iceland eighth in the world, with 63·9%. The index measured the ability of countries to maintain favourable environmental conditions and examined various factors including pollution levels and the use or abuse of natural resources.

Electricity. The installed capacity of public electrical power plants at the end of 2001 totalled 1,427,000 kW; installed capacity of hydro-electric plants was 1,104,500 kW. Total electricity production in public-owned plants in 2001 amounted to 8,028m. kWh; in privately owned plants, 5m. kWh. Consumption per capita was estimated in 2001 to be 28,164 kWh.

Agriculture. Of the total area, about six-sevenths is unproductive, but only about 1·3% is under cultivation, which is largely confined to hay and potatoes. Arable land totalled 7,000 ha in 2001. In 2001 the total hay crop was 2,391,067 cu. metres; the crop of potatoes, 11,366 tonnes; of cucumbers, 1,049 tonnes; and of tomatoes, 964 tonnes. Livestock (end of 2001): horses, 73,809; cattle, 70,168 (milch cows, 26,240); sheep, 473,535; pigs, 4,561; poultry, 128,241. Livestock products (2001, in tonnes): milk, 106,149; butter and dairy margarines, 1,499; cheese, 4,058; lamb, 8,616.

Forestry. In 1995 forests covered 11,000 ha, or approximately 0·1% of the total land area.

Fisheries. Fishing is of vital importance to the economy. Fishing vessels at the end of 2001 numbered 892 with a gross tonnage of 186,573. Total catch in 1998, 1,678,696 tonnes; 1999, 1,732,694; 2000, 1,980,163; 2001, 1,986,584. Virtually all the fish caught is from marine waters. Iceland has received international praise for its management system which aims to avoid the over-fishing that has decimated stocks in other parts of the world. In 2001 fisheries accounted for 12·5% of GDP, down from 16·8% in 1996. The per capita consumption of fish and fishery products is the second highest in the world, after that of the Maldives.

Fishery limits were extended from 12 to 50 nautical miles in 1972 and to 200 nautical miles in 1975.

INDUSTRY

Production, 2000, in 1,000 tonnes: aluminium, 224·4; ferro-silicon, 103·4; fertilizer (1995), 50·6; diatomite, 27·6; sales of cement, 143·7.

Labour. In 2001 the economically active population was 162,700, of which 2·3% were unemployed. In the period 1989–98 Iceland averaged 445 working days lost to strikes per 1,000 employees—the highest number in any western European country. In 1997 public services employed 19·6% of the economically active population, commerce 15·6%, manufacturing 11·9%, fisheries and fish processing 10·6%, finance and insurance companies 9·0% and construction and energy also 9·0%.

Trade Unions. In 2001 trade union membership was 85·1% of the workforce.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

The economy is heavily trade-dependent.

Imports and Exports. Total value of imports (c.i.f.) and exports (f.o.b.) in 1,000 kr.:

	1997	1998	1999	2000	2001

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. On 31 Dec. 2001 the length of the public roads (including roads in towns) was 12,955 km. Of these 8,209 km were main and secondary roads and 4,746 km were provincial roads. Total length of surfaced roads was 3,863 km. A ring road of 1,400 km runs just inland from much of the coast; about 80% of it is smooth-surfaced. Motor vehicles registered at the end of 2001 numbered 181,566, of which 161,575 were passenger cars and 19,990 lorries; there were also 1,752 motorcycles. There were 19 fatal road accidents in 2001 with 24 persons killed.

Civil Aviation. Icelandair is the national carrier. In 1998 it served 12 destinations in western Europe and six in north America as well as operating domestic services. In 1999 it carried 1·3m. passengers. The main international airport is at Keflavík (Leifsstöd), with Reykjavík for flights to the Faroe Islands, Greenland and domestic services. Keflavík handled 1,360,605 passengers in 2001 (of which 331,582 transit passengers) and 41,208 tonnes of freight.

Shipping. Total registered vessels, 1,135 (232,682 gross tonnage) on 31 Dec. 2001; of these, 959 were sea-going fishing vessels.

Telecommunications. In 2001 the number of telephone main lines was 157,528; mobile phone subscribers, 248,031. A survey conducted by EMC World Cellular Database in Sept. 2000 found that Iceland had overtaken Finland as the country with the largest number of mobile phones per capita (75·8 per 100 persons). In 1995 there were 80,000 fax machines; and in 2000, 110,000 PCs (391·5 per 1,000 persons). There were 195,000 Internet users in Dec. 2001, 69·80% of the total population (the highest percentage in the world).

Postal Services. At the end of 2001 the number of post offices was 94.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. In 1992 jurisdiction in civil and criminal cases was transferred from the provincial magistrates to eight new district courts, separating the judiciary from the prosecution. From the district courts there is an appeal to the Supreme Court in Reykjavík, which has eight judges.

The population in penal institutions in 1995 was 113 (40 per 100,000 of national population).

Religion. The national church, the Evangelical Lutheran, is endowed by the state. There is complete religious liberty. The affairs of the national church are under the superintendence of a bishop. At 1 Dec. 2001, 249,256 (87·1%) of the population were members of it (93·2% in 1980). 11,633 persons (4·1%) belonged to Lutheran free churches. 18,815 persons (6·6%) belonged to other religious organizations and 6,571 persons (2·3%) did not belong to any religious community.

Education. Primary education is compulsory and free from 6–15 years of age. Optional secondary education from 16 to 19 is also free. In 2000–01 there were 44,137 pupils in primary schools, 20,740 in secondary schools (18,291 on day courses) and 11,964 tertiary-level students (10,183 on day courses). Some 15% of tertiary-level students study abroad.

There are eight universities and specialized colleges at the tertiary level in Iceland. The largest is the University of Iceland in Reykjavík (founded 1911). There is also a university in Akureyri (founded 1987). Total enrolment of these two institutions was 6,100 students in 1997–98. In Reykjavík there are a teachers' university, a technical college, business colleges and an agricultural university.

In 2000 public sector spending on education was 5·8% of GNP.

The adult literacy rate in 1998 was at least 99%.

Health. On 31 Dec. 1994 there were 57 hospitals with 3,924 beds. In 2000 there were 968 doctors, 283 dentists, 2,237 nurses and 234 pharmacists. In 2000 there were 3·4 doctors per 1,000 inhabitants. Iceland has one of the lowest alcohol consumption rates in Europe, at 6 litres of alcohol per adult a year (2000), compared to a European Union average of 11 litres.

Iceland has one of the lowest rates of Aids in the EU, with 11·2 cases per 100,000 population.

Welfare. The main body of social welfare legislation is consolidated in six acts:

(i) The social security legislation (a) health insurance, including sickness benefits; (b) social security pensions, mainly consisting of old age pension, disablement pension and widows' pension, and also children's pension; (c) employment injuries insurance.

(ii) The unemployment insurance legislation, where daily allowances are paid to those who have met certain conditions.

(iii) The subsistence legislation. This is controlled by municipal government, and social assistance is granted under special circumstances, when payments from other sources are not sufficient.

(iv) The tax legislation. Prior to 1988 children's support was included in the tax legislation, according to which a certain amount for each child in a family was subtracted from income taxes or paid out to the family. Since 1988 family allowances are paid directly to all children age 0–15 years. The amount is increased with the second child in the family, and children under the age of seven get additional benefits. Single parents receive additional allowances. The amounts are linked to income.

(v) The rehabilitation legislation.

(vi) Child and juvenile guidance.

Health insurance covers the entire population. Citizenship is not demanded and there is a six-month waiting period. Most hospitals are both municipally and state run, a few solely state run and all offer free medical help. Medical treatment out of hospitals is partly paid by the patient; the same applies to medicines, except medicines of lifelong necessary use, which are paid in full by the health insurance. Dental care is partly paid by the state for children under 17 years old and also for old age and disabled pensioners. Sickness benefits are paid to those who lose income because of periodical illness. The daily amount is fixed and paid from the 11th day of illness.

The pension system is composed of the public social security system and some 90 private pension funds. The social security system pays basic old age and disablement pensions of a fixed amount regardless of past or present income, as well as supplementary pensions to individuals with low present income. The pensions are index-linked, i.e. are changed in line with changes in wage and salary rates in the labour market. The private pension funds pay pensions that depend on past payments of premiums that are a fixed proportion of earnings. The payment of pension fund premiums is compulsory for all wage and salary earners. The pensions paid by the funds differ considerably between the individual funds, but are generally index-linked. In the public social security system, entitlement to old age and disablement pensions at the full rates is subject to the condition that the beneficiary has been resident in Iceland for 40 years at the age period of 16–67. For shorter period of residence, the benefits are reduced proportionally. Entitled to old age pension are all those who are 67 years old, and have been residents in Iceland for three years of the age period of 16–67. Entitled to disablement pension are those who have lost 75% of their working capacity and have been residents in Iceland for three years before application or have had full working capacity at the time when they became residents. Old age and disablement pension are of equally high amount; in the year 1999 the total sum was 198,645 kr. for an individual. Married pensioners are paid 90% of two individuals' pensions. In addition to the basic amount, supplementary allowances are paid according to social circumstances and income possibilities. Widows' pensions are the same amount as old age and disablement pension, provided the applicant is over 60 when she becomes widowed. Women in the age range 50–60 get a reduced pension. Women under 50 are not entitled to widows' pensions.

The employment injuries insurance covers medical care, daily allowances, disablement pension and survivors' pension and is applicable to practically all employees.

Social assistance is primarily municipal and granted in cases outside the social security legislation. Domestic assistance to old people and disabled is granted within this legislation, besides other services.

Child and juvenile guidance is performed by chosen committees according to special laws, such as home guidance and family assistance. In cases of parents' disablement the committees take over the guidance of the children involved.

CULTURE

Broadcasting. The state-owned public service, The Icelandic State Broadcasting Service, broadcasts 2 national and 3 regional radio programmes and 1 national TV channel. In addition, 23 privately owned radio stations and seven private TV stations were in operation in 2000. At 31 Dec. 2002, 91,418 colour TV sets were licensed (534 black and white).

Cinema. There were 25 cinemas with 51 screens in 2002 of which the capital had nine cinemas and 32 screens. Total admissions numbered 1,529,831 in 2002, with the Reykjavík area accounting for 1,319,760. In 1995 gross box office receipts came to 665m. kr. and seven full-length films were made.

Press. In 2002 there were three daily newspapers and 22 non-daily newspapers (13 paid-for and nine free).

Iceland publishes more books per person than any other country in the world. In 1999, 1,232 volumes of books and 721 volumes of booklets were published.

Tourism. There were 302,913 visitors in 2000. Revenue in 2001 totalled 37,720m. kr. Overnight stays in hotels and guest houses in 2001 numbered 907,029. Tourism accounts for more than 12% of foreign currency earnings. Between 1990 and 2000 the number of visitors increased on average by 7% every year.

Festivals. The Reykjavík Arts Festival is a biennial programme of international artists and performers, and will next be held in 2004.

Libraries. The National and University Library of Iceland is in Reykjavík and contains 860,079 volumes. The eight University libraries contain 190,898 volumes, the 43 special libraries 360,854 volumes.

Theatre and Opera. In 2002 there were nine professional theatres operated on a yearly basis (of which seven were in the capital region) and 18 professional theatre groups (all in the capital region). In the theatrical season 2001–02 there were 276,155 admissions to performances of the professional theatres, 83,296 admissions to the National Theatre and 67,328 admissions to the City Theatre and Idno Theatre. Total audience of the Icelandic Opera was 12,200.

There is one symphonic orchestra operated on a regular basis, the Icelandic Symphony Orchestra. In 2002 the orchestra performed 72 times within the country and abroad, with audiences totalling 34,973.

Museums and Galleries. In 2002 there were 105 museums, botanical gardens, aquariums and zoos in operation, with a total of 957,164 visitors. The National Museum is closed for construction work and so received no visitors in 2002. The National Gallery received 40,464 visitors and 93,500 attended the Reykjavík Municipal Art Museum.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Approximately 7,000 years ago the valley of the Indus was one of the cradles of civilization. From the Indus Valley, Dravidian peoples spread agriculture and fixed settlements gradually across India, arriving in the far south by about 4,000 years ago. The Indus Valley Harappan civilization, a Bronze Age culture, flourished from around 2300 to 1500 BC and had links with western Asian civilizations in Iran. Writing, fine jewellery and textile production, town planning, metalworking and pottery were the hallmarks of an advanced urban society.

At the same time, another Bronze Age civilization existed in the Ganges Valley. This civilization, whose links were with south-eastern Asia, was based on a rice-growing rural economy. Around 1500 BC a pastoral people, the Aryans, invaded the Indus Valley from Iran and Central Asia. Their arrival completed the destruction of the Harappan civilization and shifted the balance of power in the subcontinent to the Ganges Valley.

The Aryans took over northern and central India, merging their culture with that of the Dravidians. The caste system, still a feature of Indian society, dates back to the Dravidians, but the languages of northern and central India, and the polytheistic religion that is now followed by the majority of the inhabitants of the subcontinent, are both Aryan in origin. From these two cultures, a Hindu civilization emerged.

By 800 BC a series of Hindu kingdoms had developed in the Ganges Valley. This region gave birth to one of the world's great religions: Buddhism. Prince Gautama, the Buddha (c. 563–483 BC), renounced a life of wealth to seek enlightenment. His creed of non-violence was spread throughout India and, later, south-eastern Asia.

Chandragupta Maurya (reigned 321–297 BC) conquered most of northern India before his ascetic death from self-imposed starvation. His grandson, Ashoka, ruled an empire that stretched from the Deccan to Afghanistan from c. 272–c. 231, but he is mainly remembered for his enthusiasm for Buddhist pacifism. Attacked by enemies who did not share this creed, the Mauryan empire collapsed soon after Ashoka's death.

Although no Hindu state managed to unite India, the Hindu religion and culture proved powerful influences throughout the region. By about 500 BC Sri Lanka was within the Hindu sphere of influence. Over the next 800 years Hindu kingdoms were established in Burma, Cambodia, Sumatra, Thailand and Java. From the 4th century BC, Indian merchants spread Buddhism through south-eastern Asia.

While Indian religion and culture spread south and east, an invasion from the west threatened to change the subcontinent. In AD 713 a Muslim army conquered Sind. For the next 300 years, Islamic rulers were largely confined to what is now Pakistan, but in 1000 a raid by the ruler of Ghazni (now in Afghanistan) overran the Punjab. During the 11th and 12th centuries the Hindu states of the Ganges Valley were toppled by Muslim invaders.

In the north, the Delhi Sultanate was replaced by the Mughal Empire. Founded by Babur (reigned 1526–30), it was extended by Akbar the Great (reigned 1556–1605) who conquered Baluchistan, Gujarat, Bengal, Orissa, Rajasthan, Afghanistan and Bihar. In his campaign against Gujarat, Akbar marched his army 800 km (500 miles) in only 11 days. His grandson, Shah Jahan (reigned 1628–58), was a pleasure-seeking ruler, who is remembered for constructing the Taj Mahal as a memorial to his favourite wife.

The decline of the Mughal Empire began under Shah Jahan's son, Aurangzeb I (reigned 1658–1707). Aurangzeb persecuted Hindus with a vengeance. Inter-community violence and wars against Hindu states weakened the empire. Throughout the 18th century, disputed successions and fears of assassination diverted the Mughal emperors. By the close of the 18th century the last emperor was nominal ruler of the environs of Delhi.

By the 16th century, European traders were established along India's coasts. In 1510 the Portuguese took Goa, which remained the centre of the fragmented possessions of Portuguese India until 1962. The creation of the (English) East India Company in 1600 heralded the beginning of what was to become the British Indian Empire. The main threat to British rule in India was France. Although the East India Company controlled parts of Bengal and the Ganges Valley, France was supreme in the Deccan where French forces, and Indian rulers allied to France, held sway over an area twice the size of France itself.

In the 1750s Britain and France fought out their European wars overseas. The defeat of French forces, and France's Indian allies, at the battle of Plassey (1757), by British forces led by Robert Clive (1725–74), confirmed British rule in Bengal and Bihar and ejected France from the Deccan. Henceforth, France was restricted to five small coastal possessions.

Founded by Sivaji (1627–80), the Maratha state was the major power in central and southern India in the 17th and 18th centuries. The Hindu Sivaji came into conflict with the fanatical Muslim Mughal emperor Aurangzeb, who imprisoned Sivaji. After his famous escape from captivity, concealed in a fruit basket, Sivaji made himself emperor of his Maratha state in 1674. This pious monarch ruled competently, establishing an efficient administration, but by the time of his grandson, Shahu (reigned 1707–27), the power of the Maratha emperors had been eclipsed by that of their hereditary chief minister, the Peshwa. In 1727 the Peshwa Baji Rao I (reigned 1720–40) effectively replaced the emperor and established his own dynasty. Baji Rao made the Maratha state the strongest in India. His descendant, Baji Rao II (reigned 1795–1817), raised a weakened state against the British and was crushed. He had been the last important Indian monarch outside British influence.

During the first half of the 19th century, wars against Sind (1843) and the Sikhs in Punjab (1849) extended the borders of British India. By the middle of the 19th century about 60% of the subcontinent was controlled by the East India Company. The remaining 40% was divided between about 620 Indian states, which were, in theory, still sovereign and ruled by their own maharajas, sultans, nawabs and other monarchs, each advised by a British resident. The Indian states ranged from large entities the size of European countries (states such as Hyderabad, Baroda, Mysore and Indore) to tiny states no bigger than an English parish.

Landless peasants and dispossessed princes united in their opposition to British rule. In 1857 a mutiny by soldiers of the East India Company quickly spread into full-scale rebellion. Throughout India those who resented the speed and nature of the changes brought about by British rule made one final attempt to eject the occupiers. The Indian Mutiny took 14 months to put down.

After the Mutiny the British government replaced the East India Company as the ruler of the Indian colonial empire (1858), and the modernization of India began apace. Emphasis was placed on building up an Indian infrastructure, particularly roads and railways. The participation of Indians within the civil administration, the construction of a vast national railway system and the imposition of the English language, through the many new schools, colleges and universities, did much to forge an Indian identity. But industry in India was not modernized, in part through fear of competition. In 1877 the Indian Empire was proclaimed and Queen Victoria became Empress of India (Kaiser-i-Hind).

The divisions fostered by religion proved stronger than any new sense of a national Indian identity. The (Hindu-dominated) Indian National Congress, the forerunner of the Congress Party, first met in 1885, and in 1906 the rival Muslim League was founded. Demands for Home Rule grew in the early years of the 20th century, and nationalist feeling was fuelled when British troops fired without warning on a peaceful nationalist protest meeting—the Amritsar Massacre (1919).

Realizing that change was inevitable, the British government reformed the administration through two Acts of Parliament in 1919 and 1935. These created an Indian federation, effectively removing many of the differences between the Crown territories and the Indian states. These acts granted a new Indian government limited autonomy. The pace of reform was, however, too slow for Indian popular opinion.

In 1920 the Congress party began a campaign of non-violence and non-cooperation with the British colonial authorities, led by the charismatic figure of Mahatma Gandhi (1869–1948). By the start of World War II (1939–45), relations between the Hindu and Muslim communities in India had broken down, and the Muslims were demanding a separate independent Islamic state, later Pakistan.

In 1945 Britain had neither the will nor the resources to maintain the Indian Empire. In 1947 India was divided into India, a predominantly Hindu state led by Jawaharlal (Pandit) Nehru (1889–1964) of the Congress Party, and Pakistan, a Muslim state led by Mohammad Ali Jinnah (1876–1948) of the Muslim League. Partition brought enormous upheaval. More than 70m. Hindus and Muslims became refugees as they trekked across the new boundaries. Many thousands were killed in intercommunal violence. The border remained disputed in many places. Tension increased when Gandhi was assassinated by a Hindu fundamentalist (1948). In 1950 India became a republic.

Tension between India and Pakistan erupted into war in 1947–49 when the two countries fought over Kashmir. The region was divided along a ceasefire line, although neither side recognized this as an international border. India and Pakistan went to war again over Kashmir in 1965, and in 1971 when Bangladesh (formerly East Pakistan) gained its independence as a result of Indian military intervention. Indian forces saw action in 1961 when Indian troops invaded and annexed Portuguese India and in 1962 in a border war with China.

In 1966 Nehru's daughter Indira Gandhi (1917–84) became premier. Under Mrs Gandhi, India continued to assert itself as a regional power and the rival of Pakistan. Although non-aligned, India developed close relations with the Soviet Union. In spite of being the world's largest democracy, India was wracked by local separatism and communal unrest. From 1975 to 1977 Mrs Gandhi imposed a much-criticized state of emergency. Her actions split the Congress Party, allowing Morarji Desai (1896–1995) of the Janata Party to form India's first non-Congress administration. However, his alliance of parties soon shattered and a wing of Congress, led by Mrs Gandhi, was returned to power in 1980.

Violence in Sikh areas, fanned by demands by militant Sikhs for an independent homeland (called Khalistan), increased tensions. In 1984 Mrs Gandhi ordered that the Golden Temple in Amritsar be stormed after it had been turned into a storehouse for weapons by Sikh extremists. Soon afterwards, Mrs Gandhi was assassinated by her Sikh bodyguards.

Mrs Gandhi was succeeded as premier by her son, Ranjiv (1944–91), during whose period of office India became involved in Sri Lanka, supporting the central government against the separatist Tamil Tigers movement. Ranjiv Gandhi was assassinated by a Tamil Tiger suicide bomber during the 1991 election campaign. By 1989 personality clashes had shattered the unity of the once all-powerful Congress Party. Since then coalitions have held office. The right-wing Hindu nationalist Bharatiya Janata Party (BJP) has been part of most these. Support for the BJP increased following violence between Hindus and Muslims over a campaign, which began in 1990, to build a Hindu temple on the site of a mosque in the holy city of Ayodhya.

After the fall of the Soviet Union (1991), India gradually abandoned state ownership and some elements of protectionism. Privatization has been accompanied by an economic revolution that has seen the development of high tech industries. At the same time, India has become a nuclear power, exploding its first nuclear device in 1974. Along with Pakistan, India has yet to sign the Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty.

There have been 35,000 deaths since the outbreak of the Kashmir insurgency in 1988. Negotiations with Pakistan over the future of the disputed territory of Kashmir began in July 1999. In May 2001 India ended its six-month long ceasefire. It then invited Pakistan's government to enter talks, which ended with hopes of avoiding further violence. In Dec. 2001, in an attack on the Indian parliament by suicide bombers, 13 people died. Although no group claimed responsibility, Kashmiri separatists were blamed. However, Pakistani President Pervez Musharraf's subsequent crackdown on militants helped to bring the two countries back from the brink of war. Tension between India and Pakistan increased following an attack on an Indian army base in Indian-occupied Kashmir on 14 May 2002. The attack, which killed 31 people, was linked to Islamic terrorists infiltrating the Kashmir valley from Pakistan. It drew widespread criticism of President Musharraf for failing to combat terrorism in the disputed region.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

India is bounded in the northwest by Pakistan, north by China, Tibet, Nepal and Bhutan, east by Myanmar, and southeast, south and southwest by the Indian Ocean. The far eastern states and territories are almost separated from the rest by Bangladesh. The area (excluding the Pakistan and China-occupied parts of Jammu and Kashmir) is 3,166,414 sq. km. A Sino-Indian agreement of 7 Sept. 1993 settled frontier disputes dating from the war of 1962. Population (excluding occupied Jammu and Kashmir), 2001 census (provisional): 1,027,015,247 (495,738,169 females), giving a density of 324 persons per sq. km. There are also 20m. Indians and ethnic Indians living abroad, notably in Malaysia, the USA, Saudi Arabia, the UK and South Africa. 72·2% of the population was rural in 2001 (Goa being the most urban state, at 49·8%; and Himachal Pradesh the most rural, at 90·2%).

The UN gives a projected population for 2010 of 1,164·0m.

By 2050 India is expected to have a population of 1·53bn. and is projected to have overtaken China as the world's most populous country.

[1]Urban agglomeration.

Delhi: Delhi was named after Raj Dhilu of the Mauryan dynasty who reigned in the 1st century BC. It is India’s third biggest city. It covers an area of 1,483 sq. km and is located in the northern part of the country. Much of the part of the city known as Old Delhi was built by the Mughals between 1526 and 1712. The capital was moved from Calcutta to Delhi in 1911, and New Delhi was inaugurated as the new capital in 1931. Sir Edwin Lutyens built much of the new city, characterized by its colonial arches, columns and wide tree lined avenues, in the 1920s.

Bombay: Officially renamed Mumbai in 1996, Bombay is India's biggest city and the third largest in the world. Located on the west coast of India, it comprises seven islands joined together by landfills. It became part of the British empire in 1661 and thrived on the cotton industry, quickly becoming one of the world's leading exporters. Now the centre of the country's film industry (Bollywood), Bombay generates around 35% of the country's GNP.

Calcutta: Officially known as Kolkata since 1996, Calcutta was founded in 1690 by the East India Company on the eastern bank of the Houghly river. Between 1772 and 1912 it was the capital of India. In 1947 it became the capital of West Bengal but this was not enough to stem the city's decline and it took government intervention in the 1980s to turn the economy around. Today the city is the second largest in India and the world's largest producer of jute.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Many births and deaths go unregistered. The Registrar General's data suggests a birth rate for 1995–96 of 28·3 per 1,000 population and a death rate of 9·0, which would indicate in a year approximately 26,500,000 births (equivalent to the population of California in the mid 1980s) and 8,500,000 deaths. The growth rate is, however, slowing, and by the turn of the century had dropped below 1·6%, having been over 2% in 1991. Expectation of life at birth, 1999, 62·4 years for males and 63·3 years for females.

Marriages and divorces are not registered. The minimum age for a civil marriage is 18 for women and 21 for men; for a sacramental marriage, 14 for females and 18 for males. Population growth rate, 1991–2001, 21·35% (the lowest since 1961–71). Infant mortality, 1999, 70 per 1,000 live births; fertility rate, 1999, 3·0 births per woman. Child deaths (under the age of five) were halved between 1980 and 1996, from 172 per 1,000 in 1980 to only 85 per 1,000 in 1996.

CLIMATE

India has a variety of climatic sub-divisions. In general, there are four seasons. The cool one lasts from Dec. to March, the hot season is in April and May, the rainy season is June to Sept., followed by a further dry season until Nov. Rainfall, however, varies considerably, from 4" (100 mm) in the N.W. desert to over 400" (10,000 mm) in parts of Assam.

Range of temperature and rainfall: New Delhi, Jan. 57°F (13·9°C), July 88°F (31·1°C). Annual rainfall 26" (640 mm). Bombay, Jan. 75°F (23·9°C), July 81°F (27·2°C). Annual rainfall 72" (1,809 mm). Calcutta, Jan. 67°F (19·4°C), July 84°F (28·9°C). Annual rainfall 64" (1,600 mm). Cherrapunji, Jan. 53°F (11·7°C), July 68°F (20°C). Annual rainfall 432" (10,798 mm). Darjeeling, Jan. 41°F (5°C), July 62°F (16·7°C). Annual rainfall 121" (3,035 mm). Hyderabad, Jan. 72°F (22·2°C), July 80°F (26·7°C). Annual rainfall 30" (752 mm). Kochi, Jan. 80°F (26·7°C), July 79°F (26·1°C). Annual rainfall 117" (2,929 mm). Madras, Jan. 76°F (24·4°C), July 87°F (30·6°C). Annual rainfall 51" (1,270 mm). Patna, Jan. 63°F (17·2°C), July 90°F (32·2°C). Annual rainfall 46" (1,150 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The Constitution was passed by the Constituent Assembly on 26 Nov. 1949 and came into force on 26 Jan. 1950. It has since been amended 78 times.

India is a republic and comprises a Union of 28 States and 7 Union Territories. Each State is administered by a Governor appointed by the President for a term of five years while each Union Territory is administered by the President through a Lieut.-Governor or an administrator appointed by him. The head of the Union (head of state) is the President in whom all executive power is vested, to be exercised on the advice of ministers responsible to Parliament. The President, who must be an Indian citizen at least 35 years old and eligible for election to the House of the People, is elected by an electoral college of all the elected members of Parliament and of the state legislative assemblies, holds office for five years and is eligible for re-election. There is also a Vice-President who is ex officio chairman of the Council of States.

There is a Council of Ministers to aid and advise the President; this comprises Ministers who are members of the Cabinet and Ministers of State and deputy ministers who are not. A Minister who for any period of six consecutive months is not a member of either House of Parliament ceases to be a Minister at the expiration of that period. The Prime Minister is appointed by the President; other Ministers are appointed by the President on the Prime Minister's advice. The salary of each Minister is Rs 12,000 per month.

Parliament consists of the President, the Council of States (Rajya Sabha) and the House of the People (Lok Sabha). The Council of States, or the Upper House, consists of not more than 250 members; in Aug. 2002 there were 232 elected members and 12 members nominated by the President. The election to this house is indirect; the representatives of each State are elected by the elected members of the Legislative Assembly of that State. The Council of States is a permanent body not liable to dissolution, but one-third of the members retire every second year. The House of the People, or the Lower House, consists of 545 members, 543 directly elected on the basis of adult suffrage from territorial constituencies in the States, and the Union territories; in Aug. 2002 there were 543 elected members (499 males) and two vacancies. The House of the People unless sooner dissolved continues for a period of five years from the date appointed for its first meeting; in emergency, Parliament can extend the term by one year.

State Legislatures. For every State there is a legislature which consists of the Governor, and (a) two Houses, a Legislative Assembly and a Legislative Council, in the States of Bihar, Jammu and Kashmir, Karnataka, Madhya Pradesh (where it is provided for but not in operation), Maharashtra and Uttar Pradesh, and (b) one House, a Legislative Assembly, in the other States. Every Legislative Assembly, unless sooner dissolved, continues for five years from the date appointed for its first meeting. In emergency the term can be extended by one year. Every State Legislative Council is a permanent body and is not subject to dissolution, but one-third of the members retire every second year. Parliament can, however, abolish an existing Legislative Council or create a new one, if the proposal is supported by a resolution of the Legislative Assembly concerned.

Legislation. The various subjects of legislation are enumerated in three lists in the seventh schedule to the constitution. List I, the Union List, consists of 97 subjects (including defence, foreign affairs, communications, currency and coinage, banking and customs) with respect to which the Union Parliament has exclusive power to make laws. The State legislature has exclusive power to make laws with respect to the 66 subjects in list II, the State List; these include police and public order, agriculture and irrigation, education, public health and local government. The powers to make laws with respect to the 47 subjects (including economic and social planning, legal questions and labour and price control) in list III, the Concurrent List, are held by both Union and State governments, though the former prevails. But Parliament may legislate with respect to any subject in the State List in circumstances when the subject assumes national importance or during emergencies.

Other provisions deal with the administrative relations between the Union and the States, interstate trade and commerce, distribution of revenues between the States and the Union, official language, etc.

Fundamental Rights. Two chapters of the constitution deal with fundamental rights and 'Directive Principles of State Policy'. 'Untouchability' is abolished, and its practice in any form is punishable. The fundamental rights can be enforced through the ordinary courts of law and through the Supreme Court of the Union. The directive principles cannot be enforced through the courts of law; they are nevertheless fundamental in the governance of the country.

Citizenship. Under the Constitution, every person who was on the 26 Jan. 1950 domiciled in India and (a) was born in India or (b) either of whose parents was born in India or (c) who has been ordinarily resident in the territory of India for not less than five years immediately preceding that date became a citizen of India. Special provision is made for migrants from Pakistan and for Indians resident abroad. Under the Citizenship Act, 1955, which supplemented the provisions of the Constitution, Indian citizenship is acquired by birth, by descent, by registration and by naturalization. The Act also provides for loss of citizenship by renunciation, termination and deprivation. The right to vote is granted to every person who is a citizen of India and who is not less than 18 years of age on a fixed date and is not otherwise disqualified.

Parliament. Parliament and the state legislatures are organized according to the following schedule (figures show distribution of seats in Aug. 2001 for the Lok Sabha, the Rajya Sabha and the State Legislatures):

[3]Excludes seats for the Pakistan-occupied areas.
[4]Includes 1 nominated minority community representative.

Language. The Constitution provides that the official language of the Union shall be Hindi in the Devanagari script. Hindi is spoken by over 30% of the population. It was originally provided that English should continue to be used for all official purposes until 1965. But the Official Languages Act 1963 provides that, after the expiry of this period of 15 years from the coming into force of the Constitution, English might continue to be used, in addition to Hindi, for all official purposes of the Union for which it was being used immediately before that day, and for the transaction of business in Parliament. According to the Official Languages (Use for official purposes of the Union) Rules 1976, an employee may record in Hindi or in English without being required to furnish a translation thereof in the other language and no employee possessing a working knowledge of Hindi may ask for an English translation of any document in Hindi except in the case of legal or technical documents.

The 58th amendment to the Constitution (26 Nov. 1987) authorized the preparation of a Constitution text in Hindi.

The following 18 languages are included in the Eighth Schedule to the Constitution (with 1994 estimate of speakers where over 5m.): Assamese (14·8m.), Bengali (68·3m.), Gujarati (44m.), Hindi (350·3m.), Kannada (35·7m.), Kashmiri, Konkani, Malayalam (34·4m.), Manipuri, Marathi (65·8m.), Nepali, Oriya (30·3m.), Punjabi (24·7m.), Sanskrit, Sindhi, Tamil (59·3m.), Telugu (71·9m.), Urdu (46·8m.).

RECENT ELECTIONS

Presidential elections were held on 18 July 2002. A. P. J. Abdul Kalam was elected by 89·6% of votes cast against one opponent.

Parliamentary elections were held between 5 Sept. and 3 Oct. 1999. Turn-out was 60%. The Bharatiya Janata Party (BJP) gained 182 seats (178 in 1998); the Indian National Congress (INC), 112 (145 in 1998); the Communist Party of India (CPI-M), 32 (32 in 1998); Telugu Desam Party (TDP), 29; Samajwadi Party (SP), 26; Janata Dal-United (JD-U), 20. 35 other parties gained 15 seats or fewer. By securing victory, Atal Behari Vajpayee secured re-election as prime minister, becoming the first Indian prime minister to do so since Indira Gandhi in 1972. In March 2001 the 24-party ruling National Democratic Alliance had 291 seats, Congress and allies 134, left 41 and others 75.

Elections to the Council of States took place on 29 March 2000. The INC won 64 seats, BJP 45, CPI-M 17, TDP 11, SP 9, JD-U 9, Rashtria Janata Dal 9. 22 other parties gained 7 seats or fewer. Non-partisans took 14 seats and 12 went to nominated members.

DEFENCE

The Supreme Command of the Armed Forces is vested in the President. As well as armed forces of 1,298,000 personnel in 2002, there was an active paramilitary force of 1,090,000, including 174,000 members of the Border Security Force based mainly in the troubled Jammu and Kashmir region. Military service is voluntary but, under the amended constitution, it is regarded as a fundamental duty of every citizen to perform National Service when called upon. Defence expenditure in 2001 was US$14,167m. (US$14 per capita and 2·9% of GDP). Defence accounted for 13% of spending in 1998–99.

Nuclear Weapons. India's first nuclear test was in 1974. Its most recent tests were a series of five carried out in May 1998. According to the Stockholm International Peace Research Institute, India's nuclear arsenal was estimated to consist of between 30 and 35 nuclear warheads in Jan. 2002. India, known to have a nuclear weapons programme, has not signed the Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban-Treaty, which is intended to bring about a ban on any nuclear explosions. According to Deadly Arsenals, published by the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace, India has chemical weapons and has a biological weapons research programme.

Army. The Army is organized into five commands each divided into areas, which in turn are subdivided into sub-areas.

The strength of the Army in 2002 was 1·1m. An Aviation Corps operates locally-built helicopters. Army reserves number 300,000 with a further 500,000 personnel available as a second-line reserve force. There is a volunteer Territorial Army of 40,000.

There are numerous paramilitary groups including the Ministry of Defence Rashtriya Rifles (numbering 40,000), the Indo-Tibetan Border Police (32,400), the State Armed Police (400,000), the Civil Defence (453,000), the Central Industrial Security Force (95,000) and the Ministry of Home Affairs Assam Rifles (52,500).

Navy. The Navy has three commands; Eastern, Western and Southern, the latter a training and support command. The fleet is divided into two elements, Eastern and Western; and well-trained, all-volunteer personnel operate a mix of Soviet and western vessels.

The principal ship is the light aircraft carrier, Viraat, formerly HMS Hermes, of 29,000 tonnes, completed in 1959 and transferred to the Indian Navy in 1987 after seeing service in the Falklands War. The fleet includes 12 Soviet-built diesel submarines and 4 new German-designed boats. There are also 8 destroyers and 11 frigates. The Naval Air force, 5,000 strong, operates 35 combat aircraft (including 20 Sea Harriers) and 50 armed helicopters. Main bases are at Bombay (HQ Western Fleet, and main dockyard), Goa, Visakhapatnam (HQ Eastern Fleet) and Calcutta on the sub-continent, Port Blair in the Andaman Islands and Lakshadweep on the Laccadive Islands. HQ Southern Command is at Kochi.

Naval personnel in 2002 numbered 53,000 including 5,000 Naval Air Arm and 1,200 marines.

Air Force. Units of the IAF are organized into five operational commands—Western at Delhi, Central at Allahabad, Eastern at Shillong, Southern at Thiruvananthapuram and South-Western at Gandhinagar.

Equipment includes 701 combat aircraft, in 40 squadrons of aircraft, and 32 armed helicopters. Major combat types include Su-30s, MiG-21s, MiG-23s, MiG-27s, MiG-29s, Jaguars and Mirage 2000s. Air Force reserves numbered 140,000 in 2002.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

India is a member of the UN, WTO, BIS, the Commonwealth, Asian Development Bank, Colombo Plan, SAARC and the Antarctic Treaty.

ECONOMY

Agriculture accounted for 29·3% of GDP in 1998, industry 24·8% and services 45·9%.

In the late 1990s there were ever-increasing signs of a divide between the south and west, where a modern economy is booming in cities such as Bangalore, Hyderabad and Madras, and the poorer and politically volatile areas in the north and east.

Overview. In the 1990s India was among the fastest-growing economies and foreign investment rose from almost nothing to over US$2bn. per year. But growth has slowed and poor infrastructure and high interest rates have reduced business confidence. The threat of military conflict with Pakistan has delayed moves towards economic reform. Much of heavy industry is publicly owned and inefficient state-owned enterprises harm growth. The move to privatize state-owned tele-communications companies and Air India is progressing slowly. In 2001 the rupee appreciated and monetary policy was eased. But financial market confidence remains fragile. In 2000 the Fiscal Responsibility and Budget Management Bill was introduced, requiring a deficit reduction of 0·5% of GDP per year to achieve a deficit of 2% of GDP by 2005–06.

Currency. A decimal system of coinage was introduced in 1957. The Indian rupee (INR) is divided into 100 paise. The paper currency consists of Reserve Bank notes and Government of India currency notes.

Foreign exchange reserves were US$54,703m. in June 2002 and gold reserves 11·50m. troy oz. Inflation was 3·8% in 2001.

The official exchange rate was abolished on 1 March 1993; the rupee now has a single market exchange rate and is convertible. The pound sterling is the currency of intervention. Total money supply in May 2002 was Rs 4,191·12bn.

Budget. Revenue and expenditure (on revenue account) of the central government for years ending 31 March, in Rs 1m.:

	1998–99	1999–2000[1]	2000–01[2]
Revenue	2,015,300	2,336,400	2,825,100
Expenditure	2,610,500	3,069,600	3,547,200

[1]Provisional. [2]Estimate.

Important items of revenue and expenditure on the revenue account of the central government for 1997–98 (estimates), in Rs 1m.:

Revenue		Expenditure
Net tax revenue	1,379,568	General Services	1,167,096
Non-tax revenue	831,188	Defence	276,170
		Major subsidies	182,510

Total capital account receipts (1997–98 budget), Rs 2,774,893m.; capital account disbursements, Rs 2,777,284m. Total (revenue and capital) receipts, Rs 5,085,649m.; disbursements, Rs 5,390,693m.

Under the Constitution (Part XII and 7th Schedule), the power to raise funds has been divided between the central government and the states. Generally, the sources of revenue are mutually exclusive. Certain taxes are levied by the Union for the sake of uniformity and distributed to the states. The Finance Commission (Art. 280 of the Constitution) advises the President on the distribution of the taxes which are distributable between the centre and the states, and on the principles on which grants should be made out of Union revenues to the states. The main sources of central revenue are: customs duties; those excise duties levied by the central government; corporation, income and wealth taxes; estate and succession duties on non-agricultural assets and property, and revenues from the railways and posts and telegraphs.

In March 2002 finance minister Yashwant Sinha imposed a 5% surcharge on income tax to help combat the threat of terrorism in India.

Performance. India has one of the fastest-growing economies in Asia. Real GDP growth for 1998 was 5·8%, indicating that India managed to avoid the worst of the Asian crisis. In 1999 a growth rate of 6·7% was recorded, followed by 5·4% in 2000 and 4·1% in 2001. Critics claim that growth needs to be at least 8% in order to tackle the country's poverty. Total GDP in 2001 was US$477·6bn.

Banking and Finance. The Reserve Bank, the central bank for India, was established in 1934 and started functioning on 1 April 1935 as a shareholder's bank; it became a nationalized institution on 1 Jan. 1949. It has the sole right of issuing currency notes. The Governor is Dr Bimal Jalan. The Bank acts as adviser to the government on financial problems and is the banker for central and state governments, commercial banks and some other financial institutions. It manages the rupee public debt of central and state governments and is the custodian of the country's exchange reserve.

The commercial banking system consisted of 300 scheduled banks (i.e., banks which are included in the 2nd schedule to the Reserve Bank Act) and four non-scheduled banks in Jan. 1993; scheduled banks included 196 Regional Rural Banks. Total deposits in commercial banks, March 1997, stood at Rs 5,035,960m. The business of non-scheduled banks forms less than 0·1% of commercial bank business. Of the 300 scheduled banks, 35 were foreign banks which specialize in financing foreign trade but also compete for domestic business. The State Bank of India acts as the agent of the Reserve Bank for transacting government business as well as undertaking commercial functions. The 27 public sector banks (which comprise the State Bank of India and its 7 associate banks and 19 nationalized banks) account for about 80·7% of deposits and about 78% of bank credit of all scheduled commercial banks.

There are stock exchanges in Ahmedabad, Bombay, Calcutta, Delhi, Madras and 18 other centres.

Weights and Measures. Uniform standards of weights and measures, based on the metric system, were established for the first time by the Standards of Weights and Measures Act, 1956.

A second Standards of Weights and Measures Act, 1976, recognizes the International System of Units and is in line with the recommendations of the International Organisation of Legal Metrology. This Act also protects consumers through proper indication of weight, quantity, identity, source, date and price on packaged goods.

While the Standards of Weights and Measures are laid down in the Central Act, enforcement of weights and measures laws is entrusted to the state governments; the central Directorate of Weights and Measures is responsible for co-ordinating activities so as to ensure national uniformity.

Frequent use is made in figures of the terms 'lakh' and 'crore'. 1 lakh = 100,000; 1 crore = 10m.

Calendar. The dates of the Saka era (named after the north Indian dynasty of the first century AD) are used alongside Gregorian dates in issues of the Gazette of India, news broadcasts by All-India Radio and government-issued calendars, from 22 March 1957, a date which corresponds with the first day of the year 1879 in the Saka era.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Environment. According to the World Bank Atlas India's carbon dioxide emissions were equivalent to 1·1 tonnes per capita in 1998. An Environmental Sustainability Index compiled for the World Economic Forum meeting in Feb. 2002 ranked India 116th in the world out of 142 countries analysed, with 41·6%. The index measured the ability of countries to maintain favourable environmental conditions and examined various factors including pollution levels and the use or abuse of natural resources.

Electricity. Installed capacity in 1997 was 100m. kW. In Nov. 1996, 502,721 villages out of 579,132 had electricity. Production of electricity in 1998–99 (estimated) was 448·6bn. kWh, of which approximately 79% came from thermal stations, 2% from nuclear stations and 19% from hydro-electric stations. In 2001 there were 14 nuclear reactors in use. Electricity consumption per capita in 1998 was 384 kWh.

Oil and Gas. The Oil and Natural Gas Corporation Ltd and Oil India Ltd are the only producers of crude oil. Production 1996–97, 33·43m. tonnes, about 60% of consumption. The main fields are in Assam and Gujarat and offshore in the Gulf of Cambay (the Bombay High field). There were proven reserves of 4·8bn. bbls. in 1999. Natural gas production, 1999, 24·9bn. cu. metres with 650bn. cu. metres of proven reserves.

Water. 89·44m. ha (1995–96) irrigation potential had been created of which 79·89m. ha was utilized. Irrigation projects have formed an important part of all the Five-Year

Plans. The possibilities of diverting rivers into canals being nearly exhausted, the emphasis is now on damming the monsoon surplus flow and diverting that. Ultimate potential of irrigation is assessed at 107m. ha, total cultivated land being 185m. ha.

A Ganges water-sharing accord was signed with Bangladesh in 1997, ending a 25-year dispute which had hindered and dominated relations between the two countries.

Minerals. The coal industry was nationalized in 1973. Production, 1997, 298m. tonnes; recoverable reserves were estimated at 77bn. tonnes (1997). Production of other minerals, 1996–97 (in 1,000 tonnes): iron ore, 66,672; lignite, 23,031 (1997); salt, 9,500 (1998); bauxite, 5,928; chromite, 1,664 (1995–96); copper ore, 3,900; manganese ore, 1,836; gold, 2,712 kg. Other important minerals are lead, zinc, limestone, apatite and phosphorite, dolomite, magnesite, uranium and silver. Value of mineral production, 1996–97, Rs 330,204·3m. of which mineral fuels produced Rs 275,053m., metallic minerals Rs 24,295m. and non-metallic Rs 11,392·4m.

Agriculture. About 70% of the people are dependent on the land for their living. The farming year runs from July to June through three crop seasons: kharif (monsoon); rabi (winter) and summer. In 1998, 161,600,000 ha were used for arable land and 7,900,000 ha for permanent crops. There were 1,550,000 tractors and 4,100 harvester-threshers in 1998.

Agricultural production, 2000 (in 1,000 tonnes): sugarcane, 315,000; rice, 134,150; wheat, 74,251; potatoes, 23,500; mangoes, 15,642; bananas, 13,900; maize, 11,500; coconuts, 11,100; sorghum, 9,500; millet, 9,000; seed cotton, 6,172; rapeseed, 6,120; aubergines, 6,100; groundnuts, 6,100; cassava, 5,800; tomatoes, 5,500; onions, 5,467; soybeans, 5,400; chick-peas, 5,350; cauliflowers, 5,250; dry beans, 4,340; cabbages, 4,250; cottonseed, 4,115; pumpkins and squash, 3,400. Jute is grown in West Bengal (70% of total yield), Bihar and Assam: total yield, 1,740,000 tonnes. The coffee industry is growing: the main cash varieties are Arabica and Robusta (main growing areas Karnataka, Kerala and Tamil Nadu). India is the world's leading producer of a number of agricultural crops, including mangoes, millet, bananas and chick-peas.

The tea industry is important, with production concentrated in Assam, West Bengal, Tamil Nadu and Kerala. India is the world's largest tea producer. The 2000 crop was 749,000 tonnes. Total crop in 1997, 810,600 tonnes; exports in 1997, 203,000 tonnes, valued at US$432m.

Livestock (2000): cattle, 218·8m.; goats, 123·0m.; buffaloes, 93·8m.; sheep, 57·9m.; pigs, 16·5m.; asses, 1·0m.; camels, 1·0m.; horses, 990,000; chickens, 402m. There are more cattle and buffaloes in India than in any other country.

Fertilizer consumption in 1996–97 was 14·31m. tonnes.

Land Tenure. There are three main traditional systems of land tenure: Ryotwari tenure, where the individual holders are responsible for the payment of land revenues; zamindari tenure, where one or more persons own large estates and are responsible for payment (in this system there may be a number of intermediary holders); and mahalwari tenure, where village communities jointly hold an estate and are jointly and severally responsible for payment.

Agrarian reform, initiated in the first Five-Year Plan, being undertaken by the state governments includes: (1) The abolition of intermediaries under zamindari tenure. (2) Tenancy legislation designed to scale down rents to ¼–⅕ of the value of the produce, to give permanent rights to tenants (subject to the landlord's right to resume a minimum holding for his personal cultivation), and to enable tenants to acquire ownership of their holdings (subject to the landlord's right of resumption for personal cultivation) on payment of compensation over a number of years. (3) Fixing of ceilings on existing holdings and on future acquisition; the holding of a family is between 4·05 and 7·28 ha if it has assured irrigation to produce two crops a year; 10·93 ha for land with irrigation facilities for only one crop a year; and 21·85 ha for all other categories of land. Tea, coffee, cocoa and cardamom plantations have been exempted. (4) The consolidation of holdings in community project areas and the prevention of fragmentation of holdings by reform of inheritance laws. (5) Promotion of farming by co-operative village management.

The average size of holding for the whole of India in 1991 was 1·57 ha. Of the total 71m. rural households possessing operational holdings, 34% hold on the average less than 0·2 ha of land each.

Opium. By international agreement the poppy is cultivated under licence, and all raw opium is sold to the central government. Opium, other than for wholly medical use, is available only to registered addicts.

Forestry. The lands under the control of the state forest departments are classified as ‘reserved forests’ (forests intended to be permanently maintained for the supply of timber, etc., or for the protection of water supply, etc.), ‘protected forests’ and ‘unclassed’ forest land. In 1995 the total forest area was 650,050 sq. km (21·9% of the land area), up from 649,690 sq. km in 1990. India is one of only two developing countries to have increased its area under forests between 1990 and 1995, the other being Cape Verde. Main types are teak and sal. About 16% of the area is inaccessible, of which about 45% is potentially productive. In 1999, 302·79m. cu. metres of roundwood were produced, making India the third largest producer after China and the USA. Most states have encouraged planting small areas around villages.

Fisheries. Total catch (1999) was 3,316,815 tonnes, of which Kerala, Tamil Nadu, and Maharashtra produced about half. Of the total catch, 2,627,367 tonnes were marine fish. There were 46,918 mechanized boats in 1994–95. There were also 31,726 motorized traditional crafts and 159,481 traditional crafts in 1994–95. There were 11,440 fishermen’s co-operatives with 1,250,379 members in 1995–96; total sales, Rs 1,495m. (1994–95).

INDUSTRY

The leading companies by market capitalization in India, excluding banking and finance, in Jan. 2002 were: Hindustan Lever Ltd (HLL), a consumer goods company (Rs 578bn.); Wipro Ltd, an IT solutions and service provider (Rs 380bn.); and the Oil & Natural Gas Corporation Ltd (ONGC), Rs 345bn.

In a number of industries new units are set up only by the state. Industries reserved for the public sector are arms and ammunition and allied items of defence equipment, military aircraft and warships, nuclear energy, coal and lignite, mineral oils and minerals specified in nuclear energy and railway transport. In a further group of industries (road transport, manufacture of chemicals such as drugs, dyestuffs, plastics and fertilizers) the state established new undertakings, but private enterprise may develop either on its own or with state backing.

The information technology industry has become increasingly important, leading Prime Minister Atal Vajpayee to state in 1999 that ‘I believe that IT is India’s tomorrow’. In 1994–95 the software industry had been valued at just Rs 63,450m., but by 1998–99 it was worth Rs 247,815m., with a forecast for 1999–2000 of a further rapid expansion, making it worth Rs 361,000m. (US$8,390m.).

Oil refinery installed capacity, Dec. 1996, was 60·55m. tonnes. The Indian Oil Corporation was established in 1964 and had (1996) the major portion of the market.

There is expansion in petrochemicals, based on the oil and associated gas of the Bombay High field, and gas from Krishna-Godavari Basin, Rajasthan, Tripura, Assam and Bassein field. Small industries numbering 2·72m. (initial outlay on capital equipment of less than Rs 30m.) are important; they employ about 15·26m. and produced (1995–96) goods worth Rs 3,164,210m.

Industrial production, 1995–96 unless otherwise indicated (in 1,000 tonnes): cement, 67,716; crude steel (1999), 24,300; distillate fuel oil (1997), 23,304; pig iron (1997), 20,027; finished steel, 14,533; sugar (1998), 14,281; residual fuel oil (1997), 10,775; nitrogen fertilizer, 9,768; phosphate fertilizer, 3,792; paper and paperboard (1998), 3,025; jute goods, 1,114; aluminium, 538·8; man-made fibre and yarn, 468; 3·05m. motorcycles, mopeds and scooters (1997); 293,172 commercial vehicles; 1,984,140 diesel engines; electric motors, 6·36m. h.p.; 384,000 passenger cars (1997); 19,044 railway wagons; 83·16bn. cigarettes (1997).

Labour. At the 1991 census there were 285·9m. workers, of whom 110·7m. were cultivators, 74·6m. agricultural labourers, 28·7m. in manufacturing, processing, servicing and repairs, 5·5m. in construction and 8·02m. in transport, communications and storage. Workdays lost by industrial disputes, 1995, 14·29m., through strikes and lockouts.

The unemployment rate was 5·2% of the workforce in 1997.

Companies. The total number of companies limited by shares at work as on 31 March 2002 was 589,246; estimated paid-up capital was Rs 3,870,239m. Of these, 76,279 were public limited companies with an estimated paid-up capital of Rs 2,587,149m., and 512,967 private limited companies (Rs 1,283,090m.).

During 2001–02 there were 21,059 new limited companies registered in the Indian Union under the Companies Act 1956 with a total authorized capital of Rs 53,156m.; 14 were government companies (Rs 5,781m.). There were 479 companies with unlimited liability and 3,007 companies with liability limited by guarantee and association not for profit also registered in 2001–02. During 2001–02, 760 non-government companies with an aggregate paid-up capital of Rs 144·7m. went into liquidation or were struck off the register.

On 31 March 2002 there were 1,261 government companies at work with a total paid-up capital of Rs 1,099,155m.; 658 were public limited companies and 603 were private limited companies. There were 587,985 non-government companies at work on 31 March 2002. Of these 75,621 were public limited companies and 512,364 were private limited companies.

On 31 March 2002, 1,285 companies incorporated elsewhere were reported to have a place of business in India; 241 were of UK and 286 of US origin.

Co-operative Movement. In 1995–96 there were 411,000 co-operative societies with a total membership of 197·8m. These included Primary Co-operative Marketing Societies, State Co-operative Marketing Federations and the National Agricultural Co-operative Marketing Federation of India. There were also State Co-operative Commodity Marketing Federations, and 29 general purpose and 16 Special Commodities Marketing Federations.

There were, in 1995–96, 28 State Co-operative Banks, 362 District Central Co-operative Banks, 90,783 Primary Agricultural Credit Societies, 20 State Land Development Banks, and 2,970 Primary Land Development Banks which provide long-term credits.

Agricultural credit is provided (31 Dec. 1993) through 32,641 rural and semi-rural branches of commercial banks and 14,543 branches of Regional Rural Banks, and (June 1993) 90,783 Primary Agricultural Credit Societies affiliated to 10,775 branches of District Central Co-operative Banks and 2,970 Primary units of Land Development Banks. Total agricultural credit disbursed by Co-operatives in 1995–96 was Rs 26,450m. Value of agricultural produce marketed by Co-operatives in 1994–95 was about Rs 95,000m. Commercial and regional rural banks disbursed agricultural credit of Rs 136,840m. in 1995–96.

In 1994–95 there were 2,601 agro-processing units; 245 sugar factories produced 8·66m. tons; 137 spinning mills (capacity 3·2m. spindles) accounted for 12% of total spindleage in the country in 1995–96; there were 129 oilseed processing units; total storage capacity was 13·55m. tons on 31 March 1996.

In 1994–95 there were 76,500 retail depots distributing 4·12m. tons of fertilizers.

Trade Unions. The Indian National Trade Union Congress (INTUC) had 3,987 affiliated unions with a total membership of 6,726,569 in March 2000.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Foreign investment is encouraged by a tax holiday on income up to 6% of capital employed for five years. There are special depreciation allowances, and customs and excise concessions, for export industries. Proposals for investment ventures involving up to 51% foreign equity require only the Reserve Bank's approval under new liberalized policy. In Feb. 1991 India resumed trans-frontier trade with China, which had ceased in 1962.

Foreign debt was US$99,062m. in 2000.

Imports and Exports. The external trade of India (excluding land-borne trade with Tibet and Bhutan) was as follows (in Rs 100,000):

	Imports	Exports and Re-exports
1999–2000	21,552,844	15,956,139
2000–01	23,087,276	20,357,101
2001–02	24,519,972	20,901,797

The distribution of commerce by countries was as follows in the year ended 31 March 2000 (in Rs 100,000):

Technology industries have become increasingly important in recent years, with software exports having grown more than 50% annually each year during the 1990s. In 1998–99 software exports were worth Rs 109,400m. (US$2,650m.), with 61% going to the USA and Canada, and 23% to Europe. Exports grew by 67·5% in 1998–99 compared to 1997–98.

In 1995–96 the main export markets (percentage of total trade) were: USA, 17·4%; Japan, 6·97%; UK, 6·3%; Germany, 6·22%. Main import suppliers: USA, 10·53%; Germany, 8·66%; Japan, 6·73%; Saudi Arabia, 5·5%; Belgium, 4·64%.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. In 1996 there were 3·32m. km of roads, of which 1·46m. km were surfaced. Roads are divided into six main administrative classes, namely: national highways, state highways, other public works department (PWD) roads, Panchayati Raj roads, urban roads and project roads. The national highways (34,508 km in 1996) connect capitals of states, major ports and foreign highways. The national highway system is linked with the UN Economic and Social Commission for Asia and the Pacific international highway system. The state highways are the main trunk roads of the states, while the other PWD roads and Panchayati Raj roads connect subsidiary areas of production and markets with distribution centres, and form the main link between headquarters and neighbouring districts. A US$12bn. 10-year highway plan is currently under way that aims to have India's main cities, ports and regions linked by more than 13,000 km of highways by 2009.

There were (1996) 4,189,000 private cars, taxis and jeeps, 23,111,000 motorcycles and scooters, 449,000 buses and 1,785,000 goods vehicles.

Rail. The Indian railway system is government-owned (under the control of the Railway Board). Following reconstruction there are 16 zones, 7 of which were created in 2002:

Zone	Headquarters	Year of Creation
Central	Bombay	1951
Southern	Madras	1951
Western	Bombay	1951
Eastern	Calcutta	1952
Northern	Delhi	1952
North Eastern	Gorakhpur	1952
South Eastern	Calcutta	1955
North East Frontier	Guwahati	1958
South Central	Secunderabad	1966
East Central	Hajipur	2002
East Coast	Bhubaneswar	2002
North Central	Allahabad	2002
North Western	Jaipur	2002

Zone	Headquarters	Year of Creation
South East Central	Bilaspur	2002
South Western	Hubli	2002
West Central	Jabalpur	2002

The total length of the Indian railway network is 63,000 km (14,600 electrified), with the Northern zone having the longest network, at 11,040 km.

The Konkan Railway (760 km of 1,676 mm gauge) linking Roha and Mangalore opened in 1996. It is operated as a separate entity.

Principal gauges are 1,676 mm (40,620 km) and 1 metre (18,501 km), with networks also of 762 mm and 610 mm gauge (3,794 km).

Passengers carried in 1998–99 were 4,468m.; freight (1997–98), 423m. tonnes. Revenue (1995–96) from passengers, Rs 61,244·9m.; from goods, Rs 152,904m.

Indian Railways pay to the central government a dividend on capital-at-charge at a rate fixed by the Convention Committee of Parliament. Railway finance in Rs 1m.:

Financial years	Gross traffic receipts	Gross expenditure	Net revenues (receipts)	Net surplus or deficit (after dividend)
1995–96	224,179	185,249	41,351	+23,180
1996–97 revised	244,500	209,650	37,563	+22,410
1997–98 budget	278,550	251,350	30,037	+13,740

There is a metro (16·4 km) in Calcutta. The first section of a metro system in Delhi opened in Dec. 2002.

Civil Aviation. The main international airports are at Bombay, Calcutta, Delhi (Indira Gandhi), Madras and Thiruvananthapuram, with some international flights from Ahmedabad, Amritsar, Bangalore, Calicut, Goa and Hyderabad. Air transport was nationalized in 1953 with the formation of two Air Corporations: Air India for long-distance international air services, and Indian Airlines for air services within India and to adjacent countries. Domestic air transport has been opened to private companies, and by 1996–97, seven private airlines had been given scheduled status, the largest of which is Jet Airways. In 1999 Indian Airlines carried 5,912,100 passengers, Jet Airways 4,647,400 and Air India 3,132,600 passengers.

In 1998 Air India operated routes to Africa (Dar-es-Salaam, Lagos and Nairobi); to Mauritius; to Europe (Copenhagen, Frankfurt, London, Manchester, Moscow, Paris, Rome, Vienna and Zürich); to western Asia (Abu Dhabi, Dhahran, Doha, Dubai, Jeddah, Kuwait, Muscat and Riyadh); to east Asia (Bangkok, Hong Kong, Jakarta, Kuala Lumpur, Osaka, Singapore and Tokyo); and to North America (Chicago, New York and Washington). In addition, freight services are operated to Zürich, Brussels, Dubai, Singapore and Luxembourg.

Indian Airlines operated international flights in 1998 to Bahrain, Bangkok, Colombo, Dhaka, Doha, Fujairah, Karachi, Káthmandu, Kuala Lumpur, Kuwait, Male, Rangoon (Yangon), Ras-al-Khaimah, Sharjah and Singapore.

In 2000 Bombay was the busiest airport, handling 11,538,006 passengers (6,934,116 on domestic flights) and 287,800 tonnes of freight, followed by Delhi, with 8,395,736 passengers (4,900,597 on domestic flights) and 235,425 tonnes of freight.

Shipping. In Oct. 1996, 481 ships totalling 7·02m. GRT were on the Indian Register. In 1998 merchant ships totalled 6·77m. GRT, including oil tankers 2·53m. GRT. Traffic of major ports, 1996–97, was as follows:

Port	Cargo ships cleared	Unloaded (1m. tonnes)	Loaded (1m. tonnes)
Bombay	2,583	18·38	15·35
Cochin	787	8·54	2·09
Haldia	946	} 11·99	5·06
Calcutta	822
Jawaharlal Nehru	601	4·68	3·39

Visakhapatnam	1,437	14·67	13·28

There are about 3,700 km of major rivers navigable by motorized craft, of which 2,000 km are used. Canals, 4,300 km, of which 900 km are navigable by motorized craft.

Telecommunications. The telephone system is in the hands of the Telecommunications Department, except in Delhi and Bombay, which are served by a public corporation. Main telephone lines numbered 32,436,100 in 2000, equivalent to 32·0 for every 1,000 persons; 2·7m. people were still on the waiting list for a line in 1997. There were 1·88m. mobile phone subscribers and 4·6m. PCs in use in 2000, and 150,000 fax machines in 1997. There were still 25,000 telex subscribers in 1997, although telex usage has declined steadily in recent years. India had 7m. Internet users in Dec. 2001.

Postal Services. On 31 March 1995 there were 152,792 post offices and 42,766 telegraph offices. India has twice as many post offices as any other country. In 1995 a total of 13,751m. pieces of mail were processed, or 15 items per person.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. All courts form a single hierarchy, with the Supreme Court at the head, which constitutes the highest court of appeal. Immediately below it are the High Courts and subordinate courts in each state. Every court in this chain administers the whole law of the country, whether made by Parliament or by the state legislatures.

The states of Andhra Pradesh, Assam (in common with Nagaland, Meghalaya, Manipur, Mizoram, Tripura and Arunachal Pradesh), Bihar, Gujarat, Himachal Pradesh, Jammu and Kashmir, Karnataka, Kerala, Madhya Pradesh, Maharashtra (in common with Goa and the Union Territories of Daman and Diu and Dadra and Nagar Haveli), Orissa, Punjab (in common with the state of Haryana and the Union Territory of Chandigarh), Rajasthan, Tamil Nadu (in common with the Union Territory of Pondicherry), Uttar Pradesh, West Bengal and Sikkim each have a High Court. There is a separate High Court for Delhi. For the Andaman and Nicobar Islands the Calcutta High Court, for Pondicherry the High Court of Madras and for Lakshadweep the High Court of Kerala are the highest judicial authorities. The Allahabad High Court has a Bench at Lucknow, the Bombay High Court has Benches at Nagpur, Aurangabad and Panaji, the Gauhati High Court has Benches at Kohima, Aizwal, Imphal and Agartala, the Madhya Pradesh High Court has Benches at Gwalior and Indore, the Patna High Court has a Bench at Ranchi and the Rajasthan High Court has a Bench at Jaipur. Judges and Division Courts of the Guwahati High Court also sit in Meghalaya. Similarly, judges and Division Courts of the Calcutta High Court also sit in the Andaman and Nicobar Islands. High Courts have also been established in the new states of Chhattisgarh, Jharkhand and Uttaranchal. Below the High Court each state is divided into a number of districts under the jurisdiction of district judges who preside over civil courts and courts of sessions. There are a number of judicial authorities subordinate to the district civil courts. On the criminal side magistrates of various classes act under the overall supervision of the High Court.

The Code of Criminal Procedure came into force with effect from 1 April 1974. It provides for complete separation of the Judiciary from the Executive throughout India.

In Oct. 1991 the Supreme Court upheld capital punishment by hanging.

The population in penal institutions in 1997 was 231,325 (25 per 100,000 of national population).

Police. The states control their own police forces. The Home Affairs Minister of the central government co-ordinates the work of the states. The Indian Police Service provides senior officers for the state police forces. The Central Bureau of Investigation functions under the control of the Cabinet Secretariat.

The cities of Pune, Ahmedabad, Nagpur, Bangalore, Calcutta, Madras, Bombay, Delhi and Hyderabad have separate police commissionerates.

Religion. India is a secular state; any worship is permitted, but the state itself has no religion. The principal religions in 1997 were: Hindus, 777m.; Sunni Muslims, 80m.; Shiah Muslims, 27m.; Sikhs, 19m.; Protestants, 18m.; Roman Catholics, 16m.; Buddhists, 7m.; Jains, 5m.; other, 19m. In Feb. 2001 the Roman Catholic church had four Cardinals.

Education. Adult literacy was 56·5% in 1999 (67·8% among males and 44·5% among females). Of the states and territories, Kerala and Mizoram have the highest rates.

Educational Organization. Education is the concurrent responsibility of state and Union governments. In the Union Territories it is the responsibility of the central government. The Union government is also directly responsible for the central universities and all institutions declared by parliament to be of national importance; the promotion of Hindi as the federal language and co-ordinating and maintaining standards in higher education, research, science and technology. Professional education rests with the Ministry or Department concerned. There is a Central Advisory Board of Education to advise the Union and the State governments on any educational question which may be referred to it.

School Education. The school system has four stages: primary, middle, secondary and senior secondary.

Primary education is imparted either at independent primary (or junior basic) schools or primary classes attached to middle or secondary schools. The period of instruction varies from four to five years and the medium of instruction is in most cases the mother tongue of the child or the regional language. Free primary education is available for all children. Legislation for compulsory education has been passed by some state governments and Union Territories but it is not practicable to enforce compulsion when the reasons for non-attendance are socio-economic. There are residential schools for country children. The period for the middle stage varies from two to three years.

Higher Education. Higher education is given in arts, science or professional colleges, universities and all-India educational or research institutions. In 1995–96 there were 166 universities, 4 institutes established under state legislature act, 11 institutions of national importance and 37 institutions deemed as universities. Of the universities, 13 are central: Aligarh Muslim University; Banaras Hindu University; Delhi University; Hyderabad University; Jamia Millia Islamia, New Delhi; Jawaharlal Nehru University; North Eastern Hill University; Visva Bharati; Pondicherry University; Baba Sahib B. R. Ambedkar University; Assam University; Tezpur University; and Nagaland University. The rest are state universities. Total enrolment at universities, 1995–96, 6,425,624, of which 5,667,400 were undergraduates. Women students numbered 2,191,138.

Grants are paid through the University Grants Commission to the central universities and institutions deemed to be universities for their maintenance and development and to state universities for their development projects only; their maintenance is the concern of state governments. During 1995–96 the University Grants Commission sanctioned grants of Rs 6,245·5m.

Technical Education. The number of institutions awarding degrees in engineering and technology in 1996–97 was 418, and those awarding diplomas, 1,029; the former admitted 328,399 students, the latter 357,891 including 58,454 female students.

Adult Education. The Directorate of Adult Education, established in 1971, is the national resource centre.

There is also a National Literacy Mission.

Educational statistics for 1996–97:

Type of recognized institution	No. of institutions	No. of students on rolls	No. of teachers
Primary/junior basic schools	598,354	110,393,406	1,789,733
Middle/senior basic schools	176,772	41,064,849	1,195,845
High/higher secondary schools[1]	102,183	27,036,856	1,542,360
Training schools and colleges	1,931	237,509	—
Arts, Science and Commerce colleges	6,759	6,425,624	239,488

[1]Including Junior Colleges.

Expenditure. Total budgeted central expenditure on revenue account of education and other departments 1997–98 was estimated at Rs 46,383m. Total public expenditure on education, sport, arts and youth welfare during the Eighth (1992–97) Plan, Rs 212,170·2m.; Seventh Plan spending on adult education, Rs 3,007m. in the central and Rs 6,098m. in the state sectors.

Health. Medical services are primarily the responsibility of the states. The Union government has sponsored major schemes for disease prevention and control which are implemented nationally.

Total central expenditure on health and family welfare in 1997–98 was Rs 14,166·2m. on revenue account. In 1991 there were 15,067 hospitals, and in 1992, 410,875 doctors. In 1993 there were an estimated 1,364 people per hospital bed.

In 1997 approximately 204m. people, representing 22% of the population, were undernourished. In 1979, 38% of the population had been undernourished.

Approximately 3·7m. Indians are HIV-infected, a number only exceeded in South Africa (and equivalent to nearly 9% of all the people believed to be infected worldwide). Some suggestions indicate that there may be as many as 15m. HIV-positive people by 2010.

CULTURE

Broadcasting. In March 1997 there were 187 radio stations and 297 transmitters, 19 channels and 41 programme production centres. Television reached 85·8% of the population, through a network of 834 transmitters (colour by PAL). There were estimated to be 116m. radio sets and 63m. TV sets in 1997. There were 18m. cable TV subscribers in 1997—approximately 29% of households that had TV licences. By 2000 the number of TV sets had increased to 75m. and cable subscribers to 37m.

Cinema. In 1996 there were nearly 13,000 cinemas and 683 feature films were certified. Attendances totalled 90m.–100m. per week. In 1990, 948 full length films were produced.

Press. There were 41,000 registered newspapers in March 1996, with a total circulation of 72·3m. In 1994 there were 369 dailies in 18 languages with a total circulation of 20m. Hindi papers have the highest number and circulation, followed by English, then Urdu, Bengali and Marathi. The newspaper with the highest circulation is Kerala Kaumudi (daily average of 1·7m. copies in 1999). In 1996 a total of 11,903 book titles were published.

It was estimated in 1999 that 29% of the electorate of 620m. for the general election had no access to any sort of news media.

Tourism. In 1999 there were 2,482,000 foreign tourists, spending US$3·04bn. Of 2,359,000 foreign tourists in 1998, over 360,000 were from the UK, 229,000 from the USA and 107,000 from Sri Lanka.

ANDHRA PRADESH

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Constituted a separate state on 1 Oct. 1953, Andhra Pradesh was the undisputed Telugu-speaking area of Madras. To this region was added, on 1 Nov. 1956, the Telangana area of the former Hyderabad State, comprising the districts of Hyderabad, Medak, Nizamabad, Karimnagar, Warangal, Khammam, Nalgonda and Mahbubnagar, parts of the Adilabad district, some taluks of the Raichur, Gulbarga and Bidar districts and some revenue circles of the Nanded district. On 1 April 1960, 221·4 sq. miles in the Chingleput and Salem districts of Madras were transferred to Andhra Pradesh in exchange for 410 sq. miles from Chittoor district. The district of Prakasam was formed on 2 Feb. 1970. Hyderabad was split into two districts on 15 Aug. 1978 (Ranga Reddy and Hyderabad). A new district, Vizianagaram, was formed in 1979.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Andhra Pradesh is in south India and is bounded in the south by Tamil Nadu, west by Karnataka, north and northwest by Maharashtra, northeast by Chhattisgarh and Orissa and east by the Bay of Bengal. The state has an area of 275,069 sq. km and a population (2001 census, provisional) of 75,727,541; density, 275 per sq. km. The principal language is Telugu. ASSAM

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Assam first became a British Protectorate at the close of the first Burmese War in 1826. In 1832 Cachar was annexed; in 1835 the Jaintia Hills were included in the East India Company's dominions, and in 1839 Assam was annexed to Bengal. In 1874 Assam was detached from Bengal and made a separate chief commissionership. On the partition of Bengal in 1905, it was united to the Eastern Districts of Bengal under a Lieut.-Governor. From 1912 the chief commissionership of Assam was revived, and in 1921 a governorship was created. On the partition of India almost the whole of the predominantly Muslim district of Sylhet was merged with East Bengal (Pakistan). Dewangiri in North Kamrup was ceded to Bhutan in 1951. The Naga Hill district, administered by the Union government since 1957, became part of Nagaland in 1962. The autonomous state of Meghalaya within Assam, comprising the districts of Garo Hills and Khasi and Jaintia Hills, came into existence on 2 April 1970, and achieved full independent statehood in Jan. 1972, when it was also decided to form a Union Territory, Mizoram (now a state), from the Mizo Hills district.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Assam is in northeast India, almost separated from central India by Bangladesh. It is bounded in the west by West Bengal, north by Bhutan and Arunachal Pradesh, east by Nagaland, Manipur and Myanmar, south by Meghalaya, Bangladesh, Mizoram and Tripura. The area of the state is now 78,438 sq. km. Population (2001 census, provisional) 26,638,407; density, 340 per sq. km. Principal towns with population (1991) are; Guwahati, 584,342; Dibrugarh, 125,667; Silchar, 115,483; Nagaon, 93,350; Tinsukia, 73,918; Dhubri, 66,216; Jorhat, 58,358; Tezpur, 55,084. The principal language is Assamese.

The central government is surveying the line of a proposed boundary fence to prevent illegal entry from Bangladesh.

BIHAR

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Bihar was part of Bengal under British rule until 1912 when it was separated together with Orissa. The two were joined until 1936 when Bihar became a separate province. As a state of the Indian Union it was enlarged in 1956 by the addition of land from West Bengal.

The state contains the ethnic areas of North Bihar, Santhal Pargana and Chota Nagpur. In 1956 certain areas of Purnea and Manbhum districts were transferred to West Bengal. In 2000 the state of Jharkhand was carved from the mineral-rich southern region of Bihar, substantially reducing the state's revenue-earning power.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Bihar is in north India and is bounded north by Nepal, east by West Bengal, south by the new state of Jharkhand, southwest and west by Uttar Pradesh. After the formation of Jharkhand the area of Bihar is 94,163 sq. km (previously 173,877 sq. km). Population (2001 census, provisional), 82,878,796, with a density of 880 per sq. km. CHHATTISGARH

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The state was carved from sixteen mainly tribal districts of Madhya Pradesh and became the twenty-sixth state of India on 1 Nov. 2000. Chhattisgarh has been under the administrative control of many different rulers during its history, which can be traced back to the 4th century. Originally known as South Kosala, archaeological excavations made in recent times indicate that the region was a hive of artistic and cultural experimentation in ancient times. During the Sarabhapuriyas, Nalas, Pandavamsis and Kalchuris dynasties between the 6th and 8th centuries vast numbers of brick temples were built in the area. The British took control of the area from the Mahrattas in the early 19th century. Despite possessing its own cultural identity Chhattisgarh was constantly swallowed up by other regions and in 1956, as a direct result of the Indian Union of 1949, it was made part of the new region of Madhya Pradesh. For several years locals in Chhattisgarh voiced the grievance that their region was effectively a 'colony' of Madhya Pradesh, maintaining that the revenue generated by their region, which was termed the 'rice bowl of Madhya Pradesh' and was also rich in minerals, was insufficiently re-invested in the area itself. In 2000 the National Democratic Alliance successfully negotiated the passage of a bill through both houses of the Indian parliament which carved out three new Indian states, Chhattisgarh among them.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Chhattisgarh is in central eastern India and is bounded by the new state of Jharkhand to the east, Orissa to the southeast, Andhra Pradesh to the south and Maharashtra and Madhya Pradesh to the west. Chhattisgarh has an area of 135,191 sq. km. Population (2001 census, provisional) 20,795,956; density, 154 per sq. km. The principal languages are Hindi and Chhattisgarhi.

Cities with over 250,000 population, see INDIA: Territory and population. Other large cities (1991): Bilaspur, 192,396; Durg, 150,645; Rajnandgaon, 125,371; Korba, 124,501.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Growth rate 1991–2001, 18·06%.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

Chhattisgarh is the twenty-sixth state of India. In creating Chhattisgarh it was decided that the 90 members of the Madhya Pradesh Legislative Assembly from Chhattisgarhi districts would become the members of the new state's legislative assembly. For administrative purposes the region is divided into 16 districts. The council of ministers consists of 15 cabinet ministers and eight ministers of state.

The capital and seat of government is at Raipur.

RECENT ELECTIONS

On the basis of elections in Nov. 1998, the Congress (I) Party had 48 of the MLA seats and the Bharatiya Janata party had 36. The Congress (I) Party formed an administration with former AICC general secretary Ajit Jogi becoming the state's first chief minister.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

Governor: Dinesh Nandan Sahaya.

Chief Minister: Ajit Jogi.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Electricity. Of the 19,720 villages in Chhattisgarh, 18,070 have electricity.

Water. 1·1m. ha. of land is under irrigation. 44,750 residential areas have sufficient drinking water supplies while 7,315 residential areas only have partial supplies and 2,751 areas have insufficient supplies. In total there were 102,063 hand pumps in the state and 701 water fulfilment plans in place in 1999.

Minerals. The state has extensive mineral resources including (1999 estimates): over 27,000m. tonnes of tin ore, 2,000m. tonnes of iron ore, 525m. tonnes of dolomite (accounting for 24% of India's entire share), and 73m. tonnes of bauxite. There are also significant deposits of limestone, copper ore, rock phosphate, coal and manganese ore. Deobogh in the Raipur district contains deposits of diamonds.

Agriculture. Agriculture is the occupation for 1·7m. of the population (around 80%). 5·8m. ha. of land is agricultural and the area provides food grain for over 600 rice mills. The great plains of Chhattisgarh produce 10,000 varieties of rice.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. Total length of roads (1999) was 33,182 km. State highways connect Raipur to neighbouring states and to Jagdalpur and Kondagaon in the south of Chhattisgarh and Durg and Rajnandgaon in the west.

Rail. Raipur is at the centre of the state's railway network, linking Chhattisgarh to the states of Orissa and Madhya Pradesh.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Education. In 2001, 65·18% of the population were literate (77·86% of men and 52·40% of women). There are three universities in Chhattisgarh. Ravishankar University (founded 1964), at Raipur, had 89 affiliated colleges (1992–93); Indira Gandhi Krishi Vishwavidyalaya, Raipur, a music and fine arts institution (founded in 1956); and Guru Ghasidas University, Bilaspur which had 58 colleges and 34,717 students (1992–93).

GOA

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The coastal area was captured by the Portuguese in 1510 and the inland area was added in the 18th century. In Dec. 1961 Portuguese rule was ended and Goa incorporated into the Indian Union as a Territory together with Daman and Diu. Goa was granted statehood as a separate unit on 30 May 1987. Daman and Diu remained Union Territories.

HIMACHAL PRADESH

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Thirty small hill states were merged to form the Territory of Himachal Pradesh in 1948; the state of Bilaspur was added in 1954 and parts of the Punjab in 1966. The whole territory became a state in Jan. 1971. The state is a Himalayan area of hill-tribes, rivers and forests. Its main component areas are Chamba, a former princely state, dominated in turn by Moghuls and Sikhs before coming under British influence in 1848; Bilaspur, an independent Punjab state until it was invaded by Gurkhas in 1814 (the British East India Company forces drove out the Gurkhas in 1815); Simla district around the town built by the Company near Bilaspur on land reclaimed from Gurkha troops (the summer capital of India from 1865 until 1948); Mandi, a princely state until 1948; Kangra and Kullu districts, originally Rajput areas which had become part of the British-ruled Punjab. They were incorporated into Himachal Pradesh in 1966 when the Punjab was reorganized.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Himachal Pradesh is in north India and is bounded north by Kashmir, east by Tibet, southeast by Uttaranchal, south by Haryana, southwest and west by Punjab. The area of the state is 55,673 sq. km and a population (2001 census, provisional) of 6,077,248; density, 109 per sq. km. Principal languages are Hindi and Pahari. The capital is Shimla, population (1991 census) of the urban agglomeration, 110,360.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Growth rate 1991–2001, 17·53%.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

Full statehood was attained, as the 18th State of the Union, on 25 Jan. 1971. On 1 Sept. 1972 districts were reorganized and three new districts created, Solan, Hamirpur and Una, making a total of 12.

There is a unicameral Legislative Assembly.

RECENT ELECTIONS

Elections were held in Feb. 2003 in 65 of the 68 constituencies. Congress won 40 seats; Bharatiya Janata Party (BJP), 16; ind. 6; other parties, 3.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

Governor: Suraj Bhan.

Chief Minister: Virbhadra Singh.

ECONOMY

Budget. Budget estimates for 1997–98 showed receipts of Rs 27,064·2m. and expenditure of Rs 28,905·4m. Annual plan, 1999–2000, Rs 16,000m.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Electricity. All 16,807 villages have electricity. Installed capacity (1995–96), 288·7 MW. Electricity generated (1995–96), 1,286m. kWh.

Water. An artificial confluence of the Sutlej and Beas rivers has been made, directing their united flow into Govind Sagar Lake. Other major rivers are Ravi, Chenab and Yamuna.

Minerals. The state has rock salt, slate, gypsum, limestone, barytes, dolomite and pyrites.

Agriculture. Farming employs 71% of the people. Irrigated area is 17% of the area sown. There are about 2,000 tea planters cultivating 2,063 ha. Main crops are seed potatoes, off season vegetables, wheat, maize, rice and fruits such as apples, peaches, apricots, hops, kiwi fruit, strawberries and flowers; 436,000 tonnes of fruits were produced in 1999.

JAMMU AND KASHMIR

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The state of Jammu and Kashmir was brought into being in 1846 at the close of the First Sikh War. By the Treaty of Amritsar, Gulab Singh, de facto ruler of Jammu and Ladakh, added Kashmir to his existing territories, in consideration of his agreeing to pay the indemnity imposed by the British on the defeated Sikh empire. Of the state's three component parts, Ladakh and Kashmir were ancient polities, Ladakh having been an independent kingdom since the tenth century AD till its conquest by Gulab Singh's armies in 1834–42. Kashmir lost its independence to the Mughal empire in 1586, and was conquered in turn by the Afghans (1756) and the Sikhs (1819). Jammu was a collection of small principalities, until these were consolidated by Gulab Singh and his brothers in the early nineteenth century.

British supremacy was recognized until the Indian Independence Act, 1947, when all states decided on accession to India or Pakistan. Kashmir asked for standstill agreements with both. Pakistan agreed, but India desired further discussion with the government of Jammu and Kashmir State. In the meantime the state became subject to armed attack from the territory of Pakistan and the Maharajah acceded to India on 26 Oct. 1947 by signing the Instrument of Accession. India approached the UN in Jan. 1948, and the conflict ended by ceasefire in Jan. 1949, the major part of the state remaining with India, but a significant amount of territory in the north and west going to Pakistan. Hostilities between the two countries broke out in 1965 and again in 1971, but notwithstanding bilateral agreements at the highest level—the Tashkent Declaration (Jan. 1966) and the Simla Agreement (July 1972)—the issue remained and remains unresolved. With Muslims a majority of its population, both India and Pakistan regard the state as a touchstone of their divergent political raisons d'être—Pakistan as a Muslim nation, and India a secular one—and hence their position as non-negotiable. Intermittent violence between nationalistic factions has led to further negotiations between India and Pakistan with both sides pledging a peaceful solution. In Dec. 2002 the new provincial government promised to open talks with separatist groups.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The state is in the extreme north and is bounded north by China, east by Tibet, south by Himachal Pradesh and Punjab and west by Pakistan. The area is 222,236 sq. km, of which about 84,100 sq. km is occupied by Pakistan and 36,749 sq. km by China; the population of the territory on the Indian side of the line in the 2001 census (provisional), was 10,069,917. Srinagar (population, 1991, 892,506) is the summer and Jammu (1,207,996) the winter capital. The official language is Urdu; other commonly spoken languages are Kashmiri (3·1m. speakers at 1981 census), Hindi (1m.), Dogri, Gujri, Pahari, Ladakhi and Punjabi.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Growth rate 1991–2001, 29·04%.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The Maharajah's son, Yuvraj Karan Singh, took over as Regent in 1950 and, on the ending of hereditary rule (17 Oct. 1952), was sworn in as Sadar-i-Riyasat. On his father's death (26 April 1961) Yuvraj Karan Singh was recognized as Maharajah by the Indian government. The permanent Constitution of the state came into force in part on 17 Nov. 1956 and fully on 26 Jan. 1957. There is a bicameral legislature; the Legislative Council has 36 members and the Legislative Assembly has 87. Since the 1967 elections the 6 representatives of Jammu and Kashmir in the central House of the People are directly elected; there are 4 representatives in the Council of States. After a period of President's rule, a National Conference–Indira Congress coalition government was formed in March 1987. The government was dismissed and the state was brought under President's rule on 18 July 1990.

The state has 14 districts.

RECENT ELECTIONS
Elections to the State Assembly were held in four rounds between 16 Sept. and 8 Oct. 2002. The ruling pro-India National Conference won 28 of the 87 seats (57 in 1996); the Indian Congress Party won 20 (7 in 1996); the People's Democratic Party, 16; and the Bharatiya Janata Party, 1 (8 in 1996). Despite ongoing violence and voter intimidation throughout the elections, turn-out was estimated at 46%. Following the elections, a coalition government was formed by the Indian Congress Party, the People's Democratic Party and other smaller parties.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION
Governor: Girish Chander Saxena.

Chief Minister: Mufti Mohammad Sayeed.

ECONOMY
Budget. Budget estimates for 1997–98 show total receipts of Rs 53,628·9m. and total expenditure of Rs 52,748·1m. Annual Plan (1997–98) Rs 15,500m.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES
Electricity. Installed capacity (1996–97) 365·8 MW; 6,252 villages had electricity in 1995–96.

Minerals. Minerals include coal, bauxite and gypsum.

Total foodgrains produced, 1995–96, 1·37m. tonnes (rice, 0·51m. tonnes; wheat, 0·35m. tonnes); pulses, 22,900 tonnes. Fruit is important: production, 1994–95, 0·9m. tonnes; exports, 0·76m. tonnes.

Irrigated area, 1993–94, 442,000 ha.

Livestock (1982): cattle, 2,325,200; buffaloes, 5,631,000; goats, 1,003,900; sheep, 1,908,700; horses, 973,000; and poultry, 2,406,760.

Forestry. Forests cover about 20,443 sq. km (1995), forming an important source of revenue, besides providing employment to a large section of the population.

INDUSTRY
There are two central public sector industries and 30 medium-scale. There are 35,576 small units (1994–95) employing over 125,000. There are industries based on horticulture; traditional handicrafts are silk spinning, wood-carving, papier mâché and carpet-weaving. 750 tonnes of silk cocoons were produced in 1994–95.

The handicraft sector employed 0·26m. persons and had a production turnover of Rs 2,500m. in 1995–96.

COMMUNICATIONS
Roads. Kashmir is linked with the rest of India by the motorable Jammu–Pathankot road. The Jawahar Tunnel, through the Banihal mountain, connects Srinagar and Jammu, and maintains road communication with the Kashmir Valley during the winter months. In 1994–95 there were 12,252 km of roads.

There were 195,125 motor vehicles in 1995–96.

Rail. Kashmir is linked with the Indian railway system by the line between Jammu and Pathankot; route-km of railways in the state, 1995–96, 88 km.

Civil Aviation. Major airports, with daily service from Delhi, are at Srinagar and Jammu. There is a third airport at Leh.

Telecommunications. There were 202 telephone exchanges and 54,644 telephones in 1994–95.

Postal Services. There were 1,583 post offices in 1994.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS
Justice. The High Court, at Srinagar and Jammu, has a Chief Justice and four puisne judges.

Religion. The majority of the population, except in Jammu, are Muslims (making it the only Indian state to have a Muslim majority). At the 1981 census Muslims numbered 3,843,451; Hindus, 1,930,448; Sikhs, 133,675; Buddhists, 69,706; Christians, 8,481; Jains, 1,576.

Education. The proportion of literate people was 54·46% in 2001 (65·75% of men and 41·82% of women). Education is free. There were (1996–97) 1,351 high and higher secondary schools with 227,699 students, 3,104 middle schools with 405,598 students and 10,483 primary schools with 893,005 students. Jammu University (1969) has 5 constituent and 13 affiliated colleges, with 15,278 students (1992–93); Kashmir University (1948) has 18 colleges (17,000 students, 1992–93); the third university is Sher-E-Kashmir University of Agricultural Sciences and Technology. There are 4 medical colleges, 2 engineering and technology colleges, 4 polytechnics, 8 oriental colleges and an Ayurvedic college, 34 arts, science and commerce colleges and 4 teacher training colleges.

Health. In 1993–94 there were 43 hospitals with 9,256 beds, 264 primary health centres and 1,740 sub-centres, and 35 community health centres. There is a National Institute of Medical Sciences.

JHARKHAND

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The state was carved from Bihar and became the twenty-eighth state of India on 15 Nov. 2000. Located in the plateau regions of eastern India, Jharkhand (literally meaning land of forests) is mentioned in ancient Indian texts as an area inaccessible to the rest of India owing to its unforgiving terrain and the warring nature of the tribes living in its forests. The Mughals attacked the region in 1385 and again in 1616, arresting the King of Jharkhand and imprisoning him while they collected money from local chieftains. During the 17th century Jharkhand was a part of the Mughal empire and spread over areas of present-day Madhya Pradesh and Bihar. The East India Company was granted revenue-collecting power of the area in 1765 and the permanent settlement of 1796 increased the company's grip on the area. In 1858 sovereignty was transferred to the English crown. From 1793 until 1915 there were periodic tribal rebellions throughout Jharkhand against the British. In 1912 Jharkhand was constituted as part of the province of Bihar and Orissa after the former was separated from West Bengal. The Jharkhand Party submitted a request for Jharkhand to become a separate state to the State Reorganisation Committee in 1955. In 2000 a separate Jharkhand state was finally formed after legislation initiated by the National Democratic Alliance passed through parliament. The new state comprised a large area of southern Bihar but not any parts of West Bengal or Orissa as had been originally proposed.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Jharkhand is in central eastern India and is bounded by Bihar to the north, West Bengal to the east, Orissa to the south and the new state of Chhattisgarh to the west. Jharkhand has an area of 79,714 sq. km. Population (2001 census, provisional) 26,909,428; density: 338 per sq. km. Cities with over 250,000 population, see INDIA: Territory and population. Other large cities (1991): Dhanbad, 151,789.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Growth rate 1991–2001, 23·19%.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

Jharkhand is the twenty-eighth state of India. After the region was carved from Bihar it was decided that the 81 Members of the Legislative Assembly (MLAs) from Jharkhandi districts would become the members of the new state's legislative assembly. For administrative purposes the region is divided into 18 districts.

The capital and seat of government is at Ranchi.

RECENT ELECTIONS

On the basis of elections held in Feb. 2000, the Bharatiya Janata Party was the single largest party with 32 seats. On the formation of the new state they formed a coalition government with Babu Lal Marandi as the state's first chief minister.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

Governor: M. Rama Jois.

Chief Minister: Babu Lal Marandi.

ECONOMY

Budget. Budget estimates for Bihar in 1998–99 showed that areas in Jharkhand accounted for almost two-thirds of Bihar's total collected revenues.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Minerals. Jharkhand is very rich in minerals, with about 40% of national production, including 90% of the country's cooking coal deposits, 40% of its copper, 37% of known coal reserves and 2% of iron ore. Other important minerals: bauxite, quartz, building stones and ceramics, graphite, limestone, kyanite, manganese, lead and silver.

INDUSTRY

There is a major engineering corporation in Jharkhand as well as India's largest steel plant at Bokaro. Other important industries are aluminium and copper plants, forging, explosives, refractories and glass production.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. National highways connect Ranchi to the neighbouring states of Bihar in the north, West Bengal to the east and Orissa to the south. State highways connect to the new state of Chhattisgarh in the west.

Rail. Ranchi and the steel city of Bokaro are at the hub of the state's railway network linking Jharkhand to its neighbouring states as well as to Calcutta.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Education. In 2001, 54·13% of the population were literate (87·94% of men and 39·38% of women). There were three universities in 1999: Ranchi University (founded 1960), with 106 colleges and 55,731 students (1994-95); Bisra Agricultural University in Ranchi (1980); and Sidhu Kanhu University. There were 17 technical institutes, including the Indian School of Mines, the Xavier Labour Relations Institute, the Birla Institute of Technology and the Central Mining Research Institute.

CULTURE

Tourism. The main tourist centre is Ranchi.

KARNATAKA

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The state of Karnataka, constituted as Mysore under the States Reorganization Act, 1956, brought together the Kannada-speaking people distributed in five states, and consisted of the territories of the old states of Mysore and Coorg, the Bijapur, Kanara and Dharwar districts and the Belgaum district (except one taluk) in former Bombay, the major portions of the Gulbarga, Raichur and Bidar districts in former Hyderabad, the South Kanara district (apart from the Kasaragod taluk) and the Kollegal taluk of the Coimbatore district in Madras. The state was renamed Karnataka in 1973.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The state is in south India and is bounded north by Maharashtra, east by Andhra Pradesh, south by Tamil Nadu and Kerala, west by the Indian ocean and northeast by Goa. The area of the state is 191,791 sq. km, and its population (2001 census, provisional), 44,977,201; density, 235 per sq. km. Principal cities, see INDIA: Territory and Population. The capital is Bangalore. Other large towns (1991) are: Bellary (245,391), Bijapur (186,939), Shimoga (178,882), Raichur (157,551), Tumkur (138,903), Gadag-Betigeri (134,051), Mandya (120,265), Hospet (114,154) and Bidar (108,016).

Kannada is the language of administration and is spoken by about 66% of the people. Other languages include Urdu (9%), Telugu (8·2%), Marathi (4·5%), Tamil (3·6%), Tulu and Konkani.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Growth rate 1991–2001, 17·25%.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

Karnataka has a bicameral legislature. The Legislative Council has 75 members. The Legislative Assembly consists of 224 elected members.

The state has 27 districts grouped in four divisions: Bangalore, Belgaum, Gulbarga and Mysore.

RECENT ELECTIONS

At the elections in 1999 the Indian National Congress party won 132 seats, the Bharatiya Janata Party, 44; independents, 19; Janata Dal (United), 18; Janata Dal (Secular), 10; All India Anna Dravida Munetra Kazhagam, 1.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

Governor: T. N. Chaturvedi.

Chief Minister: Somanahalli Mallaiah Krishna.

ECONOMY

Budget. Budget estimates, 1997–98: revenue receipts, Rs 117,664·5m.; revenue expenditure, Rs 119,654·5m. Plan allocation 1997–98, Rs 41,300m.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Electricity. In 1995–96 the state's installed capacity was 3,377·5 MW. Electricity generated, 1994–95, 16,830m. kWh. 26,483 villages had electricity in March 1996.

Minerals. Karnataka is an important source of gold and silver. The estimated reserves of high grade iron ore are 8,798m. tonnes. These reserves are found mainly in the Chitradurga belt. The National Mineral Development Corporation of India has indicated total reserves of nearly 332m. tonnes of magnesite and iron ore (with an iron content ranging from 25 to 40) which have been found in Kudremukh Ganga-Mula region in Chickmagalur District. Value of production (1992–93) Rs 2,590m. The estimated reserves of manganese are over 320m. tonnes.

Limestone is found in many regions; deposits (1992–93) are about 5,892m. tonnes.

Karnataka is the largest producer of chromite. It is one of the only two states of India producing magnesite. The other minerals of industrial importance are corundum and garnet.

Agriculture. Agriculture forms the main occupation of more than three-quarters of the population. Physically, Karnataka divides into four regions—the coastal region, the southern and northern plains, comprising roughly the districts of Bangalore, Tumkur, Chitradurga, Kolar, Bellary, Mandya and Mysore, and the hill country, comprising the districts of Chickmagalur, Hassan and Shimoga. Rainfall is heavy in the hill country, and there is dense forest. The greater part of the plains are cultivated. Coorg district is essentially agricultural.

The main food crops are rice paddy and jowar, and ragi which is also about 30% of the national crop. Total foodgrains production (1995–96), 8·77m. tonnes (rice 3·02m. tonnes, wheat 150,200 tonnes); pulses 0·72m. tonnes. Sugar, groundnut, castor-seed, safflower, mulberry silk and cotton are important cash crops. The state grows about 70% of the national coffee crop.

Production, 1995–96: sugarcane, 24·92m. tonnes; cotton (1993–94), 773,279 bales (each 170 kg).

Livestock (1992–93): buffaloes, 4·07m.; other cattle, 10·18m.; sheep, 4·73m.; goats, 3·89m.

Forestry. Total forest in the state (1995) is 30,382 sq. km, producing sandalwood, bamboo and other timbers.

Fisheries. Production, 1995–96, 304,870 tonnes.

INDUSTRY

There were 7,765 factories, 125 industrial estates and 5,176 industrial sheds employing 818,000 in March 1994. In 1994–95, 163,524 small industries employed 1,076,312 persons. The Vishveshwaraiah Iron and Steel Works is situated at Bhadravati, while at Bangalore are national undertakings for the manufacture of aircraft, machine tools, telephones, light engineering and electronics goods. The Kudremukh iron ore project is of national importance. An oil refinery is in operation at Mangalore. Other industries include textiles, vehicle manufacture, cement, chemicals, sugar, paper, porcelain and soap. In addition, much of the world's sandalwood is processed, the oil being one of the most valuable productions of the state. Sericulture is a more important cottage industry giving employment, directly or indirectly, to about 2·7m. persons; production of raw silk, 1992–93, 7,147 tonnes, over two-thirds of national production.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. In 1993–94 the state had 134,832 km of roads, including 1,997 km of national highway. There were (31 March 1996) 2,249,890 motor vehicles.

Rail. In 1995–96 there were 3,124 km of railway (including 149 km of narrow gauge) in the state.

Civil Aviation. There are airports at Bangalore, Hubli, Mysore, Mangalore, Bellary and Belgaum, with regular scheduled services to Bombay, Calcutta, Delhi and Madras.

Shipping. Mangalore is a deep-water port for the export of mineral ores. Karwar is being developed as an intermediate port.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. The seat of the High Court is at Bangalore. It has a Chief Justice and 21 puisne judges.

Religion. At the 1991 census there were 38,432,027 Hindus; 5,234,023 Muslims; 859,478 Christians; 326,114 Jains; 73,012 Buddhists; 10,101 Sikhs.

Education. In 2001, 67·04% of the population were literate (76·29% of men and 57·50% of women). In 1996–97 the state had 22,870 primary schools with 6,507,805 students, 18,485 middle schools with 2,158,487 students, 7,644 high and higher secondary schools with 1,270,794 students, 172 polytechnic and 125 medical colleges, 49 engineering and technology colleges, 761 arts, science and commerce colleges and 12 universities. Education is free up to pre-university level.

Universities: Mysore (1916); Karnataka (1949) at Dharwar; University of Agricultural Sciences (1964) at Hebbal, Bangalore; Gulbarga; Mangalore; University of Agricultural Sciences, Dharwad; Kuvempu University, Shimoga; Kannada University and National Law School of India. Mysore has 6 university and 125 affiliated colleges; Karnataka, 5 and 240; Bangalore, 204 affiliated; Hebbal, 8 constituent colleges.

The Indian Institute of Science, Bangalore, has the status of a university.

Health. There were in 1993–94, 306 hospitals, 208 dispensaries, 1,459 primary health centres and 459 family welfare centres. Total number of beds in 1993–94, 43,308.

KERALA

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The state of Kerala was created in 1956, bringing together the Malayalam-speaking areas. It includes most of the former state of Travancore-Cochin and small areas from the state of Madras. Cochin, an exceptionally safe harbour, was an early site of European trading in India. In 1795 the British took it from the Dutch and British influence remained dominant. Travancore was a Hindu state which became a British protectorate in 1795, having been an ally of the British East India Company for some years. Cochin and Travancore were combined as one state in 1947, reorganized and renamed Kerala in 1956.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Kerala is in south India and is bounded north by Karnataka, east and southeast by Tamil Nadu, southwest and west by the Indian ocean. The state has an area of 38,863 sq. km. The 2001 census showed a population of 31,838,619; density, 819 per sq. km. Chief cities, see INDIA: Territory and Population. Other principal towns (1991): Alappuzha (174,666), Kollam (139,852), Palakkad (123,289) and Thalassery (103,577).

Languages spoken in the state are Malayalam, Tamil and Kannada.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

The growth rate during the period 1991–2001, at 9·42%, was the lowest of any Indian state.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The state has a unicameral legislature of 140 elected (and one nominated) members including the Speaker.

The state has 14 districts. The capital is Thiruvananthapuram.

RECENT ELECTIONS

At the elections of 10 May 2001 the Indian National Congress party won 62 seats, the Communist Party of India (Marxist) (CPM) 23 and the Muslim League Kerala State Committee 16.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

Governor: Sikander Bakht.

Chief Minister: A. K. Antony.

ECONOMY

Budget. Budget estimates for 1997–98 showed revenue receipts of Rs 75,534m.; expenditure Rs 87,957m. Annual Plan expenditure, 1997–98, Rs 28,500m.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Electricity. Installed capacity (1995–96), 1,505 MW; energy generated in 1995–96 was 6,662m. kWh. The Idukki hydro-electric plant produced 3,064m. kWh and the Sabarigiri scheme 1,674m. kWh. All villages have electricity.

Minerals. The beach sands of Kerala contain monazite, ilmenite, rutile, zircon, sillimanite, etc. There are extensive white clay deposits; other minerals of commercial importance include magnesite, china clay, limestone, quartz sand and lignite. Iron ore has been found at Kozhikode (Calicut).

Agriculture. Area under irrigation in 1995–96 was 644,000 ha; 6 irrigation projects were under execution in 1996–97. The chief agricultural products are rice, tapioca, coconut, arecanut, cashew nut, oilseeds, pepper, sugarcane, rubber, tea, coffee and cardamom. About 98% of Indian black pepper and about 95% of Indian rubber is produced in Kerala. Production of principal crops, 1994–95: total foodgrains, 1·1m. tonnes (of which rice 953,026 tonnes from 471,000 ha); pulses, 16,800 tonnes; sugarcane, 464,000 tonnes; rubber, 475,000 tonnes; tea, 64,794 tonnes; coffee, 42,600 tonnes; cashew nuts, 96,780 tonnes.

Livestock (1987): buffaloes, 329,000; other cattle, 3·4m.; goats, 1·6m. In 1995–96 milk production was 2·24m. tonnes; egg production, 1,991m.

Forestry. Forest occupied 10,336 sq. km in 1995, including teak, sandalwood, ebony and blackwood and varieties of softwood. Net forest revenue, 1995–96, Rs 1,607·7m.

Fisheries. Fishing is a flourishing industry; the total catch in 1995–96 was 582,000 tonnes (of which marine, 532,000 tonnes). Fish exports, 78,896 tonnes in 1995–96.

INDUSTRY

There are numerous cashew and coir factories. Important industries are rubber, tea, coffee, tiles, automotive tyres, watches, electronics, oil, textiles, ceramics, fertilizers and chemicals, pharmaceuticals, zinc-smelting, sugar, cement, rayon, glass, matches, pencils, monazite, ilmenite, titanium oxide, rare earths, aluminium, electrical goods, paper, shark-liver oil, etc. The state has a refinery and a shipyard at Kochi (Cochin).

The number of factories registered under the Factories Act 1948 on 31 Dec. 1995 was 15,965, with daily average employment of 0·41m. There were 143,23 small-scale units employing 0·78m. persons on 31 March 1996.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. In 1995–96 there were 144,636 km of roads in the state; national highways, 1,011 km. There were 1·17m. motor vehicles at 31 March 1996.

Rail. There is a coastal line from Mangalore in Karnataka which connects with Tamil Nadu. In 1995–96 there were 1,053 route-km of track.

Civil Aviation. There are airports at Kozhikode, Kochi and Thiruvananthapuram with regular scheduled services to Delhi, Bombay and Madras.

Shipping. Port Kochi, administered by the central government, is one of India's major ports; in 1983 it became the out-port for the Inland Container Depot at Coimbatore in Tamil Nadu. There are 12 other ports and harbours.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. The High Court at Ernakulam has a Chief Justice and 21 puisne judges.

Religion. At the 1991 census there were 16,668,587 Hindus; 6,788,364 Muslims; 5,621,510 Christians; 3,641 Jains; 2,224 Sikhs.

Education. Kerala is the most literate Indian state, with 25·63m. literate people at the 2001 census (90·92%; 94·20% of men and 87·86% of women). Education is free up to the age of 14.

In 1996–97 there were 6,725 primary schools with 2·79m. students, 2,998 middle schools with 1·84m. students and 3,125 high and higher secondary schools with 1·07m. students. There were also 169 junior colleges with 210,074 pupils.

Kerala University (established 1937) at Thiruvananthapuram is affiliating and teaching; in 1995–96 it had 52 affiliated colleges with 113,569 students. The University of Kochi is federal, and for post-graduate studies only. The University of Calicut (established 1968) is teaching and affiliating and has 95 affiliated colleges with 122,343 students (1995–96). MADHYA PRADESH

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The state was formed in 1956 to bring together the Hindi-speaking districts of the area including the 17 Hindi districts of the old Madhya Pradesh, most of the former state of Madhya Bharat, the former states of Bhopal and Vindhya Pradesh and a former Rajput enclave, Sironj. This was an area which the Mahrattas took from the Moghuls between 1712 and 1760. The British overcame Mahratta power in 1818 and established their own Central Provinces. Nagpur became the Province's capital and was also the capital of Madhya Pradesh until in 1956 boundary changes transferred it to Maharashtra. The present capital, Bhopal, was the centre of a Muslim princely state from 1723. An ally of the British against the Mahrattas, Bhopal (with neighbouring small states) became a British-protected agency in 1818. After independence Bhopal acceded to the Indian Union in 1949. The states of Madhya Bharat and Vindhya Pradesh were then formed as neighbours, and in 1956 were combined with Bhopal and Sironj and renamed Madhya Pradesh. In 2000 sixteen mainly tribal districts were carved from Madhya Pradesh to form the new state of Chhattisgarh.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The state is in central India and is bounded north by Uttar Pradesh, east by the new state of Chhattisgarh, south by Maharashtra, and west by Gujarat and Rajasthan. Owing to the creation of Chhattisgarh, Madhya Pradesh is no longer the largest Indian state in size. Its revised area is 308,245 sq. km (previously 443,446 sq. km), making it the second largest state in the country. Population (using 2001 census figures), 60,385,118 (31,456,873 males); density, 196 per sq. km.

Cities with over 250,000 population, see INDIA: Territory and Population. Other large cities (1991): Ratlam, 195,776; Sagar, 195,346; Burhanpur, 172,710; Dewas, 164,364; Murwara, 163,431; Satna, 160,500; Morena, 147,124; Khandwa, 145,133; Rewa, 128,981; Bhind, 109,755; Shivpuri, 108,271; Guna, 100,490.

Hindi, Marathi, Urdu and Gujarati are spoken. In April 1990 Hindi, which predominates in the state, became the sole official language.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

Madhya Pradesh is one of the nine states for which the Constitution provides a bicameral legislature, but the Vidhan Parishad or Upper House (to consist of 90 members) has yet to be formed. The Vidhan Sabha or Lower House has 230 elected members.

For administrative purposes the state has been split into nine revenue divisions with a Commissioner at the head of each; the headquarters of these are located at Bhopal, Gwalior, Hoshangabad, Indore, Jabalpur, Morena, Rewa, Sagar and Ujjain. There are 22,029 gram (village) panchayats, 313 janpad (intermediate) panchayats and 45 zila (district) panchayats, following the creation of 16 new districts in administrative reforms of 1999 and the creation of Chhattisgarh in 2000.

The seat of government is at Bhopal.

RECENT ELECTIONS

Following the election in Nov. 1998, the Congress (I) Party retained power. Congress (I) won 170 seats, Bharatiya Janata Party (BJP) 117, Pragatisheel Bahujan Samaj Party (BSP) 7, Janata Dal 1, independents and others 18. The remaining seats were vacant. The present Assembly, after the creation of Chhattisgarh, has 128 members from Congress, 83 from the BJP, 4 from each of the BSP and SP, one each from the JD, ABP, RPJ and JP, and seven are independent.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

Governor: Bhai Mahavir.

Chief Minister: Digvijay Singh.

ECONOMY

Budget. Budget estimates for 2001–02 showed revenue receipts of Rs 125,184m. and expenditure of Rs 162,770m. Annual plan, 2002–03, Rs 48,209m.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Electricity. Madhya Pradesh is rich in low-grade coal suitable for power generation, and also has immense potential for hydro-electric energy. Total installed capacity, 2000–01, 2,941 MW. Power generated, 14,009m. kWh in 2000–01. There are eight hydro-electric power stations of 747·5 MW installed capacity. 50,306 out of 51,806 villages had electricity by 2000–01.

Water. Major irrigation projects include the Chambal Valley scheme (started in 1952 with Rajasthan), the Tawa project in Hoshangabad district, the Barna and Hasdeo schemes, the Mahanadi canal system and schemes in the Narmada valley at Bargi and Narmadasagar. Area under irrigation, 1999–2000, 4·28m. ha.

Minerals. Much of the state's extensive mineral deposits were in the area that has now become the new state of Chhattisgarh. In 2000–01 (1996 figures in brackets) there were 25·04m. tonnes (8,001m.) of limestone, 0·25m. tonnes (126·8m.) of bauxite, 4·04m. tonnes (26,853m.) of coal, and 0·92m. tonnes (2,186·2m.) of iron ore. In 2001–02 the output of diamonds was 73,981 carats and manganese ore 0·43m. tonnes. In 2001–02 revenue from minerals was Rs 5·39m. (Rs 8,500m. in 1997–98) and coal output was 4·4m. tonnes (43·0m. in 1999–2000).

Agriculture. The creation of the new state of Chhattisgarh, previously known as the 'rice bowl' of Madhya Pradesh, in 2000 had serious implications for the state. Agriculture is the mainstay of the state's economy and 76·8% of the people are rural. 43·7% of the land area is cultivable, of which 16·6% is irrigated. Production of principal crops, 2001–02 (in tonnes): foodgrains, 8·93m.; pulses, 3·96m.; cotton, 0·23m. bales of 170 kg.

Livestock (1997): buffaloes, 6·64m.; other cattle, 34·88m.; sheep, 6·56m.; goats, 6·47m.

Forestry. The forested area totals 95,200 sq. km, or about 30·9% of the state. The forests are chiefly of sal, saja and teak species. They are the chief source in India of best-quality teak; they also provide firewood for about 60% of domestic fuel needs, and form valuable watershed protection. Forest revenue, 2001–02, Rs 32·5m.

INDUSTRY

The major industries are steel, aluminium, paper, cement, motor vehicles, ordnance, textiles and heavy electrical equipment. Other industries include electronics, telecommunications, sugar, fertilizers, straw board, vegetable oil, refractories, potteries, textile machinery, steel casting and re-rolling, industrial gases, synthetic fibres, drugs, biscuit manufacturing, engineering, optical fibres, plastics, tools, rayon and art silk. The number of heavy and medium industries in the state is 805; the number of small-scale establishments in production is 497,000.

There are 23 'growth centres' in operation, and five under development. The Government of India has proposed setting up a Special Economic Zone at Indore.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. Total length of roads is 68,100 km. The length of national highways is 4,720 km and state highway 6,500 km. In March 2002 there were 3,173,000 motor vehicles.

Rail. The main rail route linking northern and southern India passes through Madhya Pradesh. Bhopal, Bina, Gwalior, Indore, Itarsi, Jabalpur, Katni, Khandwa, Ratlam and Ujjain are important junctions for the central, south, eastern and western networks. Route length (1998–99), 5,764·8 km.

Civil Aviation. There are domestic airports at Bhopal, Gwalior, Indore and Khajuraho with regular scheduled services to Bombay, Delhi, Agra and Varanasi.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. The High Court of Judicature at Jabalpur has a Chief Justice and 21 puisne judges. Its benches are located at Gwalior and Indore. A National Institute of Law and a National Judicial Academy have been set up at Bhopal.

Religion. At the 1991 census Hindus numbered 61,412,898; Muslims, 3,282,800; Jains, 490,324; Christians, 426,598; Buddhists, 216,667; Sikhs, 161,111.

Education. In 2001, 64·11% of the population were literate (76·80% of men and 50·28% of women). Education is free for children aged up to 14.

In 1998 there were 81,000 primary schools (63,712 in 2001) with 10·33m. students, 20,000 middle schools with 3·46m. students and 7,000 high and higher secondary schools (8,471 in 2001) with 2·03m. students.

There are 11 universities in Madhya Pradesh: Dr Hari Singh Gour University (established 1946), at Sagar, had 97 affiliated colleges and 74,386 students in 1992–93; Rani Durgavati University at Jabalpur (1957) had 46 affiliated colleges and 45,315 students; Vikram University (1957), at Ujjain, had 83 affiliated colleges and 39,723 students; Devi Ahilya University at Indore (1964) had 32 affiliated colleges and 28,196 students; Jiwaji University (1963), at Gwalior, had 60 affiliated colleges and (1991–92) 58,825 students; Jawaharlal Nehru Agricultural University (1964), at Jabalpur, had 10 constituent colleges and 2,053 students; A. P. Singh University, Rewa had 81 colleges and 24,960 students; Barkatullah Vishwavidyalaya, Bhopal had 44 colleges and 18,817 students; Makhanlal Chaturvedi Rashtriya Patrakarita Vishwavidhyalaya Bhopal; Chitrakoot Gramodoya Vishwavidhayalaya, Chitrakoot; and Rajiv Gandhi Technology University, Bhopal. There are also the Bhoj Open University, Bhopal, the Centre for Excellence in Higher Education, Bhopal, and the Maharshi Mahesh Yogi Vedic Vishwavidyalaya, Jabalpur. In 1999 there were 413 government colleges (15 of which were lost to Chhattisgarh in 2000), 252 private colleges (14 of which were lost to Chhattisgarh in 2000), 30 engineering colleges (all to be affiliated to the Rajiv Ghandi Technology University), 7 medical colleges, 44 polytechnics, 5 institutions of architecture and 30 management institutes.

Health. In 2001–02 there were 45 district hospitals, 57 urban civil hospitals, 1,194 primary health centres, 8,835 sub-health centres, 229 community health centres, seven TB hospitals and two TB sanatoriums.

MAHARASHTRA

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The Bombay Presidency of the East India Company began with a trading factory, made over to the Company in 1668. The Presidency expanded, overcoming the surrounding Mahratta chiefs until Mahratta power was finally conquered in 1818. After independence Bombay State succeeded the Presidency; its area was altered in 1956 by adding Kutch and Saurashtra and the Marathi-speaking areas of Hyderabad and Madhya Pradesh, and taking away Kannada-speaking areas (which were added to Mysore). In 1960 the Bombay Reorganization Act divided Bombay State between Gujarati and Marathi areas, the latter becoming Maharashtra. The state of Maharashtra consists of the following districts of the former Bombay State: Ahmednagar, Akola, Amravati, Aurangabad, Bhandara, Bhir, Buldana, Chanda, Dhulia (West Khandesh), Greater Bombay, Jalgaon (East Khandesh), Kolaba, Kolhapur, Nagpur, Nanded, Nashik, Osmanabad, Parbhani, Pune, Ratnagiri, Sangli, Satara, Sholapur, Thane, Wardha, Yeotmal; certain portions of Thane and Dhulia districts have become part of Gujarat.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Maharashtra is in central India and is bounded north by Madhya Pradesh, east by Chhattisgarh, south by Andhra Pradesh, Karnataka and Goa, west by the Indian ocean and northwest by Daman and Gujarat. The state has an area of 307,713 sq. km. The population in 2001 (census, provisional) was 96,752,247; density, 314 per sq. km. In 1991 the area of Greater Bombay was 603 sq. km and its population 9·93m. For other principal cities, see INDIA: Territory and Population. Other large towns (1991): Jalgaon (242,193), Chandrapur (226,105), Ichalkaranji (214,950), Latur (197,408), Sangli (193,197), Parbhani (190,255), Ahmadnagar (181,339), Jalna (174,958), Bhusawal (145,143), Miraj (125,407), Bid (112,434), Gondiya (109,470), Yavatmul (108,578) and Wardha (102,985).

The official language is Marathi.

MANIPUR

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Formerly a state under the political control of the government of India, Manipur entered into interim arrangements with the Indian Union on 15 Aug. 1947 and the political agency was abolished. The administration was taken over by the government of India on 15 Oct. 1949 under a merger agreement, and it was centrally administered by the government of India through a Chief Commissioner. In 1950–51 an Advisory form of government was introduced. In 1957 this was replaced by a Territorial Council of 30 elected and two nominated members. Later, in 1963, a Legislative Assembly of 30 elected and three nominated members was established under the government of Union Territories Act 1963. Because of the unstable party position in the Assembly, it had to be dissolved on 16 Oct. 1969 and President's Rule introduced. The status of the administrator was raised from Chief Commissioner to Lieut.-Governor with effect from 19 Dec. 1969. On 21 Jan. 1972 Manipur became a state and the status of the administrator was changed from Lieut.-Governor to Governor. In June 2001 Manipur was placed under central rule.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The state is in northeast India and is bounded north by Nagaland, east by Myanmar, south by Myanmar and Mizoram, and west by Assam. Manipur has an area of 22,327 sq. km and a population (2001 census, provisional) of 2,388,634; density, 107 per sq. km. The valley, which is about 1,813 sq. km, is 800 metres above sea-level. The hills rise in places to 3,000 metres, but are mostly about 1,500–1,800 metres. The average annual rainfall is 165 cm. The hill areas are inhabited by various hill tribes who constitute about one-third of the total population of the state. There are about 30 tribes and sub-tribes falling into two main groups of Nagas and Kukis. Manipuri and English are the official languages. A large number of dialects are spoken.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Growth rate 1991–2001, 30·02%.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

Manipur has a Legislative Assembly of 60 members, of which 19 are from reserved tribal constituencies. There are nine districts. The capital is Imphal.

RECENT ELECTIONS

Elections were held in Feb. 2002. The Indian National Congress party (INC) won 19 seats; the Federal Party of Manipur (FPM), 13; the Manipur State Congress Party (MSCP), 6; the Bharatiya Janata Party (BJP), 4; Samata Party, 3; others, 15. NAGALAND

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The state was created in 1961, effective 1963. It consisted of the Naga Hills district of Assam and the Tuensang Frontier Agency. The agency was a British-supervised tribal area on the borders of Myanmar. Its supervision passed to the government of India at independence, and in 1957 Tuensang and the Naga Hills became a Centrally Administered Area, governed by the central government through the Governor of Assam.

A number of Naga leaders fought for independence until a settlement was reached with the Indian government at the Shillong Peace Agreement of 1975. However, calls for a greater Naga state, potentially incorporating parts of neighbouring Manipur, Arunachal Pradesh and Assam, continued to be voiced, notably through the National Socialist Council of Nagaland (NSCN), which had been active since 1954. The national government and NSCN met in Delhi in early Jan. 2003 to hold their first joint talks in 37 years, after which the NSCN declared ‘the war is over’.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The state is in the northeast of India and is bounded in the north by Arunachal Pradesh, west by Assam, east by Myanmar and south by Manipur. Nagaland has an area of 16,579 sq. km and a population (2001 census, provisional) of 1,988,636; density, 120 per sq. km. The major towns are the capital, Kohima (1991 population, 51,418) and Dimapur (57,182). Other towns include Wokha, Mon, Zunheboto, Mokokchung and Tuensang. The chief tribes in numerical order are: Angami, Ao, Sumi, Konyak, Chakhesang, Lotha, Phom, Khiamngan, Chang, Yimchunger, Zeliang-Kuki, Rengma, Sangtam and Pochury. The main languages of the state are English, Hindi and Nagamese.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Growth rate 1991–2001, 64·41% (the highest rate of any Indian state).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

An Interim Body (Legislative Assembly) of 42 members elected by the Naga people and an Executive Council (Council of Ministers) of five members were formed in 1961, and continued until the State Assembly was elected in Jan. 1964. The Assembly has 60 members. The Governor has extraordinary powers, which include special responsibility for law and order.

The state has eight districts (Dimapur, Kohima, Mon, Zunheboto, Wokha, Phek, Mokokchung and Tuensang). The capital is Kohima.

RECENT ELECTIONS

At the elections to the State Assembly in Feb. 2003 the Indian National Congress party won 20 seats (53 in 1998); Nagaland People’s Front, 19; BJP, 6; Nagaland Democratic Movement, 5; ind.; 4; other parties, 4. Results for two seats were not available.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

Governor: Shyamal Datta.

Chief Minister: Neiphiu Rio.

ECONOMY

Budget. Budget estimates for 1996–97 showed total receipts of Rs 9,604·4m. and expenditure of Rs 9,937·8m. Annual plan, 1997–98, Rs 3,500m.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Electricity. Installed capacity (1995–96) 6·82 MW; all towns and villages have electricity. In 1995–96, seven electricity generation schemes were under implementation.

Oil and Gas. Oil has been located in three districts.

Minerals. In addition to oil, other minerals include: coal, limestone, chromite, magnesite, iron ore, copper ore, clay, glass sand and slate.

Agriculture. 90% of the people derive their livelihood from agriculture. The Angamis, in Kohima district, practise a fixed agriculture in the shape of terraced slopes, and wet paddy cultivation in the lowlands. In the other two districts a traditional form of shifting cultivation (jhumming) still predominates, but some farmers have begun tea and coffee plantations and horticulture. About 61,000 ha were under terrace cultivation and 74,040 ha under jhumming in 1994–95. Production of rice (1995–96) was 0·185m. tonnes, total foodgrains 238,300 tonnes and pulses 12,300 tonnes. Forests covered 8,625 sq. km in 1995–96.

INDUSTRY

There is a forest products factory at Tijit; a paper-mill (100 tonnes daily capacity) at Tuli, a distillery unit and a sugar-mill (1,000 tonnes daily capacity) at Dimapur, and a cement factory (50 tonnes daily capacity) at Wazeho. Bricks and TV sets are also made, and there are 1,850 small units. There is a ceramics plant and sericulture is also important.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. There is a national highway from Kaziranga (Assam) to Kohima and on to Manipur. There are state highways connecting Kohima with the district headquarters. Total length of roads in 1992, 14,933 km. There were 95,020 motor vehicles registered in 1994–95.

Rail. Dimapur has a rail-head. Railway route-km in 1995–96, 13 km.

Civil Aviation. Dimapur has a daily air service to Calcutta.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. A permanent bench of the Guwahati High Court has been established in Kohima.

Religion. At the 1991 census there were 1,057,940 Christians; 122,473 Hindus; 20,642 Muslims; 1,202 Jains; 732 Sikhs.

Education. In 2001, 67·11% of the population were literate (71·77% of men and 61·92% of women). In 1996–97 there were 1,414 primary schools with 271,932 students, 416 middle schools with 63,437 students, 244 high and higher secondary schools with 24,547 students, 36 colleges, 2 teacher training colleges and 2 polytechnics. The North Eastern Hill University opened at Kohima in 1978. Nagaland University was established in 1994.

Health. In 1995–96 there were 32 hospitals (1,051 beds), 27 primary and 5 community health centres, 65 dispensaries, 243 sub-centres, 5 TB centres and 30 leprosy centres.

ORISSA

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Orissa was divided between Mahratta and Bengal rulers when conquered by the British East India Company, the Bengal area in 1757 and the Mahratta in 1803. The area which now forms the state then consisted of directly controlled British districts and a large number of small princely states with tributary rulers. The British districts were administered as part of Bengal until 1912 when, together with Bihar, they were separated from Bengal to form a single province. Bihar and Orissa were separated from each other in 1936. In 1948 a new state government took control of the whole state, including the former princely states (except Saraikella and Kharswan which were transferred to Bihar, and Mayurbhanj which was not incorporated until 1949).

In Oct. 1999 Orissa was hit by a devastating cyclone which resulted in more than 10,000 deaths.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Orissa is in eastern India and is bounded north by Jharkhand, northeast by West Bengal, east by the Bay of Bengal, south by Andhra Pradesh and west by Chhattisgarh. The area of the state is 155,707 sq. km, and its population (2001 census, provisional), 36,706,920; density 236 per sq. km. Cities with over 250,000 population at 1991 census, see INDIA: Territory and Population. Other large cities (1991): Rourkela (urban agglomeration), 398,864; Brahmapur, 210,418; Sambalpur, 131,138; Puri, 125,199. The principal and official language is Oriya.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Growth rate 1991–2001, 15·94%.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The Legislative Assembly has 147 members.

The state consists of 30 districts.

The capital is Bhubaneswar (18 miles south of Cuttack).

RECENT ELECTIONS

At the elections of 17 and 22 Feb. 2000 Prime Minister Atal Bihari Vajpayee's alliance defeated the main opposition Congress Party, the distribution of seats being: Biju Janata Dal, 68; Bharatiya Janata Party, 38; Indian National Congress Party, 26; independents, 8; others, 7.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

Governor: M. M. Rajendran.

Chief Minister: Naveen Patnaik.

ECONOMY

Budget. Budget estimates, 1996–97, showed total receipts of Rs 79,812m. and total expenditure of Rs 84,683m. Annual plan outlay, 1997–98, Rs 25,000m.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Electricity. The Hirakud Dam Project on the river Mahanadi irrigates 628,000 acres and has an installed capacity of 307·5 MW. There are other projects under construction; hydro-electric power is now serving a large part of the state. Other hydro-power projects are Balimela (360 MW), Upper Kolab (320 MW) and Rengali (250 MW). Total installed capacity (1995–96) 2,152 MW. In March 1996, 32,068 villages had electricity.

Minerals. Orissa is India's leading producer of chromite (95% of national output), dolomite (50%), manganese ore (25%), graphite (80%), iron ore (16%), fire-clay (34%), limestone (20%), and quartz-quartzite (18%). Production in 1995–96 (1,000 tonnes): coal, 32,660; iron ore, 9,330; bauxite, 2,420; limestone, 2,380; chromite, 1,650; dolomite, 1,350; manganese ore, 630. Value of production in 1995–96 was Rs 16,340m.

Agriculture. The cultivation of rice is the principal occupation of about 80% of the workforce, and only a very small amount of other cereals is grown. Production of foodgrains (1994–95) totalled 7·2m. tonnes from 7·9m. ha (rice 6·4m. tonnes, wheat 58,000 tonnes); pulses, 0·58m. tonnes; oilseeds, 0·27m. tonnes; sugarcane, 781,000 tonnes. Turmeric is cultivated in the uplands of the districts of Ganjam, Phulbani and Koraput, and is exported.

PUNJAB (INDIA)

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The Punjab was constituted an autonomous province of India in 1937. In 1947 the province was partitioned between India and Pakistan into East and West Punjab respectively. The name of East Punjab was changed to Punjab (India) under the Constitution of India. On 1 Nov. 1956 the erstwhile states of Punjab and Patiala and East Punjab States Union (PEPSU) were integrated to form the state of Punjab. On 1 Nov. 1966, under the Punjab Reorganization Act, 1966, the state was reconstituted as a Punjabi-speaking state comprising the districts of Gurdaspur (excluding Dalhousie), Amritsar, Kapurthala, Jullundur, Ferozepore, Bhatinda, Patiala and Ludhiana; parts of Sangrur, Hoshiarpur and Ambala districts; and part of Kharar tehsil. The remaining area comprising 47,000 sq. km and an estimated (1967) population of 8·5m. was shared between the new state of Haryana and the Union Territory of Himachal Pradesh. The existing capital of Chandigarh was made joint capital of Punjab and Haryana; its transfer to Punjab alone (scheduled for 1986) has been delayed while the two states seek agreement as to which Hindi-speaking districts shall be transferred to Haryana in exchange.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The Punjab is in north India and is bounded at its northernmost point by Kashmir, northeast by Himachal Pradesh, southeast by Haryana, south by Rajasthan, west and northwest by Pakistan. The area of the state is 50,362 sq. km, with a population (2001 census, provisional) of 24,289,296; density, 482 per sq. km. Cities with over 250,000 population at 1991 census, see INDIA: Territory and Population. Other principal towns (1991): Bathinda (159,042), Pathankot (123,930), Moga (108,304), Abohar (107,163). The official language is Punjabi.

RAJASTHAN

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The state is in the largely desert area formerly known as Rajputana. The Rajput princes were tributary to the Moghul emperors when they were conquered by the Mahrattas' leader, Mahadaji Sindhia, in the 1780s. In 1818 Rajputana became a British protectorate and was recognized during British rule as a group of princely states including Jaipur, Jodhpur and Udaipur. After independence the Rajput princes surrendered their powers and in 1950 were replaced by a single state government. In 1956 the state boundaries were altered; small areas of the former Bombay and Madhya Bharat states were added, together with the neighbouring state of Ajmer. Ajmer had been a Moghul power base; it was taken by the Mahrattas in 1770 and annexed by the British in 1818. In 1878 it became Ajmer-Merwara, a British province, and survived as a separate state until 1956.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Rajasthan is in northwest India and is bounded north by Punjab, northeast by Haryana and Uttar Pradesh, east by Madhya Pradesh, south by Gujarat and west by Pakistan. Since the area of Madhya Pradesh was reduced by the creation of Chhattisgarh in 2000, Rajasthan has become the largest Indian state in size, with an area of 342,239 sq. km. Population (2001 census, provisional), 56,473,122; density 165 per sq. km. For chief cities, see INDIA: Territory and Population. Other major towns (1991): Alwar (205,086), Bhilwara (183,965), Ganganagar (161,482), Bharatpur (148,519), Sikar (148,272), Pali (136,842), Beawar (105,363). SIKKIM

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

A small Himalayan kingdom between Nepal and Bhutan, Sikkim was independent in the 1830s although in continual conflict with larger neighbours. In 1839 the British took the Darjeeling district. British political influence increased during the 19th century, as Sikkim was the smallest buffer between India and Tibet. However, Sikkim remained an independent kingdom ruled by the 14th-century Namgyal dynasty. In 1950 a treaty was signed with the government of India, declaring Sikkim an Indian Protectorate. Indian influence increased from then on. Internal political unrest came to a head in 1973, and led to the granting of constitutional reforms in 1974. Agitation continued until Sikkim became a ‘state associated with the Indian Union’ later that year. In 1975 the king was deposed and Sikkim became an Indian state, a change approved by referendum.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Sikkim is in the Eastern Himalayas and is bounded north by Tibet, east by Tibet and Bhutan, south by West Bengal and west Nepal. Area, 7,096 sq. km. It is inhabited chiefly by the Lepchas, a tribe indigenous to Sikkim, the Bhutias, who originally came from Tibet, and the Nepalis, who entered from Nepal in large numbers in the late 19th and early 20th century. Population (2001 census, provisional), 540,493; density, 76 per sq km. The capital is Gangtok.

English is the principal language. Lepcha, Bhutia, Nepali and Limboo also have official status.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Growth rate 1991–2001, 32·98%.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The Assembly has 32 members.

The official language of the government is English. Lepcha, Bhutia, Nepali and Limboo have also been declared official languages.

Sikkim is divided into four districts for administration purposes, Gangtok, Mangan, Namchi and Gyalshing being the headquarters for the Eastern, Northern, Southern and Western districts respectively.

RECENT ELECTIONS

At the State Assembly election of Oct. 1999 the Sikkim Democratic Front won 24 seats; Sikkim Sangram Parishad, 7; and independents, 1.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

Governor: V. Rama Rao.

Chief Minister: Pawan Kumar Chamling.

ECONOMY

Budget. Budget estimates for 1996–97 showed a budget of Rs 61,800m. Annual plan outlay for 1997–98 was Rs 2,200m.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Electricity. Installed capacity (1995–96) 33·6 MW. There are four hydro-electric power stations. All villages had electricity in 1991.

Minerals. Copper, zinc and lead are mined.

Agriculture. The economy is mainly agricultural; main food crops are rice, maize, millet, wheat and barley; cash crops are cardamom (a spice), mandarin oranges, apples, potatoes, and buckwheat. Foodgrain production, 1995–96, 104,200 tonnes (rice, 21,900 tonnes; wheat, 15,300 tonnes); pulses, 5,700 tonnes. Tea is grown. Medicinal herbs are exported.

Forestry. Forests occupied about 3,127 sq. km. in 1995 and the potential for a timber and wood-pulp industry is being explored.

INDUSTRY

Small-scale industries include cigarettes, distilling, tanning, fruit preservation, carpets and watchmaking. Local crafts include carpet weaving, making handmade paper, wood carving and silverwork. The State Trading Corporation of Sikkim stimulates trade in indigenous products.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. There are 1,615 km of roads, all on mountainous terrain, and 18 major bridges under the Public Works Department. Public transport and road haulage is nationalized. There were 8,997 motor vehicles in 1995–96.

Rail. The nearest railhead is at Siliguri (115 km from Gangtok).

Civil Aviation. The nearest airport is at Bagdogra (128 km from Gangtok), linked to Gangtok by helicopter service.

Telecommunications. There are 1,445 telephones (1987) and 37 wireless stations.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Religion. At the 1991 census there were 277,881 Hindus; 110,371 Buddhists; 13,413 Christians; 3,849 Muslims; 375 Sikhs; 40 Jains.

Education. In 2001, 69·68% of the population were literate (76·73% of men and 61·46% of women). There is also a training institute for primary teachers, two degree colleges and a teacher training college.

CULTURE

Broadcasting. A radio broadcasting station, Akashvani Gangtok, was built in 1982, and a permanent station in 1983. Gangtok also has a low-power TV transmitter.

Tourism. There is great potential for the tourist industry, which has been stimulated by the opening of new roads.

TAMIL NADU

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The first trading establishment made by the British in the Madras State was at Peddapali (now Nizampatnam) in 1611 and then at Masulipatnam. In 1639 the English were permitted to make a settlement at the place which is now Madras, and Fort St George was founded. By 1801 the whole of the country from the Northern Circars to Cape Comorin (with the exception of certain French and Danish settlements) had been brought under British rule.

Under the provisions of the States Reorganization Act, 1956, the Malabar district (excluding the islands of Laccadive and Minicoy) and the Kasaragod district taluk of South Kanara were transferred to the new state of Kerala; the South Kanara district (excluding Kasaragod taluk and the Amindivi Islands) and the Kollegal taluk of the Coimbatore district were transferred to the new state of Mysore; and the Laccadive, Amindivi and Minicoy Islands were constituted a separate Territory. Four taluks of the Trivandrum district and the Shencottah taluk of Quilon district were transferred from Travancore-Cochin to the new Madras State. On 1 April 1960, 1,049 sq. km from the Chittoor district of Andhra Pradesh were transferred to Madras in exchange for 844 sq. km from the Chingleput and Salem districts. In Aug. 1968 the state was renamed Tamil Nadu.

TRIPURA

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Tripura is a Hindu state of great antiquity having been ruled by the Maharajahs for 1,300 years before its accession to the Indian Union on 15 Oct. 1949. With the reorganization of states on 1 Sept. 1956 Tripura became a Union Territory, and was so declared on 1 Nov. 1957. The Territory was made a State on 21 Jan. 1972.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Tripura is bounded by Bangladesh, except in the northeast where it joins Assam and Mizoram. The major portion of the state is hilly and mainly jungle. It has an area of 10,486 sq. km and a population of 3,191,168 (2001 census, provisional); density, 304 per sq. km.

The official languages are Bengali and Kokbarak. Manipuri is also spoken.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Growth rate 1991–2001, 15·74%.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The territory has four districts, namely Dhalai, North Tripura, South Tripura and West Tripura. The capital is Agartala (population, 1991, 157,358).

RECENT ELECTIONS

The Communist Party of India (Marxist) won the Legislative Assembly elections in Feb. 2003 with 38 seats; Congress won 13; Indigenous National Party of Tripura (INPT), 6; others, 3.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

Governor: Lieut.-Gen. (retd) K. M. Seth.

Chief Minister: Manik Sarkar.

ECONOMY

Budget. Budget estimates, 1994–95, showed expenditure of Rs 3,605m. Annual plan outlay for 1997–98 was Rs 4,370m.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Electricity. Installed capacity (1995–96), 69·36 MW; there were (March 1996) 3,640 villages with electricity out of a total of 4,856.

Agriculture. About 24% of the land area is cultivable. The tribes practise shifting cultivation, but this is being replaced by modern methods. The main crops are rice, wheat, jute, mesta, potatoes, oilseeds and sugarcane. Foodgrain production (1995–96), 477,100 tonnes. There are 55 registered tea gardens producing 5,432,000 kg per year, and employing 14,170 in 1994–95.

Forestry. Forests covered 5,538 sq. km in 1995, about 53% of the land area. They have been much depleted by clearance for shifting cultivation and, recently, for refugee settlements of Bangladeshis. About 8% of the forest area still consists of dense natural forest; losses elsewhere are being replaced by plantation. Commercial rubber plantation has also been encouraged. In 1994–95, 30,328 ha were under new rubber plantations.

INDUSTRY

Tea is the main industry. There is also a jute mill producing about 15 tonnes per day and employing about 2,000. Main small industries: aluminium utensils, rubber, saw-milling, soap, piping, fruit canning, handloom weaving and sericulture. There were 1,174 registered factories which employed 31,912 persons, and 700 notified factories with 3,000 workers in 1995–96. 330,980 persons were employed in handloom, handicrafts and sericulture industries in 1995–96.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. Total length of roads (1995–96) 5,760 km, of which 2,258 km were surfaced. On 31 March 1996 vehicles registered totalled 34,683, of which 4,701 were trucks.

Rail. There is a railway between Kumarghat and Kalkalighat (Assam). Route-km in 1995–96, 45 km.

Civil Aviation. There is one airport and three airstrips. The airport (Agartala) has regular scheduled services to Calcutta.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Religion. At the 1991 census Hindus numbered 2,384,934; Muslims, 196,495; Buddhists, 128,260; Christians, 46,472; Sikhs, 740; Jains, 301.

Education. In 2001, 73·66% of the population were literate (81·47% of men and 65·41% of women). In 1996–97 there were 2,045 primary schools (434,143 pupils); 411 middle schools (126,129); 558 high and higher secondary schools (82,273). There were 14 colleges of general education, 1 engineering college, 1 teacher training college and 1 polytechnic. Tripura University, established in 1987, has 20 affiliated colleges with 20,000 students.

Health. There were (1995–96) 27 hospitals, with 2,171 beds, 548 dispensaries, 818 doctors and 729 nurses. There were 53 primary health centres and 67 family planning centres.

UTTAR PRADESH

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

In 1833 the then Bengal Presidency was divided into two parts, one of which became the Presidency of Agra. In 1836 the Agra area was styled the North-West Province and placed under a Lieut.-Governor. In 1877 the two provinces of Agra and Oudh were placed under one administrator, styled Lieut.-Governor of the North-West Province and Chief Commissioner of Oudh. In 1902 the name was changed to 'United Provinces of Agra and Oudh', under a Lieut.-Governor, and the Lieut.-Governorship was altered to a Governorship in 1921. In 1935 the name was shortened to 'United Provinces'. On independence, the states of Rampur, Banaras and Tehri-Garwhal were merged with United Provinces. In 1950 the name of the United Provinces was changed to Uttar Pradesh. In 2000 the new state of Uttaranchal was carved from the northern, mainly mountainous, region of Uttar Pradesh.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Uttar Pradesh is in north India and is bounded north by the new state of Uttaranchal and Nepal, east by Bihar and Jharkhand, south by Madhya Pradesh and Chhattisgarh and west by Rajasthan, Haryana and Delhi. After the formation of Uttaranchal the area of Uttar Pradesh is 240,928 sq. km (previously 294,411 sq. km). Population (2001 census, provisional), 166,052,859; density, 689 per sq. km. Despite the drop in population caused by the creation of Uttaranchal, Uttar Pradesh still has the highest population of any of the Indian states. If Uttar Pradesh were a separate country it would have the sixth highest population. Cities with more than 250,000 population, see INDIA: Territory and Population. Other important towns (1991): Rampur (243,742), Muzaffarnagar (240,609), Shahjahanpur (237,717), Mathura (226,691), Firozabad (215,128), Farrukhabad-Cum-Fatehgarh (194,567), Mirzapur-Cum-Vindhyachal (169,336), Sambhal (150,819), Noida (146,514), Hapur (146,262), Amroha (137,061), Maunath Bhanjan (136,697), Jaunpur (136,062), Bahraich (135,400), Rae Bareli (129,904), Bulandshahr (127,201), Faizabad (124,437), Etawah (124,072), Sitapur (121,842), Fatehpur (117,675), Budaun (116,695), Hathras (113,285), Unnao (107,425), Pilibhit (106,605), Haldwani-Cum-Kathgodam (104,195), Modinagar (101,660). The sole official language has been Hindi since April 1990.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Growth rate 1991–2001, 25·80%.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

Uttar Pradesh has had an autonomous system of government since 1937. There is a bicameral legislature. The Legislative Council has 108 members; the Legislative Assembly has 403.

There are 14 administrative divisions, each under a Commissioner, and 70 districts.

The capital is Lucknow.

RECENT ELECTIONS

Elections were held in Feb. 2002. The Samajwadi Party (SP) won 145 seats; the Bharatiya Janata Party (BJP), 107; the Bahujan Samaj Party (BSP), 98; the Indian National Congress (INC), 25; ind. and others, 26. Presidential rule was imposed as no party gained the 202 seats needed to form a majority.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

Governor: Vishnu Kant Shastri.

Chief Minister: Mayawati.

ECONOMY

Budget. Budget estimates for 1996–97 showed revenue receipts of Rs 155,963·2m.; expenditure, Rs 194,039·9m. Annual plan outlay, 1997–98, Rs 70,800m.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Electricity. The state had, 1995–96, an installed capacity of 6,049 MW. There were 85,657 villages with electricity in March 1996, out of a total of 112,804.

Minerals. The state has magnesite, china-clay, coal, granite, sandstone, copper-lead-zinc, dolomite, limestone, soapstone, bauxite, diaspore, ochre, phosphorite, pyrophyllite, silica sand and steatite reserves among others. In 1995–96 about 13m. tonnes of minerals were produced.

Agriculture. Agriculture occupies 78% of the workforce. 10·13m. ha are irrigated. The state is India's largest producer of foodgrains; production (1995–96), 38·94m. tonnes (rice 10·4m. tonnes, wheat 22·2m. tonnes); pulses, 2·25m. tonnes. The state is one of India's main producers of sugar; production of sugarcane (1995–96), 119·9m. tonnes. There were (1995–96) 1,965 veterinary centres for cattle.

Forestry. In 1995 forests covered about 51,663 sq. km. However, much of this area is now in the new state of Uttaranchal.

INDUSTRY

Sugar production is important; other industries include oil refining, aluminium smelting, edible oils, textiles, distilleries, brewing, leather working, agricultural engineering, paper, automobile tyres, fertilizers, cement, jute, glass, heavy electricals, chemicals, automobiles and synthetic fibres. Large public-sector enterprises have been set up in electrical engineering, pharmaceuticals, locomotive building, general engineering, electronics and aeronautics. Village and small-scale industries are important; there were 0·64m. small units in 1995–96 providing employment to 1·19m. people. The state had 1,661 large and medium industries with an investment of Rs 223,002m. and employing 0·57m. persons in 1995–96.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. There were, 31 March 1995, 185,575 km of roads. In 1995–96 there were 2,977,275 motor vehicles of which 2,057,408 were two-wheelers.

Rail. Lucknow is the main junction of the northern network; other important junctions are Agra, Kanpur, Allahabad, Mughal Sarai and Varanasi. Route-km in 1995–96, 8,934 km.

Civil Aviation. There are airports at Lucknow, Kanpur, Varanasi, Allahabad, Agra, Gorakhpur and five other places.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. The High Court of Judicature at Allahabad (with a bench at Lucknow) has a Chief Justice and 63 puisne judges including additional judges. There are 63 sessions divisions in the state.

Religion. At the 1991 census Hindus numbered 113,712,829; Muslims, 24,109,684; Sikhs, 675,775; Christians, 383,477; Jains, 176,259; Buddhists, 221,443.

Education. At the 2001 census 77·77m. people were literate (57·36%; 70·23% of men and 42·98% of women). UTTARANCHAL

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The state was carved from Uttar Pradesh and became the twenty-seventh state of India on 9 Nov. 2000. It is located in the hilly and mountainous region of the northern border of the Indian subcontinent. The regions of Kumaon and Garhwal contained in the new state were referred to as Uttarakhand in ancient Hindu scriptures. The Chinese suppression of revolt in Tibet in 1959 saw a rapid influx of Tibetan exiles to the region and the Indo-Chinese conflict of 1962 persuaded the Indian government to initiate a modernization programme throughout the Indian Himalayas that resulted in the development of roads and communication networks in the previously backward region. From the 1970s the hill people began to agitate for their districts to be separated from Uttar Pradesh, which had been established in 1950. On 1 Aug. 2000 the Uttar Pradesh Reorganisation bill was passed, allowing for a separate state, called Uttaranchal, to incorporate 12 hill districts and, controversially, the lowland area of Udham Singh Nagar.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Uttaranchal is located in northern India and is bounded in the northeast by China and in the east by Nepal. The state of Uttar Pradesh is to the southwest, Haryana to the west and Himachal Pradesh to the northwest. Uttaranchal has an area of 53,483 sq. km. Population (2001 census, provisional), 8,479,562; density, 159 per sq. km. The principal languages are the Hindi dialects of Garhwali and Kumaoni. Cities with over 250,000 population, see INDIA: Territory and population. Other large cities (1991): Hardwar (147,305).

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Growth rate 1991–2001, 19·20%.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

Uttaranchal is the twenty-seventh state of India. After the region was carved from Uttar Pradesh it was decided that the 22 Members of the Legislative Assembly (MLAs) from Uttaranchali districts would become the members of the new state's Legislative Assembly. Subsequently this was increased to 30 when the provisional assembly was established, and ultimately it is scheduled to have 70 members. For administrative purposes the region is divided into 13 districts.

The interim capital and seat of government is at Dehra Dun.

RECENT ELECTIONS

On the formation of the new state the Bharatiya Janata Party (BJP) was the single largest party with 17 seats, enabling them to form a majority administration in the 23-seat assembly with Nityanand Swamy becoming the state's first chief minister.

State assembly elections were held in Feb. 2002. The Indian National Congress party (INC) won 36 seats; the Bharatiya Janata Party (BJP), 19; the Bahujan Samaj Party (BSP), 7; the Uttarakhand Kranti Dal (UKKD), 4; the Nationalist Congress Party (NCP), 1; independents and others, 3.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

Governor: Sudarshan Agarwal.

Chief Minister: Narain Dutt Tiwari.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Electricity. The state has a potential hydroelectric capacity of 40,000 MW. Government figures claim that more than 75% of the state's 17,000 villages have electricity.

Water. Uttaranchal suffers from an acute shortage of water for drinking and irrigation. Only 10% of the water potential is currently utilized.

Minerals. There are deposits of limestone, gypsum, iron ore, graphite and copper.

Agriculture. Agriculture is the occupation for approximately 50% of the population. Subsistence farming is the norm, as only 9% of the land in the state is cultivable.

Forestry. Approximately 65%–70% of the state's area is covered in forest.

INDUSTRY

Tourism is by far the most important industry. The state can offer ski resorts, adventure tourism, mountaineering, hiking and several areas of religious interest. Other industries include: horticulture, floriculture, fruit-processing and medicine production. In the Terai region there are around 350 industrial units and 130 in the Doon Valley.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. There are 23 km of roads for every 100 sq. km of land in the state. State highways link Uttaranchal to the neighbouring states of Himachal Pradesh, Haryana and Uttar Pradesh. The state remains very inaccessible in parts.

Rail. Four main railway lines in the south of the state link several districts to Uttar Pradesh and Himachal Pradesh. Railways along the foothills connect Dehra Dun, Hardwar, Rishikesh, Roorkee, Kotdwaar, Ram Nagar, Kathgodam and Tanakpur. The rest of the state is not connected to the rail network.

Civil Aviation. There are airports at Dehra Dun and Udham Singh Nagar.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Education. In 2001, 77·28% of the population were literate (84·01% of men and 60·26% of women).

WEST BENGAL

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Bengal was under the overlordship of the Moghul emperor and ruled by a Moghul governor (nawab) who declared himself independent in 1740. The British East India Company based at Calcutta was in conflict with the nawab from 1756 until 1757 when British forces defeated him at Plassey and installed their own nawab in 1760. The French were also in Bengal; the British captured their trading settlement at Chandernagore in 1757 and in 1794, restoring it to France in 1815.

The area of British Bengal included modern Orissa and Bihar, Bangladesh and (until 1833) Uttar Pradesh. Calcutta was the capital of British India from 1772 until 1912.

The first division into East and West took place in 1905–11 and was not popular. However, at Partition in 1947 the East (Muslim) chose to join what was then East Pakistan (now Bangladesh), leaving West Bengal as an Indian frontier state and promoting a steady flow of non-Muslim Bengali immigrants from the East. In 1950 West Bengal received the former princely state of Cooch Behar and, in 1954, Chandernagore. Small areas were transferred from Bihar in 1956.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

West Bengal is in northeast India and is bounded north by Sikkim and Bhutan, east by Assam and Bangladesh, south by the Bay of Bengal, southwest by Orissa, west by Jharkhand and Bihar and northwest by Nepal. The total area of West Bengal is 88,752 sq. km. Its population (2001 census, provisional) was 80,221,171; density, 904 per sq. km. The capital is Calcutta. Population of chief cities, see INDIA: Territory and Population. Other major towns (1991): Barddhaman (245,079), South Dum Dum (232,811), Baranagar (224,821), Siliguri (216,950), Bally (181,978), Burnpur (174,933), Uluberia (155,172), Hugli-Chinsura (151,806), Raiganj (151,045), North Dum Dum (149,965), Dabgram (147,217), English Bazar (139,204), Serampur (137,028), Barrackpur (133,265), Naihati (132,701), Medinipur (125,498), Nabadwip (125,037), Krishnanagar (121,110), Chandannagar (120,378), Balurghat (119,796), Baharampur (115,144), Bankura (114,876), Titagarh (114,085), Halisahar (114,028), Santipur (109,956), Kulti-Barakar (108,518), Basirhat (101,409), Haldia (100,347), Habra (100,223), Kanchrapara (100,194). The principal language is Bengali.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Growth rate 1991–2001, 17·84%.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The state of West Bengal came into existence as a result of the Indian Independence Act, 1947. The territory of Cooch-Behar State was merged with West Bengal on 1 Jan. 1950, and the former French possession of Chandernagore became part of the state on 2 Oct. 1954. Under the States Reorganization Act, 1956, certain portions of Bihar State (an area of 3,157 sq. miles with a population of 1,446,385) were transferred to West Bengal.

The Legislative Assembly has 295 seats (294 elected and 1 nominated).

For administrative purposes there are three divisions (Jalpaiguri, Burdwan and Presidency), under which there are 18 districts, including Calcutta. The Calcutta Metropolitan Development Authority has been set up to co-ordinate development in the metropolitan area (1,350 sq. km). For the purposes of local self-government there are 16 zilla parishads (district boards) excluding Darjeeling, 328 panchayat samities (regional boards), 1 siliguri mahakuma parishad and 3,247 gram (village) panchayats. There are 113 municipalities, 6 Corporations and 11 Notified Areas. The Calcutta Municipal Corporation is headed by a mayor in council.

RECENT ELECTIONS

In elections held on 10 May 2001, 143 seats went to the Communist Party of India (Marxist), 60 went to the All India Trinamool Congress, 26 to the Indian National Congress, 25 to the All India Forward Bloc and 17 to the Revolutionary Socialist Party. In winning the election the Communists retained power for a sixth consecutive term.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

Governor: Viren J. Shah.

Chief Minister: Buddhadeb Bhattacharjee.

ECONOMY

Budget. Budget estimates for 1998–99, revenue receipts Rs 115,827m. and expenditure Rs 132,740·9m. Plan outlay for 1998–99 was Rs 48,061·2m.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Electricity. Installed capacity, 1997–98, 6,293 MW; 29,341 villages had electricity in Nov. 1998.

Water. The largest irrigation and power scheme under construction is the Teesta Barrage (irrigation potential, 533,520 ha). Other major irrigation schemes are the Mayurakshi Reservoir, Kangsabati Reservoir, Mahananda Barrage and Aqueduct and Damodar Valley. In 1997–98 there were 11,030 tubewells, 7,170 open dugwells and 3,353 riverlift irrigation schemes.

Minerals. Value of production, 1998, Rs 13,244m. The state has coal (the Raniganj field is one of the three biggest in India) including coking coal. Coal production (1998) 16·54m. tonnes.

Agriculture. About 5·90m. ha were under rice-paddy in 1997–98. Total foodgrain production, 1997–98 (provisional), 14·35m. tonnes (rice 13·24m. tonnes, wheat 810,000 tonnes); pulses, 125,700 tonnes; oilseeds, 386,600 tonnes; jute, 7·5m. bales of 180 kg; tea (1995), 170·3m. kg. The state produces 76·3% of the national output of jute and mesta (1997–98).

Livestock (1998 census): 17,832,000 cattle; 998,000 buffaloes; 1,462,000 sheep; 15,648,000 goats; and 46,219,000 poultry.

Forestry. The recorded forest area (1997–98) was 13,451 sq. km.

Fisheries. Landings, 1997–98, 950,000 tonnes, of which inland 786,000 tonnes. During 1997–98 Rs 318·6m. was invested in fishery schemes. The state is the largest inland fish producer in the country.

INDUSTRY

The total number of registered factories, 1997 (provisional), was 11,213 (excluding defence factories); average daily employment, 1997, 905,088. The coalmining industry, 1996, had 105 units with average daily employment of 95,864.

There is a large automobile factory at Uttarpara, and an aluminium rolling-mill at Belur. There is a steel plant at Burnpur (Asansol) and a spun pipe factory at Kulti. Durgapur has a large steel plant and other industries under the state sector—a thermal power plant, coke oven plant, fertilizer factory, alloy steel plant and ophthalmic glass plant. There is a locomotive factory at Chittaranjan and a cable factory at Rupnarayanpur. A refinery and fertilizer factory are operating at Haldia. Other industries include chemicals, engineering goods, electronics, textiles, automobile tyres, paper, cigarettes, distillery, aluminium foil, tea, pharmaceuticals, carbon black, graphite, iron foundry, silk and explosives.

Small industries are important; 490,158 units were registered at 31 March 1998, employing 3m. persons. The silk industry is also important; 667,000 persons were employed in the handloom industry in the organized sector in 1997–98.

UNION TERRITORIES

ANDAMAN AND NICOBAR ISLANDS

The Andaman and Nicobar Islands are administered by the President of the Republic of India acting through a Lieut.-Governor. There is a 30-member Pradesh Council, five members of which are selected by the Administrator as advisory counsellors. The seat of administration is at Port Blair, which is connected with Calcutta (1,255 km away) and Madras (1,190 km) by steamer service which calls about every ten days; there are air services from Calcutta and Madras. Roads in the islands, 733 km black-topped and 48 km others. There are two districts.

The population (2001 census, provisional) was 356,265. The area is 8,249 sq. km and the density 43 per sq. km. Growth rate 1991–2001, 26·94%. Port Blair (1991), 74,955.

The climate is tropical, with little variation in temperature. Heavy rain (125" annually) is mainly brought by the southwest monsoon. Humidity is high.

Budget figures for 1997–98 show total revenue receipts of Rs 819m., and total expenditure on revenue account of Rs 3,027m. Plan outlay, 1997–98, Rs 2,550m.

In 1996–97 there were 188 primary schools with 41,976 students, 45 middle schools with 22,862 students, 38 high schools with 11,151 students and 42 higher secondary schools with 3,858 students. Lieut.-Governor. N. N. Jha.

The Andaman Islands lie in the Bay of Bengal, 193 km from Cape Negrais in Myanmar, 1,255 from Calcutta and 1,190 from Madras. Five large islands grouped together are called the Great Andamans, and to the south is the island of Little Andaman. There are some 204 islets, the two principal groups being the Ritchie Archipelago and the Labyrinth Islands. The Great Andaman group is about 467 km long and, at the widest, 51 km broad.

The original inhabitants live in the forests by hunting and fishing. The total population of the Andaman Islands (including about 430 aboriginals) was 240,089 in 1991. Main aboriginal tribes: Andamanese, Onges, Jarawas and Sentinelese.

The Great Andaman group, densely wooded (forests covered 7,615 sq. km in 1995), contains hardwood and softwood and supplies the match and plywood industries. Annually the Forest Department export about 25,000 tonnes of timber to the mainland. Coconut, coffee and rubber are cultivated. The islands are slowly being made self-sufficient in paddy and rice, and now grow approximately half their annual requirements. Livestock (1982): 27,400 cattle, 9,720 buffaloes, 17,600 goats and 21,220 pigs. Fishing is important. There is a sawmill at Port Blair and a coconut-oil mill. Little Andaman has a palm-oil mill.

The islands possess a number of harbours and safe anchorages, notably Port Blair in the south, Port Cornwallis in the north and Elphinstone and Mayabandar in the middle.

The Nicobar Islands are situated to the south of the Andamans, 121 km from Little Andaman. The British were in possession 1869–1947. There are 19 islands, 7 uninhabited; total area, 1,841 sq. km. The islands are usually divided into three sub-groups (southern, central and northern), the chief islands in each being respectively Great Nicobar, Camotra with Nancowrie and Car Nicobar. There is a harbour between the islands of Camotra and Nancowrie, Nancowrie Harbour.

The population numbered, in 1991, 39,208, including about 22,200 of Nicobarese and Shompen tribes. The coconut and areca nut are the main items of trade, and coconuts are a major item in the people's diet.

CHANDIGARH

Area, 114 sq. km. It serves as the joint capital of both Punjab (India) and the state of Haryana, and is the seat of a High Court. The city will ultimately be the capital of just the Punjab; joint status is to last while a new capital is built for Haryana.

Budget for 1997–98 showed revenue of Rs 3,412m. and expenditure of Rs 3,989m.

There is some cultivated land and some forest (27·5% of the territory).

In 1992 there were 15 large and medium scale industries and about 2,800 small scale industries.

In 1996–97 there were 44 primary schools (60,012 students), 33 middle schools (34,095 students), 50 high schools (18,510 students) and 47 higher secondary schools (16,710 students). There were also 2 engineering and technology colleges, 12 arts, science and commerce colleges, 2 polytechnic institutes and a university.

In 2001, 81·76% of the population were literate (85·65% of men and 78·65% of women).

Administrator. Lieut.-Gen. J. F. R. Jacob.

DADRA AND NAGAR HAVELI

GENERAL DETAILS

Formerly Portuguese, the territories of Dadra and Nagar Haveli were occupied in July 1954 by nationalists, and a pro-India administration was formed; this body made a request for incorporation into the Union on 1 June 1961. By the 10th amendment to the constitution the territories became a centrally administered Union Territory with effect from 11 Aug. 1961, forming an enclave at the southernmost point of the border between Gujarat and Maharashtra, approximately 30 km from the west coast. Area 491 sq. km; population (census 2001, provisional), 220,451; density 449 per sq. km; growth rate 1991–2001, 59·20%. There is an Administrator appointed by the government of India. The day-to-day business is done by various departments, co-ordinated by the Secretaries, Assistant Secretary, Collector and Resident Deputy Collector. Headquarters are at Silvassa. 78·82% of the population is tribal and organized in 72 villages. Languages used are dialects classified under Bhilodi (91·1%), Bhilli, Gujarati, Marathi and Hindi.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

Administrator: Mr Arun Mathur, IAS.
Development Commissioner: Mr A. K. Paitandy, IAS.
Finance Secretary/Commissioner: Mr R. K. Srivastava, IAS.
Collector: S. K. Malhotra, IAS.

ECONOMY

Budget. The budget for 2001–02 shows revenue receipts of Rs 1,178·3m. and revenue expenditure of Rs 507m. (plan) and Rs 3,076·2m. (non-plan). For 2002–03 revenue receipt target is Rs 1,212·2m.; budget estimate is Rs 552·8m. under Plan Sector and Rs 3,688·4m. under Non-Plan Sector.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Electricity. Electricity is supplied from Central Grid, and all villages have been electrified. A major sub-station at Kharadpada village has been completed.

Water. As a result of a joint project with the governments of Gujarat, Goa and Daman and Diu there is a reservoir at Damanganga with irrigation potential of 5,900 ha. Drinking water is made available through wells and piped water supply schemes. The Water and Power Consultancy (India) Ltd. (WAPCO) has prepared plans for 66 Water Harvesting Structures to provide drinking water in remote hilly areas.

Minerals. There are few natural mineral resources although there is some ordinary sand and quarry stone.

Agriculture. Farming is the chief occupation, and 22,352 ha were under net crop in 2001–02. Much of the land is terraced and there is a 100% subsidy for soil conservation. The major food crops are rice and ragi; wheat, small millets and pulses are also grown. There is a coverage of lift irrigation over 6,736 ha. There are nine veterinary aid centres, a veterinary hospital, an agricultural research centre and breeding centres to improve strains of cattle and poultry. During 2001–02 the administration distributed 152 tonnes of high-yielding paddy and wheat seed and 1,574 tonnes of manures and fertilizers.

Forestry. 20,359 ha or 40·8% of the total area is forest, mainly of teak, sadad and khair. In 1985 a moratorium was imposed on commercial felling to preserve the environmental function of the forests and ensure local supplies of firewood, timber and fodder. The moratorium still continued in 2002. The tribals have been given exclusive right to collect minor forest produce from the reserved forest area for domestic use. 92 sq. km of reserved forest was declared a wildlife sanctuary in 2000.

Fisheries. There is some inland fishing in water reservoir project areas and individual ponds. During 2001–02 the total catch was 55 tonnes.

INDUSTRY

There is no heavy industry, and the Territory is a 'No Polluting Industry District'. Industrial estates for small and medium scales have been set up at Pipariya, Masat and Khadoli. In March 2002 there were 1,317 small scale and 383 medium scale units employing 37,297 people.

Labour. The Labour Enforcement Office ensures the application of the Monitoring of Minimum Wages Act (1948), the Industrial Disputes Act (1947), the Contract Labour (Regulation and Abolition) Act (1970) and the Workmen's Compensation Act (1923). During 2001–02, 81 cases under the Industrial Disputes Act were settled. Under the Contract Labour (Regulation and Abolition) Act (1970), 53 certificates of registration and 56 licences were issued to the industrial establishment. 19 cases under the Workman's Compensation Act (1923) were settled.

Trade Unions. There is one trade union registered under the Trade Union Act.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. In 2002 there were 580 km of road of which 545·45 km were surfaced. Out of 72 villages, 68 are connected by all-weather road. There were 27,300 motor vehicles in 2001–02. The National Highway no. 8 passes through Vapi, 18 km from Silvassa.

Rail. Although there are no railways in the territory the line from Bombay to Ahmedabad runs through Vapi, 18 km from Silvassa.

Civil Aviation. The nearest airport is at Bombay, 180 km from Silvassa.

Telecommunications. There are 6 telephone exchanges, 1 telex exchange and 1 wireless station. The Telephone Department has provided over 6,000 telephone connections.

Postal Services. There is currently one post and telegraph office with three sub-post offices and 41 branch post offices covering 66 villages.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. The territory is under the jurisdiction of the Bombay (Maharashtra) High Court. There is a District and Sessions Court and one Junior Division Civil Court at Silvassa.

Rice production, 67,100 tonnes from 26,600 ha in 1995–96; principal cash crops are cotton (10,934 bales of 180 kg), sugarcane (258,400 tonnes) and groundnuts; minor food crops include ragi, bajra and pulses.

INDUSTRY

There were, 1994–95, 23 large and 73 medium-scale enterprises manufacturing items such as textiles, sugar, cotton yarn, spirits and beer, potassium chlorate, rice bran oil, vehicle parts, soap, amino acids, paper, plastics, steel ingots, washing machines, glass and tin containers and bio polymers. There were also 5,197 small industrial units engaged in varied manufacturing.

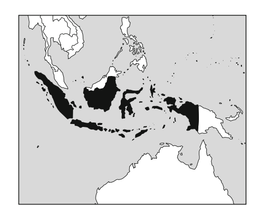
COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. There were (1992–93) 3,282 km of roads of which 1,248 km were surfaced. Motor vehicles (March 1996) 119,290.

Rail. Pondicherry is connected to Villupuram Junction. Route-km in 1995–96, 11 km.

Civil Aviation. The nearest main airport is Madras.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS



Education. In 2001, 81·49% of the population were literate (88·89% of men and 74·13% of women). There were, in 1996–97, 178 pre-primary schools (15,107 pupils), 350 primary schools (103,201), 120 middle schools (64,617), 89 high schools (28,731) and 52 higher secondary schools (11,168). There were (1996–97) 7 general education colleges, 2 medical colleges, a law college, an engineering college, an agricultural college and a dental college, and 4 polytechnics. Pondicherry University had, in 1994–95, 19 colleges and 9,910 students.

Health. In 1995–96 there were 9 hospitals, 55 health centres and dispensaries and 79 sub-centres.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

In the 16th century Portuguese traders settled in some of the islands which now comprise Indonesia but were ejected by the British who in turn were ousted by the Dutch in 1595. From 1602 the Netherlands East India Company controlled the area until the dissolution of the Company in 1798. The Netherlands government then ruled the colony from 1816 until 1941 when it was occupied by the Japanese until 1945. On 17 Aug. 1945 nationalist leaders proclaimed an independent republic. On 27 Dec. 1949 the Netherlands conceded unconditional sovereignty.

In 1960 President Sukarno assumed power to control and dissolve political parties. He also set up a mass organization, the National Front, and a supreme state body called the Provisional People's Consultative Assembly. On 11–12 March 1966 the military commanders under the leadership of Lieut.-Gen. Suharto took over executive power while leaving President Sukarno as the head of state. The Communist party, which had twice attempted to overthrow the government, was outlawed. On 22 Feb. 1967 Sukarno handed over all his powers to Gen. Suharto. Re-elected president at five-year intervals, on the final occasion on 10 March 1998, Suharto presided over a booming economy but one which was characterized by corruption and croneyism. The weaknesses became apparent when, in 1997, a failure of economic confidence spread from Japan across Asia. By May 1998 Indonesia had regressed to the verge of civil war. As food prices doubled, then trebled, riots broke out in Jakarta destroying homes and shops. The risk of society fragmenting along ethnic and religious lines was emphasized by the particular sufferings of the Chinese community. President Suharto was forced to stand down on 21 May 1998 and was succeeded by his Vice-President, Bacharuddin Jusuf Habibie, who promised political and economic reforms. Continuing protest centred on the Suharto family which until recently exercised control over large parts of the Indonesian economy. Several of the country's discontented regions are wanting to break free.

In Aug. 1999 East Timor, the former Portuguese colony which Indonesia invaded in 1975, voted for independence, a move that was eventually approved by the Indonesian parliament after violent clashes between independence supporters and pro-Indonesian militia groups. It gained independence from Indonesia on 20 May 2002.

In Nov. 1999 up to 1m. people took to the streets in the province of Aceh, in the far west of the country, seeking a referendum on independence. One of the founder provinces of the Republic of Indonesia, there were fears that Aceh's possible secession would threaten the breakup of the country. More than 5,000 people were killed there during the 1990s, and rebellions in a number of other Indonesian provinces were suppressed with heavy loss of life. In Dec. 2002 the government and the separatist Free Aceh Movement signed a peace deal to end the violence. In exchange for disarmament, Aceh was granted autonomy and self-government from 2004.

In Oct. 2002 around 200 people, mainly foreign nationals, died in a car bomb explosion outside a nightclub in Bali. A second bomb exploded near a US consulate. No organization claimed responsibility for the attack, but the Indonesian and Australian governments blamed al-Qaeda.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Indonesia, with a land area of 740,356 sq. miles (1,917,525 sq. km), consists of 17,507 islands (6,000 of which are inhabited) extending about 3,200 miles east to west through three time-zones (East, Central and West Indonesian Standard time) and 1,250 miles north to south. The largest islands are Sumatra, Java, Kalimantan (Indonesian Borneo), Sulawesi (Celebes) and West Papua, formerly Irian Jaya (the western part of New Guinea). Most of the smaller islands except Madura and Bali are grouped together. The two largest groups of islands are Maluku (the Moluccas) and Nusa Tenggara (the Lesser Sundas). On the island of Timor Indonesia is bounded in the east by the newly-created independent country of East Timor.

Population at the 1990 census was 179,378,946. Estimate, 1995, 194·75m. (60·2% rural in 1999); density, 102 per sq. km. Indonesia has the fourth largest population in the world, after China, India and the USA.

The UN gives a projected population for 2010 of 237·71m.

[1]Autonomous District. [2]Formerly Telanaipura. [3]1980 census.

The capital, Jakarta, had a population of 10·62m. in 1999. Other major cities (1997 estimates in 1m.): Bandung, 5·92; Bogor, 5·00; Malang, 3·17; Surabaya, 2·80; Semarang, 2·22.

The principal ethnic groups are the Acehnese, Bataks and Minangkabaus in Sumatra, the Javanese and Sundanese in Java, the Madurese in Madura, the Balinese in Bali, the Sasaks in Lombok, the Menadonese, Minahasans, Torajas and Buginese in Sulawesi, the Dayaks in Kalimantan, Irianese in West Papua (formerly Irian Jaya) and the Ambonese in the Moluccas. There were some 6m. Chinese resident in 1991.

Bahasa Indonesia is the official language; Dutch is spoken as a colonial inheritance.

Jakarta: Indonesia's capital is the country's largest city. It lies on the western tip of the island of Java and covers an area of 590 sq. km. It was captured by the Dutch in 1619 and named Batavia until Indonesia gained full independence in 1949 when it was renamed Jakarta. Since then, Jakarta has undergone huge growth in population and industry and is now one of the most important urban agglomerations in Asia.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Births, 1995, 4,719,000; deaths, 1,580,000. 1995 birth rate, 23·9 per 1,000 population; death rate, 8·0. Life expectancy in 1999 was 63·9 years for men and 67·7 for women. Annual population growth rate, 1990–99, 1·5%. Infant mortality, 1999, 38 per 1,000 live births; fertility rate, 1999, 2·5 births per woman.

In the Human Development Index, or HDI (measuring progress in countries in longevity, knowledge and standard of living), Indonesia's index improved the most of any country during the last quarter of the 20th century, rising from 0·456 in 1975 to 0·677 in 1999.

CLIMATE

Conditions vary greatly over this spread of islands, but generally the climate is tropical monsoon, with a dry season from June to Sept. and a wet one from Oct. to April. Temperatures are high all the year and rainfall varies according to situation on lee or windward shores. Jakarta, Jan. 78°F (25·6°C), July 78°F (25·6°C). Annual rainfall 71" (1,775 mm). Padang, Jan. 79°F (26·1°C), July 79°F (26·1°C). Annual rainfall 177" (4,427 mm). Surabaya, Jan. 79°F (26·1°C), July 78°F (25·6°C). Annual rainfall 51" (1,285 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The constitution originally dates from Aug. 1945 and was in force until 1949; it was restored on 5 July 1959.

The political system is based on pancasila, in which deliberations lead to a consensus. There is a 700-member People's Consultative Assembly, which formerly chose the president, but the constitution was changed on 10 Aug. 2002 to allow for direct elections for the president and the vice-president. The Assembly comprises 500 members of the House of People's Representatives and an additional 200 appointed members representing the provinces and so-called 'functional' organizations. There are 38 unelected seats in the House of People's Representatives reserved for the security forces, but the constitutional amendments of Aug. 2002 will result in these seats being abolished in 2004.

There is no limit to the number of presidential terms. Although predominantly a Muslim country, the constitution protects the religious beliefs of non-Muslims.

National Anthem. 'Indonesia, tanah jang mulia' ('Indonesia, our native land'); words and tune by W. R. Supratman.

RECENT ELECTIONS

The first free elections in 44 years were held on 7 June 1999 for the 462 elected seats in the House of Representatives. The reformist Indonesian Democratic Party of Struggle (PDIP) won 154 seats with 37·4% of the vote; the Party of the Functional Groups (Golkar) won 120 seats with 20·9%; United Development Party (PPP) 58 with 10·7%; National Awakening Party (PKB) 51 with 17·4%; National Mandate Party (PAN) 35 with 7·3%; Crescent Star Party (PBB) 14 with 1·8%. The Justice Party (PK) and the Justice and Unity Party (PKP) both won 6 seats; the Love the Nation Democratic Party (PDKB), the Nahdlatul Ummat Party (PNU) and the Democratic Party of Indonesia (PDI) each won 3; the People's Sovereignty Party (PDR) won 2; and a number of parties each won a single seat.

On 20 Oct. 1999 the People's Consultative Assembly elected Abdurrahman Wahid president with 373 votes. Megawati Sukarnoputri came second with 313 votes and on 21 Oct. became vice-president. Wahid was summarily dismissed on 23 Sept. 2001 to be replaced by vice-president Megawati Sukarnoputri, following a unanimous parliamentary vote to remove Wahid on grounds of incompetence.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

DEFENCE

There is selective conscription for two years. Defence expenditure in 2000 totalled US$1,493m. (US$7 per capita), representing 1·0% of GDP.

Army. Army strength in 1999 was estimated at 230,000 with a strategic reserve (KOSTRAD) of 30,000 and further potential mobilizable reserves of 400,000.

There is a paramilitary police some 194,000 strong, and two part-time local auxiliary forces: KAMRA (People's Security), numbering around 1·5m., and WANRA (People's Resistance).

Navy. The Navy in 1999 numbered about 47,000, including 12,000 in the Commando Corps, and 1,000 in the Naval Air Arm. Combatant strength includes 2 diesel submarines and 17 frigates. The Naval Air Arm operates 49 combat aircraft and 21 armed helicopters.

The Navy's principal command is split between the Western Fleet, at Teluk Ratai (Jakarta) and the Eastern Fleet, at Surabaya.

Air Force. Personnel (1999) approximately 21,000. There were 91 combat aircraft, including F-16s, F-5s and British Aerospace Hawks.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

Indonesia is in dispute with Malaysia over sovereignty of two islands in the Celebes Sea. Both countries have agreed to accept the Judgment of the International Court of Justice.

Indonesia is a member of the UN, WTO, OPEC, Asian Development Bank, Colombo Plan, APEC, ASEAN, Mekong Group and OIC.

ECONOMY

Agriculture accounted for 19·5% of GDP in 1998, industry 45·3% and services 35·2%.

Overview. The government's plan for growth has been hit by financial instability in the Asian money markets and international concern about corruption, a shaky banking system and the slow pace of deregulation and privatization; but this is not to deny the economic successes that were achieved in the Suharto era. Since 1970 the economy has grown, on average, by more than 6% a year.

Currency. The monetary unit is the rupiah (IDR) notionally of 100 sen. Annual inflation was running at 58·0% in 1998 but had fallen to 3·8% by 2000 before rising to 11·5% in 2001. Foreign exchange reserves were US$28,127m. and gold reserves 3·10m. troy oz in June 2002. Total money supply in Dec. 2001 was 170,509·0bn. rupiahs.

Budget. By law the budget must balance. The fiscal year starts 1 April. Revenue and expenditure for 1999–2000 were 218,204bn. rupiahs. Routine revenue (in 1bn. rupiahs), 1999–2000, 140,804; routine expenditure, 134,556; development revenue, 77,400; development expenditure, 83,648.

Performance. Economic growth was 8·0% in 1996 and 4·5% in 1997 but declined dramatically in 1998 to –13·1%. There was a slight recovery in 1999, with growth of 0·8%, followed by growth of 4·8% in 2000 and 3·3% in 2001. The Asian economic crisis of 1997 affected Indonesia more than any other country. In 2001 total GDP was US$145·3bn.

Banking and Finance. The Bank Indonesia, successor to De Javasche Bank established by the Dutch in 1828, was made the central bank of Indonesia on 1 July 1953. Its Governor is Dr Syahril Sabirin. It had an original capital of 25m. rupiahs; a reserve fund of 18m. rupiahs and a special reserve of 84m. rupiahs. In Jan. 2000 independent auditors declared that the bank was technically bankrupt. In response the IMF stated that future loans would probably depend on recapitalization and an internal reorganization.

There are 117 commercial banks, 28 development banks and other financial institutions, 8 development finance companies and 9 joint venture merchant banks. Commercial banking is dominated by seven state-owned banks: Bank Rakyat Indonesia provides services to smallholder agriculture and rural development; Bank Bumi Daya, estate agriculture and forestry; Bank Negara Indonesia 1946, industry; Bank Dagang Negara, mining; and Bank Expor-Impor Indonesia, export commodity sector. All state banks are authorized to deal in foreign exchange.

There are 70 private commercial banks owned and operated by Indonesians. The 11 foreign banks specialize in foreign exchange transactions and direct lending operations to foreign joint ventures. The government owns one Savings Bank, Bank Tabungan Negara, and 1,000 Post Office Savings Banks. There are also over 3,500 rural and village savings banks and credit co-operatives. At least 16 banks closed in the wake of the 1997 financial crisis.

The World Bank board agreed to resume lending in Indonesia in June 1998 by approving a US$225m. loan to reduce poverty. Also in June 1998 Indonesia reached agreement with foreign banks on a comprehensive private-sector debt restructuring programme, involving the rescheduling of some US$60bn. of Indonesian corporate debt over eight years and the extension by up to four years of Indonesian bank liabilities totalling US$9·2bn. The most important element of the deal was the creation of the Indonesian Debt Restructuring Agency (INDRA) which provided protection against foreign exchange risk covering up to US$60bn. in corporate debt. The Indonesian Bank Restructuring Agency (IBRA) was also established in 1998 by the Indonesian government and is the primary agency responsible for overseeing the rehabilitation of the financial sector. IBRA is authorized to take over and control banks facing financial difficulties.

There is a stock exchange in Jakarta.

Weights and Measures. The metric system is in use.

The following are the old weights and measures: Pikol = 136·16 lb avoirdupois; Katti = 1·36 lb avoirdupois; Bau = 1·7536 acres; Square Pal = 227 hectares = 561·16 acres; Jengkal = 4 yd; Pal (Java) = 1,506 metres; Pal (Sumatra) = 1,852 metres.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Environment. According to the World Bank Atlas Indonesia's carbon dioxide emissions in 1998 were the equivalent of 1·1 tonnes per capita.

Electricity. Installed capacity in 1998 was 18·37m. kW. Production was 82·10bn. kWh in 1999. Consumption per capita was 320 kWh in 1998. There were seven hydro-electric plants in 1989. 68,045 villages were supplied with electricity in 1999.

Oil and Gas. The importance of oil in the economy is declining. The 1996 output of crude oil was 553m. bbls. Proven reserves in 1999 totalled 5·0bn. bbls. Natural gas production, 1999, was 67,677m. cu. metres with 2,050bn. cu. metres of proven reserves. In Jan. 2001 a 640-km gas pipeline linking Indonesia's West Natuna field with Singapore came on stream. It is expected to provide Singapore with US$8bn. worth of natural gas over a 20-year period.

Minerals. The high cost of extraction means that little of the large mineral resources outside Java is exploited; however, there is copper mining in West Papua, nickel mining and processing on Sulawesi, and aluminium smelting in northern Sumatra. Open-cast coal mining has been conducted since the 1890s, but since the 1970s coal production has been developed as an alternative to oil. Reserves are estimated at 28,000m. tonnes. Coal production (1997), 54·4m. tonnes. Other minerals: salt (1998 estimate), 650,000 tonnes; bauxite (1998), 513,000 tonnes; iron ore (1994), 334,900 tonnes; copper concentrate (1998), 2·9m. tonnes; silver (1998), 348,730 kg; gold (2000), 139 tonnes; nickel ore (1998), 2·7m. tonnes; tin (1998), 50,833 tonnes.

Agriculture. There were 17·94m. ha of arable land in 1998 and 13·05m. ha of permanent crops. Production (2000, in 1,000 tonnes): rice, 51,000; sugarcane, 21,400; cassava, 16,347; coconuts, 16,235; maize, 9,169; palm oil, 6,900; bananas, 3,377; cabbages, 1,750; sweet potatoes, 1,627; palm kernels, 1,600; natural rubber, 1,488; copra, 1,380; soybeans, 1,198; groundnuts, 1,000; potatoes, 924; dry beans, 900; mangoes, 827; onions, 805; oranges, 645; cucumbers and gherkins, 580; chillies and green peppers, 497; papayas, 450; coffee, 430; cocoa beans, 362; aubergines, 340. Annual nutmeg production is 6,000 tonnes, more than two-thirds of the world total. Indonesia is the world's largest producer of coconuts.

Livestock (2000): goats, 14·12m.; cattle, 12·10m.; pigs, 9·35m.; sheep, 7·50m.; buffaloes, 2·86m.; horses, 579,000; chickens, 800m.; ducks, 26m.

Forestry. In 1995 the area under forests was 109·79m. ha, or 60·6% of the total land area (115·21m. ha and 63·6% in 1990). Approximately 46% of the forested area is scheduled for selective logging, 33% for preservation for national parks and watersheds and 21% for removal for agriculture, industry and settlement. The loss of 5·42m. ha between 1990 and 1995 was exceeded during the same period only in Brazil. In 1999, 190·6m. cu. metres of roundwood were cut, most of it fuelwood and charcoal.

Fisheries. In 1999 total catch was 4,149,420 tonnes, of which 3,855,310 tonnes were sea fish. In 1997 there were 191,270 motorized and 371,007 other fishing vessels.

INDUSTRY

There are shipyards at Jakarta Raya, Surabaya, Semarang and Amboina. There are textile factories, large paper factories, match factories, automobile and bicycle assembly works, large construction works, tyre factories, glass factories, a caustic soda and other chemical factories. Production (1997, in 1,000 tonnes): distillate fuel oil, 14,200; residual fuel oil, 12,000; petrol, 7,950; kerosene, 6,159; cement 23,136 (1995); fertilizers (1993), 3,459; sugar (1995), 1,493; paper and paperboard (1999), 6,978; plywood (1999), 4·4m. cu. metres; 19,000 passengers cars; 1,001,000 TV sets (1993). Indonesia is the third largest producer of plywood after the USA and China.

Labour. Reforms announced in Nov. 1994 included an annual review of regional minimum wages, enhanced enforcement of salary, safety and health regulations, and an improved dispute resolution process. In 1998 the labour force was 92,700,000. In 1997, 41·2% of employed persons worked in agriculture, 19·8% in trade, 14·5% in services, public administration and defence, and 12·9% in manufacturing. National daily average wage, 1996, 4,073 rupiahs. Unemployment in 1998 reached around 17%.

Trade Unions. Workers have a constitutional right to organize and under a law passed in Feb. 2003 have a right to be paid during lawful strikes. Until the fall of Suharto in 1998 unions were expected to affiliate to the All Indonesia Trade Union (SPSI), which enjoyed government approval and was affiliated to the ruling party. Between 1994 and 1996 there were more than 2,000 strikes involving 1m. workers. In Feb. 2003 the Indonesian Trade Union Congress (KSPI), supported by the International Confederation of Free Trade Unions, was inaugurated. It represents 3·1m. members and encompasses 12 industrial federations.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Since 1992 foreigners have been permitted to hold 100% of the equity of new companies in Indonesia with more than US$50m. part capital, or situated in remote provinces. Foreign investment in 1994 totalled US$23,724·3m. (including from Hong Kong, US$6,041·7m.; UK, US$2,957·1m.; Taiwan, US$2,487·5m.). Foreign debt was US$141,803m. in 2000 (the sixth highest in the world).

Pressure on Indonesia's currency and stock market led to an appeal to the IMF and World Bank for long-term support funds in Oct. 1997. A bail-out package worth US$38,000m. was eventually agreed on condition that Indonesia tightened financial controls and instituted reforms, including the establishment of an independent privatization board, liberalizing foreign investment, cutting import tariffs and phasing out export levies.

Imports and Exports. In June 1994 import duties were cut on 739 commodities, surcharges on 108 imports were removed and non-tariff barriers on 27 items abolished. Imports and exports in US$1m.:

Main export items: gas and oil, forestry products, manufactured goods, rubber, coffee, fishery products, coal, copper, tin, pepper, palm products and tea. Main export markets, 1999: Japan, 20·53%; USA, 14·59%; Singapore, 10·03%. Main import suppliers, 1999: USA, 12·34%; Japan, 11·24%; Singapore, 9·76%; Germany, 6·63%.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. In 1998 there were 346,863 km of roads (27,357 km of highways or main roads in 1997), of which 195,712 km were surfaced. Motor vehicles, 1998: passenger cars, 2,772,500; buses and coaches, 628,000; trucks and vans, 1,592,600; motorcycles, 12,651,800. There were 272 fatalities in road accidents in 1996.

Rail. In 1997 the national railways totalled 6,458 km of 1,067 mm gauge, comprising 4,967 km on Java (of which 125 km electrified) and 1,491 km on Sumatra. Passenger-km travelled in 1998 came to 16·14bn. and freight tonne-km to 4·96bn.

Civil Aviation. Garuda Indonesia is the state-owned national flag carrier. Merpati Nusantara Airlines is their domestic subsidiary. Domestic services are also provided by Bouraq Indonesia. There are international airports at Jakarta (Sukarno-Hatta), Denpasar (on Bali), Medan (Sumatra), Pekanbaru (Sumatra), Ujung Pandang (Sulawesi), Manado (Sulawesi), Solo (Java) and Surabaya Juanda (Java). Jakarta is the busiest airport, in 2000 handling 9,950,000 passengers (5,387,000 on domestic flights) and 292,300 tonnes of freight. Denpasar handled 3,970,000 and Surabaya Juanda 2,444,000 passengers in 2000. In 1999 scheduled airline traffic of Indonesia-based carriers flew 121·8m. km, carrying 8,047,000 passengers (1,927,000 on international flights).

Shipping. There are 16 ports for ocean-going ships, the largest of which is Tanjung Priok, which serves the Jakarta area and has a container terminal. The national shipping company Pelajaran Nasional Indonesia (PELNI) maintains inter-island communications. Jakarta Lloyd maintains regular services between Jakarta, Amsterdam, Hamburg and London. In 1995 the merchant marine comprised 535 ocean-going ships totalling 4·13m. DWT. 95 vessels (36·22% of total tonnage) were registered under foreign flags. In 1998 total tonnage registered came to 3·35m. GRT, including oil tankers 841,000 GRT. In 1995 vessels totalling 155,869,000 net registered tons entered ports and vessels totalling 48,857,000 NRT cleared.

Telecommunications. In 2000 there were 6,662,600 main telephone lines (31·4 per 1,000 population) and 2·1m. PCs in use (9·9 for every 1,000 persons). There were 2·2m. mobile phone subscribers in 1999 and 185,000 fax machines in 1997. Indonesia had 4·4m. Internet users in Jan. 2002, up from 400,000 in July 2000.

The telephone utility Telekomunikasi Indonesia (Telkom) is the largest of a number of companies up for sale, but an unresolved dispute with foreign telecommunication companies has led to a delay in its privatization.

Postal Services. In 1998 there were 4,572 post offices.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. There are courts of first instance, high courts of appeal in every provincial capital and a Supreme Court of Justice for the whole of Indonesia in Jakarta.

In civil law the population is divided into three main groups: Indonesians, Europeans and foreign Orientals, to whom different law systems are applicable.

When, however, people from different groups are involved, a system of so-called 'inter-gentile' law is applied.

The present criminal law, which has been in force since 1918, is codified and is based on European penal law. This law is equally applicable to all groups of the population. The death penalty is still in use.

The population in penal institutions in 1997 was 41,699.

Religion. Religious liberty is granted to all denominations. In 1999 there were 179·8m. Muslims (making Indonesia the world's biggest Muslim country), 12·4m. Protestants and 7·8m. Roman Catholics. There were also 3·8m. Hindus, of whom approximately 70% were on Bali, and 2·1m. Buddhists, probably for the greater part Chinese.

Education. Adult literacy in 1999 was 86·3% (91·5% among males and 81·3% among females). In 1997 there were 25,689,693 pupils and 1,158,616 teachers at 151,064 primary schools, and 10,821,139 pupils and 654,505 teachers at 29,398 secondary schools. Number of students in higher education (1997) 2,051,000. In 1994–95 in the state sector there were 31 universities and 1 open university, and 13 institutes of higher education, including 10 teacher training colleges. In the private sector there were 66 universities and the following specialized universities: Adventist, 1; Christian, 7; Islamic, 10; Methodist, 1; Roman Catholic, 5; Veterans', 1. There were 19 institutes of higher education in the private sector, including 12 teacher training colleges.

In 1996 total expenditure on education came to 1·4% of GNP and 7·9% of total government spending.

Health. In 1996 there were 31,887 doctors, 155,911 nurses and midwives and (1994) 3,988 pharmacies. There were 1,090 hospitals in 1997, with a provision in 1994 of six beds per 10,000 population.

CULTURE

Broadcasting. Radio Republik Indonesia, under the Department of Information, operates 49 stations. There were 13·75m. television receivers (colour by PAL) and 31·5m. radio sets in 1997.

Cinema. There were 2,173 cinemas in 1990.

Press. In 1996 there were 69 daily newspapers (combined circulation of 4,665,000 at a rate of 23 per 1,000 inhabitants). In 1996 a total of 4,018 book titles were published in 8·1m. copies.

Tourism. In 1998 there were 4,337,000 foreign tourists, spending US$4·36bn.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Persia was ruled by the Shahs as an absolute monarchy from the 16th century until 1906, when the first constitution was granted and a national assembly established. After a coup in 1921, Reza Khan began his rise to power. He was declared Shah on 12 Dec. 1925 and as closer relations with Europe were developed in the mid-1930s so the name Iran began to be used in the west instead of Persia. When in the Second World War Iran supported Germany, the Allies occupied the country and forced Reza Shah to abdicate in favour of his son. Iran's oil industry was nationalized in March 1951 in line with the policy of the National Front Party whose leader, Dr Muhammad Mussadeq, became prime minister in April 1951. He was opposed by the Shah who fled the country until Aug. 1953 when the monarchists staged a coup which led to Mussadeq being deposed. The Shah's policy, which included the redistribution of land to small farmers and the enfranchisement of women, was opposed by the Shia religious scholars who considered it to be contrary to Islamic teaching. Despite economic growth, unrest was caused by the Shah's repressive measures and his extensive use of the Savak, the secret police. The opposition led by Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, the Shia Muslim spiritual leader who had been exiled in 1965, was particularly successful. Following intense civil unrest in Tehran, the Shah left Iran with his family on 17 Jan. 1979 (and died in Egypt on 27 July 1980). The Ayatollah Khomeini returned from exile on 1 Feb. 1979, the Shah's government resigned and parliament dissolved itself on 11 Feb. Following a referendum in March, an Islamic Republic was proclaimed. The constitution gave supreme authority to a religious leader (wali faqih), a position held by Ayatollah Khomeini for the rest of his life. In Sept. 1980 border fighting with Iraq escalated into full-scale war. A UN-arranged ceasefire took place on 20 Aug. 1988, and in Aug. 1990, following Iraq's invasion of Kuwait, Iraq offered peace terms and began the withdrawal of troops from Iranian soil. Approximately 30,000 political opponents of the regime are believed to have been executed shortly after the end of the war.

In 1997 the election of Mohammad Khatami as president signalled a shift away from Islamic extremism. A clampdown on Islamic vigilantes who wage a violent campaign against western 'decadence' is the latest sign of a cautiously liberal integration of the constitution. But the conservative faction led by the spiritual leader Ayatollah Ali Khamenei retains huge power including the final say on defence and foreign policy.

In July 1999 riot police fought pitched battles with pro-democracy students in Tehran in the worst unrest since the revolution in 1979. Since then there have been further cautious moves towards a more liberal society, though the Islamic leaders remain bitterly divided on the degree of overlap between politics and religion.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Iran is bounded in the north by Armenia, Azerbaijan, the Caspian Sea and Turkmenistan, east by Afghanistan and Pakistan, south by the Gulf of Oman and the Persian Gulf, and west by Iraq and Turkey. It has an area of 1,629,918 sq. km (634,293 sq. miles), but a vast portion is desert. Population (1996 census): 60,055,488 (1999, 61·1% urban). Population density: 36 per sq. km.

The UN gives a projected population for 2010 of 80·81m.

In 2001 Iran had 1·9m. refugees, mostly from Afghanistan. Only Pakistan has more refugees.

The areas, populations and capitals of the 28 provinces (ostan) were:

The national language is Farsi or Persian, spoken by 45% of the population in 1986. 28% spoke related languages, including Kurdish (9%) and Luri in the west, Gilaki and Mazandarami in the north, and Baluchi in the southeast; 22% speak Turkic languages, primarily in the northwest. Iranians, who are Persians, not Arabs, are less emotionally connected to the plight of the Arab Palestinians than people in other parts of the Middle East. The majority of Iranians are not instinctively anti-American.

Tehran: Situated in northern Iran near Mt Damavand and 100 km from the Caspian sea, Tehran has been the capital since Agha Mohammad Khan, the founder of the Qajar dynasty (1779–1925), gave it the title in 1788. Despite economic and political difficulties arising from the establishment of the Islamic Republic in Iran, Tehran is today the country’s administrative, commercial and industrial centre.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

1995 births, 1,179,260; deaths, 378,797. Birth rate (1995, per 1,000 population), 19·2; death rate, 6·2. Iran has one of the youngest populations in the world, with about 55% of the current population being under the age of 25. Abortion is illegal, but a family planning scheme was inaugurated in 1988. Expectation of life at birth, 1999, 70·3 years for females and 67·5 years for males. Infant mortality, 1999, 30·3 per 1,000 live births. Annual population growth rate, 1990–99, 1·47%; fertility rate, 1999, 2·7 births per woman. Iran has had one of the largest reductions in its fertility rate of any country in the world over the past 25 years, having had a rate of 6·4 births per woman in 1975. The suicide rate is 25 for every 100,000 people—more than twice the world average.

CLIMATE

Mainly a desert climate, but with more temperate conditions on the shores of the Caspian Sea. Seasonal range of temperature is considerable, as is rain (ranging from 2" in the southeast to 78" in the Caspian region). Winter is normally the rainy season for the whole country. Abadan, Jan. 54°F (12·2°C), July 97°F (36·1°C). Annual rainfall 8" (204 mm). Tehran, Jan. 36°F (2·2°C), July 85°F (29·4°C). Annual rainfall 10" (246 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The Constitution of the Islamic Republic was approved by a national referendum in Dec. 1979. It gives supreme authority to the Spiritual Leader (wali faqih), which position was held by Ayatollah Khomeini until his death on 3 June 1989. Ayatollah Seyed Ali Khamenei was elected to succeed him on 4 June 1989. Following the death of the previous incumbent, Ayatollah Ali Khamenei was proclaimed the Source of Knowledge (Marja e Taghlid) at the head of all Shia Muslims in Dec. 1994.

The 86-member Assembly of Experts was established in 1982. It is popularly elected every eight years. Its mandate is to interpret the constitution and select the Spiritual Leader. Candidates for election are examined by the Council of Guardians.

The Islamic Consultative Assembly has 290 members, elected for a four-year term in single-seat constituencies. All candidates have to be approved by the 12-member Council of Guardians.

The President of the Republic is popularly elected for not more than two four-year terms and is head of the executive; he appoints Ministers subject to approval by the Islamic Consultative Assembly (Majlis).

Legislative power is held by the Islamic Consultative Assembly, directly elected on a non-party basis for a four-year term by all citizens aged 17 or over. A new law passed in Oct. 1999 raised the voting age from 16 to 17, thus depriving an estimated 1·5m. young people from voting. Two-thirds of the electorate is under 30. Voting is secret but ballot papers are not printed; electors must write the name of their preferred candidate themselves. Five seats are reserved for religious minorities. All legislation is subject to approval by the Council of Guardians who ensure it is in accordance with the Islamic code and with the Constitution. The Spiritual Leader appoints six members, as does the judiciary.

National Anthem. 'Sar zad az ofogh mehr-e khavaran' ('Rose from the horizon the affectionate sun of the East'); words by a group of poets, tune by Dr Riahi.

RECENT ELECTIONS

Presidential elections held on 8 June 2001 produced a second landslide victory for incumbent Mohammad Khatami. He promised to continue fighting for democratic reforms which were blocked during his preceding tenure by the hardline clerical establishment. There were ten candidates. Mohammad Khatami was elected with 78·3% of votes cast (up from 69% at the 1997 election), against 15·9% for Ahmad Tavakoli and 2·7% for defence minister Ali Shamkhani. Turn-out was 67%.

Elections to the Islamic Consultative Assembly were held on 18 Feb. and 5 May 2000. The electorate was 38·7m. and turn-out was 83%. The Reformists (2nd of Khordad) gained 189 of the 290 available seats, Radical Islamists 54, ind. 42 and religious minorities 5.

Elections to the Assembly of Experts were held on 23 Oct. 1998; turn-out was 46%. Conservative candidates won 54 seats, 13 went to moderates and the remaining 21 went to conservative-allied independents.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

In March 2003 the cabinet was composed as follows:

President: Ali Mohammad Khatami-Ardakani; b. 1943 (sworn in 3 Aug. 1997 and re-elected in 2001).

DEFENCE

Two years' military service is compulsory. Military expenditure totalled US$7,329m. in 2000 (equivalent to US$108 per capita), representing 7·5% of GDP, compared to 18·0% in 1985.

Nuclear Weapons. Although Iran is a member of the Non-Proliferation Treaty (NPT), it may be developing weapons using its nuclear power programme. Iran has successfully tested Shahab-3 medium-range ballistic missiles with a range of 1,300 km. According to Deadly Arsenals, published by the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace, Iran has a chemical and biological weapons programme.

Army. Strength (2002), 325,000 (about 220,000 conscripts). Reserves are estimated to be around 350,000, made up of ex-service volunteers.

Revolutionary Guard (Pasdaran Inqilab). Numbering some 125,000, the Guard is divided between ground forces (100,000), naval forces (some 20,000) and marines (5,000). It controls the Basij, a volunteer 'popular mobilization army' of about 300,000, which can number 1m. strong in wartime.

Navy. The fleet includes six submarines (including three ex-Soviet Kilo class) and three ex-UK frigates. Personnel numbered 18,000 in 2002 including 2,000 in Naval Aviation and 2,600 marines.

The Naval Aviation wing operated 5 combat aircraft and 19 armed helicopters.

The main naval bases are at Bandar-e-Abbas, Bushehr and Chah Bahar.

Air Force. In 2002 there were 306 combat aircraft including US F-14 Tomcat, F-5E Tiger II and F-4D/E Phantom II fighter-bombers, and a number of MiG-29 interceptors and Su-24 strike aircraft. The serviceability of the aircraft varies with only 60–80% operational.

Strength (2002) estimated at 52,000 personnel (about 15,000 air defence).

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

Iran's foreign policy has been much less doctrinaire since the election to the presidency in May 1997 of Mohammad Khatami. In April 2001 Iran and Saudi Arabia signed a security pact to fight drug trafficking and terrorism, 13 years after the two countries had broken off relations.

Iran is a member of the UN, OPEC, ECO, IOM, OIC and the Colombo Plan.

ECONOMY

Overview. The Third Five-Year Development Plan has been running since 2000. At the beginning of 1991 about 70% of industry was state-owned, much of it nationalized after the 1979 revolution, but the government is now committed to partial privatization. Strategic heavy industry will remain in the public sector.

Currency. The unit of currency is the rial (IRR) of which 10 = 1 toman. The value of the rial has fallen from IRR 70 to the US$ in 1979 to a low of IRR 8,112 in March 2003. Gold reserves were 5·42m. troy oz in March 1996. Inflation in 2001 was running at 11·4%. Total money supply in Feb 2002 was 130,015bn. rials.

Budget. Total revenue and expenditure for 1998–99 was put at 230,440bn. rials, an increase of 22·2% over the 1997–98 budget. The estimated total revenue and expenditure for 1999–2000 was 276,215bn. rials. The accuracy of budget figures is questionable given the policy of dividing the budget into two parts: the first covering ministerial expenditure, the second dealing with state banks and industries, which receive allocations by the expediency of printing money.

Performance. Real GDP growth was 4·8% in 2001. Total GDP in 2001 was US$118·9bn.

Banking and Finance. The Central Bank is the note issuing authority and government bank. Its Governor is Moshen Nurbakhach. All other banks and insurance companies were nationalized in 1979, and re-organized into new state banking corporations, of which there were five in 1994. In April 2000 the government announced that it would permit the establishment of private banks for the first time since the revolution in 1979, ending the state monopoly on banking. The first private bank since the revolution came into existence in Aug. 2001 with the creation of Bank-e-Eqtesadi Novin (Modern Economic Bank).

A stock exchange re-opened in Tehran in 1992.

Weights and Measures. The metric system is in force.

Calendar. The Iranian year is a solar year starting on varying dates between 19 and 22 March. The current solar year is 1382 (21 March 2003 to 20 March 2004). The Islamic hegira (622 AD, when Mohammed left Mecca for Medina) year 1424 corresponds to 5 March 2003–21 Feb. 2004, and is the current lunar year.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Environment. According to the World Bank Atlas Iran's carbon dioxide emissions were the equivalent of 4·7 tonnes per capita in 1998.

Electricity. Total installed capacity in 1997 was 29·45m. kW; production (1998), 103·41bn. kWh (approximately 62·76% from steam, 26·97% from gas and combined, 6·78% from hydro-electricity and 3·48% from diesel). Consumption per capita in 1998 was 1,599 kWh. Iran's first nuclear reactor is being built by Russia at Bushehr and is scheduled to be commissioned in late 2003.

Oil and Gas. Iran has 8·9% of proven global oil reserves. Oil is its chief source of revenue. The main oilfields are in the Zagros Mountains where oil was first discovered in 1908. Oil companies were nationalized in 1979 and operations of crude oil and natural gas exploitation are now run by the National Iranian Oil Company. Refining operations of crude oil are run by the National Company for Refining and Distribution of Oil Products. Iran produced 5·1% of the world total oil output in 1999; in 2001 it had reserves amounting to 89·7bn. bbls. In 1999 the most important discovery in more than 30 years was made, with the Azadegan oilfield in the southwest of the country being found to have reserves of approximately 26bn. bbls. In 2001 revenue from oil exports amounted to US$14bn. (US$19bn. in 2000). Iran depends on oil for some 86% of its exports, but domestic consumption has been increasing to such an extent that it is now as high as exports.

Crude petroleum production (1998): 1,341m. bbls. (3,664,000 bbls. a day). Refining capacity (1997): 1,242,000 bbls. a day.

Iran has nearly one fifth of proven global gas reserves. A deal reached in Nov. 1997 between Gazprom, the Russian gas company, and Total, the French energy group, involved the investment of US$2,000m. into the development of a gas field.

In Dec. 1997 the first natural gas pipeline linking Iran with the Caspian Sea via Turkmenistan was opened. The 200-km line links gas fields in western Turkmenistan to industrial markets in northern Iran. Natural gas production (1999): 54,815m. cu. metres. Natural gas reserves in 2000 were 23,000bn. cu. metres, the second largest behind Russia.

Minerals. Production, after dressing (1996, in tonnes): iron ore, 5,236,259; coal, 1,211,403; copper, 370,234; chromite, 322,367; zinc and lead, 321,766; bauxite, 230,420; manganese, 82,694; salt, 1,410,644; decorative stone, 6,120,071. It was announced in Feb. 2003 that uranium deposits had been discovered in central Iran.

Agriculture. Agriculture accounted for approximately 12·7% of GDP in 2000. Cultivable land in 2000 totalled 17,121,500 ha: 10,267,582 ha were under annual crops (of which 5,541,068 ha were irrigated). In 2000 there were 1,977,294 ha and 112,999 ha of productive and non-productive orchards and nurseries respectively.

Crop production (2000, in 1,000 tonnes): wheat, 8,088; sugarbeet, 4,332; potatoes, 3,658; tomatoes, 3,191; grapes, 2,505; sugarcane, 2,367; rice (paddy), 1,971; barley, 1,686; watermelons, 1,650; onions, 1,344; cucumbers and gherkins, 1,343; maize, 1,036; dates, 870; pistachios, 304. Iran's annual production of dates and pistachios is the highest in the world.

Livestock (2000): 55·0m. sheep; 26·0m. goats; 8·1m. cattle; 500,000 buffaloes; 1·6m. asses; 386m. chickens.

Forestry. Approximately 7·4% of Iran is forested, much of it in the Caspian region. Timber production in 2000 was 684,000 cu. metres.

Fisheries. In 2000 total catch was 424,500 tonnes (358,500 tonnes from sea fishing).

INDUSTRY

Major industries: petrochemical, automotive, food, beverages and tobacco, textiles, clothing and leather, wood and fibre, paper and cardboard, chemical products, non-metal mining products, basic materials, machinery and equipment, copper, steel and aluminium. The textile industry uses local cotton and silk; carpet manufacture is an important industry. The country's steel industry is the largest in the Middle East.

Production of selected commodities in large-scale manufacturing establishments with 50 workers and more (1996): sugar, 831,888 tonnes; stockings, 9·7m. pairs; machine-made bricks, 1,792m.; cement, 16,441,701 tonnes.

Labour. The economically active population numbered 20m. in 2002, of which 17·6m. were employed. Approximately 12·2% of the workforce are unemployed and 800,000 Iranians enter the workforce every year.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

There had been a limit on foreign investment, but legislation of 1995 permits foreign nationals to hold more than 50% of the equity of joint ventures with the consent of the Foreign Investment Board. Foreign debt was US$7,953m. in 2000.

Imports and Exports. Imports and exports for calendar years in US$1m.:

	1996	1997	1998	1999	2000
Imports f.o.b.	14,989	14,123	14,286	13,433	15,207
Exports f.o.b.	22,391	18,381	13,118	21,030	28,345

Main imports: machinery and motor vehicles, iron and steel, chemicals, pharmaceuticals, food. Main exports: oil, carpets, pistachios, leather and caviar. Petroleum and crude oil exports (1996): 2,620,000 bbls. a day. Crude oil exports account for 85% of hard currency earnings. Carpet exports are the second largest hard currency earner. Iran's main trading partners (US$1m, 1996) were Germany (2,100·0), Belgium (926·3), Japan (844·0) for imports; and the UK (3,907·6), Japan (3,816·0), and Italy (1,821·9) for exports.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. In 1998 the total length of roads was 167,157 km, of which 890 km were freeways, 24,940 km main roads, 38,043 km (asphalted) by-roads, 15,370 km (gravelled) by-roads, 30,195 km asphalted rural roads and 57,719 km other rural roads. In 1996 there were 1,793,000 passenger cars; 692,000 vans and lorries; 2,565,585 motorcycles and mopeds.

Rail. The State Railways totalled 6,264 km of main lines in 1998, of which 148 km were electrified. In 1998–99 the railways carried 9·56m. passengers and 21·6m. tonnes of freight. An isolated 1,676 mm gauge line (94 km) in the southeast provides a link with Pakistan Railways. A rail link to Turkmenistan was opened in May 1996.

Civil Aviation. There are international airports at Tehran (Mehrabad), Shiraz and Bandar-e-Abbas. Tehran is the busiest airport, in 2000 handling 8,474,000 passengers (6,473,000 on domestic flights). The Imam Khomeini International Airport, construction of which began in 1977 before being halted in 1979, was scheduled to be fully operational by June 2002 but only the first phase has been completed. The completed airport will be able to handle up to 40m. passengers and 450,000 tonnes of freight a year. The state-owned Iran Air carried 5·8m. passengers and 38,343 tonnes of freight in 1998–99.

Shipping. In 1998 the merchant fleet totalled 3·35m. GRT, including oil tankers totalling 1·59m. GRT. In 1998–99, 4,447 ships loaded and unloaded 31·0m. and 41·1m. tonnes of goods respectively (including oil products). In 1997–98 vessels totalling 27,756,000 NRT entered ports.

Telecommunications. In 2000 there were 9,486,160 telephone main lines, equivalent to 149·0 per 1,000 population, and 4·0m. PCs in use (62·8 for every 1,000 persons). Mobile phone subscribers numbered 490,478 in 1999 and there were 30,000 fax machines in 1995. Iran had 250,000 Internet users in Dec. 2000.

Postal Services. In 1998 there were 13,699 post offices. 274m. pieces of mail were processed during the year, or 4·2 items per person.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. A legal system based on Islamic law (Sharia) was introduced by the 1979 constitution. A new criminal code on similar principles was introduced in Nov. 1995. The President of the Supreme Court and the public Prosecutor-General are appointed by the Spiritual Leader. The Supreme Court has 16 branches and 109 offences carry the death penalty. To these were added economic crimes in 1990. There were 71 confirmed executions in 2002.

Religion. The official religion is the Shi'a branch of Islam. Adherents number approximately 89% of the population; 10% are Sunni Muslims. However, less than 2% of the population now attend Friday prayers.

Education. Adult literacy in 1999 was 75·7% (82·7% among males and 68·7% among females). Most primary and secondary schools are state schools. Elementary education in state schools and university education is free; small fees are charged for state-run secondary schools. In 2001–02 there were 7,513,015 pupils and 309,260 teachers at 68,836 primary schools, 9,416,272 pupils and 344,042 teachers at secondary schools, and 1,566,509 pupils and 79,235 academic staff at institutions of higher education.

In 1994–95 there were 30 universities, 30 medical universities, 12 specialized universities (1 agriculture, 1 art, 1 oil engineering, 4 teacher training, 5 technology) and 2 open (distance-learning) universities. There were 289,392 students and 10,745 academic staff.

In 1995 total expenditure on education came to 4·0% of GNP and represented 17·8% of total government expenditure.

Health. There were 717 hospitals in 2001, with 109,152 beds. In 2001 medical personnel totalled 295,325 of which 152,396 were paramedics. There were 25,988 nurses and 8,105 midwives.

CULTURE

Broadcasting. Broadcasting is controlled by the government agency, Islamic Republic of Iran Broadcasting (IRIB). Both television and radio operate under a single organization, the National Iranian Radio and Television Organization (NIRT), established by an Act of Parliament in 1967, which in 1990 employed some 11,620 people. There are two national radio stations (Radio One and Radio Two) and 27 regional radio stations, including a Koran service and an external service (Voice of the Islamic Republic of Iran, which broadcasts in 20 languages). There are no commercial radio stations; radio broadcasting is a state monopoly. There were (1997) 138 radio transmitters in operation. There are four television networks (colour by SECAM H). A ban on TV satellite receiver dishes was imposed in April 1994. There were 17m. radio receivers and 4·6m. television receivers in 1997.

Cinema. There were 312 cinemas with an attendance in 2001 of 33m.

Press. In 2000 there were 117 daily and 259 weekly newspapers. Approximately 80% of the Iranian press is printed in Farsi; much of the remaining 20% is in English or Arabic. As the power struggle continues between the conservative religious establishment and the Khatami government more than 70 reform-minded newspapers have been closed down since 1999.

In 1996 a total of 15,073 book titles were published in 87·86m. copies.

Tourism. There were 1,402,160 foreign tourists in 2001, spending US$441m.

Libraries. In 2001 there were 1,502 libraries affiliated to the Ministry of Culture and Islamic Guidance.

DIPLOMATIC REPRESENTATIVES

Of Iran in the United Kingdom (16 Prince's Gate, London, SW7 1PT)

Capital: Baghdad
Population estimate, 2000: 22·95m.
GDP per capita, 2000: (PPP$) 3,197

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Iraq, formerly Mesopotamia, was part of the Ottoman Empire from 1534 until it was captured by British forces in 1916. Under a League of Nations mandate, administered by Britain, Amir Faisal Ibn Hussain was crowned king in 1921. On 3 Oct. 1932 Britain's mandate expired, and Iraq became an independent country. The ruling Hashemite dynasty was overthrown by a military coup on 14 July 1958. King Faisal II and Nuri al Said, the prime minister, were killed. A republic was established, controlled by a military-led Council of Sovereignty under Gen. Qassim. In 1963 Qassim was overthrown, and Gen. Abdul Salam Aref became president, with a partial return to a civilian government, but on 17 July 1968 a successful coup was mounted by the Ba'ath Party. Gen. Ahmed Al Bakr became president, prime minister, and chairman of a newly established ruling nine-member Revolutionary Command Council. In July 1979 Saddam Hussein, the vice-president and a Sunni Muslim, became president in a peaceful transfer of power.

In Sept. 1980 Iraq invaded Iran in a dispute over territorial rights in the Shatt-al-Arab waterway which developed into a full-scale war. A UN-arranged ceasefire took place on 20 Aug. 1988 and UN-sponsored peace talks continued in 1989. On 15 Aug. 1990 Iraq offered peace terms and began the withdrawal of troops from Iranian soil.

Early on 2 Aug. 1990 Iraqi forces invaded and rapidly overran Kuwait, meeting little resistance. On 6 Aug. the UN Security Council voted to impose economic sanctions on Iraq until it withdrew from Kuwait. On 7 Aug. the USA announced it was sending a large military force to Saudi Arabia. Further Security Council resolutions included authorization for the use of military force if Iraq did not withdraw by 15 Jan. 1991. On the night of 16–17 Jan. coalition forces began an air attack on strategic targets in Iraq. A land offensive followed on 24 Feb. The Iraqi army was routed. Kuwait City was liberated on 27 Feb. and on 28 Feb. Iraq agreed to the conditions of a provisional ceasefire, including withdrawal from Kuwait.

In June UNSCOM, the United Nations Special Commission, conducted its first chemical weapons inspection in Iraq in accordance with UN Resolution 687. In Sept. a UN Security Council resolution permitted Iraq to sell oil worth US$1,600m. to pay for food and medical supplies. In Oct. the Security Council voted unanimously to prohibit Iraq from all nuclear activities. Imports of materials used in the manufacture of nuclear, biological or chemical weapons were banned, and UN weapons inspectors received wide powers to examine and retain data throughout Iraq.

In Aug. 1992 the USA, UK and France began to enforce an air exclusion zone over southern Iraq in response to the government's persecution of Shi'ite Muslims. Following Iraqi violations of this zone, and incursions over the Kuwaiti border, US, British and French forces made air and missile attacks on Iraqi military targets in Jan. 1993. On 27 June 1993 US forces made a missile attack on an intelligence centre in Baghdad in retaliation for an attempt on former US President Bush's life while he was visiting Kuwait in April. On 10 Nov. 1994 Iraq recognized the independence and boundaries of Kuwait. In the first half of 1995 UN weapons inspectors secured information on an extensive biological weapons programme. At the beginning of Sept. 1996 Iraqi troops occupied the town of Arbol in a Kurdish safe haven in support of the Kurdish Democratic Party faction which was at odds with another Kurdish faction, the Patriotic Union of Kurdistan. On 3 Sept. 1996 US forces fired missiles at targets in southern Iraq and extended the no-fly area northwards to the southern suburbs of Baghdad.

Relations with the USA deteriorated still further in 1997 when Iraq refused co-operation with UN weapons inspectors. On 29 Oct. the Iraqi Revolutionary Command Council announced that it had ‘postponed’ a decision to stop working with UNSCOM, the UN commission responsible for the destruction of Iraq’s ballistic, chemical and biological weapons programmes, but it went on to demand that there should be no American nationals among the UN inspectors. The UN team suspended its operations in Iraq and the Security Council warned Saddam Hussein of ‘serious consequences’ if he carried out his threat to expel the Americans.

While the USA and the UK threatened retaliatory action, the larger Arab countries with Russia, China and France urged compromise. However, a renewal of hostilities looked probable until late Feb. 1998 when Kofi Annan, the UN Secretary General, forged an agreement in Baghdad allowing for ‘immediate, unconditional and unrestricted access’ to all suspected weapons sites. Then, in Aug. 1998, Saddam Hussein engineered another stand-off with the UN arms inspectors, demanding a declaration that Iraq had rid itself of all weapons of mass destruction. This the UN chief inspector refused to do. In Nov. all UN personnel left Iraq as the USA threatened air strikes unless Iraq complied with UN resolutions. Russia and France urged further diplomatic efforts, but on 16 Dec. the USA and Britain launched air and missile attacks aimed at destroying Saddam Hussein’s arsenal of nuclear, chemical and biological weapons. In all, 97 targets were destroyed. In the aftermath, the USA and Britain continued attacks on selected military and communication targets while encouraging the Iraqi opposition and tightening the trade embargo.

In Feb. 2000 the UN Security Council nominated Sweden’s Hans Blix to head the new arms inspectorate to Iraq, but Iraq refused him entry into the country. An oil-for-food scheme, which came into force in 1996 in an effort to alleviate suffering, was administered by the UN. In Feb. 2001 the USA and Britain launched a further series of air attacks on military targets in and around Baghdad. A new UN Security Council resolution was passed in May 2002. Constituting the biggest change since the introduction of the Oil-for-Food scheme in 1996, the new resolution limited import restrictions to a number of specific sensitive goods. The UN and Iraq held a series of talks in early 2002 on the possible resumption of weapons inspections, but without reaching any agreement. In Sept. 2002, as the threat of a US attack on Iraq increased, provisional agreement was given to the return of weapons inspectors but shortly afterwards conditions were imposed which made it unlikely that inspections would resume. In Nov. 2002 the UN Security Council adopted Resolution 1441, holding Iraq in ‘material breach’ of disarmament obligations. Weapons inspectors under the leadership of Hans Blix returned to Iraq four years after their last inspections, but US and British suspicion that the Iraq regime was failing to comply led to increasing tension, resulting in the USA, the UK and Spain reserving the right to disarm Iraq without the need for a further Security Council resolution. Other Security Council members, notably China, France, Germany and Russia, opposed the proposed action, resulting in a major split in the Security Council.

On 20 March 2003 US forces, supported by the UK, launched attacks on Iraq, initiating a war aimed at ‘liberating Iraq’. UK troops entered Iraq’s second city, Al-Basrah, on 6 April. On 9 April 2003 American forces took control of central Baghdad, effectively bringing an end to Saddam Hussein’s rule. Widespread looting and disorder followed the fall of the capital. The bloodless capture of Tikrit, Saddam Hussein’s hometown, on 14 April marked the end of Iraqi resistance. Jay Garner, a retired US general, arrived in Baghdad on 21 April to head the Office of Reconstruction and Humanitarian Assistance for Iraq and to oversee the transition to an interim Iraqi administration. Ole Wøhlers Olsen, a Muslim Danish diplomat, was appointed on 1 May to head the administration of the Al-Basrah region. Garner was replaced as civil administrator on 12 May by Paul Bremer. An interim government was planned until democratic elections could be held. On 22 May the UN Security Council voted to lift economic sanctions against Iraq and to support the US and UK occupation ‘until an internationally recognized, representative government is established by the people of Iraq’. Only Syria opposed the resolution by boycotting the session.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Iraq is bounded in the north by Turkey, east by Iran, southeast by the Persian (Arabian) Gulf, south by Kuwait and Saudi Arabia, and west by Jordan and Syria. In April 1992 the UN Boundary Commission redefined Iraq's border with Kuwait, moving it slightly northwards in line with an agreement of 1932. Area, 438,317 sq. km. Population, 1997 census, 22,017,983; density, 50·2 per sq. km. In 1998, 75·9% of the population lived in urban areas.

The UN gives a projected population for 2010 of 29·92m.

The areas, populations and capitals of the governorates:

Governorate	Area in sq. km	1991 population estimate	Capital
Al-Anbar	138,501	865,500	Ar-Ramadi
Babil (Babylon)	6,468	1,221,100	Al-Hillah
Baghdad	734	3,910,900	Baghdad
Al-Basrah	19,070	1,168,800	Al-Basrah
Dahuk	6,553	309,300	Dahuk
Dhi Qar	12,900	1,030,900	An-Nasiriyah
Diyala	19,076	1,037,600	Ba'qubah
Irbil	14,471	928,400	Irbil
Karbala	5,034	567,600	Karbala
Maysan	16,072	524,200	Al-Amarah
Al-Muthanna	51,740	350,000	As-Samawah
An-Najaf	28,824	666,400	An-Najaf
Ninawa (Nineveh)	37,323	1,618,700	Mosul
Al-Qadisiyah	8,153	595,600	Ad-Diwaniyah
Salah ad-Din	24,751	772,200	Samarra
As-Sulaymaniyah	17,023	1,124,200	As-Sulaymaniyah
Ta'mim	10,282	605,900	Kirkuk
Wasit	17,153	605,700	Al-Kut

The most populous cities are Baghdad (the capital), population of 4,689,000 in 1999; Irbil, 1,743,000 in 1995; Mosul, 879,000 in 1995. Other large cities included Kirkuk, Al-Basrah, As-Sulaymaniyah and An-Najaf.

The population is approximately 76% Arab, 19% Kurdish (mainly in the north of the country) and 5% Turkmen, Assyrian, Chaldean or other. Shias (predominantly in the south of the country) constitute approximately 60% of the total population and Sunnis (principally in the centre) 20%.

The national language is Arabic. Other languages spoken are Kurdish (official in Kurdish regions), Assyrian and Armenian.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Births, 1997, 944,000; deaths, 140,000. 1997 rates (per 1,000 population): births, 42·5; deaths, 6·3. Expectation of life in 1998 was 62·3 years for males and 65·3 for females. Annual population growth rate, 1990–99, 2·4%. Infant mortality, 1998, 103 per 1,000 live births, up from 90 per 1,000 live births as far back as 1970, the largest increase anywhere in the world over the same period. Fertility rate, 1999, 5·1 births per woman.

CLIMATE

The climate is mainly arid, with small and unreliable rainfall and a large annual range of temperature. Summers are very hot and winters cold. Al-Basrah, Jan. 55°F (12·8°C), July 92°F (33·3°C). Annual rainfall 7" (175 mm). Baghdad, Jan. 50°F (10°C), July 95°F (35°C). Annual rainfall 6" (140 mm). Mosul, Jan. 44°F (6·7°C), July 90°F (32·2°C). Annual rainfall 15" (384 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

Until the fall of Saddam Hussein, the highest state authority was the Revolutionary Command Council (RCC) but some legislative power was given to the 220-member National Assembly.

The only legal political grouping was the National Progressive Front (founded 1973) comprising the Arab Socialist Renaissance (Ba'ath) Party and various Kurdish groups, but a law of Aug. 1991 legalized political parties provided they were not based on religion, racism or ethnicity.

The President and Vice-President were elected by the RCC; the President appointed and led a Council of Ministers responsible for administration.

National Anthem. 'Watanum Mede, al alufqi janalia' ('A homeland which extended its wings over the horizon'); words by S. Jabar Al Kamali, tune by W. G. Gholmieh.

RECENT ELECTIONS

On 15 Oct. 2002 a referendum was held to determine whether President Saddam Hussein should remain in office for a further seven years. The electorate was 11·4m. It was announced that turn-out was 100% and that 100% of votes cast were in favour. In a previous referendum in 1995, 99·96% of votes were declared in favour.

Elections to the National Assembly were held on 27 March 2000. The only candidates permitted to stand were members of the National Progressive Front and non-partisans supporting the Ba'ath government.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

Following the war in March–April 2003 there is currently no functioning national government. In May the de facto authorities were:

Supreme Commander of Occupation Forces: Gen. Tommy Franks, C.-in-C., US Central Command (b. 1945).

Civil Administrator: Paul Bremer (US presidential envoy, appointed 12 May 2003; b. 1941)

Kurdish-controlled areas:

Secretary-General of the Patriotic Union of Kurdistan: Jalal Talabani (b. 1933).

President of the Kurdish Democratic Party: Massoud Barzani (b. 1966).

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

Iraq is a member of the UN, the League of Arab States, OPEC and OIC.

ECONOMY

Currency. The monetary unit is the Iraqi dinar (IQD) of 1,000 fils. In both 1997 and 1998 inflation was estimated to be 45%.

Budget. Before UN sanctions were applied, oil revenues accounted for nearly 50% and customs and excise for about 26% of the total revenue.

Banking and Finance. All banks were nationalized on 14 July 1964. The Central Bank of Iraq is the sole bank of issue. In 1941 the Rafidain Bank, financed by the Iraqi government, was instituted to carry out normal banking transactions. Its head office is in Baghdad and it has 239 branches, 11 abroad, including London. Its assets were US$47,000m. in Sept. 1990. In addition, there are four government banks which are authorized to issue loans to companies and individuals: the Industrial Bank, the Agricultural Bank, the Estate Bank, and the Mortgage Bank.

There is a stock exchange in Baghdad.

Weights and Measures. The metric system is in general use.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Environment. According to the World Bank Atlas Iraq's carbon dioxide emissions were the equivalent of 3·7 tonnes per capita in 1998. An Environmental Sustainability Index compiled for the World Economic Forum meeting in Feb. 2002 ranked Iraq 139th in the world out of 142 countries analysed, with 33·2%. The index measured the ability of countries to maintain favourable environmental conditions and examined various factors including pollution levels and the use or abuse of natural resources.

Electricity. Installed capacity was 10m. kW in 1997. Production in 1998 was 2·84bn. kWh, with consumption per capita in 1997 being 1,414 kWh.

Oil and Gas. Proven oil reserves in 2001 totalled 112·5bn. bbls. Only Saudi Arabia has more reserves. Crude oil production in 1999, at 125m. tonnes, was the highest since before the Gulf War. Since 1991 sanctions against Iraq have held back oil sales of some US$100,000m.

Natural gas production, 1996, 136 petajoules. In 2000 Iraq had natural gas reserves of 3,100bn. cu. metres.

Minerals. The principal minerals extracted are sulphur (475,000 tonnes in 1995) and phosphate rock (440,000 tonnes in 1995).

Agriculture. There were 5·2m. ha of arable land in 1998 and 0·34m. ha of permanent crops. Production (2000 estimates, in 1,000 tonnes): melons and watermelons, 575; tomatoes, 500; dates, 400; wheat, 384; oranges, 270; grapes, 265; barley, 226; cucumbers and gherkins, 215; potatoes, 150; rice, 130.

Livestock (2000): cattle, 1·35m.; sheep, 6·78m.; goats, 1·60m.; asses, 380,000; chickens, 23m.

Forestry. In 1995 forests covered 83,000 ha, representing 0·2% of the land area. Timber production in 1999 was 177,000 cu. metres.

Fisheries. Catches in 1999 totalled 24,606 tonnes, of which almost half were freshwater fish.

INDUSTRY

Iraq is still relatively under-developed industrially but work has begun on new industrial plants. Production figures (1997, in 1,000 tonnes): residual fuel oil, 9,200; distillate fuel oil, 7,000; petrol, 3,010; kerosene, 1,150; jet fuel, 1,140; cement (1992), 2,453; cigarettes (1992), 5,794m. units.

Labour. In 1996 the labour force was 5,573,000 (75% males).

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Imports and Exports. Imports and exports (in US$1m.):

	1988	1989	1990	1991
Imports	9,311	10,170	6,605	International embargo
Exports	9,613	12,408	10,353	International embargo

Crude oil is the main export commodity, with Jordan and Turkey being significant export partners in 1996. Manufactures and food are the main import commodities, with major partners in 1996 being France, Turkey, Jordan, Vietnam and Australia.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. In 1997 there were 11,032 km of main roads and 28,837 km of regional roads. Vehicles in use in 1996 included 773,000 passenger cars and 272,500 lorries and vans.

Rail. In 1993 railways comprised 2,032 km of 1,435 mm gauge route. Passenger-km travelled in 1995 came to 2·2bn. and freight tonne-km to 1·12bn.

Civil Aviation. In 2000 there were international flights for the first time since the 1991 Gulf War, with air links being established between Iraq and Egypt, Jordan and Syria.

Shipping. The merchant fleet in 1998 had a total tonnage of 511,000 GRT, including oil tankers 361,000 GRT. A 565-km canal was opened in 1992 between Baghdad and the Persian (Arabian) Gulf for shipping, irrigation, the drainage of saline water and the reclamation of marsh land.

Telecommunications. In 2000 there were 675,000 main telephone lines (29·4 per 1,000 population). Internet users in Dec. 2000 numbered 12,500.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. Up until the war in March–April 2003, for civil matters: the court of cassation in Baghdad; six courts of appeal at Al-Basrah, Baghdad (2), Babil (Babylon), Mosul and Kirkuk; 18 courts of first instance with unlimited powers and 150 courts of first instance with limited powers, all being courts of single judges. In addition, six peace courts had peace court jurisdiction only. 'Revolutionary courts' dealt with cases affecting state security.

For religious matters: the Sharia courts at all places where there were civil courts, constituted in some places of specially appointed Qadhis (religious judges) and in other places of the judges of the civil courts. For criminal matters: the court of cassation; six sessions courts (two being presided over by the judge of the local court of first instance and four being identical with the courts of appeal). Magistrates' courts at all places where there were civil courts, constituted of civil judges exercising magisterial powers of the first and second class. There were also a number of third-class magistrates' courts, powers for this purpose being granted to municipal councils and a number of administrative officials.

The death penalty was introduced for serious theft in 1992; amputation of a hand for theft in 1994. It is believed that there are hundreds of executions annually.

Religion. The constitution proclaims Islam the state religion, but also stipulates freedom of religious belief and expression. In 1993 there were 11·9m. Shia Muslims and 6·6m. Sunni Muslims (including 3·5m. Kurds). There were 0·72m. Christians in 14 sects, including: 0·48m. Chaldean (Eastern rite Roman Catholic) Church, with some 100 priests in 9 dioceses; 0·15m. Apostolic Assyrian (Nestorian) Church, with 29 priests in 3 dioceses and 80,000 Syriac Orthodox in 2 dioceses. There were some 10,000 in various Protestant sects.

Education. Primary and secondary education is free; primary education became compulsory in 1976. Primary school age is 6–12. Secondary education is for six years, of which the first three are termed intermediate. The medium of instruction is Arabic; Kurdish is used in primary schools in northern districts.

There were, in 1995, 576 pre-primary schools with 4,972 teachers for 93,028 pupils. In 1995–96 there were 8,145 primary schools with 145,455 teachers for 2,903,923 pupils and 62,296 secondary level teachers for 1·16m. pupils. Adult literacy rate was 53·7% in 1998 (male, 63·9%; female, 43·2%). In 1994–95 there were 10 universities and 1 technological university, 1 institute of administration, 1 institute of applied arts, 1 technical teacher training institute and 22 technical institutes.

Health. In 1993 there were 8,787 doctors, 1,656 dentists, 1,561 pharmacists and 13,206 nurses (1991). There were 185 hospitals in 1993, with a provision of 14 beds per 10,000 population. In 2000 annual health expenditure was US$573 per capita and public health expenditure as a percentage of GDP was 3·7%.

CULTURE

Broadcasting. In 1997 there were 4·8m. radio and 1·75m. TV receivers (colour by SECAM H).

Press. In 1996 there were four main daily newspapers (one of which is in English) with a combined circulation of 407,000.

Tourism. In 1998 there were 51,000 foreign tourists, bringing revenue of US$13m.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

With the collapse of the Roman empire, Ireland developed its own Gaelic culture and language. But from the 12th century, the English dominated. Vast tracts of land were granted to English settlers and English law was introduced. In 1541 Henry VIII was recognized as King of Ireland. Most Irish remained Roman Catholic and in the reign of Elizabeth insurrection broke out against the Protestant overlords. In the early 17th century Scottish settlers in the north of Ireland established a strong Protestant enclave which led to rebellion in 1640. After 1649 Cromwell restored English domination. Irish resistance was brought to a bloody conclusion by the Battle of the Boyne (1690).

For over a century, the Roman Catholic majority had no share in government. The 1801 Act of Union gave Ireland representation at Westminster but opposition to British rule was reinforced in 1846 when the failure of the potato harvest and the apparent unwillingness of Britain to provide aid led to widespread famine. The subsequent mass emigration, chiefly to the United States, further damaged the Irish economy and intensified demands for Home Rule. In the north, however, Home Rule was bitterly opposed by the Protestant interest. In 1898 the Ulster Unionist party was set up to campaign for the right to remain part of the UK.

In April 1916 an insurrection against British rule took place and a republic was proclaimed. The armed struggle was renewed in 1919 and continued until 1921. In 1920 an Act was passed by the British Parliament, under which separate Parliaments were set up for 'Southern Ireland' (26 counties) and 'Northern Ireland' (six counties). The Unionists of the six counties accepted this scheme, and a Northern Parliament was duly elected on 24 May 1921. The rest of Ireland, however, ignored the Act. On 6 Dec. 1921 a treaty was signed between Great Britain and Ireland by which Ireland accepted dominion status subject to the right of Northern Ireland to opt out. This right was exercised, and the border between the Irish Free State (26 counties) and Northern Ireland (six counties) was fixed in Dec. 1925 as the outcome of an agreement between Great Britain, Ireland and Northern Ireland. Subsequently the constitutional links between Ireland and the UK were gradually removed by the Dáil. The remaining formal association with the British Commonwealth by virtue of the External Relations Act, 1936 was severed when the Republic of Ireland Act, 1948 came into operation on 18 April 1949.

In the mid-1950s the Irish Republican Army, which had led a violent campaign for Irish unity in the 1920s, re-emerged as a fighting force with a bombing campaign in Northern Ireland. Differences between the two religious communities intensified to the point, in 1969, when British troops had to be deployed to keep the peace. In 1972 the Unionist government in Belfast resigned and direct rule from London was imposed. Between July 1969 and Dec. 1998, around 1,800 civilians, 1,100 security forces personnel and 500 paramilitaries were killed in the troubles.

On 22 Feb. 1995 the Irish and British Prime Ministers (John Bruton and John Major) announced joint proposals for a settlement in Northern Ireland. Under the chairmanship of former US Senator George Mitchell, a marathon negotiating struggle on 9–10 April 1998 led to a framework for sharing power designed to satisfy Protestant demands for a reaffirmation of their national identity as British, Catholic desires for a closer relationship with the predominantly Catholic Republic of Ireland and Britain's wish to return to Northern Ireland the powers London assumed in 1972. In the referendum on 22 May 1998, 94·4% of votes in the Republic and 71·12% in Northern Ireland were cast in favour of the Good Friday peace agreement. On 2 Dec. 1999 the Irish constitution was amended to remove the articles laying claim to Northern Ireland. However, in Oct. 2002 the Northern Irish assembly was suspended for the fourth time in its history over allegations of IRA spying at the Northern Ireland Office. Direct rule from London was subsequently re-imposed.

For details of recent peace negotiations turn to the section on Northern Ireland on page 1700.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The Republic of Ireland lies in the Atlantic Ocean, separated from Great Britain by the Irish Sea to the east, and bounded in the northeast by Northern Ireland (UK). The population at the 1996 census was 3,626,087 (1,825,855 females), giving a density of 51·6 persons per sq. km. In 1999, 58·8% of the population lived in urban areas. The population at the 2002 census (preliminary) was 3,917,336 (1,972,149 females).

The UN gives a projected population for 2010 of 4·20m.

The capital is Dublin (Baile Átha Cliath). Town populations, 1996: Greater Dublin, 952,692 (977,000 by 1999); Cork, 179,954; Limerick, 75,729; Galway, 57,363; Waterford, 44,155.

[3]Preliminary figures, based on 2002 Census of Population.

Dublin: An east-coast city with a population of nearly 1m. and once the second largest city in the British Empire, Dublin underwent, after a period of decline, a renaissance in the second half of the 20th century. Not only the Republic of Ireland's capital city but the focal point for Ireland's commercial and cultural life, Dublin is the manufacturing centre of the country and possesses the biggest brewery in the world.

The official languages are Irish (the national language) and English; according to the National Survey of Languages of 1994, Irish is spoken as a mother tongue only by 2% of the population, in certain western areas (Gaeltacht), and is no longer a compulsory subject at school.

In 2001 the suicide rate per 100,000 population (provisional) was 11·7 (men, 18·7; women, 4·8). Infant mortality in 2001, 5·8 per 1,000 live births; fertility rate (2001), 2·0 births per woman.

At a referendum on 24 Nov. 1995 on the legalization of civil divorce the electorate was 1,628,580; 818,852 votes were in favour, 809,728 against. In 2000 Ireland received 10,938 asylum applications, compared to 4,600 in 1998.

In 1999 for the first time Irish citizens were returning to Ireland to live and work, rather than emigrating. In the 12 months to April 2001 immigration to Ireland was estimated to total 46,200. In the same period emigration was 19,900 leaving a net migration figure of 26,300. In 1999 the UK was the destination for 35% of emigrants and the origin of 45% of immigrants (although only 17% were of UK nationality). In 2000 Ireland received 14,800 asylum applications, equivalent to 3·97 per 1,000 inhabitants.

A UNICEF report published in 2000 showed that 16·8% of children in Ireland live in poverty (in households with income below 50% of the national median), compared to 2·6% in Sweden. The report also showed that the poverty rate of children in lone-parent families was 46·4%, compared to 14·2% in two-parent families.

CLIMATE

Influenced by the Gulf Stream, there is an equable climate with mild southwest winds, making temperatures almost uniform over the whole country. The coldest months are Jan. and Feb. (39–45°F, 4–7°C) and the warmest July and Aug. (57–61°F, 14–16°C). May and June are the sunniest months, averaging 5·5 to 6·5 hours each day, but over 7 hours in the extreme southeast. Rainfall is lowest along the eastern coastal strip. The central parts vary between 30–44" (750–1,125 mm), and up to 60" (1,500 mm) may be experienced in low-lying areas in the west. Dublin, Jan. 40°F (4°C), July 59°F (15°C). Annual rainfall 30" (750 mm). Cork, Jan. 42°F (5°C), July 61°F (16°C). Annual rainfall 41" (1,025 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

Ireland is a sovereign independent, democratic republic. Its parliament exercises jurisdiction in 26 of the 32 counties of the island of Ireland. The first Constitution of the Irish Free State came into operation on 6 Dec. 1922. Certain provisions which were regarded as contrary to the national sentiments were gradually removed by successive amendments, with the result that at the end of 1936 the text differed considerably from the original document. On 14 June 1937 a new Constitution was approved by Parliament and enacted by a plebiscite on 1 July 1937. This Constitution came into operation on 29 Dec. 1937. Under it the name Ireland (Éire) was restored. It states that the whole island of Ireland is the national territory, but that, pending its reintegration, laws enacted by Parliament have the same area and extent of application as those of the former Irish Free State.

The head of state is the President, whose role is largely ceremonial, but who has the power to refer proposed legislation which might infringe the Constitution to the Supreme Court.

The Oireachtas or National Parliament consists of the President, a House of Representatives (Dáil Éireann) and a Senate (Seanad Éireann). The Dáil, consisting of 166 members, is elected by adult suffrage on the Single Transferable Vote system in constituencies of 3, 4 or 5 members. Of the 60 members of the Senate, 11 are nominated by the Taoiseach (Prime Minister), six are elected by the universities and the remaining 43 are elected from five panels of candidates established on a vocational basis, representing the following public services and interests: (1) national language and culture, literature, art, education and such professional interests as may be defined by law for the purpose of this panel; (2) agricultural and allied interests, and fisheries; (3) labour, whether organized or unorganized; (4) industry and commerce, including banking, finance, accountancy, engineering and architecture; (5) public administration and social services, including voluntary social activities. The electing body comprises members of the Dáil, Senate, county boroughs and county councils.

A maximum period of 90 days is afforded to the Senate for the consideration or amendment of Bills sent to that House by the Dáil, but the Senate has no power to veto legislative proposals.

No amendment of the Constitution can be effected except with the approval of the people given at a referendum.

DEFENCE

Supreme command of the Defence Forces is vested in the President. Exercise of the supreme command is regulated by law (Defence Act 1954). Military Command is exercised by the government through the Minister for Defence who is the overall commander of the Defence Forces.

The Defence Forces comprise the Permanent Defence Force (the regular Army, the Air Corps and the Naval Service) and the Reserve Defence Force (comprising a First Line Reserve of members who have served in the Permanent Defence Force, a second-line Territorial Army Reserve and a second-line Naval Reserve).

A review of the Reserve Forces is almost complete. The total strength of the Permanent Defence Force in Dec. 2002 was 10,559 (including 472 women). The total strength of the Reserve was 13,743. The Defence Forces had some 483 personnel involved with 19 different peace-support missions throughout the world in Dec. 2002.

Defence expenditure in 2002 totalled €891m. (approximately €240 per capita), representing 0·72% of GDP.

Army. The army strength in Dec. 2002 was 8,620 personnel with 13,249 reservists. There is a Training Centre at the Curragh, Co. Kildare and a Logistics Base, with elements located at the Curragh and Dublin for force level logistical support.

Navy. The Naval Service is based at Haulbowline in Co. Cork. The strength in Dec. 2002 was 1,034 with 422 reserves. It operates eight patrol craft.

Air Corps. The Air Corps has its headquarters at Casement Aerodrome, Baldonnel, Co. Dublin. The Air Corps is a stand-alone Corps which does not form an intrinsic part of the new Army Brigade structure. The Air Corps strength in Dec. 2002 was 905 personnel with 72 reservists. It operates 17 fixed-wing aircraft and 13 helicopters.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

Ireland is a member of the UN, WTO, BIS, OECD, EU, the Council of Europe, the OSCE and IOM.

ECONOMY

Agriculture accounted for 3·5% of GDP in 2001, industry 42·0% and services 54·5%.

Overview. Ireland receives around one-third of US investment in the EU. Multinationals are attracted by access to the singe European market, low corporate taxes and an educated workforce. The tax rate for manufacturing firms is 10% compared to the standard corporate rate of 20%. The European Commission has urged Ireland to commit itself to a uniform corporate tax rate of 12·5%. In 2001 a pension fund was introduced, receiving 1% of GNP each year until 2025 and amounting to 6% of GDP. Inflation differentials between Ireland and the rest of the euro zone remain a concern.

Currency. On 1 Jan. 1999 the euro (EUR) became the legal currency in Ireland; irrevocable conversion rate 0·787564 Irish pounds to 1 euro. The euro, which consists of 100 cents, has been in circulation since 1 Jan. 2002. There are seven euro notes in different colours and sizes denominated in 500, 200, 100, 50, 20, 10 and 5 euros, and eight coins denominated in 2 and 1 euros, then 50, 20, 10, 5, 2 and 1 cents. On the introduction of the euro there was a 'dual circulation' period before the Irish pound ceased to be legal tender on 9 Feb. 2002. Euro banknotes in circulation on 1 Jan. 2002 had a total value of €6·8bn.

Inflation, at 4·9% in 2001, is more than twice the EU average. The Central Bank has the sole right of issuing legal tender notes; token coinage is issued by the Minister for Finance through the Bank. Gold reserves were 176,000 troy oz in June 2002 and foreign exchange reserves US$4,648m. Total money supply was €3,616m. in June 2002.

Budget. Current revenue and expenditure (in IR£1m.):

[1]Provisional outturn.

VAT as at 1 Jan. 2002 was 20% (reduced rate 12·5%).

Total Public Capital Programme Expenditure amounted to IR£5,534m. in 2000, with provision for IR£6,066m. in 2001. The general government debt at the end of 1999 was IR£34·6bn., 50% of GDP (compared to 120% in 1986). Ireland is one of the largest recipients of EU aid per head of population. It is also one of the largest recipients of US direct investment.

Performance. Until late 2001 Ireland had the fastest-growing economy in the European Union, with real GDP growth in 2000 of 11·5% following growth averaging 9% over the previous six years. In 2001 real GDP growth declined to 6·7% and by the end of 2001 Ireland had gone into a recession. From a GDP per head of only 61% of the EU average in 1986, it was estimated to have risen to 117% of the EU average by 2000. GNP in Ireland is much lower than GDP owing to profit repatriations by the multi-nationals and foreign debt servicing. Ireland's GNP per head is about 97% of the EU average. Total GDP in 2001 was US$101·2bn.

Banking and Finance. The Central Bank (founded in 1943) replaced the Currency Commission as the note-issuing authority. The Central Bank has the power of receiving deposits from banks and public authorities, of rediscounting Exchequer bills and bills of exchange, of making advances to banks against such bills or against government securities, of fixing and publishing rates of interest for rediscounting bills, or buying and selling certain government securities and securities of any international bank or financial institution formed wholly or mainly by governments. The Bank also collects and publishes information relating to monetary and credit matters. The Central Bank Acts, 1971, 1989 and 1997, together with the Building Societies Act, 1989, the Investment Intermediaries Act, 1995 and the Stock Exchange Act, 1995, give further powers to the Central Bank in the regulation and supervision of financial institutions and payment systems.

The Board of Directors of the Central Bank consists of a Governor, appointed for a seven-year term by the President on the advice of the government, and nine directors, all appointed by the Minister for Finance. The Governor is John Hurley. The Bank's net profit in 1998 was IR£177·022m., of which IR£152·351m. was paid to the Exchequer.

At 31 Dec. 1996 there were 42 credit institutions authorized to carry on banking business in the State; 5 building societies; and 3 State banks, ICC Bank, ACC Bank and the Trustee Savings Bank. In addition there were 13 credit institutions authorized in another Member State of the European Union operating in Ireland.

At 31 Dec. 1996 total assets of within-the-State offices of all credit institutions amounted to IR£67bn.

The Dublin stock exchange has been affiliated to the London exchange since 1973.

Weights and Measures. Conversion to the metric system is in progress; with some exceptions which are confined to the domestic market, all imperial units of measurement ceased to be legal, for general use, after 31 Dec. 1994.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Environment. According to the World Bank Atlas Ireland's carbon dioxide emissions in 1998 were the equivalent of 10·3 tonnes per capita.

Electricity. The total generating capacity was (1998) 4,297 MW. In 1998 the total sales of electricity amounted to 17,440m. units supplied to 1,528,359 customers. Production in 1998 totalled 20·55bn. kWh; consumption per capita was 11·4 MWh.

Oil and Gas. Over 0·6m. sq. km of the Irish continental shelf has been designated an exploration area for oil and gas; at the furthest point the limit of jurisdiction is 520 nautical miles from the coast. It has been established that there is potential for discoveries both offshore and onshore. In the offshore there is a vast Continental Shelf in which 13 major basins and troughs have been identified. Much of the shelf remains unexplored but from 1971 to date 129 exploration wells have been drilled, and since 1965 a total of 348 separate surveys have been carried out from which approximately 316,000 line km of seismic data has been produced since 1985.

A number of encouraging oil and gas flows have been recorded, including the Corrib North Prospect in the Slyne/Erris Trough and 'Seven Heads' and 'Helvick' fields which are located in the Celtic Sea. In Nov. 1992 revised licensing terms were issued which allowed for a range of generous allowances against tax. In 1994 a Frontier Licensing Round in the Erris and Slyne Troughs resulted in the award of five licences over 28 blocks. A further eight licences over 32 blocks were awarded under the Porcupine Basin Frontier Licensing Round in 1995.

Eleven licences were awarded over 58 full and part blocks under the Petroleum Exploration Licensing Round in the Rockall Trough in June 1997. The area in the Round covered 615 full and 35 part blocks in an area of almost 150,000 sq. km. The Rockall Trough lies some 100 to 650 km west of Ireland with water depths ranging from 500 metres to 2,500 metres.

Comprehensive work programmes will be undertaken that will ensure licensed areas are fully explored. Up to 18,000 km of new 2D seismic, and up to 2,000 sq. km of 3D seismic data will be acquired and assessed by the end of the first four years of the licences.

An invitation was issued to interested petroleum companies to apply for a Lease Undertaking over the 'Seven Heads' oil and gas accumulation in the Celtic Sea. The area which covers almost 520 sq. km has been closed to the granting of authorizations since March 1997.

At the same time details of a Petroleum Licensing Round in the South Porcupine Basin were also announced. The acreage on offer covers 156 blocks in the Irish offshore—an area of over 5,000 sq. km. Owing to the special difficulties created by the physical environment of the area, it has been designated as a Frontier Area. Long term licences for a period of 15 years will be granted.

The South Porcupine Basin lies off the southwest coast of Ireland. Water depths vary from 200 metres in the east to over 2,500 metres in the southwest.

An Onshore Petroleum Prospecting Licence was issued for a three-year period from 1 Dec. 1997 covering 1,960 km of the Northwest Carboniferous Basin in counties Sligo, Leitrim, Roscommon, Cavan and Monaghan.

These steps in conjunction with the maintenance of Ireland's 'open door' approach to licensing, its favourable environment and existing tax regime achieves a risk/reward balance which reflects Ireland's circumstances and acknowledges the realities of competition for internationally mobile exploration and production investment.

Natural gas reserves in 1997 totalled 11,000m. cu. metres. In 1997 consumption of natural gas was 3,400m. cu. metres, of which 70% came from the Kinsale Head gas field, 50 km off the south coast, and the smaller Ballycotton field about 16 km northwest of Kinsale Head field, which was discovered in 1989 and which went into production in July 1991. These gas reserves are expected to be exhausted by the end of 2003. Gas transmission and distribution is carried out by Bord Gais Éireann (Irish Gas Board). A gas pipeline from County Dublin to southwest Scotland was completed in 1994. 30% of gas used in 1997 was imported via the Interconnector. At Dec. 1997 there were 290,000 gas consumers in Ireland.

Peat. The country has very little indigenous coal, but possesses large reserves of peat, the development of which is handled largely by Bord na Móna (Peat Board). To date, the Board has acquired and developed 85,000 ha of bog and has 27 locations around the country. In the year ending 31 March 2001 the Board sold 2·8m. tonnes of milled peat for use in five milled peat electricity generating stations. 301,000 tonnes of briquettes were produced for sale to the domestic heating market. Bord na Móna also sold 136m. cu. metres of horticultural peat, mainly for export. It is estimated that some 1m. tonnes of privately-produced peat was consumed in the same period.

Minerals. Lead and zinc concentrates are important. In 1997 mineable resources stood at over 6m. tonnes of zinc and over 1m. tonnes of lead. Metal content of concentrates production, 2001: zinc, 287,000 tonnes; lead, 50,100 tonnes. Gypsum, limestone and aggregates are important, and there is some production of silver (contained in lead) and dolomite. About 50 companies are involved in exploration, which is centred on base metals, but with interest also in gold, gem minerals, industrial minerals and coal. There is a thriving sand, gravel and aggregate extraction industry, employing some 7,500 people.

Agriculture. The CSO's Quarterly National Household Survey showed in the quarter of March–May 2002 that there were 120,700 people whose primary source of income was from agriculture. A total of 279,000 people worked on farms on a regular basis, working the equivalent of 191,700 full-time jobs. There were 143,000 farm holdings in Ireland, almost all of which were family farms. Average farm size was 29·3 ha. 47% of farms were under 20 ha. 11% of farmers were under 35 and 45% were over 55.

Agriculture, fisheries and forestry represented 3·5% of GDP in 2001. The total area used for agricultural and forestry purposes is 4·4m. ha, and 90% of the agricultural area was devoted to grass in 2002. In 2001 beef and milk production accounted for 58% of gross agricultural output.

Provisional figures at June 2000: barley accounted (in ha) for 182,000; wheat, 83,800; oats, 17,800; other cereals, 9,500 (1999); potatoes, 13,700. Production figures (2000, in 1,000 tonnes): sugarbeets, 1,700; barley, 1,129; wheat, 706; potatoes, 500; oats, 128; cabbages, 51; carrots, 22.

Goods output at producer prices including changes in stock (formerly gross agricultural output) for 2002 was estimated at €4·4bn.; operating surplus (aggregate income) was €2·4bn. Direct income payments, financed or co-financed by the EU, amounted to €1·6bn. or 54% of aggregate income. Livestock (June 2002 provisional): cattle, 7,185,000; sheep, 7,399,800; pigs, 1,769,500; poultry, 13,960,800.

Forestry. Total forest area by the end of 2000 was 649,812 ha (9% of total land area). Timber production in 2000 was 2·95m. cu. metres.

Fisheries. In 1999 approximately 17,600 people were engaged full- or part-time in the sea fishing industry; the fishing fleet consisted of 1,177 vessels. The quantities and values of fish landed during 1999 were: wetfish, 253,245·8 tonnes, value IR£105,870,387·16; shellfish, 53,801·0 tonnes, value IR£59,822,930·48. Total quantity: 307,046·8 tonnes; total value, IR£165,693,317·64. The main types of fish caught were mackerel (58,201·2 tonnes), horse mackerel (59,609·0 tonnes), herring (45,334·2 tonnes) and blue whiting (35,880·0 tonnes). More than 98% of fish caught is from sea fishing.

INDUSTRY

The leading companies by market capitalization in Ireland, excluding banking and finance, in Jan. 2002 were: CRH plc (€11bn.), a building materials company; Elan Corporation Plc (€7bn.), a drugs and drug-delivery systems company; and Ryanair Holdings Plc (€6bn.).

Enterprise Ireland. Enterprise Ireland was established in 1998 to provide an integrated development package specifically for indigenous firms. Its mission is 'to help client companies develop a sustainable competitive advantage leading to profitable sales, exports and employment'. Enterprise Ireland brings together the key marketing, technology, enterprise development, business training and science and innovation initiatives through which the Government supports the growth of Irish manufacturing and internationally traded sectors.

County Enterprise Boards. The 35 City and County Enterprise Boards (CEB's), which were established in Oct. 1993, are locally controlled enterprise development companies established in each county and local urban authority area in Ireland. The function of the Boards is to develop indigenous enterprise potential and to stimulate economic activity at a local level. This is primarily achieved through the provision of financial support for the development of micro enterprise (ten employees or fewer).

IDA Ireland. The IDA was established by the Irish government in 1969 but its remit was altered in 1993 when responsibility for development of indigenous industry was moved to Enterprise Ireland. The objective of IDA Ireland is to stimulate and support regional and economic development in Ireland by attracting and expanding foreign investment in key business sectors.

Today, Ireland is recognized as a base for a wide range of activities, from software development, business and information technology to international services and pharmaceuticals. Over 1,300 foreign-owned enterprises have established businesses in Ireland.

Shannon Development. Shannon Development, which was established in 1959, is the regional economic development company responsible for industrial, tourism and rural development in the Shannon region. Its regional mandate covers Counties Clare, Limerick, North Tipperary, South Offaly and North Kerry.

Forfás. Forfás is the policy advisory and co-ordination board for industrial development and science and technology. It is the statutory agency through which powers are delegated to Enterprise Ireland for the promotion of indigenous enterprise and to IDA Ireland for the promotion of inward investment.

The main functions of Forfás are to advise the Minister on matters relating to industrial policy, to advise on the development and co-ordination of policy for Enterprise Ireland, and IDA Ireland, and encourage the development of industry, technology, marketing and human resources.

The Chairman of Forfás is Peter Cassells and its Chief Executive is Martin Cronin.

The census of industrial production for 2000 gives the following details of the values (in €1m.) of gross and net output for the principal manufacturing industries.

	Gross output	Net output
Mining and quarrying	913·5	506·9
Manufacture of food products, beverages and tobacco	15,888·0	7,811·3
Manufacture of textiles and textile products	771·9	413·6
Manufacture of leather and leather products	76·3	25·7
Manufacture of wood and wood products	816·7	297·4
Manufacture of pulp, paper and paper products; publishing and printing	9,959·3	8,438·7
Manufacture of chemicals, chemical products and man-made fibres	24,281·9	19,154·6
Manufacture of rubber and plastic products	1,261·5	586·1
Manufacture of other non-metallic mineral products	1,467·6	792·3
Manufacture of basic metals and fabricated metal products	2,037·1	893·1
Manufacture of machinery and equipment n.e.c.	1,699·0	842·6
Manufacture of electrical and optical equipment	31,183·8	13,539·9
Manufacture of transport equipment	1,137·0	518·0
Manufacturing n.e.c.	1,781·0	824·9
Electricity, gas and water supply	2,656·6	1,461·7
Total (all industries)	95,931·3	56,106·7

In 1999 gross output was €77,803·5m. and net output €44,416·7m. In 1999 foreign companies in Ireland generated 90% of the country's manufacturing exports, 76% of manufacturing output and 49% of manufacturing employment.

Labour. The total labour force for 2002 was estimated to be 1,827,000, of which 77,200 were out of work. With the birth rate having peaked around 1980 there is currently a marked increase in the numbers entering the workforce. The unemployment rate in Jan. 2003 was 4·5%, down from nearly 16% in 1993. Of those at work, 1,145,200 were employed in the services sector in 2002, 483,900 in the industrial sector and 120,700 in the agricultural sector. By the end of the 1990s a labour shortage in many fields meant that workers from abroad were being sought to fill vacancies and many Irish who had emigrated in search of work in the past began to return home. FAS, the training agency, is aiming to attract 200,000 workers to Ireland between 2000 and 2005—more than a tenth of the present workforce. Employment rose by approximately 51% between 1991 and 2001—more than twice as much as in any other industrialized country. In 1999 alone 100,000 new jobs were created. The retirement age is 65 years.

Trade Unions. The number of trade unions in Dec. 2002 was 46; total membership, 532,076. The six largest unions accounted for 68% of total membership. A series of three-year social pacts, which, in addition to covering a range of economic and social policy measures, include provision for pay increases, have been negotiated between the government, trade unions and employees' organizations since 1987. The fifth such agreement concluded in Feb. 2000, the Programme for Prosperity and Fairness (PPF), provided pay increases of 15% of basic pay in the public and private sectors of the economy over the period of the agreement, 2000–02. Owing to escalating inflation a further compensatory 1% lump sum payment was negotiated, for payment in March 2001. The third phase increase (4%) in the public service was not to be paid earlier than Oct. 2002 and was dependent on the establishment of performance indicators by April 2001 and the achievement of sectoral targets by April 2002.

The PPF agreement expired for some workers in the private sector in Dec. 2002; depending on start dates, for others the agreement continues into 2003. The PPF pay element expires in Oct. 2003 for the public service. Talks to negotiate a successor to the PPF collapsed in Dec. 2002.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Ireland is one of the most trade-dependent countries in the world. Exports constitute an increasing share of the economy's output of goods and services. In 2001 the total value of merchandise exports amounted to just over €92·5bn. (the highest ever level) and generated a trade surplus of €35·3bn. In employment terms, taking the economy as a whole, one job in four is directly dependent on exports. When indirect influences are taken into account, almost one job in two depends on exports. Exports of goods and services in 2001 as a percentage of GDP totalled over 96%. In 2001, 61·9% of exports went to other European Union countries and 59·2% of imports were from within the EU. Information technology has become increasingly important, and by 1999 Ireland had become the largest exporter of software products in the world. Ireland accounts for a third of all personal computers sold across Europe.

Import and export totals for Ireland's top ten export markets in 2001 (€1m.):

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. At 31 May 2000 there were 95,729 km of public roads, consisting of 2,732 km of National Primary Roads (including 103 km of motorway), 2,697 km of National Secondary Roads, 11,690 km of Regional Roads and 78,610 km of Local Roads.

Number of licensed motor vehicles at 31 Dec. 1999: private cars, 1,269,245; public-service vehicles, 19,640; goods vehicles, 188,814; agricultural vehicles, 71,121; motorcycles, 26,677; other vehicles, 26,130. In 2000 a total of 415 people were killed in 362 fatal accidents.

Rail. The total length of railway open for traffic at 31 Dec. 1999 was 1,872 km (38 km electrified), all 1,600 mm gauge. A massive investment in public transport infrastructure is taking place in Ireland. Over the period 2000–06 IR£185m. is being invested in Dublin suburban rail alone. IR£350m. is being invested in a railway safety programme over the period 2000–03.

Civil Aviation. Aer Lingus and Ryanair are the two major airlines operating in Ireland.

Aer Lingus was founded in 1936 as a State-owned enterprise. Its principal business is the provision of passenger and cargo services to a range of points in the UK, Europe and the USA. In addition, the airline's membership of the oneworld global alliance allows customers greater access to global route networks.

The impact of the terror attacks in the US on 11 Sept. 2001 changed the nature of the airline industry forever. Aer Lingus had to change urgently and radically. A Survival Plan was prepared by the Board and management, and implemented with great speed. During 2002 Aer Lingus began to move beyond survival to continue to reduce its cost base, significantly cut business and leisure fares and open a series of popular, direct routes out of Ireland. The airline's objective for 2003 is to build on the progress of the past year and continue with the strategy of lower costs and lower fares.

Ryanair began operations in 1985 and now operates to a range of destinations in the UK and Europe.

In addition to Aer Lingus and Ryanair, there are 16 other independent air transport operators. The main operators in this group are Aer Arann Express and Cityjet.

The principal airports (Dublin, Shannon and Cork) are operated by the state-owned Aer Rianta cpt. In 2000 Dublin handled 13,691,000 passengers (13,030,000 on international flights) and 109,400 tonnes of freight. Shannon handled 1,893,210 (1,730,822 on international flights) and 42,217 tonnes of freight. Cork was the third busiest, with 1,657,000 passengers.

There are six privately owned regional airports. The government part funds the scheduled services from Dublin to five of these airports and to the City of Derry airport in Northern Ireland to ensure efficient and speedy access to the more isolated regions of the state for both business and tourist travellers. In 2002 Ireland's three state airports catered for 19·3m. passengers, up 4% on 2001. The principal focus of growth during 2002 was the European market with the Dublin–London air route amongst the busiest in Europe.

Shipping. The merchant fleet totalled 168,081 GRT in 2000. Total cargo traffic passing through the country's ports amounted to 45,795,000 tonnes in 2001.

Inland Waterways. The principal inland waterways open to navigation are the Shannon Navigation (270 km), which includes the Shannon-Erne Waterway (Ballinamore/Ballyconnell Canal), and the Grand Canal and Barrow Navigation (249 km). The Waterways Service of the Department of Arts, Culture and the Gaeltacht is responsible for the waterways system as a public amenity. Merchandise traffic has now ceased and navigation is confined to pleasure craft operated either privately or commercially. The Royal Canal (146 km) from Dublin to Mullingar (53 km) was reopened for navigation in 1995.

Telecommunications. The Minister for Public Enterprise, a member of the government, has overall policy responsibility for the development of the sector. Among the key elements of the government's policy is the objective of creating a fully open and competitive telecommunications market that will stimulate investment in advanced information infrastructure and services in Ireland and develop Ireland as a global leader in the growth of Internet-based industries and electronic commerce.

The Director of Telecommunications Regulation, established by legislation as an independent officer with a separate office and staff in June 1997, is responsible for licensing of operators, allocation of numbers and radio frequency spectrum, supervision of network interconnection arrangements and other regulatory functions.

Ireland's telecommunications sector has been fully liberalized with effect from 1 Dec. 1998 when the last remaining elements of Telecom Éireann's (now called Eircom) exclusive privilege were removed. All elements of the market are now open to competition from other licensed operators and, as of 28 Nov. 2000, 47 general, 29 basic and 3 mobile licences had been issued by the Director of Telecommunications Regulation. The three licensed mobile telephone operators are Eircell (a subsidiary of Telecom Éireann) with both TACS and GSM networks, Esat Digifone, operating a GSM network, and Meteor Mobile Communications Ltd who were awarded a combined GSM and DCS 1800 licence in June 2000.

The Government has also sold the state's entire remaining stake of 50·1% in Eircom by way of an initial public offering of shares in the company. The sale took place in July 1999 and was the 2nd largest European privatization in that year.

eircom plc—Operational Information. The dominant operator in the telecommunications sector is eircom plc (previously Telecom Éireann). Telecom Éireann was a statutory body set up under the Postal and Telecommunications Services Act, 1983. In 1996, 20% of the State's holding was sold to KPN/Telia, a Dutch–Swedish consortium, who had an option of a further 15%, which was taken up in July 1999. In 1998 the government concluded an Employee Share Ownership Scheme under which 14·9% of the company was to be made available to employees and also held an Initial Public Offer (IPO) of shares in the company in July 1999. In Oct. 1999 the newly-privatized Telecom Éireann became eircom plc.

In Jan. 2000 the level of network digitalization was 100%. In Sept. 2000 there were around 1·7m. phone lines (477·7 per 1,000 persons), 1·7m. data lines, 12,000 public payphones and 2·1m. mobile phone customers (Nov. 2000). The number of Internet users in Sept. 2002 was 1·31m. In 2000 there were 1·4m. PCs in use (359·1 per 1,000 persons).

Postal Services. Postal services are provided by An Post, a statutory body established under the Postal and Telecommunications Services Act, 1983. In 1998 there were 1,912 post offices. A total of 748m. pieces of mail were handled during 1998, equivalent to 70 per person. An Post also offers a range of services to the business community through a dedicated unit, Special Delivery Services, and subsidiaries PostGEM, PrintPost and Precision Marketing Information. A range of services are provided through the Post Office network including Savings and Investments, passport applications, bill payments, National Lottery products and the payment of Social Welfare benefits on an agency basis for the State.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. The Constitution provides that justice shall be administered in public in Courts established by law by Judges appointed by the President on the advice of the government. The jurisdiction and organization of the Courts are dealt with in the Courts (Establishment and Constitution) Act, 1961, the Courts (Supplemental Provisions) Acts, 1961–91, and the Courts and Court Officers Acts, 1995–2002. These Courts consist of Courts of First Instance and a Court of Final Appeal, called the Supreme Court. The Courts of First Instance are the High Court with full original jurisdiction and the Circuit and the District Courts with local and limited jurisdictions. A judge may not be removed from office except for stated misbehaviour or incapacity and then only on resolutions passed by both Houses of the Oireachtas. Judges of the Supreme Court are appointed from among practising barristers or serving Circuit Court judges. High Court judges are appointed from among practising barristers or solicitors of not less than 12 years' standing or serving High Court judges or serving eligible Circuit Court judges. Judges of the Circuit Court are appointed from among practising barristers or solicitors of not less than ten years' standing, or a county registrar who has practised as a barrister or solicitor for not less than ten years before he or she was appointed to that post or serving District Court judges. Judges of the District Court are appointed from among practising barristers or solicitors of not less than ten years standing.

The Supreme Court, which consists of the Chief Justice (who is ex officio an additional judge of the High Court) and seven ordinary judges, may sit in two Divisions and has appellate jurisdiction from all decisions of the High Court. The President may, after consultation with the Council of State, refer a Bill, which has been passed by both Houses of the Oireachtas (other than a money bill and certain other bills), to the Supreme Court for a decision on the question as to whether such Bill or any provision thereof is repugnant to the Constitution.

The High Court, which consists of a President (who is ex officio an additional Judge of the Supreme Court) and 26 ordinary judges (or 27 when a High Court Judge is appointed as a Commissioner of the Law Reform Commission, as is currently the case), has full original jurisdiction in and power to determine all matters and questions, whether of law or fact, civil or criminal. In all cases in which questions arise concerning the validity of any law having regard to the provisions of the Constitution, the High Court alone exercises original jurisdiction. The High Court on Circuit acts as an appeal court from the Circuit Court.

The Court of Criminal Appeal consists of the Chief Justice or an ordinary Judge of the Supreme Court, together with either two ordinary judges of the High Court or the President and one ordinary judge of the High Court. It deals with appeals by persons convicted on indictment where the appellant obtains a certificate from the trial judge that the case is a fit one for appeal, or, in case such certificate is refused, where the court itself, on appeal from such refusal, grants leave to appeal. The decision of the Court of Criminal Appeal is final, unless that court, the Attorney-General or the Director of Public Prosecutions certifies that the decision involves a point of law of exceptional public importance, in which case an appeal is taken to the Supreme Court.

The Offences against the State Act, 1939 provides in Part V for the establishment of Special Criminal Courts. A Special Criminal Court sits without a jury. The rules of evidence that apply in proceedings before a Special Criminal Court are the same as those applicable in trials in the Central Criminal Court. A Special Criminal Court is authorized by the 1939 Act to make rules governing its own practice and procedure. An appeal against conviction or sentence by a Special Criminal Court may be taken to the Court of Criminal Appeal. On 30 May 1972 Orders were made establishing a Special Criminal Court and declaring that offences of a particular class or kind (as set out) were to be scheduled offences for the purposes of Part V of the Act, the effect of which was to give the Special Criminal Court jurisdiction to try persons charged with those offences.

The High Court exercising criminal jurisdiction is known as the Central Criminal Court. It consists of a judge or judges of the High Court, nominated by the President of the High Court. The Court sits in Dublin and tries criminal cases which are outside the jurisdiction of the Circuit Court.

The Circuit Court consists of a President (who is ex officio an additional judge of the High Court) and 30 ordinary judges. The country is divided into eight circuits. The jurisdiction of the court in civil proceedings is subject to a financial ceiling, save by consent of the parties, in which event the jurisdiction is unlimited. In criminal matters it has jurisdiction in all cases except murder, treason, piracy, rape, serious and aggravated sexual assault and allied offences. The Circuit Court acts as an appeal court from the District Court.

The District Court, which consists of a President and 52 ordinary judges, has summary jurisdiction in a large number of criminal cases where the offence is not of a serious nature. In civil matters the Court has jurisdiction in contract and tort (except slander, libel, seduction, slander of title and false imprisonment) where the claim does not exceed €6,348·69; in proceedings founded on hire-purchase and credit-sale agreements, the jurisdiction is also €6,348·69.

All criminal cases, except those of a minor nature, and those tried in the Special Criminal Court, are tried by a judge and a jury of 12. Generally, a verdict need not be unanimous in a case where there are not fewer than 11 jurors if 10 of them agree on the verdict.

The Courts Service Act, 1998, provided for the transfer of responsibility for the day to day management of the Courts from the Minister for Justice, Equality and Law Reform to a new body known as the Courts Service. The Board of the Courts Service consists of 17 members including members of the judiciary, the legal profession, staff and trade union representatives, a representative of court users, a person with commercial/financial experience and a Chief Executive Officer. The Courts Service was formally established on 9 Nov. 1999. While the Minister retains political responsibility to the Oireachtas, the courts are now administered independently by the Board and CEO.

At 31 Dec. 2001 the police force, the Garda Síochána, had a total staff of 11,815. There were 86,633 headline offences recorded in 2001, of which 35,911 were detected, and 326,527 non-headline offences resulted in proceedings. 187,250 persons were convicted in total. There were 1·43 murders per 100,000 population and 8,832 juvenile offenders were cautioned. The population in penal institutions in Sept. 2001 was 3,019 (83 per 100,000 of national population).

Religion. In 1997 there were an estimated 3·34m. Roman Catholics and 300,000 members of other religions. According to the census of population taken in 1991 the principal religious professions were as follows:

	Leinster	Munster	Connacht	Ulster (part of)	Total
Roman Catholics	1,685,334	941,675	397,848	203,470	3,228,327
Church of Ireland (Anglican)	50,912	15,758	5,321	10,849	82,840
Protestants	3,391	1,385	516	1,055	6,347
Presbyterians	3,799	548	333	8,519	13,199
Methodists	2,815	1,185	286	751	5,037
Jewish	1,439	111	21	10	1,581
Other religious denominations	24,829	9,192	3,208	1,514	38,743
Not stated or no religion	88,430	39,679	15,498	6,038	149,645

Seán Brady (b. 1939) is the Roman Catholic Cardinal of Armagh and Primate of All Ireland.

In May 1990 the General Synod of the Church of Ireland voted to ordain women.

Education. In 1999 net total expenditure on education came to 4·7% of GNP. The adult literacy rate in 1998 was at least 99%.

Elementary. Elementary education is free and was given in about 3,293 national schools (including 121 special schools) in 1999–2000. The total number of pupils on rolls in 1999–2000 was 444,310, including pupils in special schools and classes; the number of teachers of all classes was about 21,500 in 1999–2000, including remedial teachers and teachers of special classes. The total expenditure for first level education during the financial year ended 31 Dec. 1999 was IR£897,000,000. The total salaries for teachers for 1998, including superannuation etc., was IR£724,000,000.

Special. Special provision is made for children with disabilities in special schools which are recognized on the same basis as primary schools, in special classes attached to ordinary schools and in certain voluntary centres where educational services appropriate to the needs of the children are provided. Integration of children with disabilities in ordinary schools and classes is encouraged wherever possible, if necessary with special additional support. There are also part-time teaching facilities in hospitals, child guidance clinics, rehabilitation workshops, special 'Saturday-morning' centres and home teaching schemes. Special schools (1999–2000) numbered 121 with approximately 7,200 pupils. There were also some 8,743 pupils enrolled in about 824 special classes, and 2,115 remedial, resource and home/school liaison teachers were employed for pupils in ordinary national schools in 1999–2000. There is a National Education Officer for travelling children.

Secondary. Voluntary secondary schools are under private control and are conducted in most cases by religious orders. These schools receive grants from the State and are open to inspection by the Department of Education. The number of recognized secondary schools during the school year 1999–2000 was 424, and the number of pupils in attendance was 211,369. There were 12,180 teachers in 1998–99.

Vocational Education Committee schools provide courses of general and technical education. Pupils are prepared for State examinations and for entrance to universities and institutes of further education. The number of vocational schools during the school year 1999–2000 was 245, the number of full-time students in attendance was 97,998 and the number of teachers 5,497. These schools are controlled by the local Vocational Education Committees; they are financed mainly by State grants and also by contributions from local rating authorities and Vocational Education Committee receipts. These schools also provide adult education facilities for their own areas.

Comprehensive and Community Schools. Comprehensive schools which are financed by the State combine academic and technical subjects in one broad curriculum so that pupils may be offered educational options suited to their needs, abilities and interests. Pupils are prepared for State examinations and for entrance to universities and institutes of further education. The number of comprehensive and community schools during the school year 1999–2000 was 83 and the number of students in attendance was 51,991. These schools also provide adult education facilities for their own areas and make facilities available to voluntary organizations and to the adult community generally.

The total current expenditure from public funds for second level and further education for 1999 was IR£1,053,700,000.

Education Third-Level. Traditionally, the third-level education system in Ireland has comprised the university sector, the technical and technological colleges and the colleges of education, all of which are substantially funded by the State and are autonomous. In the mid- and late 1990s a number of independent private colleges came into existence, offering a range of mainly business-related courses conferring professional qualifications and, in some instances, recognized diplomas and certificates. Numbers in third-level education have expanded dramatically over the last 25 years, from 21,000 full-time students in 1965 to over 103,000 in 1997–98.

University education is provided by the National University of Ireland, founded in Dublin in 1908, by the University of Dublin (Trinity College), founded in 1592, and by the Dublin City University and the University of Limerick established in 1989. The National University comprises four constituent universities—NUI Dublin, NUI Cork, NUI Galway and NUI Maynooth.

St Patrick's College, Maynooth, Co. Kildare is a national seminary for Catholic priests and a pontifical university with the power to confer degrees up to doctoral level in philosophy, theology and canon law.

Besides the University medical schools, the Royal College of Surgeons in Ireland (a long-established independent medical school) provides medical qualifications which are internationally recognized. Courses to degree level are available at the National College of Art and Design, Dublin.

There are five Colleges of Education for training primary school teachers. For degree awarding purposes, three of these colleges are associated with Trinity College, one with Dublin City University and one with the University of Limerick. There are also two Home Economics Colleges for teacher training, one associated with Trinity College and the other with the National University of Ireland, Galway.

Institutes of Technology in 12 centres (Athlone, Carlow, Cork, Dundalk, Dun Laoghaire, Limerick, Tallaght, Galway, Letterkenny, Sligo, Tralee and Waterford) provide vocational and technical education and training for trade and industry from craft to professional level through certificate, diploma and some degree courses. These colleges (with the exception of Dun Laoghaire) were established on a statutory basis on 1 Jan. 1993. Prior to this they operated under the aegis of the Vocational Education Committees (VECs) for their areas. Dun Laoghaire College of Art and Design was designated under the RTC Act 1992, from 1 April 1997. The Dublin Institute of Technology (DIT) was also established on a statutory basis on 1 Jan. 1993. Prior to this it operated under the aegis of City of Dublin VEC. The DIT provides certificate, degree and diploma level courses in engineering, architecture, business studies, catering, music, etc. The Hotel and Catering College in Killybegs continues to operate under the aegis of Co. Donegal VEC.

Total full-time enrolments in the Institutes of Technology/Other Technological Colleges in the 1998–99 academic year were approximately 43,476. The National Council for Educational Awards, established on a statutory basis in 1979, is the validating and awarding authority for courses in the third-level sector outside the universities.

The total full-time enrolment at third-level in institutions aided by the Department of Education and Science in 1998–99 was 108,509. Whereas in the late 1970s only one in five school leavers went on to university, now one out of two is doing so.

The total current expenditure from public funds on third-level education during the financial year ended 31 Dec. 1999 was approximately IR£673,000,000.

Agricultural. Teagasc, the Agriculture and Food Development Authority, is the State agency responsible for providing advisory, training, research and development services for the agriculture and food industries. Full-time instruction in agriculture is provided for all sections of the farming community. There are four agricultural colleges, administered by Teagasc, and seven private Teagasc-aided agricultural colleges. Courses in commercial horticulture are also offered, and short courses for adults already farming.

Health. Everybody ordinarily resident in Ireland has either full or limited eligibility for the public health services.

A person who satisfies the criteria of a means test receives a medical card, which confers Category 1 or full eligibility on them and their dependants. This entitles the holder to the full range of public health and hospital services, free of charge, i.e. family doctor, drugs and medicines, hospital and specialist services as well as dental, aural and optical services. Maternity care and infant welfare services are also provided.

The remainder of the population has Category 2 or limited eligibility. Category 2 patients receive public consultant and public hospital services subject to certain charges. Persons in Category 2 are liable for a hospital in-patient charge of €40 per night up to a maximum of €400 in any 12 consecutive months (with effect from 1 Jan. 2003). There is no charge for out-patient services. However, persons in Category 2 are liable for a charge of €40 if they attend the Accident and Emergency Department of a hospital without a letter from a General Practitioner.

The Long Term Illness Scheme entitles persons to free drugs and medicines, which are prescribed in respect of 15 specific illnesses. The needs of individuals with significant or ongoing medical expenses are met by a range of other schemes, which provide assistance towards the cost of prescribed drugs and medicines. The Drug Payment Scheme was introduced on 1 July 1999 and replaced the Drug Cost Subsidisation Scheme (DCSS) and the Drug Refund Scheme (DRS). Under this scheme no individual or family will have to pay more than €70 from 1 Jan. 2003 in any calendar month for approved prescribed drugs, medicines and appliances for use by the person or his/her family in that month.

Where an individual or a family is subjected to a significant level of ongoing expenditure on medical expenses, such as general practitioner fees or prescribed drugs owing to a long term medical condition, these expenses may be reckoned in determining eligibility for a medical card. Eligibility for a medical card is solely a matter for the Chief Officer of the relevant health board/regional authority to decide.

Services for Children: The health boards and the Eastern Regional Health Authority provide, with the co-operation of a wide range of voluntary organizations, comprehensive child welfare and protection services including adoption, fostering, residential care, day care, social work and family support services.

Welfare Services: There are various services provided for older people and families in stress, such as social support services, day care services for children, home helps, home nursing, meals-on-wheels, day centres, cheap fuel, etc.

Services for People with Disabilities: The Department of Health and Children provides, through the health boards and the Eastern Regional Health Authority, a wide range of services for people with disabilities. These include day care, home support (including personal assistance services), therapy services, training, employment, sheltered work and residential respite care. Transport may also be provided to and from these services. The following allowances and grants for eligible people with disabilities come under the aegis of the Department of Health and Children and are administered by the health boards and the Eastern Regional Health Authority:

Blind Welfare Allowance—provides supplementary financial support to unemployed blind persons who are not maintained in an institution and who are in receipt of a Department of Social, Community and Family Affairs payment, such as Disability Allowance, Blind Pension or Old Age Pension.

Rehabilitative Training Bonus—payable to persons who are attending approved rehabilitative training programmes. The payment of €31·80 replaced the Disabled Persons Rehabilitation Allowance (DPRA) from 1 Aug. 2001.

Domiciliary Care Allowance (DCA)—provides home care for severely disabled or mentally handicapped children up to the age of 16. The maximum rate of DCA in Jan. 2002 was €179·80 per month.

Infectious Diseases Maintenance Allowance (IDMA)—payable to a person who is unable to make reasonable and proper provision for their own maintenance or the maintenance of their dependants because they are undergoing treatment for one of the infectious diseases specified in the IDMA regulations. The personal adult rate in Jan. 2002 was €118·80 per week.

Mobility Allowance—provides financial assistance to severely disabled persons who are unable to walk or use public transport in order to finance the occasional taxi journey. At Jan. 2002 the monthly higher rate, payable only to those who do not claim the 'Disabled Drivers and Passengers Tax Relief', was €126. The lower rate was €63.

Motorized Transport Grant—provides financial assistance to disabled persons who require a car to obtain or retain employment or who have transport needs because they live in very isolated areas. The maximum grant in Jan. 2002 was €4,370.

Respite Care Grant (RCG)—an annual payment of €635 to help carers obtain respite care (June 2002).

Spending Allowance for Persons in Long-Stay Institutions—provides basic spending money for people with disabilities and other eligible people in long stay institutions (e.g. residential accommodation) who have no other source of income to help them meet the cost of basic necessities. The maximum rate in Jan. 2003 was €21 per week.

Health Contributions—A health contribution of 2% of income is payable by those with Category 2 eligibility. Employers meet the levy in respect of those employees who have a medical card.

In 2001 there were 60 publicly funded acute hospitals in operation with an 85% occupancy rate. The average number of in-patient beds available for use over the year was 12,019. There were 92,996 wholetime equivalent numbers employed in health board/regional authority and voluntary/joint board hospitals and homes for the mentally handicapped at 31 Dec. 2001. Of these 6,285 were medical/dental staff, 9,228 were health and social care professionals and 31,429 were nursing staff.

Welfare. Social Welfare Services (SWS) is the executive arm of the Department of Social and Family Affairs and is responsible for the day-to-day administration and delivery of social welfare schemes and services through a network of local, regional and decentralized offices. The Department's local delivery of services is structured on a regional basis. There are a total of ten regions, with offices in Waterford, Cork, Limerick, Galway, Longford, Sligo, Dundalk and three in Dublin.

Social Welfare Schemes. The social welfare supports can be divided into three categories:

—Social Insurance (Contributory) payments made on the basis of a Pay Related Social Insurance (PRSI) record. Such payments are funded by employers, employees and the self-employed. Any deficit in the fund is met by Exchequer subvention.

—Social Assistance (Non Contributory) payments made on the basis of satisfying a means test. These payments are financed entirely by the Exchequer.

—Universal services such as Child Benefit or Free Travel which do not depend on PRSI or a means test.

The Social Welfare Appeals Office (SWAO) is an independent office responsible for determining appeals against decisions on social welfare entitlements.

There are, in addition, four statutory agencies under the aegis of the Department:

—the Combat Poverty Agency which has responsibilities in the areas of advice to the Minister, research, action programmes and public information in relation to poverty. It also initiates and evaluates pilot schemes aimed at overcoming poverty and examines the nature, causes and extent of poverty in the state.

—the Pensions Board which has the function of promoting the security of occupational pensions, their development and the general issue of pensions coverage.

—Comhairle which has the function of ensuring that all citizens have easy access to the highest quality of information, advice and advocacy on social services.

—Family Support Agency which aims to support families, promote the continuity of stability in family life, prevent marital breakdown and foster a supportive community environment for families at a local level. It does so by providing a family mediation service, by developing marriage and relationship counselling, undertaking research and by advising the Minister on its functions and family issues.

In 2001 social welfare expenditure accounted for 8·2% of GNP.

CULTURE

Broadcasting. Public service broadcasting is provided by Radio Telefis Éireann (RTÉ), a statutory body established under the Broadcasting Authority Acts 1960–93. RTÉ is financed principally by TV licence and advertising. In 1996 a total of 972,069 TV licences were issued. Legislation enacted in 1988 provided for the establishment of the Independent Radio and Television Commission to arrange provision of independent commercial radio stations and an independent TV service. There were (1996) 21 local commercial radio stations, 10 community radio stations, 2 special interest Irish language radio stations, 1 independent national radio station and 4 hospital radio stations. There were 2·55m. radio receivers and 1·65m. TV receivers (colour by PAL) in 1997. An Irish-language TV channel, TG4, broadcasts for 19 hours a day.

Cinema. In 2001 Ireland made 66 films and there were 314 cinema screens.

Press. In 2001 there were six weekday newspapers and five Sunday newspapers (all in English) with a combined circulation of 1,392,040 for Jan. to June 2001.

Tourism. Total number of overseas tourists in 2001 was 5,990,000 compared to 6,311,000 in 2000 (a 5·1% decrease). Earnings from all visits to Ireland, including cross-border visitors, were €3,922m. In 2001, 58% of visitors were from Great Britain. In 2001 Irish residents made 4,216,000 visits abroad (an 11·4% increase on 2000).

Festivals. Ireland's national holiday, St. Patrick's Day (17 March), is celebrated annually.

Libraries. In 1997 there were 351 public libraries, 2 National libraries and 30 Higher Education libraries; they held a combined 17,128,000 volumes. There were 848,000 registered public library users in 1996.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The area once designated as Palestine, of which Israel forms part, was formerly part of the Ottoman Empire. During the First World War the Arabs under Ottoman rule rebelled and Palestine was occupied by British forces. In 1917 the British Government issued the Balfour Declaration, stating that it viewed 'with favour the establishment in Palestine of a national home for the Jewish people'. In 1922 the League of Nations recognized 'the historical connection of the Jewish people with Palestine' and 'the grounds for reconstituting their national home in that country', and Britain assumed a mandate over Palestine, pending the establishment there of such a national home. In Nov. 1947 the UN General Assembly passed a resolution calling for the establishment of a Jewish and an Arab state in Palestine. On 14 May 1948 the British Government terminated its mandate and the Jewish leaders proclaimed the State of Israel. No independent Arab state was established in Palestine. Instead the neighbouring Arab states invaded Israel on 15 May 1948. The Jewish state defended itself successfully, and the ceasefire in Jan. 1949 left Israel with one-third more land than had been originally assigned by the UN.

In 1967, following some years of uneasy peace, local clashes on the Israeli–Syrian border were followed by Egyptian mass concentration of forces on the borders of Israel. Israel struck out at Egypt on land and in the air on 5–9 June 1967. Jordan joined in the conflict which spread to the Syrian borders. By 11 June the Israelis had occupied the Gaza Strip and the Sinai peninsula as far as the Suez Canal in Egypt, West Jordan as far as the Jordan valley and the heights east of the Sea of Galilee, including Quneitra in Syria.

A further war broke out on 6 Oct. 1973 when Egyptian and Syrian offensives were launched. Following UN Security Council resolutions a ceasefire finally came into being on 24 Oct. In Sept. 1978 Egypt and Israel agreed on frameworks for peace in the Middle East. A treaty was signed in Washington on 26 March 1979 whereby Israel withdrew from the Sinai Desert in two phases; part was achieved on 26 Jan. 1980 and the final withdrawal by 26 April 1982.

In June 1982 Israeli forces invaded the Lebanon. On 16 Feb. 1985 the Israeli forces started a withdrawal, leaving behind an Israeli trained and equipped Christian Lebanese force to act as a control over and buffer against Muslim Shi'a or Palestinian guerrilla attacks.

In 1993 following declarations by the Prime Minister, Yitzhak Rabin, recognizing the Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO) as representative of the Palestinian people, and by Yasser Arafat, leader of the PLO, renouncing terrorism and recognizing the State of Israel, an agreement was signed in Washington providing for limited Palestinian self-rule in the Gaza Strip and Jericho. Negotiations on the permanent status of the West Bank and Gaza began in 1996. On 4 Nov. 1995 Yitzhak Rabin was assassinated by a Jewish religious extremist. In the subsequent election, a right-wing coalition led by Binyamin Netanyahu took office. Peace talks with the Palestinians then stalled. In Oct. 1998 Israel accepted partial withdrawal from the West Bank on condition that the Palestinians cracked down on terrorism. The following month, 2% of the West Bank was handed over to Palestinian control. Further moves were put on hold after the collapse of the Netanyahu coalition and the announcement of early elections.

In Sept. 1999 Ehud Barak provided the first evidence that the Middle East peace process was back on track by releasing nearly 200 Palestinian prisoners and by handing over 430 sq. km of land on the West Bank. In May 2000 Israel completed its withdrawal from south Lebanon, 22 years after the first invasion. By Oct. 2000 violence had broken out again between Israelis and Palestinians, fuelled by the conflict over control of Jerusalem, with terrorist acts a daily occurrence, leading to heavy casualties on both sides. With peace talks stalled once again, Barak called for a nationwide vote of confidence by putting himself up for re-election as prime minister. Defeated by the right-wing Ariel Sharon in Feb. 2001, he retired from politics. As violence escalated, in Dec. 2001 Israel ended all direct contact with Yasser Arafat, besieging his compound and putting him under virtual house arrest. Israeli incursions into Palestinian-controlled areas of the West Bank and the Gaza Strip, and suicide attacks by Palestinians, continued unabated in early 2002 with heavy loss of life. In June 2002 Israel began constructing a barrier to cut off the West Bank, with the aim of shielding the country from suicide bombers.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The area of Israel, including the Golan Heights (1,150 sq. km) and East Jerusalem (70 sq. km), is 21,946 sq. km (8,473 sq. miles), with a population estimated in 1997 to be 5·53m., including East Jerusalem, the Golan Heights and Israeli settlers in the occupied territories. Population density, 252 per sq. km.

The UN gives a projected population for 2010 of 7·25m.

In 1999, 91·1% of the population lived in urban areas.

Population by place of origin as of 1995: Europe and America, 1·8m.; former USSR, 0·66m.; Morocco, 0·5m.; Poland, 0·25m.; Romania, 0·25m.; Iraq, 0·25m.; Yemen, 0·15m.; Iran, 0·13m.; Algeria and Tunisia, 0·12m.

The Jewish Agency, which, in accordance with Article IV of the Palestine Mandate, played a leading role in establishing the State of Israel, continues to organize immigration.

Israel is administratively divided into six districts:

District	Area (sq. km)	Population[1]	Chief town
Northern	4,501	1,001,900	Nazareth
Haifa	854	774,900	Haifa
Central	1,242	1,307,900	Ramla
Tel Aviv	170	1,140,000	Tel Aviv
Jerusalem[2]	627	701,700	Jerusalem
Southern	14,107	813,500	Beersheba

[1]1997. [2]Includes East Jerusalem.

On 23 Jan. 1950 the Knesset proclaimed Jerusalem the capital of the State and on 14 Dec. 1981 extended Israeli law into the Golan Heights. Population of the main towns (1997): Jerusalem, 622,100; Tel Aviv/Jaffa, 348,600; Haifa, 264,300; Rishon le-Ziyyon, 178,100; Holon, 162,900; Beersheba, 160,300; Petach Tikva, 155,200; Netanya, 152,200; Ashdod, 146,900; Bat Yam, 137,400; Bene Berak, 133,900; Ramat Gan, 127,400.

The official languages are Hebrew and Arabic.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

1991	176,100	1993	76,805	1995	76,361

CLIMATE

From April to Oct., the summers are long and hot, and almost rainless. From Nov. to March, the weather is generally mild, though colder in hilly areas, and this is the wet season. Jerusalem, Jan. 12·8°C, July 28·9°C. Annual rainfall, 657 mm. Tel Aviv, Jan. 17·2°C, July 30·2°C. Annual rainfall, 803 mm.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

Israel is an independent sovereign republic, established by proclamation on 14 May 1948.

In 1950 the Knesset (Parliament), which in 1949 had passed the Transition Law dealing in general terms with the powers of the Knesset, President and Cabinet, resolved to enact from time to time fundamental laws, which eventually, taken together, would form the Constitution. The nine fundamental laws that have been passed: the Knesset (1958), Israel Lands (1960), the President (1964), the Government (1968), the State Economy (1975), the Army (1976), Jerusalem, capital of Israel (1980), the Judicature (1984) and the Electoral System (1996).

The President (head of state) is elected by the Knesset by secret ballot by a simple majority; his term of office is five years. He may be re-elected once.

The Knesset, a one-chamber Parliament, consists of 120 members. It is elected for a four-year term by secret ballot and universal direct suffrage. Under the system of election introduced in 1996, electors vote once for a party and once for a candidate for Prime Minister. To be elected Prime Minister, a candidate must gain more than half the votes cast, and be elected to the Knesset. If there are more than two candidates and none gain half the vote, a second round is held 15 days later. The Prime Minister forms a cabinet (no fewer than eight members and no more than 18) with the approval of the Knesset.

National Anthem. 'Hatikvah' ('The Hope'); words by N. H. Imber.

RECENT ELECTIONS

Ariel Sharon of Likud (conservative) won the election for Prime Minister on 6 Feb. 2001 with 62·4% of the vote, against 37·6% for the incumbent Prime Minister Ehud Barak of Avoda. In the parliamentary (Knesset) elections on 28 Jan. 2003, Prime Minister Ariel Sharon's Likud party (conservative) won 37 of 120 seats, Avoda (social democratic) 19, Shinui-Mifleget Merkaz (liberal) 15, Shas 11, National Union 7, Meretz 6, National Religious Party 5, United Torah Judaism 5 and smaller parties 15. Turn-out was 68·5%.

In a parliamentary vote for the presidency on 31 July 2000, Moshe Katzav defeated Shimon Peres in the second round. He claimed 63 votes against 57 for Peres.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

President: Moshe Katzav; b. 1945 (Likud; sworn in 1 Aug. 2000).

Following the election of 6 Feb. 2001 Ariel Sharon formed an eight-party coalition. In Oct. 2002 Labour Party ministers resigned from the cabinet following a dispute over the funding of Jewish settlements in the West Bank. Unable to maintain the coalition without support from the Labour Party, Ariel Sharon was forced to call early elections which were held on 28 Jan. 2003. He subsequently formed a new coalition government which in March 2003 was composed as follows:

Prime Minister: Ariel Sharon; b. 1928 (Likud; sworn in 7 March 2001).

Acting Prime Minister and Minister of Industry and Commerce: Ehud Olmert (Likud). Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of Foreign Affairs: Silvan Shalom (Likud). Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of Justice: Yosef Lapid (Shinui).

Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development: Yisrael Katz (Likud). Construction and Housing: Efraim Eitam (National Religious Party). Defence: Shaul Mofaz (Likud). Education, Culture and Sport: Limor Livnat (Likud). Environment: Yehudit Naot (Shinui). Finance: Binyamin Netanyahu (Likud). Health: Dani Naveh (Likud). Immigrant Absorption: Tzipi Livni (Likud). Interior and Communications: Avraham Poraz (Shinui). Labour and Social Affairs: Zvulun Orlev (National Religious Party). National Infrastructure: Yosef Paritzky (Shinui). Public Security: Tzahi Hanegbi (Likud). Science and Technology: Eliezer Sandberg (Shinui). Tourism: Benny Elon (National Union). Transportation: Avigdor Lieberman (Likud). Minister without Portfolio, responsible for Jerusalem Affairs, Society and the Diaspora: Natan Scheransky (Likud-Israel Baaliyah). Ministers without Portfolio: Uzi Landau (Likud); Gideon Ezra (Likud); Meir Shitrit (Likud).

DEFENCE

Conscription (for Jews and Druze only) is three years (usually four years for officers; two years for women). The Israel Defence Force is a unified force, in which army, navy and air force are subordinate to a single chief-of-staff. The Minister of Defence is de facto C.-in-C.

Defence expenditure in 2001 totalled US$10,375m., representing 9·5% of GDP. Expenditure per capita in 2001 was US$1,673, a figure exceeded only by Kuwait and Qatar.

Nuclear Weapons. Israel has an undeclared nuclear weapons capability. Although known to have a nuclear bomb, it pledges not to introduce nuclear testing to the Middle East. According to the Stockholm International Peace Research Institute, the nuclear arsenal was estimated to have approximately 200 warheads in Jan. 2002. Israel has never admitted possessing biological or chemical weapons, but according to Deadly Arsenals, published by the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace, it does have a chemical and biological weapons programme.

Army. Strength (2002) 120,000 (conscripts 85,000). There are also 530,000 reservists available on mobilization. In addition there is a paramilitary border police of 8,500.

Navy. The Navy, tasked primarily for coastal protection and based at Haifa, Ashdod and Eilat, includes three small diesel submarines and three corvettes.

Naval personnel in 2002 totalled 6,500 (including a Naval Commando of 300) of whom 2,500 are conscripts. There are also 11,500 naval reservists available on mobilization.

Air Force. The Air Force (including air defence) has a personnel strength (2002) of 35,000 (20,000 conscripts), with 454 (250 stored) first-line aircraft, all jets, of Israeli and US manufacture including F-4E Phantoms, F-15s and F-16s, and 135 armed helicopters. There are 20,000 Air Force reservists.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

Israel is a member of the UN, WTO, Inter-American Development Bank and IOM. It is one of the largest recipients of foreign aid, in 1996 receiving US$2·2bn, representing around US$400 per person—the highest amount per person of any country.

ECONOMY

Agriculture accounted for an estimated 2% of GDP in 1997, industry 17% and services 81%.

According to the anti-corruption organization Transparency International, Israel ranked equal 18th in the world in a 2002 survey of the countries with the least corruption in business and government. It received 7·3 out of 10 in the annual index.

Overview. Israel is facing its worst recession in 50 years owing to high security costs and a sharp decline in tourism. The tense situation hampers foreign investment, exports and economic reforms. Businesses depending on foreign financial markets are suffering from the US economic slowdown, and in 2000 the government opened the telecommunications sector to foreign competition. In 2002 the government introduced emergency measures, including an increase in the budget deficit to 3·9% from the targeted 3%. State expenditures have been cut through a freeze in social benefits and the minimum wage. Taxes have risen. In early 2002 the Bank of Israel cut interest rates by 2 percentage points and the currency dropped to 4·60 shekel to the US dollar, an all-time low.

Currency The unit of currency is the shekel (ILS) of 100 agorot. Foreign exchange reserves were US$24,782m. in June 2002. Gold reserves have been negligible since 1998. There was zero inflation in 2000, the lowest rate on record. Total money supply in May 2002 was 37,702m. shekels.

Budget. Budget revenue and expenditure (in 1m. shekels), year ending 31 Dec.:

	1995	1996	1997	1998	1999	2000
Revenue	108,032	123,796	145,110	159,911	173,187	194,736
Expenditure	125,369	149,571	165,250	183,046	197,954	208,603

Performance. There was real GDP growth of 7·4% in 2000, but Israel then experienced a recession in 2001, with the economy shrinking by 0·9%. Total GDP was US$110·4bn. in 2000.

Banking and Finance. The Bank of Israel was established by law in 1954 as Israel's central bank. Its Governor is appointed by the President on the recommendation of the Cabinet for a five-year term. He acts as economic adviser to the government and has ministerial status. The Governor is Dr David Klein. There are 26 commercial banks headed by Bank Leumi Le Israel, Bank Hapoalim and Israel Discount Bank, 2 merchant banks, 1 foreign bank, 15 mortgage banks and 9 lending institutions specifically set up to aid industry and agriculture.

There is a stock exchange in Tel Aviv.

Israel was one of 15 countries and territories named in a report in June 2000 as failing to co-operate in the fight against international money laundering. The Financial Action Task Force on Money Laundering was set up by the G7 group of major industrialized nations.

Weights and Measures. The metric system is in general use. The (metrical) dunam = 1,000 sq. metres (about 0·25 acre).

Jewish Year. The Jewish year 5763 corresponds to 7 Sept. 2002 to 26 Sept. 2003; 5764 from 27 Sept. 2003 to 15 Sept. 2004.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Environment. According to the World Bank Atlas carbon dioxide emissions in 1998 were the equivalent of 10·1 tonnes per capita.

Electricity. Installed capacity in 1997 was an estimated 7·81m. kW. Electric power production amounted to 35·34bn. kWh in 1998; consumption per capita was 5,475 kWh.

Oil and Gas. The only significant hydrocarbon is oil shale. Crude petroleum reserves in 1997 were 4m. bbls.

Water. In the northern Negev farming has been aided by the Yarkon–Negev water pipeline. This has become part of the overall project of the 'National Water Carrier', which is to take water from the Sea of Galilee (Lake Kinnereth) to the south. The plan includes a number of regional projects such as the Lake Kinnereth–Negev pipeline which came into operation in 1964; it has an annual capacity of 320m. cu. metres. Total water production in 1997 amounted to 2,188m. cu. metres, of which 1,959m. cu. metres was consumed.

Minerals. The most valuable natural resources are the potash, bromine and other salt deposits of the Dead Sea. Potash production in 1996 was 2,500,000 tonnes; phosphate rock production was 2,450,000 tonnes. Annual salt production averages 800,000 tonnes.

Agriculture. In the coastal plain mixed farming, poultry raising, citriculture and vineyards are the main agricultural activities. The Emek (the Valley of Jezreel) is the main agricultural centre of Israel. Mixed farming is to be found throughout the valleys; the sub-tropical Beisan and Jordan plainlands are also centres of banana plantations and fish breeding. In Galilee mixed farming, olive and tobacco plantations prevail. The Hills of Ephraim are a vineyard centre; many parts of the hill country are under afforestation.

There were 351,000 ha of arable land in 1998 and 86,000 ha of permanent crops. Production, 2000 (in 1,000 tonnes): tomatoes, 550; melons and watermelons, 447; grapefruit and pomelos, 370; potatoes, 349; oranges, 300; tangerines and mandarins, 140; bananas, 130; cucumbers and gherkins, 108; chillies and green peppers, 97; onions, 90.

Livestock (2000), 388,000 cattle, 350,000 sheep, 163,000 pigs, 70,000 goats, 28m. poultry.

Types of rural settlement: (1) the Kibbutz and Kvutza (communal collective settlement), where all property and earnings are collectively owned and work is collectively organized. (115,700 people lived in 268 Kibbutzim in 1999.) (2) The Moshav (workers' co-operative smallholders' settlement) which is founded on the principles of mutual aid and equality of opportunity between the members, all farms being equal in size (184,500 in 411). (3) The Moshav Shitufi (co-operative settlement), which is based on collective ownership and economy as in the Kibbutz, but with each family having its own house and being responsible for its own domestic services (18,200 in 43). (4) Other rural settlements in which land and property are privately owned and every resident is responsible for his own well-being. In 1999 there were a total of 259 non-cooperative villages with a population of 314,900.

Forestry. In 1995 forests covered 102,000 ha or 4·9% of the total land area. Timber production was 89,000 cu. metres in 1999.

Fisheries. Catches in 1999 totalled 5,884 tonnes, of which 3,739 tonnes were from marine waters.

INDUSTRY

The leading companies by market capitalization in Israel, excluding banking and finance, in Jan. 2002 were: Teva Pharmaceutical Industries Ltd (40bn. shekels); Check Point Software Technologies Ltd (20bn. shekels); and BEZEQ—The Israel Telecommunications Corporation Ltd (12bn. shekels).

Products include chemicals, metal products, textiles, tyres, diamonds, paper, plastics, leather goods, glass and ceramics, building materials, precision instruments, tobacco, foodstuffs, electrical and electronic equipment.

Labour. The workforce was 2,040,200 in 1997 (884,800 females). Of the total labour force 29·0% worked in education, health, social and personal services, 18·0% in manufacturing and mining, and 15·3% in trade. A 'social-economic pact' between government, employers and trade unions in May 1991 aimed to create some 32,000 new jobs to lessen the impact of increased immigration. Unemployment was 9·3% in May 1998, up from 6·4% in 1996.

Trade Unions. The General Federation of Labour (Histadrut) founded in 1920, had, in 1987, 1·6m. members (including 0·17m. Arab and Druze members); including workers' families, this membership represents 71·5% of the population covering 87% of all wage-earners. Several trades unions also exist representing other political and religious groups.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Total foreign debt amounted to US$34,000m. in July 1996.

Imports and Exports. External trade, in US$1m., for calendar years:

	1996	1997	1998	1999	2000
Imports f.o.b.	28,515	27,937	26,315	30,091	34,187
Exports f.o.b.	21,333	22,698	22,974	25,577	30,837

The main exportable commodities are citrus fruit and by-products, fruit juices, flowers, wines and liquor, sweets, polished diamonds, chemicals, tyres, textiles, metal products, machinery, electronic and transportation equipment. The main exports were, in 1995 (US$1m.): diamonds, 4,921·6; chemicals and chemical products, 2,369·7; machinery and equipment, 958·9; agricultural products including citrus fruit, 740·5. Of exports in 1995, US$6,529·8m. went to EU and EFTA countries and US$5,735·9m. to USA. In 1995 the main export markets were: USA, 30·1%; UK, 6·1%; Germany, 5·5%; Belgium, 5·4%. Main import suppliers: USA, 18·6%; Belgium, 12·1%; Germany, 9·7%; UK, 8·3%.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. There were 15,965 km of paved roads in 1998 including 56 km of motorway. Registered motor vehicles in 1998 totalled 1,297,965 passenger cars, 14,986 buses and coaches and 282,904 lorries and vans. There were 548 fatalities as a result of road accidents in 1998.

Rail. There were 609 km of standard gauge line in 1997. In 1997, 5,919,000 passengers and 8,639,000 tonnes of freight were carried.

Civil Aviation. There are international airports at Tel Aviv (Ben Gurion), Eilat (J. Hozman), Haifa and Ovda. Tel Aviv is the busiest airport, in 2000 handling 9,815,015 passengers (9,283,287 on international flights) and 336,188 tonnes of freight. El Al is the state-owned airline. In 1999 it flew 79·5m. km and carried 2,972,400 passengers (all on international flights). In 1999 services (mainly domestic) were also provided by another Israeli airline, Arkia, and by over 40 international carriers.

Shipping. Israel has three commercial ports—Haifa, Ashdod and Eilat. In 1997, 6,230 ships departed from Israeli ports; 41,490,000 tonnes of freight and 1,082,000 passengers were handled. The merchant fleet totalled 752,000 GRT in 1998.

Telecommunications. A public company responsible to the Ministry of Communications administers the telecommunications service. In 2000 there were 3,021,000 main telephone lines (equivalent to 481·8 per 1,000 population) and 1·6m. PCs (253·6 for every 1,000 persons). Israel had 2·8m. mobile phone subscribers in 1999 and 140,000 fax machines in 1995. There were approximately 1·94m. Internet users in July 2001.

Postal Services. The Ministry of Communications supervises the postal service. In 1995 there were 662 post offices and postal agencies, and 48 mobile post offices.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. Law. Under the Law and Administration Ordinance, 5708/1948, the first law passed by the Provisional Council of State, the law of Israel is the law which was obtaining in Palestine on 14 May 1948 in so far as it is not in conflict with that Ordinance or any other law passed by the Israel legislature and with such modifications as result from the establishment of the State and its authorities.

Capital punishment was abolished in 1954, except for support given to the Nazis and for high treason.

The law of Palestine was derived from Ottoman law, English law (Common Law and Equity) and the law enacted by the Palestine legislature, which to a great extent was modelled on English law.

Civil Courts. Municipal courts, established in certain municipal areas, have criminal jurisdiction over offences against municipal regulations and bylaws and certain specified offences committed within a municipal area. Magistrates courts, established in each district and sub-district, have limited jurisdiction in both civil and criminal matters. District courts, sitting at Jerusalem, Tel Aviv and Haifa, have jurisdiction, as courts of first instance, in all civil matters not within the jurisdiction of magistrates courts, and in all criminal matters, and as appellate courts from magistrates courts and municipal courts. The 14-member Supreme Court has jurisdiction as a court of first instance (sitting as a High Court of Justice dealing mainly with administrative matters) and as an appellate court from the district courts (sitting as a Court of Civil or of Criminal Appeal).

In addition, there are various tribunals for special classes of cases. Settlement Officers deal with disputes with regard to the ownership or possession of land in settlement areas constituted under the Land (Settlement of Title) Ordinance.

Religious Courts. The rabbinical courts of the Jewish community have exclusive jurisdiction in matters of marriage and divorce, alimony and confirmation of wills of members of their community and concurrent jurisdiction with the civil courts in all other matters of personal status of all members of their community with the consent of all parties to the action.

The courts of the several recognized Christian communities have a similar jurisdiction over members of their respective communities.

The Muslim religious courts have exclusive jurisdiction in all matters of personal status over Muslims who are not foreigners, and over Muslims who are foreigners, if under the law of their nationality they are subject in such matters to the jurisdiction of Muslim religious courts.

Where any action of personal status involves persons of different religious communities, the President of the Supreme Court will decide which court shall have jurisdiction, and whenever a question arises as to whether or not a case is one of personal status within the exclusive jurisdiction of a religious court, the matter must be referred to a special tribunal composed of two judges of the Supreme Court and the president of the highest court of the religious community concerned in Israel.

In 1996 government expenditure on public order and safety totalled 4,481m. shekels.

Religion. Religious affairs are under the supervision of a special Ministry, with departments for the Christian and Muslim communities. The religious affairs of each community remain under the full control of the ecclesiastical authorities concerned: in the case of the Jews, the Sephardi and Ashkenazi Chief Rabbis, in the case of the Christians, the heads of the various communities, and in the case of the Muslims, the Qadis. The Druze were officially recognized in 1957 as an autonomous religious community.

In 1997 there were: Jews, 4,701,600; Muslims, 867,900; Christians, 126,100; Druze, 96,700.

The Chief Rabbi is Israel Meir Lau.

Education. The adult literacy rate in 1999 was 95·8% (male, 97·8%; female, 93·9%). There is free and compulsory education from 5 to 16 years and optional free education until 18. There is a unified state-controlled elementary school system with a provision for special religious schools. The standard curriculum for all elementary schools is issued by the Ministry with a possibility of adding supplementary subjects comprising not more than 25% of the total syllabus. Most schools in towns are maintained by municipalities, a number are private and some are administered by teachers' co-operatives or trustees.

Statistics relating to schools under government supervision, 1995–96:

[1]Schools providing more than one type of education are included more than once.

There are also a number of private schools maintained by religious foundations—Jewish, Christian and Muslim—and also by private societies.

The Hebrew University of Jerusalem, founded in 1925, comprises faculties of the humanities, social sciences, law, science, medicine and agriculture. In 1995–96 it had 20,290 students. The Technion in Haifa had 10,370 students. The Weizmann Institute of Science in Rehovoth, founded in 1949, had 760 students.

Tel Aviv University had 26,100 students. The religious Bar-Ilan University at Ramat Gan, opened in 1965, had 19,110 students. The Haifa University had 12,820 students. The Ben Gurion University had 12,250 students.

In 1996 government expenditure on education totalled 20,630m. shekels.

Health. In 1995 there were 259 hospitals with 33,159 beds and (1993) 24,344 doctors (provision of one for every 214 persons). In 1996 government expenditure on health totalled 15,052m. shekels.

Welfare. The National Insurance Law of 1954 provides for old-age pensions, survivors' insurance, work-injury insurance, maternity insurance, family allowances and unemployment benefits. In 1996 government expenditure on social security and welfare totalled 38,082m. shekels.

CULTURE

Broadcasting. Television and the state radio station, Kol Israel (Voice of Israel), are controlled by the Israel Broadcasting Authority. There is a national programme, two commercial programmes, a music programme and a service in Arabic. There were 1·70m. TV sets (colour by PAL) and 3·07m. radio receivers in 1997.

Cinema. There were 266 screens in 1994; attendances totalled 10·0m.

Press. In 1996 there were 34 daily newspapers. Combined circulation was 1,650,000, at a rate of 291 per 1,000 inhabitants.

Tourism. In 1999 there were 2,275,000 foreign tourists, bringing revenue of US$3·05bn.

Libraries. In 1995 there was one National Library with 3m. volumes and 2,176 registered users. In 1993 there were 1,180 public libraries with 11,242,000 volumes and 737,565 registered users.

PALESTINIAN-ADMINISTERED TERRITORIES

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Under the Israeli-Palestinian agreement of 28 Sept. 1995 the Israeli army re-deployed from six of the seven largest Palestinian towns in the West Bank and from 460 smaller towns and villages. Following this in April 1996 an 82-member Palestinian Council was elected and also a head (Rais) of the executive authority of the Council. The rest of the West Bank stayed under Israeli army control with some progressive redeployments at six-month intervals, although Palestinian civil affairs here too were administered by the Palestinian Council. Negotiations on the permanent status of the West Bank and Gaza began in May 1996. Issues to be resolved include the position of 0·17m. Israelis in the West Bank and 0·18m. in East Jerusalem, the status of Jerusalem, military locations and water supplies.

Following the opening of an archaeological tunnel in Jerusalem, armed clashes broke out at the end of Sept. 1996 between demonstrators and Palestinian police on the one hand and Israeli troops. On 18 Nov. 1996 the Israeli Minister of Defence approved plans for an expansion of Jewish settlement in the West Bank. Under an agreement brokered by King Hussein of Jordan and signed by the Prime Minister of Israel and the President of the Palestinian Authority on 15 Jan. 1997 Israeli troop withdrawals from 80% of Hebron and all rural areas of the West Bank were scheduled to take place in three phases between 28 Feb. 1996 and 31 Aug. 1998.

The Israeli decision in Feb. 1997 to continue to promote Jewish settlement in the Jerusalem suburb of Har Homa was perceived by the Palestinian authorities as a hostile move and caused a setback to peace negotiations. In 1998 an American proposal that Israel should withdraw from 13·1% of the West Bank was not agreed on, but at a meeting in the USA in Oct. Israel accepted partial withdrawal on condition that the Palestinians cracked down on terrorism.

President Netanyahu's defeat by Ehud Barak in Israel's 1999 elections led to improved relations with the Palestinian Liberation Organization. Israel and the PLO signed the Sharm el-Shakh Memorandum in Sept. 1999 which established a time-frame for the implementation of outstanding commitments from earlier Palestinian-Israeli agreements. Israel conducted two more phases of redeployment from the West Bank in Sept. 1999 and Jan. 2000. The permanent status negotiations, having commenced in May 1996, began in earnest in Nov. 1999. In March 2000 Yasser Arafat accepted Israel's plan for a further expansion of self-rule in the West Bank, involving the transfer of another 6·1% of the West Bank to the control of the Palestinian Authority. As a result, 39·8% of the West Bank is under full or partial Palestinian control. But violence escalated, and in Dec. 2001 Israel ended all direct contact with Yasser Arafat, besieging his compound and putting him under virtual house arrest. In March 2002 the UN Security Council endorsed a Palestinian state for the first time. Israeli incursions into Palestinian-controlled areas of the West Bank and the Gaza Strip, and suicide attacks by Palestinians, continued unabated in early 2002 with heavy loss of life. In March 2003 the Palestinian parliament approved the creation of the post of prime minister. Mahmoud Abbas was nominated the Palestinian Authority's first premier, resulting in Yasser Arafat losing many of his powers.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The 1997 census population of the Palestinian territory was 2,895,683; 2000 estimate 3,150,000.

The West Bank (preferred Palestinian term, Northern District) has an area of 5,651 sq. km; 1997 census population was 1,873,476. The projected population for 2000 was 2,012,000, including 180,000 Jewish settlers and 10,000 troops deployed there. 97% of the population in 1988 were Palestinian Arabs of whom some 85% were Muslims, 7·4% Jewish and 8% Christian. In 1995 there was a Palestinian diaspora of 3·3m. The birth rate in 1999 was estimated at 39·5 per 1,000 population and the death rate 4·6 per 1,000. In 1995 the infant mortality rate was 25·5 per 1,000 live births. The fertility rate in 1997 was 5·61 births per woman. In 1994 there were 77,604 private cars and 21,714 commercial vehicles and trucks registered. There were (1998–99) 447,369 pupils in basic stage education and 38,121 in secondary stage, plus 36,224 students in institutions of higher education. In 1998 there were 43 hospitals.

The Gaza Strip (preferred Palestinian term, Gaza District) has an area of 370 sq. km; 1997 census population was 1,022,207. The population doubled between 1975 and 1995. The UN gives a projected population for 2010 of 1·44m. Crude birth rate in 1999 was 44·73 per 1,000 population. The death rate was estimated at 4·39 per 1,000 population. The fertility rate in 1997 was 6·91 births per woman. Infant mortality, 1995, 30·2 per 1,000 live births. Agricultural production, 1998 estimates, in 1,000 tonnes: oranges, 105; tomatoes, 48; potatoes, 35; cucumbers and gherkins, 18; grapefruit and pomelos, 10. In 1998–99 there were 299,545 students in basic stage education, 27,687 in secondary stage and 30,058 students in higher education. In 1998 there were 11 hospitals.

The chief town is Gaza itself. In 1984, over 98% of the population were Arabic-speaking Muslims. In 1995 an estimated 94·2% of the population lived in urban areas. Citrus fruits, wheat and olives are grown, with farm land covering 193 sq. km (1980) and occupying most of the active workforce. In 1993 there were 20,434 private cars and 4,518 commercial vehicles and trucks registered. Gaza International Airport, at the southern edge of the Gaza Strip, opened in Nov. 1998. Telecommunications development has been rapid, the number of fixed line telephone subscribers more than trebling between 1997 and 2000. In March 2000 there were 230,000 subscribers. In 1998 life expectancy at birth was 71·8 years.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

In April 1996 the Palestinian Council removed from its Charter all clauses contrary to its recognition by Israel, including references to armed struggle as the only means of liberating Palestine, and the elimination of Zionism from Palestine. The President is directly elected and heads the executive organ, the Palestinian National Authority, one fifth of whose members he appoints, while four fifths are elected by the National Council. The latter comprises 88 members and is directly elected by the first-past-the-post system from 16 electoral districts. The Palestinian Authority was created by agreement of the PLO and Israel as an interim instrument of self-rule for Palestinians living on the West Bank and Gaza Strip. The failure of the PLO and Israel to strike a permanent status agreement has resulted in the Authority retaining its powers. It is entitled to establish ministries and subordinate bodies, as required to fulfil its obligations and responsibilities. It possesses legislative and executive powers within the functional areas transferred to it in the 1995 Interim Agreement. Its territorial jurisdiction is restricted to Areas A and B in the West Bank and approximately two-thirds of the Gaza Strip.

Following an Israeli-Palestinian agreement on customs duties and VAT in Aug. 1994 the Palestinians set up their own customs and immigration points into Gaza and Jericho. Israel collects customs dues on Palestinian imports through Israeli entry points and transfers these to the Palestinian treasury.

A special committee is working on drafting a new Palestinian constitution. In March 2003 parliament approved the creation of the position of prime minister. Yasser Arafat nominated Mahmoud Abbas, the PLO Secretary General, to be the first premier.

There is a Palestinian Council for Reconstruction and Development.

RECENT ELECTIONS

Elections for President and National Council were held on 20 Jan. 1996. The electorate was 1,013,200; turn-out was 84%. 672 candidates stood for the Council. Yasser Arafat was elected President against 1 opponent by 88·1% of votes cast, and was sworn in on 12 Feb. 1996. In the National Council elections, 55 seats went to the Liberation Movement of Palestine, 15 to independents, 7 to Independent Fatah, 4 to Independent Islamists, 3 to Independent Christians, 1 to Samaritans and 1 other, with 2 vacant.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

A part of the Roman Empire and the Holy Roman Empire that succeeded it, Italy was divided into several states including a number of city states such as Venice, Florence and Genoa. Much of the territory was under the rule of the Pope while France, Spain and Austria had possessions at various times. From 1815 a strong movement grew throughout the Italian states for risorgimento (unification) and for freedom from Austrian control. Victor Emmanuel II, King of Sardinia-Piedmont from 1849, his prime minister from 1852, Count Cavour, and Giuseppe Garibaldi, an Italian soldier, together achieved success for the movement. The first Italian parliament assembled in Feb. 1861, and on 17 March declared Victor Emmanuel King of Italy.

Fascism spread rapidly after 1918 and in 1922 Benito Mussolini, leader of the Fascist Party, was appointed prime minister. In 1924 he established himself as dictator with the title Duce. His internal policy, with a programme of public works, greater efficiency and better law and order, was successful. In 1929 the Lateran Treaties with the Papacy ended over a century of tension between Church and State. However, his aggressive foreign policy as evinced by the invasion of Ethiopia in 1935 and his alliance with Nazi Germany in 1936 was eventually to lead to his downfall. During the Second World War (1939–45) British forces captured much of Italy's colonial empire and in 1942 occupied Libya. The allies conquered Sicily and Mussolini was compelled to resign in July 1943. In 1945 he was captured and killed by Italian partisans. On 10 June 1946 Italy became a republic.

In the post war years the ruling Christian Democrat Party resisted the challenge of the Communists and pursued a strongly pro-West and European policy. But no single government was able to reform an ailing economy or face up to lawlessness and corruption. Changes of administration were frequent. From 1947 to the early 1990s, Italy had no fewer than 57 governments. In 1992, in the wake of Italy's humiliating exit from Europe's Exchange Rate Mechanism (ERM), the old political establishment was driven out of office. Several prominent politicians were accused of links to organized crime and some went to prison. A new era for Italian politics opened the way for a radical modernization of the country's economic and social structure.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Italy is bounded in the north by Switzerland and Austria, east by Slovenia and the Adriatic Sea, southeast by the Ionian Sea, south by the Mediterranean Sea, southwest by the Tyrrhenian Sea and Ligurian Sea and west by France.

The area is 301,338 sq. km. Populations at successive censuses were as follows:

10 Feb. 1901	33,778	15 Oct. 1961	50,624
10 June 1911	36,921	24 Oct. 1971	54,137

21 April 1936	42,399	21 Oct. 2001	56,996
4 Nov. 1951	47,516

Population estimate, 1 Jan. 2001, 57,844,017 (29,749,160 females). Density: 192 per sq. km.

The UN gives a projected population for 2010 of 56·39m.

In 1999, 66·9% of the population lived in urban areas.

The following table gives area and population of the Autonomous Regions (census 1991 and estimate 2000):

Rome: Built among seven hills, Rome is situated in the central area of Italy. Founded in 753 BC, according to legend Rome gets its name from the twins Romulus and Remus who were suckled by a she-wolf after being abandoned on the banks of the River Tiber. Known as the Eternal City, its wealth of ancient monuments and churches and its rich artistic heritage make it one of the most visited cities in Europe.

The official language is Italian, spoken by 94·1% of the population in 1991. There are 0·3m. German-speakers in Bolzano and 30,000 French-speakers in Valle d'Aosta.

In addition to Sicily and Sardinia, there are a number of other Italian islands, the largest being Elba (363 sq. km), and the most distant Lampedusa, which is 205 km from Sicily but only 113 km from Tunisia.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Vital statistics (and rates per 1,000 population), 2000: births, 538,999 (9·3); deaths, 559,956 (9·7); marriages, 280,488 (4·9); natural increase, –20,957 (–0·4); infant deaths (up to one year of age), 2,820 (6 per 1,000 live births in 1999). Expectation of life, 1999: females, 81·6 years; males, 75·2. In 2000, 24% of the population was over 60, the highest percentage of any country in the world.

Annual population growth rate, 1990–99, 0·1%; fertility rate, 1999, 1·2 births per woman (one of the lowest rates in the world). With only 8% of births being to unmarried mothers, Italy has one of the lowest rates of births out of wedlock in Europe.

In 2000 there were 3,093 suicides; 75·1% were men.

In Jan. 2000 there were 1,270,553 legal immigrants living in Italy, plus an estimated 250,000 illegal immigrants. In 1998, 56,707 people emigrated from Italy and there were 165,696 immigrants into the country. Italy received 33,000 asylum applications in 1999, equivalent to 0·06 per 1,000 inhabitants. New legislation was introduced in 2002 to tighten up immigration rules.

CLIMATE

The climate varies considerably with latitude. In the south, it is warm temperate, with little rain in the summer months, but the north is cool temperate with rainfall more evenly distributed over the year. Florence, Jan. 47·7°F (8·7°C), July 79·5°F (26·4°C). Annual rainfall 33" (842 mm). Milan, Jan. 38·7°F (3·7°C), July 73·4°F (23·0°C). Annual rainfall 38" (984 mm). Naples, Jan. 50·2°F (10·1°C), July 77·4°F (25·2°C). Annual rainfall 36" (935 mm). Palermo, Jan. 52·5°F (11·4°C), July 78·4°F (25·8°C). Annual rainfall 35" (897 mm). Rome, Jan. 53·4°F (11·9°C), July 76·3°F (24·6°C). Annual rainfall 31" (793 mm). Venice, Jan. 43·3°F (6·3°C), July 70·9°F (21·6°C). Annual rainfall 32" (830 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The Constitution dates from 1948. Italy is 'a democratic republic founded on work'. Parliament consists of the Chamber of Deputies and the Senate. The Chamber is elected for five years by universal and direct suffrage and consists of 630 deputies. The Senate is elected for five years on a regional basis by electors over the age of 25, each Region having at least seven senators. The total number of senators is 315. The Valle d'Aosta is represented by one senator only, the Molise by two. The President of the Republic can nominate 11 senators for life from eminent persons in the social, scientific, artistic and literary spheres. The President may become a senator for life. The President is elected in a joint session of Chamber and Senate, to which are added three delegates from each Regional Council (one from the Valle d'Aosta). A two-thirds majority is required for the election, but after a third indecisive scrutiny the absolute majority of votes is sufficient. The President must be 50 years or over; term of office, seven years. The Speaker of the Senate acts as the deputy President. The President can dissolve the chambers of parliament, except during the last six months of the presidential term. An attempt to create a new constitution, which had been under consideration for 18 months, collapsed in June 1998.

A Constitutional Court, consisting of 15 judges who are appointed, five each by the President, Parliament (in joint session) and the highest law and administrative courts, can decide on the constitutionality of laws and decrees, define the powers of the State and Regions, judge conflicts between the State and Regions and between the Regions, and try the President and Ministers.

The revival of the Fascist Party is forbidden. Direct male descendants of King Victor Emmanuel are excluded from all public offices and have no right to vote or to be elected; their estates are forfeit to the State. For 56 years they were also banned from Italian territory until the constitution was changed in 2002 to allow them to return from exile. Titles of nobility are no longer recognized, but those existing before 28 Oct. 1922 are retained as part of the name.

A referendum was held in June 1991 to decide whether the system of preferential voting by indicating four candidates by their listed number should be changed to a simpler system, less open to abuse, of indicating a single candidate by name. The electorate was 46m. Turn-out was 62·5% (there was a 50% quorum). 95·6% of votes cast were in favour of the change. As a result, an electoral reform of 1993 provides for the replacement of proportional representation by a system in which 475 seats in the Chamber of Deputies are elected by a first-past-the-post single-round vote and 155 seats by proportional representation in a separate single-round vote on the same day. There are 27 electoral regions. There is a 4% threshold for entry to the Chamber of Deputies.

At a further referendum in April 1993, turn-out was 77%. Voters favoured the eight reforms proposed, including a new system of election to the Senate and the abolition of some ministries. 75% of the Senate is now elected by a first-past-the-post system, the remainder by proportional representation; no party may present more than one candidate in each constituency. In July 1997 an all-party parliamentary commission on constitutional reform proposed a directly elected president with responsibility for defence and foreign policy, the devolving of powers to the regions, a reduction in the number of seats in the Senate and in the lower house and the creation of a third chamber to speak on behalf of the regions.

National Anthem. 'Fratelli d'Italia' ('Brothers of Italy'); words by G. Mameli, tune by M. Novaro, 1847.

RECENT ELECTIONS

Parliamentary elections were held on 13 May 2001. The turn-out was 81·2%. The House of Freedoms Alliance (comprised of Forza Italia, the National Alliance and the Northern League) won 368 seats in the Chamber of Deputies and 177 in the Senate, the Olive Tree Alliance (comprised of the Democrats of the Left, the Daisy coalition and the Sunflower coalition) 242 and 125, the Refounded Communists 11 and 3. Minor parties won nine seats in the Chamber of Deputies and ten in the Senate. Forza Italia—the leading party of the House of Freedoms Alliance—received the highest percentage of votes of any of the parties contesting the election, with 30%.

European Parliament. Italy has 87 representatives. At the June 1999 elections turn-out was 70·6%. Forza Italia gained 22 seats with 25·2% of votes cast (group in European Parliament: European People's Party); the Party of the Democrats of the Left (former Communists), 15 with 17·4% (Party of European Socialists); the National Alliance, 9 with 10·3% (Union for Europe); L. Bonina (Radicals), 7 with 8·5% (Non-attached); I. Demo (Prodi Party), 7 with 7·7% (European Liberal, Democrat and Reform Party); the Northern League, 4 with 4·5% (non-affiliated); the Italian People's Party (former Christian Democrats), 4 with 4·3% (European People's Party); the Reformed Communists, 4 with 4·3% (Confederal Group of the European United Left). In addition 10 parties gained either 1 or 2 seats.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

President: Carlo Azeglio Ciampi; b. 1920 (sworn in on 18 May 1999).

In March 2003 the government comprised (FI = Forza Italia; AN = National Alliance; LN = The Northern League; CCD CDU = Christian Democratic Centre and United Christian Democrats):

Prime Minister: Silvio Berlusconi; b. 1936 (FI; sworn in on 11 June 2001 having previously held office from 11 May 1994–17 Jan. 1995).

DEFENCE

Head of the armed forces is the Defence Chief of Staff. There is conscription for ten months, but the military draft is to be phased out by 2006. In Aug. 1998 the government voted to allow women into the armed forces.

In 2001 defence expenditure totalled US$20,966m. (US$365 per capita), representing 2·0% of GDP.

Army. Strength (2002) 128,600 (57,000 conscripts). Equipment includes 440 Leopard, 378 Centauro and 200 Ariete tanks. First line Army reserves number 11,900 with a further 500,000 personnel available for mobilization.

The paramilitary Carabinieri number 111,800. In addition there were 79,000 public security guards run by the Ministry of the Interior and 63,500 Finance Guards run by the Treasury.

Navy. The principal ships of the Navy are the light aircraft carrier Giuseppe Garibaldi and the helicopter-carrying cruiser Vittorio Veneto. The combatant forces also include 6 diesel submarines, 4 destroyers and 14 frigates. The Naval Air Arm, 2,500 strong, operates 18 combat aircraft and 79 armed helicopters. In addition there is a Special Forces commando of some 600 assault swimmers.

Main naval bases are at La Spezia, Brindisi, Taranto and Augusta. The personnel of the Navy in 2002 numbered 38,000 (5,000 conscripts), including the naval air arm and the marine battalion. There were 23,000 naval reservists.

Air Force. Control is exercised through two regional headquarters near Taranto and Milan.

Air Force strength in 2002 was about 50,800 (8,200 conscripts). There were 261 combat aircraft in operation in 2000 including Tornados and F-104 Starfighters. There were 30,300 Air Force reservists in 2002.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

Italy is a member of the UN, WTO, NATO, BIS, OECD, EU, Council of Europe, WEU, OSCE, CERN, CEI, Inter-American Development Bank, Asian Development Bank, IOM and the Antarctic Treaty. Italy is a signatory to the Schengen Accord of June 1990 which abolishes border controls between Italy, Austria, Belgium, Denmark, Finland, France, Germany, Greece, Iceland, Luxembourg, the Netherlands, Norway, Portugal, Spain and Sweden.

Italy has played an important role in bringing Iran back into the international community, with President Mohammad Khatami visiting Rome in March 1999, in the process becoming the first Iranian leader to visit the west since the 1979 revolution. Foreign minister Lamberto Dini was also quick to re-establish relations with Col. Qadhafi of Libya following the transfer of the Lockerbie suspects for trial in the Netherlands.

ECONOMY

Services account for 68·9% of GDP, industry 28·4% and agriculture 2·8% in 2000.

Overview. The centre-left governments led by Romano Prodi, Massimo D'Alema and Giuliano Amato lowered national debt from 120% of GDP to 110% and the budget deficit from 6·5% of GDP in 1996 to 1·5% in 2000. However, there are still uncertainties about the state of public finances and progress is needed to meet targets agreed under the Stability and Growth Pact. In 2000 Italy's largest state holding company, Istituto per Ricostruzione Industriale (IRI), was liquidated. Major privatizations include the 26,000bn. lire flotation of Telecom Italia in 1997, ENI (energy company) and Banca di Roma.

Currency. On 1 Jan. 1999 the euro (EUR) became the legal currency in Italy; irrevocable conversion rate 1,936·27 lire to 1 euro. The euro, which consists of 100 cents, has been in circulation since 1 Jan. 2002. There are seven euro notes in different colours and sizes denominated in 500, 200, 100, 50, 20, 10 and 5 euros, and eight coins denominated in 2 and 1 euros, then 50, 20, 10, 5, 2 and 1 cents. On the introduction of the euro there was a 'dual circulation' period before the lira ceased to be legal tender on 28 Feb. 2002. Italy is the only country to use euri as the plural of euro—all the other countries have decided to use euros as the plural. Euro banknotes in circulation on 1 Jan. 2002 had a total value of €97·4bn.

Inflation was 1·7% in 1999, 2·6% in 2000 and 2·7% in 2001. In June 2002 gold reserves were 78·83m. troy oz (66·67m. troy oz in 1997) and foreign exchange reserves US$20,533m. (US$45,307m. in Dec. 1999). Total money supply in June 2002 was €54,958m.

Budget. Total revenue and expenditure for calendar years, in 1,000bn. lire:

	Revenue	Expenditure		Revenue	Expenditure
1994	664,920	818,824	1997	879,382	941,079
1995	736,061	860,181	1998	840,722	905,614
1996	801,855	927,504	1999	867,788	899,709

Budgets for 1998 (and 1997) in 1,000,000m. lire: revenue, 581,188 (591,161) of which tax 546,188 (554,194); expenditure, 673,182 (690,737) of which capital expenditure 68,598 (67,070) and interest payments 181,121 (193,002).

The 1998 budget provided for an increase in value-added tax. Some reforms due to take place in 1998 were meant to reallocate the existing tax burden in a more business-friendly way. The rate of corporation tax was to come down from 53·2% to 37%. Other measures include reducing social security contributions, and a new two-tier income tax, brought in to encourage entrepreneurs to reinvest in profits and issue equity. Accompanying the tax reform was the devolution of substantial taxing powers from the central government to the regions. The budget deficit in both 1997 and 1998 was 2·7% of GDP.

The current account balance in 1998 was US$20·4bn.

VAT is 20% (reduced rate, 10%).

The public debt at 31 Dec. 2000 totalled 2,221,000bn. of lire. Between 1992 and 2000 the public deficit came down from more than 10% to 1%, or possibly less, of gross domestic product. Interest rates have also declined significantly.

Performance. Total GDP was US$1,091bn. in 2001. There was real GDP growth of 2·9% in 2000, followed by 1·8% in 2001.

Banking and Finance. The bank of issue is the Bank of Italy (founded 1893). It is owned by public-sector banks. Its Governor (Antonio Fazio) is selected without fixed term by the 13 directors of the Bank's non-executive board. In 1991 it received increased responsibility for the supervision of banking and stock exchange affairs, and in 1993 greater independence from the government. Its gold reserve amounted to 40,929bn. lire in Dec. 1998; the foreign credit reserves of the Exchange Bureau (Ufficio Italiano Cambi) amounted to 88,611bn. lire.

The number of banks has gradually been declining in recent years, from 1,176 in 1990 to 862 in 2000. Of the 921 banks in 1998, 562 were co-operative banks. Italy's largest bank is Banca Intesa, following its merger with Banca Commerciale Italiana in 1999. In June 2000 it had assets of 643,000bn. lire. Other major banks are San Paolo-IMI and UniCredito Italiano.

The 'Amato' law of July 1990 gave public sector banks the right to become joint stock companies and permitted the placing of up to 49% of their equity with private shareholders.

On 31 Dec. 2000 the post office savings banks had deposits of 270,011bn. lire. In the same year credit institutions had deposits of 1,005,484bn. lire.

Legislation reforming stock markets came into effect in Dec. 1990. In 1996 local stock exchanges, relics of pre-unification Italy, were closed, and stock exchange activities concentrated in Milan.

Weights and Measures. The metric system is in use. 1 quintal = 100 kg.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Environment. According to the World Bank Atlas Italy's carbon dioxide emissions in 1998 were the equivalent of 7·2 tonnes per capita.

Electricity. Installed capacity was 64m. kW in 1997 and the total power generated in 1999 was 252·7bn. kWh (20% hydro-electric). Consumption in 1999 was 267,284m. kWh, of which 60,717m. kWh was for domestic use. Consumption per capita was 4,407 kWh in 1997. Italy has four nuclear reactors in permanent shutdown, the last having closed in 1990.

Oil and Gas. Oil production, 2000, 4,499,420 tonnes. Proven oil reserves in 1999 were 0·6bn. bbls. In 2000 natural gas production was 16·4bn. cu. metres with proven reserves of 230bn. cu. metres.

Minerals. Fuel and mineral resources fail to meet needs. Only sulphur and mercury yield a substantial surplus for exports.

Production of metals and minerals (in tonnes) was as follows:

	1996	1997	1998	1999	2000
Sulphur	3,528,120	3,594,549	3,413,522	3,338,162	3,339,761
Feldspar	2,287,086	2,118,117	2,503,541	2,493,846	2,851,289
Bentonite	471,535	511,760	580,209	562,674	636,589
Lead	20,260	17,630	10,102	9,734	5,961
Zinc	20,137	15,416	5,242	—	—

Agriculture. In 2000, 1,120,000 persons were employed in agriculture, of whom 451,000 were dependent (148,000 female); independently employed were 669,000 (203,000 female). In 1999 there were 18,645 sq. km of agricultural and forest lands, distributed as follows (in 1,000 ha): forage and pasture, 3,727; woods, 3,648; cereals, 4,166; olive trees, 1,156; vines, 837; leguminous plants, 68.

At the 1991 census agricultural holdings numbered 3,023,344 and covered 22,702,356 ha. 2,893,145 owners (95·7%) farmed directly 15,961,093 ha (70·3%); 118,020 owners (3·9%) worked with hired labour on 6,603,522 ha (29·1%); 95,045 share-croppers (3·1%) tilled 1,208,337 ha (5·3%); the remaining 12,179 holdings (0·4%) of 137,740 ha (0·6%) were operated in other ways. By 1999 agricultural and forest lands covered 20,163,776 ha, of which 14,996,531 sq. km was in active agricultural use. There were 2,269,574 farms in 1999. Agriculture accounted for 7·1% of exports and 15·3% of imports in 1998. Figures compiled by the Soil Association, a British organization, show that in 1999 Italy set aside 900,000 ha (5·3% of its agricultural land) for the growth of organic crops.

In 1998, 1,475,000 tractors were in use.

The production of the principal crops (in 1,000 tonnes) in 2000: sugarbeets, 12,788; maize, 10,128; grapes, 8,870; tomatoes, 7,538; wheat, 7,465; olives, 2,819; apples, 2,232; potatoes, 2,050; oranges, 1,700; peaches and nectarines, 1,655; barley, 1,262; rice, 1,186; soybeans, 904; pears, 890; lemons, 615. Italy's annual grape crop is the highest in the world.

Wine production in 2000 totalled 5,390,000 tonnes. Italy and France are by far the largest wine producers in the world. Italy was the leading producer in 1998, but France produced more in 1999. Wine consumption in Italy has declined dramatically in recent times, from more than 110 litres per person in 1966 to 56·6 litres per person in 1999.

Livestock, 2000: cattle, 7,184,000; sheep, 10,970,000; pigs, 8,403,000; goats, 1,364,000; horses, 280,000; buffaloes, 173,000; chickens, 100m.; turkeys, 23m. Livestock products, 2000 (in 1,000 tonnes): cow milk, 11,741; sheep milk, 850; buffalo milk, 158; goat milk, 140; pork, bacon and ham, 1,475; beef and veal, 1,160; poultry meat, 1,140; cheese, 1,011; eggs, 768. Italy is the second largest producer of sheep milk, after China.

Forestry. In 1999 forests covered 6·85m. ha or 22·5% of the total land area. Timber production was 9·91m. cu. metres in 1999.

Fisheries. The fishing fleet comprised, in 1994, 15,798 motor boats of 245,637 gross tonnes. The catch in 1999 was 294,155 tonnes, of which more than 98% were from marine waters.

INDUSTRY

The leading companies by market capitalization in Italy, excluding banking and finance, in Jan. 2002 were: Telecom Italia SpA (€65bn.); Ente Nazionale Idrocarburi (ENI), an integrated oil company (€60bn.); and Telecom Italia Mobile, TIM SpA (€44bn.).

The main branches of industry are (% of industrial value added at factor cost in 1998): metal products except machines and means of transport (13·2%), food, beverages and tobacco (12·0%), machines and mechanical apparatus (10·5%), textiles and clothing (9·3%), electric plants and equipment (7·8%), chemicals and synthetic fibres (7·4%), means of transport (6·9%), energy distribution (5·6%), paper and paper products, printing and publishing (5·6%), mineral and non-metallic mineral products (4·4%), rubber and plastic products (3·7%), leather products (3·2%), oil refining and coke manufacture (2·5%), timber and wooden furniture (2·2%).

Production, 2000: motor vehicles, 1,739,000 units; artificial and synthetic fibres (including staple fibre and waste), 658,436 tonnes; cement, 38,302,256 tonnes; polyethylene resins, 1,230,059 tonnes; crude steel, 26,623,000 tonnes (1999).

Labour. In 2000 the workforce was 23,575,000 (9,080,000 females) of whom 21,080,000 were employed. 2,495,000 (1,316,000 females) were unemployed and looking for work. In Oct. 2002 the unemployment rate was 8·9%, its lowest level for eight years. In 2000, 62·6% of the workforce were in services, 32·1% in industry and 5·3% in agriculture. There are strong indications of labour markets having become less rigid, especially in the north. In the north unemployment was 4·7%; in the centre 8·3%; in the south it was 21%. In 1996 the difference in the unemployment rates in the north and in the south was 12%, compared to a difference of just 2% in the 1960s. Over 60% of Italy's jobless have been out of work for more than a year. Pensionable retirement age was 60 for men and 55 for women in 1991, but this is being progressively raised to 65 for both sexes. In 1998 the rate of employment among people aged 55–64 was just 27%.

In 1997 parliament approved the so-called 'Treu Package', which involves a large number of institutional changes regarding working hours and apprenticeships, mainly for young people from the south, and the introduction of employment agencies. As a consequence, the share of temporary workers over total employees had grown from 6·2% in 1993 to 8·6% in 1998.

Trade Unions. There are three main groups: the Confederazione Generale Italiana del Lavoro (CGIL; formerly Communist-dominated), the Confederazione Italiana Sindacati Lavoratori (CISL; Catholic), and the Unione Italiana del Lavoro (UIL). Membership: CGIL (1996), 5·2m. (2·9m. retired); CISL (1999), 4·0m. (2·0m. retired); UIL (1996), 1·6m. (0·4m. retired). In referendums held in June 1995 the electorate voted to remove some restrictions on trade union representation, end government involvement in public sector trade unions and end the automatic deduction of trade union dues from wage packets.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Foreign debt in Dec. 1996 was 68,013bn. lire.

Imports and Exports. The territory covered by foreign trade statistics includes Italy and the Municipality of Livigno; Campione; San Marino and the Vatican City are excluded.

The following table shows the value of Italy's foreign trade (in 1,000m. lire):

	1996	1997	1998	1999	2000
Imports	321,286	357,787	378,783	400,837	495,499
Exports	388,885	409,182	426,183	427,994	498,201

Percentage of trade with EU countries in 1999: imports, 60·6%; exports, 57·2%. Principal import suppliers, 1999 (% of total trade): Germany, 19·2%; France, 12·6%; UK, 6·1%; USA, 5·0%. Principal export markets: Germany, 16·7%; France, 13·0%; USA, 9·5%; UK, 7·1%.

Imports/exports by category, 2000 (% volume):

	Imports	Exports
Chemicals and artificial fibres	12·9	9·3
Electric and precision instruments	14·8	10·1

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. Roads totalled 654,676 km in 1997, of which 6,957 km were motorway, 46,043 km were highways and main roads, 113,924 km were secondary roads and 487,752 km other roads. In 2000 there were 40,743,777 motor vehicles, made up of: passenger cars, 32,583,815 (563 per 1,000 inhabitants); buses and coaches, 87,956; vans and trucks, 3,377,573. There were 6,676 fatalities in traffic accidents in 1996; 6,712 in 1997; 6,314 in 1998; 6,633 in 1999; 6,410 in 2000.

Rail. Total length of railways (1995), 19,485 km. The length of state-run railway (Ferrovie dello Stato) was 15,955 km (10,202 km electrified). In 1999 the state railways carried 431,503,000 passengers and 82,193,000 tonnes of freight. There are metros in Milan (68 km) and Rome (33·5 km), and tram/light rail networks in Genoa (2·3 km), Milan (240 km), Naples (23 km), Trieste and Turin (119 km).

Civil Aviation. There are major international airports at Bologna (G. Marconi), Genoa (Cristoforo Colombo), Milan (Linate and Malpensa), Naples (Capodichino), Pisa (Galileo Galilei), Rome (Leonardo da Vinci/Fiumicino), Turin (Caselle) and Venice (Marco Polo). A number of other airports have a small selection of international flights. The national carrier, Alitalia, is 89·3% owned by the state. In 1997 it flew 297·2m. km and carried 24,551,600 passengers. There are a number of other Italian airlines, most notably Meridiana, which flew 24·4m. km and carried 2,935,400 passengers in 1998. The busiest airport for passenger traffic is Rome (Fiumicino), which in 2000 handled 25,879,000 passengers (13,440,000 on international flights) and 201,400 tonnes of freight. Milan Malpensa was the second busiest for passengers, handling 20,532,000 (15,090,000 on international flights), but the busiest for freight, with 300,200 tonnes. Linate, which handled 5,986,000 passengers in 2000 (4,149,000 on domestic flights), had been the principal Milan airport and for many years Italy's second busiest for passenger traffic, but in 1998 a new terminal was opened at Malpensa with many foreign operators subsequently using it instead of Linate.

Shipping. The mercantile marine in 1998 totalled 6·82m. GRT, including oil tankers 1,547,000 GRT. In 1995, 234,115,000 tonnes of cargo were unloaded, and 48,254,000 were loaded. 2,039,697 passengers embarked and 2,185,645 departed in 1995.

Telecommunications. There were 27,153,000 main telephone lines in 2000, or 473·9 per 1,000 persons. In May 1999 Olivetti bought a controlling stake in the telephone operator Telecom Italia, and in July 2001 Pirelli, backed by the Benetton clothing empire, in turn paid 7bn. euros (US$6·1bn.) to take over control of Telecom Italia. In Nov. 2001 mobile phone subscribers numbered 47·09m. TIM (Telecom Italia Mobile) had 21·24m. subscribers, making it Europe's third largest mobile phone operator. Italy's second largest mobile phone operator is Vodafone Omnitel, with 16·3m. subscribers in Nov. 2001. There were 10·3m. PCs in use (179·8 per 1,000 persons) in 2000 and 1·8m. fax machines in 1997. There were still 23,000 telex subscribers in 1995, although telex usage has declined considerably in recent years. There were 19·25m. Internet users in Aug. 2001.

Postal Services. In 1995 there were 14,142 post offices, or one for every 4,050 persons.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. Italy has one court of cassation, in Rome, and is divided for the administration of justice into 29 appeal court districts, subdivided into 164 tribunal circondari (districts). There are also 93 first degree assize courts and 29 assize courts of appeal. For civil business, besides the magistracy above mentioned, Giudici di pace have jurisdiction in petty plaints.

3,384,156 crimes were reported in 1999; 524,551 persons were indicted. On 31 Dec. 2000 there were 54,039 persons in prison (2,316 females). The death penalty was abolished for all crimes in 1994.

Religion. The treaty between the Holy See and Italy of 11 Feb. 1929, confirmed by article 7 of the Constitution of the republic, lays down that the Catholic Apostolic Roman Religion is the only religion of the State. Other creeds are permitted, provided they do not profess principles, or follow rites, contrary to public order or moral behaviour.

The appointment of archbishops and of bishops is made by the Holy See; but the Holy See submits to the Italian government the name of the person to be appointed in order to obtain an assurance that the latter will not raise objections of a political nature. In Feb. 2002 there were 37 Cardinals.

Catholic religious teaching is given in elementary and intermediate schools. Marriages celebrated before a Catholic priest are automatically transferred to the civil register. Marriages celebrated by clergy of other denominations must be made valid before a registrar.

There were 47,000,000 Roman Catholics in 1997, 700,000 Muslims and 9,800,000 other (mostly non-religious and atheist).

Education. Five years of primary and three years of secondary education are compulsory from the age of six. In 1999–2000 there were 25,208 pre-school institutions with 1,582,527 pupils (state and non-state schools); 19,068 primary schools with 2,821,085 pupils (state and non-state schools); 8,496 compulsory secondary schools (scuole medie) with 1,774,720 pupils (state and non-state schools); and 7,166 higher secondary schools with 2,552,148 pupils (state and non-state schools). Numbers of teachers, 1999–2000: pre-primary institutions, 125,745; primary schools, 283,512; compulsory secondary schools, 205,921; higher secondary schools, 296,664.

Higher secondary education is subdivided into classical (ginnasio and classical liceo), scientific (scientific liceo), language lyceum, professional institutes and technical education: agricultural, industrial, commercial, technical, nautical institutes, institutes for surveyors, institutes for girls (five-year course) and teacher-training institutes (four-year course).

In 1995–96 there were 47 universities, 2 universities of Italian studies for foreigners and 3 specialized universities (commerce; education; Roman Catholic), 3 polytechnical university institutes and 7 other specialized university institutes (architecture; bio-medicine; modern languages; naval studies; oriental studies; social studies; teacher training). In 1999–2000 there were 1,570,230 university students and 62,027 academic staff.

Adult literacy rate, 1999, 98·4% (male 98·8%; female 98·0%).

In 1998–99 total expenditure on education came to 5·0% of GNP.

Health. The provision of health services is a regional responsibility, but they are funded by central government. Medical consultations are free, but a portion of prescription costs are payable. In 1998 there were 846 public hospitals with 247,041 beds and 643 private hospitals with 68,807 beds. In 1998 there were 98,828 doctors in public hospitals and 257,993 auxiliary medical personnel. A survey published by the World Health Organization in June 2000 to measure health systems in all of the sovereign countries and find which country has the best overall health care ranked Italy in second place, behind France.

Italy has the second highest AIDS rate in the EU, after Spain, with 92·6 cases per 100,000 population.

Welfare. Social expenditure is made up of transfers which the central public departments, local departments and social security departments make to families. Payment is principally for pensions, family allowances and health services. Expenditure on subsidies, public assistance to various classes of people and people injured by political events or national disasters are also included.

In 2000 Italians received a state pension at 56 or after 35 years of work, whichever comes first. However, this is gradually being scaled up, to 62 years of age or 37 years in work by 2006. Public pensions are indexed to prices; 21,628,910 pensions were paid in 2000 (18,425,350 private sector, 3,203,580 public sector). Current social security expenditure in 1999 was 359,683,000m. lire, of which 338,499,000m. lire were paid out in benefits. Social contributions totalled 264,359,000m. lire. In 1997 pension expenditure, which was 15% of GDP, was one of the highest in Europe.

CULTURE

Genoa, along with Lille in France, will be one of the European Capitals of Culture for 2004. The title attracts large European Union grants.

Broadcasting. Broadcasting is regulated by the Public Radio-Television Administration Council.

Questions have been raised over the impartiality of state-owned Radiotelevisione Italiana (RAI) but all attempts at privatization have been rejected. RAI, the public television company, broadcasts three public channels, RAI 1, RAI 2 and RAI 3. Mediaset, a private company controlled by Fininvest, produces three commercial channels: Canale 5, Italia 1 and Rete 4. RAI 1 has the highest viewing figures, followed by Canale 5, RAI 2 and Italia 1. There are 15 national and about 820 local private TV networks. There were 50·5m. radio receivers and 30·3m. TV sets (colour by PAL) in 1997. In 2000, 16,018,423 television licences were bought.

Cinema. In 1998 there were 4,509 screens and 115,243,003 admissions. In 1998 gross box office receipts came to 1,114bn. lire and 95 full-length films were made.

Press. There were (1998) 126 dailies and 543 weeklies. The combined annual circulation of the dailies (including unsold copies) is 2,206,249,000, and of the weeklies 821,064,000. Several of the papers are owned or supported by political parties. The church and various economic groups exert strong right of centre influence on editorial opinion. Most newspapers are regional but La Repubblica, Corriere della Sera, La Stampa and Il Giorno are the most important of those papers that are nationally circulated. In 1999 a total of 35,685 book titles were published in 267m. copies.

Tourism. In 1999, 36,097,000 foreigners visited Italy bringing in receipts of US$28·36bn.

Festivals. One of the most traditional festivals in Italy is the Carnival di Ivrea which lasts for a week in late Feb. or early March. Among the famous arts festivals is the Venice Film Festival in Sept. Venice also plays host, in the ten days before Ash Wednesday, to a large carnival. Major music festivals are the Maggio Musicale Fiorentino in Florence (May–June), the Ravenna Festival (June–July), the Spoleto Festival (June–July), the Rossini Opera Festival at Pesaro (Aug.) and the Verona Summer Opera Festival (July–Sept.).

Libraries. In 1997 there were 2,155 public libraries, 4 National libraries and 1,924 Higher Education libraries; they held a combined 93,629,000 volumes. There were 274,425,000 visits to the public libraries in 1997.

Museums and Galleries. In 2000 there were 30,175,000 visitors to museums, up from 27,296,000 in 1999.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Jamaica was discovered by Columbus in 1494 and was occupied by the Spaniards from 1509 until 1655 when the island was captured by the English. In 1661 a representative constitution was established consisting of a governor, privy council, legislative council and legislative assembly. The slavery introduced by the Spanish was augmented as sugar production increased in value and extent in the 18th century. The plantation economy collapsed with the abolition of the slave trade in the late 1830s. The 1866 Crown Colony government was introduced with a legislative council. In 1884 a partially elective legislative council was instituted. Women were enfranchised in 1919. By the late 1930s, demands for self-government increased and the constitution of Nov. 1944 stated that the governor was to be assisted by a freely-elected house of representatives of 32 members, a legislative council (the upper house) of 15 members, and an executive council. In 1958 Jamaica joined with Trinidad, Barbados, the Leeward Islands and the Windward Islands to create the West Indies Federation; but Jamaica withdrew in 1961. In 1959 internal self-government was achieved and in 1962 Jamaica became an independent state within the British Commonwealth.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Jamaica is an island which lies in the Caribbean Sea about 150 km south of Cuba. The area is 4,411 sq. miles (11,425 sq. km). The population at the census of 7 April 1991 was 2,374,193. Estimated population in 1995 was 2,500,025, distributed on the basis of the 13 parishes of the island as follows: Kingston and St Andrew, 683,700; St Thomas, 88,600; Portland, 78,300; St Mary, 111,200; St Ann, 155,800; Trelawny, 72,100; St James, 167,100; Hanover, 67,600; Westmoreland, 133,800; St Elizabeth, 148,200; Manchester, 173,500; St Catherine, 398,600; Clarendon, 221,500. 1995 density; 219 per sq. km.

The UN gives a projected population for 2010 of 2·82m.

Chief towns: Kingston, 655,000 (in 1999), metropolitan area; (1995 figures) Spanish Town, 110,400; Portmore, 93,800; Montego Bay, 82,000; May Pen, 45,900; Mandeville, 39,900.

In 1999, 55·6% of the population were urban. The population is about 75% of African ethnic origin.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Vital statistics (1999): births, 56,911 (22·0 per 1,000 population); deaths, 17,353 (6·7); marriages, 26,671 (10·3); divorces (1998), 1,420 (0·6). There were 17,669 emigrants in 1995, mainly to the USA. Expectation of life at birth, 1999, 73·1 years for males and 77·1 years for females. Annual population growth rate, 1990–99, 0·9%; infant mortality, 1999, 10 per 1,000 live births; fertility rate, 1999, 2·4 births per woman.

CLIMATE

A tropical climate but with considerable variation. High temperatures on the coast are usually mitigated by sea breezes, while upland areas enjoy cooler and less humid conditions. Rainfall is plentiful over most of Jamaica, being heaviest in May and from Aug. to Nov. The island lies in the hurricane zone. Kingston, Jan. 76°F (24·4°C), July 81°F (27·2°C). Annual rainfall 32" (800 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

Under the Constitution of Aug. 1962 the Crown is represented by a Governor-General appointed by the Crown on the advice of the Prime Minister. The Governor-General is assisted by a Privy Council of six appointed members. The Legislature comprises the House of Representatives and the Senate. The Senate consists of 21 senators appointed by the Governor-General, 13 on the advice of the Prime Minister, 8 on the advice of the Leader of the Opposition. The House of Representatives (60 members) is elected by universal adult suffrage for a period not exceeding five years. Electors and elected must be Jamaican or Commonwealth citizens resident in Jamaica for at least 12 months before registration. It is likely that Jamaica will become a republic in the early part of the 21st century, with Queen Elizabeth II being replaced as head of state by a ceremonial president.

National Anthem. 'Eternal Father, bless our land'; words by H. Sherlock, tune by R. Lightbourne.

RECENT ELECTIONS

In parliamentary elections held on 16 Oct. 2002 Prime Minister Percival J. Patterson's People's National Party (PNP) won a fourth consecutive term with 34 seats (down from 50 in 1997) and 52·2% of votes cast, while the Jamaica Labour Party (JLP) took 26 (up from 10 in 1997), with 47·2% of the vote. Turn-out was 56·3%.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. In 1996 the island had 19,000 km of roads (13,400 km surfaced). In 1996 there were 104,000 passenger cars and 22,000 lorries and vans. There were 7,379 traffic accidents in 1995 with 367 fatalities.

Civil Aviation. International airlines operate through the Norman Manley and Sangster airports at Palisadoes and Montego Bay. In 2000 Sangster International was the busiest for passenger traffic, handling 2,739,000 passengers and 6,400 tonnes of freight. Norman Manley airport is busier for freight, handling 20,680 tonnes of freight but only 1,415,862 passengers. Air Jamaica, originally set up in conjunction with BOAC and BWIA in 1966, became a new company, Air Jamaica (1968) Ltd. In 1969 it began operations as Jamaica's national airline. In 1999 scheduled airline traffic of Jamaica-based carriers flew 35·1m. km and carried 1,670,000 passengers.

Shipping. In 1998 the merchant marine totalled 4,000 GRT, including oil tankers 2,000 GRT. In 1995 there were 3,275 visits to all ports; 13·9m. tonnes of cargo were handled. Kingston had 2,120 visits and handled 4·4m. tonnes. In 1997 vessels totalling 12,815,000 NRT entered ports and vessels totalling 6,457,000 NRT cleared.

Telecommunications. In 2000 there were 511,700 main telephone lines (198·6 per 1,000 population). Mobile phone subscribers numbered 144,400 in 2000 and there were 120,000 PCs in use (46·6 for every 1,000 persons). In 1995 there were 600 fax machines and in Dec. 1999 there were 60,000 Internet users.

Postal Services. In 1995 there were 316 post offices and 477 postal agencies.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. The Judicature comprises a Supreme Court, a court of appeal, resident magistrates' courts, petty sessional courts, coroners' courts, a traffic court and a family court which was instituted in 1975. The Chief Justice is head of the judiciary. Jamaica was one of ten countries to sign an agreement in Feb. 2001 establishing a Caribbean Court of Justice to replace the British Privy Council as the highest civil and criminal court. The Court of Justice is expected to sit for the first time in the second half of 2003.

In 1995, 54,595 crimes were reported, of which 33,889 were cleared up. The daily average prison population, 1995, was 3,289. In 2001 there were 1,138 murders. The rate of 43·6 per 100,000 persons is more than seven times that of the USA.

The population in penal institutions in Jan. 1998 was 3,629 (145 per 100,000 of national population).

Police. The Constabulary Force in 1995 stood at approximately 5,861 officers, sub-officers and constables (men and women).

Religion. Freedom of worship is guaranteed under the Constitution. The main Christian denominations are Anglican, Baptist, Roman Catholic, Methodist, Church of God, United Church of Jamaica and Grand Cayman (Presbyterian-Congregational-Disciples of Christ), Moravian, Seventh-Day Adventist, Pentecostal, Salvation Army and Quaker. Pocomania is a mixture of Christianity and African survivals. Non-Christians include Hindus, Jews, Muslims, Bahai followers and Rastafarians.

Education. Adult literacy was 86·4% in 1999 (90·3% among females but only 82·4% among males).

Education is free in government-operated schools. Schools and colleges in 1994–95 (government-operated and grant-aided): basic, 1,694; infant, 29; primary, 792; primary with infant department, 83; all-age, 430; primary and junior high, 20; new secondary, 47; secondary high, 56; comprehensive high, 23; technical high, 12; agricultural/vocational, 6; special, 11; (independent): kindergarten/preparatory, 126; secondary high with preparatory department, 28; high/vocational, 5; business education, 29; (tertiary): teacher-training, 13.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The present imperial family are the direct descendants of the house of Yamato which united the nation in about AD 200. From 1186 until 1867 successive families of the military Shoguns exercised temporal power. For centuries Japan followed a policy of national isolation. The 16th century marked the beginning of foreign trade but in the 17th century all exchange with Europeans and all trade, except with the Dutch, was proscribed. Not until 1859 was the country opened to foreign trade and residence. In 1867 the Emperor Meiji recovered the imperial power after the abdication on 14 Oct. 1867 of the fifteenth and last Tokugawa Shogun Keiko. In 1871 the feudal system (Hôken Seido) was abolished and in the early 1890s constitutional government was introduced by the Emperor. Japan's victory over Russia in the war of 1904 prevented Russian expansion into Korea and consolidated Japan's position as the strongest military power in Asia. Japan used the pretext of the Anglo-Japanese alliance to attack Chinese territory during the First World War. Bad feelings over the terms of the subsequent peace treaty led to continuing hostility between the two countries.

Economic distress, population growth (from 30m. in 1868 to 65m. in 1930) and a sense of dissatisfaction with the 'unjapanese' system of constitutional government led to the emergence between the wars of extremist nationalist and militarist movements. Plots among the young army officers, a revolt in Manchuria and the assassination of two prime ministers highlighted the weaknesses of central government. In 1936 a military revolt in Tokyo gave the premiership to Konoe Fumimaro, a popular but ineffective figure, who failed to prevent further militarization of the country. In 1938 a national mobilization law was passed and in 1940 all political parties merged into the Imperial Rule Assistance Association. On 27 Sept. 1940 Germany, Italy and Japan signed a ten-year pact to assure their mutual co-operation in the establishment of a 'new world order', with Japanese leadership recognized in Asia. In 1940 Japan invaded North Indochina and on 7 Dec. 1941 attacked the United States (principally at Pearl Harbour) and British bases in the Pacific, and then declared war on these two countries. Japanese forces eventually surrendered in Aug. 1945 after the dropping of atomic bombs on Hiroshima and Nagasaki. The country was placed under US military occupation and in a new constitution in 1947 the Japanese people renounced the war and pledged themselves to uphold democracy and peace. The Emperor became a constitutional monarch instead of a divine ruler.

At San Francisco on 8 Sept. 1951 a Treaty of Peace was signed by Japan and representatives of 48 countries. A security treaty with the USA provided for the stationing of American troops in Japan until the latter was able to undertake its own defence. The peace treaty came into force on 28 April 1952, when Japan regained her sovereignty. Confidence in what had become a world-beating economy fell drastically after 1997 causing the government to cut taxes, provide financial support for small companies and begin the reform of the heavily indebted banking system.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Japan consists of four major islands, Honshu, Hokkaido, Kyushu and Shikoku, and many small islands, with an area of 377,802 sq. km. Census population (1 Oct. 2000) 126,925,843 (males 62,110,764, females 64,815,079); density, 336 per sq. km.

The UN gives a projected population for 2010 of 128·2m.

[1]Both forms are valid, and derive from different pronunciations of a Chinese character.

In 1999, 78·6% of the population lived in urban areas. Foreigners registered on 31 Dec. 2001 were 1,778,642 of whom 632,405 were Koreans, 381,225 were Chinese, 265,962 were Brazilians, 156,667 were Filipinos, 50,052 were Peruvians, 46,244 were Americans, 31,685 were Thais, 20,831 were Indonesians, 19,140 were Vietnamese, 17,527 were British, 11,719 were Indians, 11,032 were Canadians, 10,550 were Australians, 9,150 were Malaysians and 1,941 were stateless persons. In 2001 Japan accepted 26 asylum seekers.

Japanese overseas, Oct. 2001, 833,744; of these 312,936 lived in the USA, 73,492 in Brazil, 53,357 in China (24,356 in Hong Kong), 51,896 in the UK, 41,309 in Australia, 34,446 in Canada, 26,402 in Germany, 23,174 in Singapore, 22,731 in Thailand and 21,785 in France.

The official language is Japanese.

A law of May 1997 ‘on the promotion of Ainu culture’ marked the first official recognition of the existence of an ethnic minority in Japan.

The areas, populations and chief cities of the principal islands (and regions) are:

The Tokyo conurbation, with a population in 1999 of 26·36m., is the largest in the world, having overtaken New York around 1970. It is projected to relinquish its status to Mumbai (Bombay) in around 2015.

Tokyo: Situated in Tokyo Bay in east central Honshu on the Pacific coast, Tokyo is the largest city in Japan and its capital. It was founded in the 12th century as Edo and its name was changed to Tokyo in 1868. It is the administrative, financial and cultural centre of Japan. Tokyo State covers an area of 2,166 sq. km. The Tokyo Tower, offering views of the city, was modelled on the Eiffel Tower in Paris and was completed in 1958.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Statistics (in 1,000) for calendar years:

	1995	1996	1997	1998	1999	2000	2001
Births	1,221	1,203	1,209	1,215	1,197	1,194	1,185
Deaths	924	896	921	933	985	968	966

Crude birth rate of Japanese nationals in present area, 2000, was 9·5 per 1,000 population (1947: 34·3); crude death rate, 7·7; marriage rate per 1,000 persons, 6·4 (2000); divorce rate per 1,000 persons (2000), 2·1. In 2000 the most popular age for marrying was 30·4 for males and 28·2 for females. The infant mortality rate per 1,000 live births, 3·2 in 2000, is one of the lowest in the world. Expectation of life was 77·7 years for men and 84·6 years for women in 2000. A World Health Organization report published in June 2000 put the Japanese in first place in a 'healthy life expectancy' list, with an expected 74·5 years of healthy life for babies born in 1999. Japan has over 13,000 centenarians. Japan has a very fast ageing population, stemming from a sharply declined fertility rate and one of the highest life expectancies in the world. Annual population growth rate, 1990–99, 0·3%.

In 2000 the average number of children a Japanese woman bears in her life reached a record low of 1·36.

There were 31,042 suicides in 2001 (down from a record 33,048 in 1999), of which 22,144 were men and 8,898 women.

CLIMATE

The islands of Japan lie in the temperate zone, northeast of the main monsoon region of South-East Asia. The climate is temperate with warm, humid summers and relatively mild winters except in the island of Hokkaido and northern parts of Honshu facing the Japan Sea. There is a month's rainy season in June–July, but the best seasons are spring and autumn, although Sept. may bring typhoons. There is a summer rainfall maximum. Tokyo, Jan. 5·2°C, July 25·2°C. Annual rainfall 1,405 mm. Hiroshima, Jan. 4°C, July 25·7°C. Annual rainfall 1,555 mm. Nagasaki, Jan. 6·4°C, July 26·6°C. Annual rainfall 1,945 mm. Osaka, Jan. 5·5°C, July 27°C. Annual rainfall 1,318 mm. Sapporo, Jan. –4·6°C, July 20·2°C. Annual rainfall 1,130 mm.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The Emperor is Akihito (b. 23 Dec. 1933), who succeeded his father, Hirohito on 7 Jan. 1989 (enthroned, 12 Nov. 1990); married 10 April 1959, to Michiko Shoda (b. 20 Oct. 1934). Offspring: Crown Prince Naruhito (Hironomiya; b. 23 Feb. 1960); Prince Fumihito (Akishinomiya; b. 30 Nov. 1965); Princess Sayako (Norinomiya; b. 18 April 1969). Prince Naruhito married Masako Owada (b. 9 Dec. 1963) 9 June 1993. Offspring: Princess Aiko (b. 1 Dec. 2001). The succession to the throne is fixed upon the male descendants. The 1947 constitution supersedes the Meiji constitution of 1889. In it the Japanese people pledge themselves to uphold the ideas of democracy and peace. The Emperor is the symbol of the States and of the unity of the people. Sovereign power rests with the people. The Emperor has no powers related to government. Fundamental human rights are guaranteed.

Legislative power rests with the Diet, which consists of the House of Deputies, elected by men and women over 20 years of age for a four-year term, and an upper house, the House of Councillors of 252 members (100 elected by party list system with proportional representation according to the d'Hondt method and 152 from prefectural districts), one-half of its members being elected every three years.

The number of members in the House of Deputies was reduced from 500 to 480 for the election of June 2000, of whom 300 were to be elected from single-seat constituencies, and 180 by proportional representation on a base of 11 regions. There is a 2% threshold to gain one of the latter seats. Donations to individual politicians are to be supplanted over five years by state subsidies to parties.

A new electoral law passed in Oct. 2000 gives voters a choice between individual candidates and parties when casting ballots for the proportional representation seats in the House of Councillors. The bill also reduced the number of upper house seats by ten, from 252 to 242, the first time that the number of seats in the upper chamber had been reduced. In the upper house elections, which were held in July 2001, 121 seats were contested instead of 126, comprising 48 seats under proportional representation and 73 under the constituency system. The number of seats elected under the proportional representation system was reduced from 100 to 96.

On becoming prime minister in April 2001 Junichiro Koizumi established a panel to consider introducing the direct election of prime ministers by popular vote.

National Anthem. 'Kimigayo' ('The Reign of Our Emperor'); words 9th century, tune by Hiromori Hayashi. On 9 Aug. 1999 a law on the national flag and the national anthem was enacted. The law designates the Hinomaru and 'Kimigayo' as the national flag and national anthem of Japan. The 'Kimi' in 'Kimigayo' indicates the Emperor who is the symbol of the State and of the unity of the people, deriving his position from the will of the people with whom resides sovereign power; 'Kimigayo' depicts the state of being of the country as a whole.

RECENT ELECTIONS

Elections to the House of Deputies (lower house) were held on 25 June 2000. Turn-out was 62·5%. The Liberal Democratic Party (LDP) gained 233 seats; Democratic Party, 127; Clean Government Party (Komeito), 31; Liberal Party (LP), 22; Communist Party of Japan, 20; Social Democratic Party (SDP), 19; Conservative Party, 7; Independents' Party, 5; Liberal League, 1. Non-partisans took 15 seats. By May 2002 the LDP had gained eight seats, giving them 241, while the Democratic Party had lost two, giving them 125. The ruling LDP relies on its support primarily from rural areas, with only a tenth of urban voters actively supporting it. Fewer than 4% of seats in the House of Deputies are held by women, compared to nearly 15% in the world as a whole.

Elections to 121 seats of the House of Councillors (upper house) were held on 29 July 2001; turn-out was 56·4%. The Liberal Democratic Party gained 64 seats, Democratic Party 26, Komeito 13, Social Democratic Party 6, Communist Party of Japan 5, Liberal Party 3, Conservative Party 1, and independents 3.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

On 6 Jan. 2001 administrative organs were reorganized from one Office and 22 Ministries into one Cabinet Office and 12 Ministries.

Following the election of June 2000 a coalition was formed between the LDP, Komeito and the Conservative Party, but Prime Minister Yoshiro Mori resigned on 24 April 2001 in the wake of a series of scandals.

In March 2003 the government comprised:

Prime Minister: Junichiro Koizumi; b. 1942 (LDP; appointed 26 April 2001).

Minister of Justice: Mayumi Moriyama. Foreign Affairs: Yoriko Kawaguchi. Finance: Masajuro Shiokawa. Education, Culture, Sports, Science and Technology: Atsuko Toyama. Health, Labour and Welfare: Chikara Sakaguchi. Agriculture, Forestry and Fisheries: Yoshiyuki Kamei. Economy, Trade and Industry: Takeo Hiranuma. Land, Infrastructure and Transport: Chikage Ogi. Public Management, Home Affairs, Post and Telecommunications: Toranosuke Katayama. Environment: Shunichi Suzuki. Director General, Defence Agency: Shigeru Ishiba. Chief Cabinet Secretary and Minister of State for Gender Affairs: Yasuo Fukuda. Chairman of the National Public Safety Commission: Sadakazu Tanigaki. Minister of State for Okinawa and Northern Territories Affairs, Science and Technology, and Information Technology: Hiroyuki Hosoda. Minister of State for Financial Services and Economic and Fiscal Policy: Heizou Takenaka. Minister of State for Administrative Reform and Regulatory Reform: Nobuteru Ishihara. Minister of State for Disaster Management and Special Zones for Structural Reform: Yoshitada Kounoike.

DEFENCE

Japan has renounced war as a sovereign right and the threat or the use of force as a means of settling disputes with other nations. Its troops had not previously been able to serve abroad, but in 1992 the House of Representatives voted to allow up to 2,000 troops to take part in UN peacekeeping missions. A law of Nov. 1994 authorizes the Self-Defence Force to send aircraft abroad in rescue operations where Japanese citizens are involved. Following the terror attacks on New York and Washington of 11 Sept. 2001, legislation was passed allowing Japan's armed forces to take part in operations in the form of logistical support assisting the US-led war on terror. The legislation permits troops to take part in limited overseas operations but not to engage in combat.

In Jan. 1991 Japan and the USA signed a renewal agreement under which Japan pays 40% of the costs of stationing US forces and 100% of the associated labour costs. US forces in Japan totalled 38,450 in 2002, nearly half of them on Okinawa. A US-Japanese agreement of Dec. 1996 stipulates that one fifth of the territory on Okinawa occupied by the US military is to be returned to local landowners by 2008.

Total armed forces in 2002 numbered 239,900, including 10,400 women.

Defence expenditure in 2001 totalled US$39,513m. (US$310 per capita), representing 1·0% of GDP.

Army. The 'Ground Self-Defence Force' is organized in five regional commands and in 2002 had a strength of 148,200 and a reserve of 47,000. The USA maintains an army force of 1,800.

Navy. The 'Maritime Self-Defence Force' is tasked with coastal protection and defence of the sea lanes to 1,000 nautical miles range from Japan. Personnel in 2002 numbered 44,400 including the Naval Air Arm.

The combatant fleet, all home-built, includes 16 diesel submarines, 44 destroyers and 10 frigates.

The Air Arm operated 80 combat aircraft and 91 armed helicopters in 2002. Air Arm personnel was estimated at 9,800 in 2002.

The main elements of the fleet are organized into four escort flotillas based at Yokosuka, Kure, Sasebo and Maizuru. The submarines are based at Yokosuka and Kure.

Air Force. An 'Air Self-Defence Force' was inaugurated on 1 July 1954. Its equipment includes (2002) F-15 Eagles, F-4E Phantoms and Mitsubishi F-1 fighters.

Strength (2002) 45,600 operating 280 combat aircraft.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

In terms of total aid given, Japan was the second most generous country in the world in 2001 after the USA, donating US$9·7bn. in international aid in the course of the year. This represented 0·2% of its GNI.

Japan is a member of the UN, BIS, OECD, Inter-American Development Bank, Asian Development Bank, Colombo Plan, APEC, IOM and the Antarctic Treaty.

ECONOMY

In 1997 agriculture accounted for 1·7% of GDP, industry 37·2% and services 61·1%.

According to the anti-corruption organization Transparency International, Japan ranked equal 20th in the world in a 2002 survey of the countries with the least corruption in business and government. It received 7·1 out of 10 in the annual index.

Overview. Japan is experiencing its third recession within a decade caused by a failure to address structural problems which have worsened since the attacks on the USA of 11 Sept. 2001. Owing to deficit spending, Japan's budget is the largest in the industrialized world. From 1992 to 2000, 120trn. yen was spent on fiscal packages. The economy is suffering from spiralling deflation. The economy consists of two tiers, large multinational companies and small enterprises. The government is prioritizing structural reforms and budgetary discipline and has announced tax cuts. In 2000 the Bank of Japan adopted an inflation guideline which will be kept until the inflation rate is stable at around zero or increasing.

Currency. The unit of currency is the yen (JPY). Inflation in 1997 was 1·7% slowing to 0·6% in 1998. There was then deflation of 0·3% in 1999, 0·8% in 2000 and 0·7% in 2001. Japan's foreign exchange reserves totalled US$428,850m. in June 2002 (US$172,443m. in 1995)—the highest in the world. Gold reserves in June 2002 were 24·60m. troy oz. In Dec. 2001 the currency in circulation consisted of 69,004,000m. yen Bank of Japan notes and 4,223,000m. yen subsidiary coins.

Budget. Ordinary revenue and expenditure for fiscal year ending 31 March 2003 balanced at 81,230,000m. yen.

Of the proposed revenue (in yen) in 2002, 46,816,000m. was to come from taxes and stamps, 30,000,000m. from public bonds. Main items of expenditure: social security, 18,279,500m.; local government, 16,080,000m.; public works, 8,423,900m.; education, 6,699,800m.; defence, 4,956,000m.

The outstanding national debt incurred by public bonds was estimated in March 2001 to be 380,655,000m. yen.

The estimated 2002 budgets of the prefectures and other local authorities forecast a total revenue of 87,567,000m. yen, to be made up partly by local taxes and partly by government grants and local loans.

Performance. The real GDP growth rate for 2002 was 0·9%. In the first quarter of 2002 the economy expanded for the first time since the first quarter of 2001. Yet, for all the financial blues, Japan remains one of the world's strongest economies with a highly trained workforce and the talent to exploit profitable export markets. In 2001 Japan's total GDP was US$4,245·2bn., the second highest in the world after the USA.

Banking and Finance. The Nippon Ginko (Bank of Japan), founded 1882, finances the government and the banks, its function being similar to that of a central bank in other countries. The Bank undertakes the management of Treasury funds and foreign exchange control. Its Governor is Toshihiko Fukui (appointed March 2003 for a five-year term). Its gold bullion and cash holdings at 31 Dec. 2001 stood at 663,000m. yen.

There were in Dec. 2002, 7 city banks, 64 regional banks, 28 trust banks, 2 long-term credit banks, 56 member banks of the second association of regional banks, 342 Shinkin banks (credit associations), 194 credit co-operatives and 73 foreign banks. There are also various governmental financial institutions, including postal savings which amounted to 236,477,600m. yen in Sept. 2002. Total savings by individuals, including insurance and securities, stood at 1,270,873,600m. yen on 30 Sept. 2002, and about 57% of these savings were deposited in banks and the post office. During 1999 a number of important mergers were announced in the banking sector, most notably the proposed merger of the Industrial Bank of Japan, Dai-Ichi Kangyo and Fuji Bank, which in Sept. 2000 created Mizuho Financial Group, the world's biggest bank in terms of assets, at over 140,000bn. yen (US$1,259bn.). Sumitomo and Sakura Bank also merged, in April 2001, to create Sumitomo Mitsui Banking Corporation. Their joint assets are over 113,000bn. yen (US$895bn.), making the new bank the second largest in the world behind Mizuho Financial Group.

Japan's banks are in a situation where many of them would be insolvent if they admitted the market value of the loans, shares and property they hold. At 31 March 2002 it was estimated that the banking system's bad loans amounted to 26,781bn. yen.

There are eight stock exchanges, the largest being in Tokyo, Osaka and Nagoya.

Weights and Measures. The metric system is obligatory.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Environment. Japan's carbon dioxide emissions in 1998 accounted for 4·8% of the world total and according to the World Bank Atlas were equivalent to 9·0 tonnes per capita. According to an Environmental Sustainability Index compiled for the World Economic Forum meeting in Feb. 2002 Japan ranked 78th in the world out of 142 countries analysed, with 48·6%. The index measured the ability of countries to maintain favourable environmental conditions and examined various factors including pollution levels and the use or abuse of natural resources.

Electricity. Japan is poor in energy resources, and nuclear power generation is important in reducing dependence on foreign supplies. In 1998 Japan had a nuclear generating capacity of 43,691 MW. Electricity produced in 2000 was 1,091,500m. kWh. In 2001 there were 54 nuclear reactors, producing approximately 34% of electricity. In 2000, ten regional publicly-held supply companies produced 73·1% of output. There are plans to construct a further five nuclear power plants. Consumption per capita in 2000 was an estimated 7,707 kWh.

Oil and Gas. Output of crude petroleum, 2000, was 740,000 kilolitres, almost entirely from oilfields on the island of Honshu, but 250·6m. kilolitres of crude oil had to be imported. Output of natural gas, 2000, 2,453m. cu. metres.

Minerals. Ore production in tonnes, 2000, of coal, 2,964,000; zinc, 63,601; lead, 8,835; copper, 1,211; iron, 523; silver, 103,781 kg; gold, 8,400 kg. Salt production, 2000, 1,374,000 tonnes.

Agriculture. Agricultural workers in 2001 on farms with 0·3 ha or more of cultivated land or 0·5m. yen annual sales were 3·8m. (including 0·26m. subsidiary and seasonal workers), representing 4·6% (1999) of the labour force as opposed to 24·7% in 1962. Land under cultivation in 2001 was 4·8m. ha, down from 6·1m. ha in 1961. Rice is the staple food, but its consumption is declining. Rice cultivation accounted for 1,770,000 ha in 2000.

Average farm size was 1·6 ha in 2001.

In 1998 there were 2,210,000 tractors and 1,208,000 harvester-threshers.

Output of rice (in 1,000 tonnes) was 10,748 in 1995, 9,490 in 2000 and 9,057 in 2001.

Production in 2000 (in 1,000 tonnes) of sugarbeets was 3,673; potatoes, 2,898; cabbages, 1,449; sugarcane, 1,395; onions, 1,247; tomatoes, 806; cucumbers and gherkins, 767; wheat, 688; carrots, 682; aubergines, 477; pumpkins and squash, 254; soybeans, 235; taro, 231; yams, 201. Sweet potatoes, which in the past mitigated the effects of rice famines, have, in view of rice over-production, decreased from 4,955,000 tonnes in 1965 to 1,073,000 tonnes in 2000. Domestic sugar production accounted for only 27% of requirement in 2000. In 2001, 1·53m. tonnes were imported, 43·7% of this being imported from Thailand, 38·5% from Australia, 13·0% from South Africa.

Fruit production, 2000 (in 1,000 tonnes): mandarins, tangerines and satsumas, 1,143; melons and watermelons, 895; apples, 800; pears, 424; persimmons, 279; grapes, 238.

Livestock (2001): 4·53m. cattle (including about 1·73m. milch cows), 9·79m. pigs, 29,000 goats, 27,000 horses, 16,000 sheep, 293m. chickens. Livestock products in 2000 (in 1,000 tonnes): milk, 8,500; meat, 3,015; eggs, 2,508.

Forestry. Forests covered 25·11m. ha in 1999, or 66·4% of the land area. There was an estimated timber stand of 3,709m. cu. metres in 2000. Timber production was 18·12m. cu. metres in 2000.

Fisheries. The catch in 1999 was 5,176,460 tonnes, excluding whaling. More than 98% of fish caught are from marine waters. Japan's annual catch is the third largest in the world after those of China and Peru. It is also the leading importer of fishery commodities, with imports in 1999 totalling US$14·75bn.

INDUSTRY

The leading companies by market capitalization in Japan, excluding banking and finance, in Jan. 2002 were: NTT DoCoMo ('anywhere') Incorporated (14trn. yen), a wireless voice and data communications company; the Toyota Motor Corporation (13trn. yen); and the Nippon Telegraph and Telephone Corporation (NTT), 6trn. yen.

The industrial structure is dominated by corporate groups (keiretsu) either linking companies in different branches or linking individual companies with their suppliers and distributors.

Japan's industrial equipment, 1999, numbered 596,863,468 plants of all sizes, employing 9·90m. production workers.

Output in 2000 included: television sets, 3·38m.; radio sets, 2·3m.; watches, 554·1m.; cameras, 9·74m.; computers, 12·4m. The chemical industry ranks fourth in shipment value after machinery, metals and food products. Production, 2000, included (in tonnes): sulphuric acid, 7·1m.; caustic soda, 4·47m.; ammonium sulphate, 1·75m.; calcium superphosphate, 0·26m. A total of 10,145,000 motor vehicles were manufactured in Japan in 2000, making it the second largest producer after the USA. It is the largest producer of passenger cars.

Output (2000), in 1,000 tonnes, of crude steel was 106,444; cement, 81,097; pig iron, 81,071; ordinary rolled steel, 83,044.

In 2000 paper production was 19·04m. tonnes; paperboard, 12·79m. tonnes.

Output of cotton yarn, 2000, 159,000 tonnes, and of cotton cloth, 664m. sq. metres. Output, 2000, 34,000 tonnes of woollen yarns and 98m. sq. metres of woollen fabrics. Output, 2000, of rayon woven fabrics, 241m. sq. metres; synthetic woven fabrics, 1,573m. sq. metres; silk fabrics, 33m. sq. metres.

5,464m. litres of beer were produced in 2000.

Shipbuilding orders in 2001 totalled 14,551,000 GRT. In 2000, 11,646,000 GRT were launched, of which 4,640,000 GRT were tankers.

Labour. Total labour force, 2001, was 64·1m., of which 17·13m. were in commerce and finance, 17·68m. in services (including the professions), 12·84m. in manufacturing, 6·32m. in construction, 4·41m. in transport and other public utilities, 2·9m. in agriculture and forestry, 2·11m. in government work, 0·27m. in fishing and 50,000 in mining. Retirement age is being raised progressively from 60 years to reach 65 by 2013. However, in 1995 the average actual retirement age among males was 66.

In Jan. 2003 unemployment stood at 5·5%, the highest rate on record. It had also been 5·5% in Aug. and Oct. 2002. Almost 1m. people lost their jobs between March and July 2001. In 2000, 35,000 working days were lost in industrial stoppages. In 2001 the average working week was 38·50 hours.

Trade Unions. In 2001 there were 11,212,000 workers organized in 67,706 unions. In Nov. 1989 the 'Japanese Private Sector Trade Union Confederation' (Rengo), which was organized in 1987, was reorganized into the 'Japan Trade Union Confederation' (Rengo) with the former 'General Council of Japanese Trade Unions' (Sohyo) and other unions, and was the largest federation with 7,001,000 members in 2001. The 'National Confederation of Trade Unions' (Zenroren) had 780,000 members in 2001 and the 'National Trade Union Council' (Zenrokyo) 247,000 members in 2001.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Imports and Exports. Trade (in US$1m.):

	1996	1997	1998	1999	2000	2001
Imports	333,832	338,705	280,505	311,246	379,718	349,190
Exports	393,035	420,896	387,958	419,358	479,284	403,227

In 1998 Japanese imports accounted for 6·7% of the world total imports and exports 9·7% of the world total exports.

Distribution of trade by countries (customs clearance basis) (US$1m.):

	Exports		Imports
	2000	2001	2000	2001
Africa	5,033	4,432	4,960	4,543
Australia	8,580	7,683	14,806	14,451
Canada	7,480	6,563	8,704	7,751
China	30,338	30,941	55,116	57,786
Germany	19,998	15,639	12,732	12,395
Hong Kong	27,174	23,248	1,668	1,457
Latin America	21,047	17,855	10,991	9,700
ASEAN	68,488	54,270	59,568	54,382
Korea, Republic of	30,699	25,285	20,452	17,210
Taiwan	35,955	24,214	17,908	14,195
UK	14,337	12,145	6,580	6,003
USA	142,475	121,146	72,169	63,171

Principal items in 2001, with value in 1m. yen were:

Imports, c.i.f.		Exports, f.o.b.
Machinery and transport equipment	13,216,000	Machinery and transport equipment	35,524,000
Mineral fuels	8,524,000	Chemicals	3,739,000
Foodstuffs	5,251,000	Metals and metal products	2,889,000
Metal ores and scrap	937,000	Textile products	916,000

The importation of rice used to be prohibited, but in 1993–94 there was an emergency importation of 1m. tonnes from Australia, China, Thailand and the USA to offset a poor domestic harvest. The prohibition was lifted in line with WTO agreements. Until 2000 rice imports had limited access; the market is now fully open.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. The total length of roads (including urban and other local roads) was 1,166,340 km at 1 April 2000. There were 53,777 km of national roads of which 53,177 km were paved. In 2000, 76·6% of all roads were paved. Motor vehicles, at 31 Dec. 2001, numbered 71,642,000, including 53,541,000 passenger cars and 17,866,000 commercial vehicles. In 1999 there were 4,154,100 new car registrations (4,116,700 in 1998). In 2000 there were 9,066 road deaths (10,679 in 1995).

The world's longest undersea road tunnel, spanning Tokyo Bay, was opened in Dec. 1997. The Tokyo Bay Aqualine, built at a cost of 1·44trn. yen (US$11·3bn.), consists of a 4·4 km (2·7 mile) bridge and a 9·4 km tunnel that allows commuters to cross the bay in about 15 minutes.

Rail. The first railway was completed in 1872, between Tokyo and Yokohama (29 km). Most railways are of 1,067 mm gauge, but the high-speed 'Shinkansen' lines are standard 1,435 mm gauge. In April 1987 the Japanese National Railways was reorganized into seven private companies, the Japanese Railways (JR) Group—six passenger companies and one freight company. Total length of railways in March 2001 was 27,501 km, of which the JR had 20,057 km and other private railways 7,444 km. In 2000 the JR carried 8,671m. passengers (other private, 12,976m.) and 40m. tonnes of freight (other private, 20m.). An undersea tunnel linking Honshu with Hokkaido was opened to rail services in 1988.

There are metros in Tokyo (two systems, total 273 km in 2000), Fukuoka (18 km), Kobe (two systems, total 23 km), Kyoto (26 km), Nagoya (78 km), Osaka (116 km), Sapporo (48 km), Sendai (15 km) and Yokohama (40 km), and tram/light rail networks in 19 cities.

Civil Aviation. There are international airports at Fukuoka, Kagoshima, Nagoya, Osaka (Kansai International), Sapporo and two serving Tokyo—at Narita (New Tokyo International) and Haneda (Tokyo International). The principal airlines are Japan Airlines (JAL), Japan Air System and All Nippon Airways. In the financial year 1999 Japanese companies carried 91·59m. passengers on domestic services and 17·83m. passengers on international services. JAL flew 364·2m. km in 2001 and carried 32,471,532 passengers, All Nippon Airways flew 259·3m. km and carried 43,044,792 passengers, and Japan Air System flew 106·5m. km and carried 21,756,339 passengers.

In 2000 Narita handled 24,813,053 passengers (24,022,075 on international flights) and 1,885,691 tonnes of freight. Osaka (Kansai International) handled 19,499,000 passengers (11,657,000 on international flights) and 966,800 tonnes of freight in 2000. Built on a reclaimed offshore island, it was only opened in Sept. 1994 but in 2000 was the 18th busiest airport in the world for freight, with Narita ranked 3rd. Tokyo Haneda is mainly used for domestic flights, but handled 56,379,000 passengers in 2000 (55,476,000 on domestic flights), making it the 6th busiest airport in the world for overall traffic volume.

Shipping. On 1 July 2000 the merchant fleet consisted of 5,880 vessels of 100 GRT and over; total tonnage 15m. GRT; there were 174 ships for passenger transport (243,000 GRT), 1,752 cargo ships (965,000 GRT) and 815 oil tankers (4,507,000 GRT). In 1997 vessels totalling 438,111,000 net registered tons entered ports.

Coastguard. The 'Japan Coast Guard' consists of 1 headquarters, 11 regional headquarters, 66 offices, 1 maritime guard and rescue office, 53 stations, 5 information and communications control centres, 6 traffic advisory service centres, 14 air stations, 1 transnational organized crime strike force station, 1 special security station, 1 special rescue station, 1 national strike team station, 6 district communications centres, 4 hydrographic observatories, 1 Loran navigation system centre, and 53 aids-to-navigation offices (with 5,597 aids-to-navigation facilities); and controlled 52 large patrol vessels, 44 medium patrol vessels, 23 small patrol vessels, 230 patrol craft, 13 hydrographic service vessels, 5 large firefighting boats, 7 medium firefighting boats, 86 special guard and rescue boats, 1 aids-to-navigation evaluation vessel, 4 buoy tenders and 53 aids-to-navigation tenders in the financial year 2002. Personnel numbered 12,255.

The 'Japan Coast Guard' aviation service includes 29 fixed-wing aircraft and 46 helicopters.

Telecommunications. Telephone services have been operated by private companies (NTT and others) since 1985. There were 74,343,600 main telephone lines (equivalent to 585·8 per 1,000 population) in 2000. In April 2000 Japan had 57·95m. mobile phone subscribers. There were 40·0m. PCs (315·2 per 1,000 persons) in 2000 and 16m. fax machines in 1997. There were 51·34m. Internet users in April 2002. Approximately 70% of Internet users are men. Internet commerce, or e-commerce, amounted to US$1·2bn. in 1998 and was forecast to total US$16bn. in 2001.

Postal Services. There were 24,778 post offices in 2000, handling a total of 26,114m. items of domestic mail, and foreign items of mail numbering 96m. out of and 290m. into Japan.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. The Supreme Court is composed of the Chief Justice and 14 other judges. The Chief Justice is appointed by the Emperor, the other judges by the Cabinet. Every ten years a justice must submit himself to the electorate. All justices and judges of the lower courts serve until they are 70 years of age.

Below the Supreme Court are eight regional higher courts, district courts in each prefecture (four in Hokkaido) and the local courts.

The Supreme Court is authorized to declare unconstitutional any act of the Legislature or the Executive which violates the Constitution.

In 2000, 3,256,109 penal code offences were reported, including 1,391 homicides. The death penalty is authorized; there were two executions in 2002. The average daily population in penal institutions in 2000 was 58,747 (46 per 100,000 population).

Religion. State subsidies have ceased for all religions, and all religious teachings are forbidden in public schools. In Dec. 2000 Shintoism claimed 107·95m. adherents, Buddhism 95·42m.; these figures obviously overlap. Christians numbered 1·77m.

Education. Education is compulsory and free between the ages of 6 and 15. Almost all national and municipal institutions are co-educational. In May 2001 there were 14,314 kindergartens with 106,703 teachers and 1,753,422 pupils; 23,450 elementary schools with 407,829 teachers and 7,296,920 pupils; 11,118 junior high schools with 255,494 teachers and 3,991,911 pupils; 5,345 senior high schools with 266,548 teachers and 4,061,756 pupils; 559 junior colleges with 15,638 teachers and 289,198 pupils.

There were also 914 special schools for children with physical disabilities (58,617 teachers, 92,072 pupils).

Japan has seven main state universities: Tokyo University (1877); Kyoto University (1897); Tohoku University, Sendai (1907); Kyushu University, Fukuoka (1910); Hokkaido University, Sapporo (1918); Osaka University (1931); and Nagoya University (1939). In addition, there are various other state and municipal as well as private universities. There are 669 colleges and universities altogether with (May 2001) 2,765,705 students and 152,572 teachers.

In 1999–2000 total expenditure on education came to 3·5% of GNI.

The adult literacy rate in 1998 was at least 99%.

Health. Hospitals on 1 Oct. 2000 numbered 9,266 with 1,647,253 beds. The hospital bed provision of 130 per 10,000 population was one of the highest in the world. Physicians at the end of 2000 numbered 255,792 (provision of one for every 496 persons); dentists, 90,857.

Welfare. There are in force various types of social security schemes, such as health insurance, unemployment insurance and age pensions. Citizens over 60 receive pensions of 70% of the average wage. In 1995 the basic retirement pension was 214,300 yen per month, funded by contributions of 17·35% of salary. There were a total of 39m. pensioners in 1999.

In 1999, 12,053,666 persons and 8,448,659 households received some form of regular public assistance, the total of which came to 1,860,272m. yen.

14 weeks maternity leave is statutory.

CULTURE

Broadcasting.. Broadcasting is under the aegis of the public Japan Broadcasting Corporation (Nippon Hoso Kyokai) and the National Association of Commercial Broadcasters (Minporen). The former transmits two national networks and an external service, Radio Japan (22 languages). In 1999 there were 127 commercial television companies operating on terrestrial broadcasting waves. There were 86·5m. TV sets (colour by NTSC) and 120·5m. radio receivers in 1997. In 2000 there were 18·71m. cable TV subscribers, and in 1998 more than 68,000 cable TV stations.

Cinema. In 2001 cinemas numbered 2,585 with an annual attendance of 163m. (1960: 1,014m.). Of 630 new films shown in 2001, 281 were Japanese.

Press. In 2000 daily newspapers numbered 122 with aggregate circulation of 71·90m. (the highest circulation of daily newspapers in the world) including four major English-language newspapers. The newspapers with the highest circulation are Yomiuri Shimbun (daily average of 10·3m. copies in 2001) and Asahi Shimbun (daily average of 8·3m. copies in 2001). They are also the two most widely read newspapers in the world.

In 2001, 69,003 book titles were published.

Tourism. In 2001, 5,286,310 foreigners visited Japan, 715,036 of whom came from the USA and 390,664 from the UK. Japanese travelling abroad totalled 16,215,657. Tourism receipts in 1999 totalled US$3·43bn.

Festivals. Japan has a huge number of annual festivals, among the largest of which are the Sapporo Snow Festival (Feb.); Hakata Dontaku, Fukuoka City (May); the Sanja Festival of Asakusa Shrine, Tokyo (May); the Tanabata Festival in Hiratsuka City (July) and Sendai City (Aug.); the Nebuta Festival in Aomori City (Aug.); and Jidai Matsuri, Kyoto (Oct.).

The next World Expo is scheduled to be held in Nagoya from March–Sept. 2005.

Libraries. In 1999 public libraries numbered 2,593 including 1 National Diet Library, holding 284m. books.

Theatre and Opera. In 2000 there were four National Theatres: National Theatre (traditional Japanese performances); Nogakudo (Noh Theatre); Bunraku Theatre (Japanese puppet show); and the New National Theatre (Opera House).

Museums and Galleries. In 1999 there were 1,045 museums, including 26 nationals. These included 355 historical, 353 fine arts and 126 general museums.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

During the first World War (1914–18) the Arabs of Transjordan and Palestine rebelled against the suzerainty of Turkey, which had become an ally of Germany. Britain supported the rebellion, occupied the areas and in 1920 was given a League of Nations mandate for Transjordan and Palestine. In April 1921 the Amir Abdullah Ibn Hussein (brother of King Feisal of Iraq) became the ruler of Transjordan, which was officially separated from Palestine in 1923. By a treaty signed in London on 22 March 1946 Britain recognized Transjordan as a sovereign independent state. On 25 May 1946 the Amir Abdullah assumed the title of king and the name of the territory was changed to that of the Hashemite Kingdom of Jordan. The part of Palestine remaining to the Arabs under the armistice with Israel on 3 April 1949, with the exception of the Gaza Strip on the Mediterranean coast, was placed under Jordanian rule and formally incorporated in Jordan on 24 April 1950. In June 1967 this territory ('the West Bank') was occupied by Israel. On 31 July 1988 King Hussein announced the dissolution of Jordan's legal and administrative ties with the West Bank. King Hussein, who became king in 1953 at the age of 17 after his father was declared mentally unfit to rule, remained in executive control in the face of attempted assassinations and frequent changes of prime ministers for 35 years until his death on 7 Feb. 1999.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Jordan is bounded in the north by Syria, east by Iraq, southeast and south by Saudi Arabia and west by Israel. It has an outlet to an arm of the Red Sea at Aqaba. Its area is 91,860 sq. km. The 1994 census population was 4,095,579; density 44·6 per sq. km. 1997 population estimate, 4,600,000.

The UN gives a projected population for 2010 of 6·42m. (including immigrant workers).

In 1999, 73·6% of the population lived in urban areas. Population of the 12 governorates:

Governorate	1997	Governorate	1997
Ajloun	104,900	Karak	188,600
Amman	1,751,700	Ma'an	88,300
Aqaba	88,800	Madaba	119,100
Balqa	306,800	Mafraq	198,700
Irbid	835,400	Tafilah	69,900
Jerash	137,100	Zarqa	710,700

The largest towns with suburbs, with estimated population, 1994: Amman, the capital, 1,378,000 (1999 estimate); Zarqa, 608,626; Irbid, 379,844.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Births, 1999, 130,039; deaths, 37,093. Rates, 1999 per 1,000 population: birth, 21·2; death rate, 6·1. Annual population growth rate, 1990–99, 3·8%. Life expectancy at birth in 1999, 68·9 years for men, 71·5 for women. Jordan has a young population: 1997 estimates showed 44% aged under 15, 53% aged 15–64 and 3% aged 65 and over. Infant mortality, 1999, 29 per 1,000 live births; fertility rate, 1999, 4·7 births per woman.

[1]'Hashemite' denotes a descendant of the prophet Mohammed.

CLIMATE

Predominantly a Mediterranean climate, with hot dry summers and cool wet winters, but in hilly parts summers are cooler and winters colder. Those areas below sea-level are very hot in summer and warm in winter. Eastern parts have a desert climate. Amman, Jan. 46°F (7·5°C), July 77°F (24·9°C). Annual rainfall 13·4" (340·6 mm). Aqaba, Jan. 61°F (16°C), July 89°F (31·5°C). Annual rainfall 1·4" (36·7 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The Kingdom is a constitutional monarchy headed by H. M. King Abdullah Bin Al Hussein II, born 30 Jan. 1962, married to H. M. Queen Rania. Son: Hussein, b. 28 June 1994; daughters: Iman, b. 27 Sept. 1996; Salma, b. 26 Sept. 2000. Crown Prince: Prince Hamzah (younger brother of the King). In Jan. 1999 the late King Hussein had confirmed by royal decree that his eldest son, Prince Abdullah, was his heir in place of the King's brother Prince Hassan Bin Talal who had held the position of Crown Prince for 34 years. King Hussein died on 7 Feb. 1999.

The Constitution ratified on 8 Dec. 1952 provides that the Cabinet is responsible to Parliament. The legislature consists of a Senate of 40 members appointed by the King and a Chamber of Deputies of 104 members (80 until 2001) elected by universal suffrage. Nine seats are reserved for Christians, six for Bedouin and three for Circassians. A law of 1993 restricts each elector to a single vote, replacing a system in which electors had several votes depending on the number of seats in the constituency.

The lower house was dissolved in 1976 and elections postponed because no elections could be held in the West Bank under Israeli occupation. Parliament was reconvened on 9 Jan. 1984. By-elections were held in March 1984 and six members were nominated for the West Bank, bringing Parliament to 60 members. Women voted for the first time in 1984. On 9 June 1991 the King and the main political movements endorsed a national charter which legalized political parties in return for the acceptance of the constitution and monarchy. Movements linked to, or financed by, non-Jordanian bodies are not allowed.

National Anthem. 'Asha al Malik' ('Long Live the King'); words by A. Al Rifai, tune by A. Al Tanir.

RECENT ELECTIONS

Elections were held on 4 Nov. 1997. Of the 80 seats, 76 went to non-partisans of various orientations, 3 to the National Constitutional Party and 1 to the Ba'ath Party.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

In March 2003 the government consisted of:

Prime Minister, Minister of Defence: Ali Abu al-Ragheb; b. 1946 (in office since 19 June 2000).

Army. Total strength (1999) 90,000. In addition there were 30,000 army reservists, a paramilitary Public Security Directorate of approximately 10,000 and a civil militia 'People's Army' of approximately 20,000.

Navy. The Royal Jordanian Naval Force numbered 480 in 1999 and operates a handful of patrol boats, all based at Aqaba.

Air Force. Strength (1999) 13,500 personnel (including 3,400 Air defence), 93 combat aircraft (including F-5Es, F16As and Mirage F1s) and 16 armed helicopters.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

A 46-year-old formal state of hostilities with Israel was brought to an end by a peace agreement on 26 Oct. 1994.

Jordan is a member of the UN, WTO, IOM, OIC and the League of Arab States.

ECONOMY

Agriculture accounted for 3·0% of GDP in 1998, industry 25·7% and services 71·3%.

Overview. The public sector has dominated the economy, but privatization has proceeded at a faster pace since 1998.

Currency. The unit of currency is the Jordan dinar (JD.) of 1,000 fils. Inflation in 2001 was 1·8%. Foreign exchange controls were abolished in July 1997. Foreign exchange reserves were US$3,650m. and gold reserves 408,000 troy oz in June 2002. Total money supply in March 2002 was JD.2,095m.

Budget. Revenue and expenditure over a six-year period (in 1m. dinar):

	1995	1996	1997	1998	1999	2000
Revenue	1,332·6	1,366·9	1,312·6	1,422·4	1,530·5	1,506·6
Expenditure	1,471·5	1,666·9	1,681·9	1,876·8	1,804·1	1,868·6

Performance. Total GDP was US$8·8bn. in 2001. Real GDP growth in 2001 was 4·2%.

Banking and Finance. The Central Bank of Jordan was established in 1964 (Governor, Dr Umayya Toukan). In 1995 there were 21 licensed banks with a total of 430 branches. Assets and liabilities of the banking system (including the Central Bank, commercial banks, the Housing Bank and investment banks) totalled JD.8,430·4m. in 1995.

There is a stock exchange in Amman (Amman Financial Market).

Weights and Measures. The metric system is in force. Land area is measured in dunums (1 dunum = 0·1 ha).

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Environment. According to the World Bank Atlas carbon dioxide emissions in 1998 were the equivalent of 3·0 tonnes per capita.

Electricity. Installed capacity was 1m. kW in 1997. Production (1998) 6·08bn. kWh; consumption per capita was 1,205 kWh.

Oil and Gas. Natural gas reserves in 1997 totalled 6bn. cu. metres, with production (1995) 294m. cu. metres.

Water. 99% of the total population and 100% of the urban population has access to safe drinking water.

Minerals. Phosphate ore production in 1996 was 5·37m. tonnes; potash, 1·8m. tonnes.

Agriculture. The country east of the Hejaz Railway line is largely desert; northwestern Jordan is potentially of agricultural value and an integrated Jordan Valley project began in 1973. In 1993 about 15% of land was given over to agricultural use (including 9% permanent pasture and 4% arable crops). In 1998 there were 75,000 ha of irrigated land. The agricultural cropping pattern for irrigated vegetable cultivation was introduced in 1984 to regulate production and diversify the crops being cultivated. In 1986 the government began to lease state-owned land in the semi-arid southern regions for agricultural development by private investors, mostly for wheat and barley.

Production in 2000 (in 1,000 tonnes): tomatoes, 306; olives, 166; watermelons, 105; potatoes, 93; cucumbers and gherkins, 72; cabbages, 40; lemons and limes, 37; bananas, 36; cauliflowers, 35; apples, 34; pumpkins and squash, 34.

There were 4,800 tractors in 1998.

Forestry. Forests covered 45,000 ha in 1995, or 0·5% of the land area. In 1999, 11,000 cu. metres of roundwood was cut.

Fisheries. Fish landings in 1999 totalled 510 tonnes, mainly from inland waters.

INDUSTRY

According to the Financial Times Survey (FT 500), the largest company by market capitalization in Jordan on 4 Jan. 2001 was Arab Bank (US$1,970·7m.).

The number of industrial units in 1994 was 18,980, employing more than 100,000 persons. The principal industrial concerns are the production or processing of phosphates, potash, fertilizers, cement and oil.

Production (1997, in 1,000 tonnes): cement, 3,251; residual fuel oil, 1,084; distillate fuel oil, 913; chemical acids, 846 (1994); fertilizers, 470 (1994).

Labour. The workforce in 1996 was 935,000. In 1993, 434,806 persons worked in social and public administration, 129,754 in commerce, 91,087 in mining and manufacturing, 57,573 in transport and communications and 54,995 in agriculture. Unemployment was officially 12% in Oct. 2000 but was estimated by economists to be more than 20%. In 2000 Jordan had more than 600,000 foreign workers, many of them Iraqis.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Foreign debt was US$8,226m. in 2000. Legislation of 1995 eases restrictions on foreign investment and makes some reductions in taxes and customs duties.

Imports and Exports. Imports (f.o.b.) in 1999 totalled US$3,292·0m. and exports (f.o.b.) US$1,831·9m. Major exports are phosphate, potash, fertilizers, foodstuffs, pharmaceuticals, fruit and vegetables, textiles, cement, plastics, detergent and soap.

Exports in 1999 were mainly to Saudi Arabia, 15·9%; India, 12·6%; and Japan, 5·2%. Principal import sources were from Germany, 9·9%; USA, 8·6%; and Italy, 6·1%.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. Total length of roads, 1996 estimate, 6,640 km, of which 2,940 km were main roads. In 1996 there were 213,900 passenger cars (48 per 1,000 inhabitants), 369 motorcycles and mopeds, 10,300 coaches and buses, and 68,850 trucks and vans. There were 552 deaths in road accidents in 1996 (388 in 1992).

Rail. The 1,050 mm gauge Hejaz Jordan and Aqaba Railway runs from the Syrian border at Nassib to Ma'an and Naqb Ishtar and Aqaba Port (total, 618 km). The state railway is only minimally operational. Passenger-km travelled in 1998 came to 2m. and freight tonne-km to 596m.

Civil Aviation. The Queen Alia International airport is at Zizya, 30 km south of Amman. There are also international airports at Amman and Aqaba. Queen Alia International handled 2,384,860 passengers in 2000 (2,350,346 on international flights) and 82,185 tonnes of freight. The national carrier is the Royal Jordanian, which flew 36·2m. km and carried 1,252,200 passengers (all on international flights) in 1999. Royal Jordanian is currently state-owned, but in Oct. 1999 the government announced its intention to sell a 49% stake in the airline.

Shipping. In 1998 sea-going shipping totalled 42,000 GRT. In 1998 vessels totalling 2,608,000 NRT entered ports.

Telecommunications. There were 620,000 main telephone lines in 2000, or 82·9 per 1,000 persons. In Jan. 2000 the government sold a 40% stake in Jordan Telecommunications Company to France Telecom for US$508m. There were 150,000 PCs (22·5 for every 1,000 persons) in 2000 and 35,000 fax machines in 1996. Jordan had 115,000 mobile phone subscribers in early 2000. The number of Internet users in March 2001 was 210,000.

Postal Services. In 1996 there were 836 post offices and agencies.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. The legal system is based on Islamic law (Shari'a) and civil law, and administers justice in cases of civil, criminal or administrative disputes. The constitution guarantees the independence of the judiciary. Courts are divided into three tiers: regular courts (courts of first instance, magistrate courts, courts of appeal, Court of Cassation/High Court of Justice); religious courts (Shari'a courts and Council of Religious Communities); special courts (e.g. police court, military councils, customs court, state security court).

The death penalty is authorized; there were 13 confirmed executions in 2002. The murder rate in 2000 stood at two per 100,000 population.

Religion. About 96% of the population are Sunni Muslims.

Education. Adult literacy in 1999 was 89·2% (male, 94·5%; female, 83·4%). Basic primary and secondary education is free and compulsory. In 1998–99 there were 1,050 kindergartens (1,048 private) with 3,645 teachers and 80,101 pupils; 2,678 basic schools (497 private) with 46,864 teachers and 1,135,146 pupils; 948 secondary schools (117 private) with 13,377 teachers and 165,475 pupils; and 53 vocational schools with 2,213 teachers and 31,961 pupils. In 1996–97 there were 6 state and 11 private universities. 22,500 Jordanians were studying abroad in 1994.

In 1996 total expenditure on education came to 7·9% of GNP and 19·8% of total government spending.

Health. In 1996 there were 7,322 doctors, 2,180 dentists and 4,304 nurses (1994). In 1995 there were a total of 6,800 hospital beds in 63 hospitals.

Welfare. There are numerous government organizations involved in social welfare projects. The General Union of Voluntary Societies finances and supports the Governorate Unions, voluntary societies, and needy individuals through financial and in-kind aid. There are also 240 day care centres run by non-governmental organizations.

CULTURE

Broadcasting. Broadcasting is the responsibility of the Jordan Radio and Television Corporation, which transmits two national radio services (one in English), a Koran service and an external service, Radio Jordan. There are two television services (colour by PAL). There were 1·66m. radio receivers in use and 500,000 TV sets in 1997.

Press. In 1996 there were four daily (including one in English) and 22 weekly papers. Newspapers were denationalized in 1990, although government institutions still hold majority ownership.

Tourism. Tourism accounts for 11% of GDP. In 1999 there were 1,358,000 foreign tourists, bringing revenue of US$795m.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Turkestan (part of the territory now known as Kazakhstan) was conquered by the Russians in the 1860s. In 1866 Tashkent was occupied, followed in 1868 by Samarkand. Subsequently further territory was conquered and united with Russian Turkestan. In the 1870s Bokhara was subjugated, with the emir, by an agreement of 1873, recognizing Russian suzerainty. In the same year Khiva became a vassal state to Russia. Until 1917 Russian Central Asia was divided politically into the Khanate of Khiva, the Emirate of Bokhara and the Governor-Generalship of Turkestan. In the summer of 1919 the authority of the Soviet Government extended to these regions. The Khan of Khiva was deposed in Feb. 1920, and a People's Soviet Republic was set up, the medieval name of Khorezm being revived. In Aug. 1920 the Emir of Bokhara suffered the same fate and a similar regime was set up in Bokhara. The former Governor-Generalship of Turkestan was constituted an Autonomous Soviet Socialist Republic within the RSFSR on 11 April 1921.

In the autumn of 1924 the Soviets of the Turkestan, Bokhara and Khiva Republics decided to redistribute their territories on a nationality basis; at the same time Bokhara and Khiva became Socialist Republics. The redistribution was completed in May 1925, when the new states of Uzbekistan, Turkmenistan and Tajikistan were accepted into the USSR as Union Republics. The remaining districts of Turkestan populated by Kazakhs were united with Kazakhstan which was established as an Autonomous Soviet Republic in 1925 and became a constituent republic in 1936. Independence was declared on 16 Dec. 1991 when Kazakhstan joined the CIS. Nursultan Nazarbaev became president, and legislation has been introduced to award him privileges for life. Over a million of the country's ethnic Russians and Germans have returned to their homelands in the last ten years. Kazakhstan has been focusing on border disputes with China and Uzbekistan and fighting fundamentalism along with other Central Asian governments.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Kazakhstan is bounded in the west by the Caspian Sea and Russia, in the north by Russia, in the east by China and in the south by Uzbekistan, Kyrgyzstan and Turkmenistan. The area is 2,724,900 sq. km (1,052,100 sq. miles). The 1999 census population was 14,953,000 (density of 5·5 per sq. km), of whom Kazakhs accounted for 53·4% and Russians 30·0%. There are also Ukrainians, Uzbeks, Germans, Tatars, Uigurs and smaller minorities. In 1997 the population was 51·4% female; it was 56·4% urban in 1999. During the 1990s some 1·5m. people left Kazakhstan—mostly Russians and Germans returning to their homelands. Approximately 10·8m. Kazakhs live abroad.

The UN gives a projected population for 2010 of 15·8m.

Kazakhstan consists of 14 provinces as follows, with area and population:

	Area (sq. km)	Population (1996)		Area (sq. km)	Population (1996)
Almaty[1]	224,200	2,141,100	Pavlodar	124,800	921,000

[1]Formerly Alma-Ata. [2]Formerly Tselinograd and then Akmola. [3]Formerly Gurev. [4]Formerly Dzhambul.

In Dec. 1997 the capital was moved from Almaty to Aqmola, which was renamed Astana in May 1998 (the name of the province remained as Aqmola). Astana has a population of 313,000 (2000). Other major cities, with 2000 populations: Almaty (1,129,000); Qaraghandy (437,000); Shymkent (360,000).

The official language is Kazakh.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

1999: births, 209,039; deaths, 144,450. Rates, 1999 (per 1,000 population): births, 14·0; deaths, 9·7. Suicides in 1996 numbered 4,796 (rate of 30·1 per 100,000 population). Expectation of life at birth, 1999, 58·9 years for males and 70·2 years for females. Annual population growth rate, 1990–99, –0·3%; infant mortality, 1999, 20·8 per 1,000 live births; fertility rate, 1999, 2·2 births per woman.

CLIMATE

The climate is generally fairly dry. Winters are cold but spring comes earlier in the south than in the far north. Almaty, Jan. –4°C, July 24°C. Annual rainfall 598 mm.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

Relying on a judgement of the Constitutional Court that the 1994 parliamentary elections were invalid, President Nazarbaev dissolved parliament on 11 March 1995 and began to rule by decree. A referendum on the adoption of a new constitution was held on 30 Aug. 1995. The electorate was 8·8m.; turn-out was 80%. 89% of votes cast were in favour. The Constitution thus adopted allows the President to rule by decree and to dissolve parliament if it holds a no-confidence vote or twice rejects his nominee for Prime Minister. It establishes a parliament consisting of a 39-member Senate (two selected by each of the elected assemblies of Kazakhstan's 16 principal administrative divisions plus seven appointed by the president); and a lower house of 77 (67 popularly elected by single mandate districts, with 10 members elected by party-list vote). The constitution was amended in Oct. 1998 to provide for a seven-year presidential term.

A Constitutional Court was set up in Dec. 1991 and a new Constitution adopted on 28 Jan. 1993, but President Nazarbaev abolished the Constitutional Court in 1995. In June 2000 a bill to provide President Nazarbaev with life-long powers and privileges was passed into law.

National Anthem. 'Zharalghan namystan qaharman khalyqpyz' ('We are brave people, children of honesty'); words by M. Alimbaev, tune by M. Tulebayev and Y. Brusilovsky.

RECENT ELECTIONS

At the presidential elections of 10 Jan. 1999 Nursultan Nazarbaev was re-elected with 79·8% of votes cast against three other candidates.

At the elections of 10 and 24 Oct. 1999 for the National Assembly, Republican Party Otan won 23 seats, the Civil Party 13 seats, the Communist Party 3, the Agrarian Party 3, National Co-operative Party 1 and non-partisans 34. Three seats were vacant.

DEFENCE

In 1991 the former Soviet Union transferred extensive equipment to storage bases in Kazakhstan. However, it is deteriorating. A US funded programme for nuclear dismantlement and demilitarization continues.

Defence expenditure in 2000 totalled US$357m. (US$22 per capita), representing 2·0% of GDP.

Army. Personnel, 1999, 46,800. Paramilitary units: Republican Guard (2,500), Ministry of the Interior Security Troops (20,000), Frontier Guards (12,000).

Navy. Formally constituted in Aug. 1996, a force of 250 personnel (1999) operates on the Caspian Sea.

Air Force. In 1999 there was an Air Force division with about 19,000 personnel with some 131 combat aircraft, including MiG-29 and Su-27 interceptors and MiG-27 and Su-24 strike aircraft.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

In Jan. 1995 agreements were reached for closer integration with Russia, including the combining of military forces, currency convertibility and a customs union.

Kazakhstan is a member of the UN, CIS, OSCE, Asian Development Bank, ECO, IOM, OIC and the NATO Partnership for Peace. Sandwiched between Russia and China, in 1998 President Nazarbaev signed major treaties with both countries in the hope of improving relations with both. Kazakhstan hopes to become a member of the WTO before the end of 2003.

ECONOMY

Agriculture accounted for 9·2% of GDP in 1998, industry 31·2% and services 59·6%.

Overview. A National Council for Economic Reform was instituted in Jan. 1993. A privatization programme for 1993–95 envisaged the sale of most state enterprises with more than 200 employees by a combination of cash and vouchers. Enterprises of national importance remain controlled by the government through holding companies. Economic reform embraces wholesale privatization, the reform of financial and credit systems, the liberalization of prices for goods and services, the adoption of a system of free trade and the attraction of foreign investment.

Currency. The unit of currency is the tenge of 100 tiyn, which was introduced on 15 Nov. 1993 at 1 tenge = 500 roubles. It became the sole legal tender on 25 Nov. 1993. Inflation was running at nearly 1,880% in 1994, but dropped dramatically and was only 8·3% in 2001. In June 2002 foreign exchange reserves were US$2,280m. and gold reserves amounted to 1·74m. troy oz. Total money supply in May 2002 was 258,470m. tenge.

Budget. Government revenue and expenditure (in 1m. tenge), year ending 31 Dec.:

	1997	1998	1999	2000
Revenue	292,567	262,916	207,765	317,747
Expenditure	332,507	318,253	304,150	372,612

Performance. The break-up of the Soviet Union triggered an economic collapse as orders from Russian factories for Kazakhstan's metals and phosphates, two mainstays of the economy, dried up. Low oil and commodity prices cut revenues by a third in 1998. Real GDP growth was –1·9% in 1998 but there was a slight recovery in 1999, with growth of 2·7%. In 2000 growth was an impressive 9·8% and in 2001 an even more spectacular 13·2%. Total GDP in 2001 was US$22·6bn.

Banking and Finance. The central bank and bank of issue is the National Bank (Governor, Grigory Aleksandrovich Marchenko). In 2001 there were 44 domestic banks, with assets totalling US$5·3bn. Foreign direct investment amounted to US$2·8bn. in 2001, more than double the 2000 total.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Environment. According to the World Bank Atlas carbon dioxide emissions in 1998 were the equivalent of 8·2 tonnes per capita.

Electricity. Installed capacity is 17m. kW. Output in 1998 was 49·3bn. kWh. There is one nuclear power station. Consumption per capita was 2,399 kWh in 1998.

Oil and Gas. Proven oil reserves in 1999 were 8bn. bbls. The onshore Tengiz field has estimated oil reserves between 6bn. and 9bn. bbls.; the onshore Karachaganak field has oil reserves of 2bn. bbls., and gas reserves of 600,000m. cu. metres. Output of crude oil (including gas concentrates), 1996, 22·9m. tonnes (1997 estimate, 26·2m. tonnes); natural gas, 1999, 9·2bn. cu. metres with proven reserves of 1,840bn. cu. metres. The first major pipeline for the export of oil from the Tengiz field was opened in March 2001, linking the Caspian port of Atyraū with the Russian Black Sea port of Novorossiisk. In Sept. 1997 Kazakhstan signed oil agreements with China worth US$9·5bn.; these include a 3,000 km pipeline to Xinjiang province in western China. Oil and gas investment by foreign companies is now driving the economy. In 1997 oil production sharing deals were concluded with two international consortia to explore the North Caspian basin and to develop the Karachaganak gas field. A huge new offshore oilfield in the far north of the Caspian Sea, known as East Kashagan, was discovered in early 2000. The field could prove to be the largest find in the last 30 years, and estimates suggest that it may contain 50bn. bbls. of oil. However, tangible results are unlikely to be achieved until 2005 at the earliest. The various recent discoveries have meant that by 2010 Kazakhstan aims to have become the world's sixth largest oil producer.

It is hoped that exploitation of the oil reserves of the Caspian shelf will start during 2003. Initially production is expected to amount to 100,000 bbls. per day, possibly rising to as much as 1·2m. bbls. per day by 2013. It is believed that there may be as much as 14bn. tonnes of oil and gas reserves under Kazakhstan's portion of the Caspian Sea.

Minerals. Kazakhstan is extremely rich in mineral resources, including coal, bauxite, cobalt, vanadium, iron ores, chromium, phosphates, borates and other salts, copper, lead, manganese, molybdenum, nickel, tin, gold, silver, tungsten and zinc. Coal production (1997 estimate, in tonnes), 72·6m.; iron ore (1998), 9m.; lignite (1997), 2·47m.; bauxite (1998), 3·44m.; steel (1996), 3·22m.; copper (1998), 337,000; uranium (1998), 1,250 gold (1997), 12.

Agriculture. Kazakh agriculture has changed from primarily nomad cattle breeding to production of grain, cotton and other industrial crops. In 1997 agriculture accounted for 12% of GDP and there were 30m. ha of arable land and 0·13m. ha of permanent crops. In 1993, 181·3m. ha were under cultivation, of which private subsidiary agriculture accounted for 0·3m. ha and commercial farming 6·3m. ha in 16,300 farms. Around 60,000 private farms have emerged since independence.

Tobacco, rubber plants and mustard are also cultivated. Kazakhstan has rich orchards and vineyards, which accounted for 95,000 ha of cultivated land in 1985. Kazakhstan is noted for its livestock, particularly its sheep, from which excellent quality wool is obtained. Livestock (2000): 4·00m. cattle (down from 9·57m. in 1993), 9·78m. sheep (down from 33·63m. in 1993), 1·03m. pigs, 942,000 horses, 705,000 goats and 18m. chickens.

Output of main agricultural products (in 1,000 tonnes) in 2000: wheat, 9,091; potatoes, 1,694; barley, 1,663; watermelons, 902; onions, 300; tomatoes, 280; sugarbeets, 269; seed cotton, 258; maize, 247; rice, 213; cabbages, 200. Livestock products, 2000 (in 1,000 tonnes): milk, 3,605; meat, 644; eggs, 86. Kazakhstan is a major exporter of grain to Russia, but in recent years there has been a significant reduction in the quantity exported as a result of low crop yields coupled with the need to meet domestic demand.

Forestry. Forests covered 10·50m. ha in 1995, or 3·9% of the land area (up from 9·54m. ha and 3·6% in 1990). Only the USA and Uzbekistan exceeded the 0·96m. ha afforested in Kazakhstan between 1990 and 1995. In 1999, 315,000 cu. metres of timber were cut.

Fisheries. Catches in 1999 totalled 25,758 tonnes, exclusively freshwater fish.

INDUSTRY

Kazakhstan was heavily industrialized in the Soviet period, with non-ferrous metallurgy, heavy engineering and the chemical industries prominent. Output was valued at 30,000m. tenge in current prices in 1996 and 35,000m. tenge in 1997. Production (1997 estimate, in tonnes) included ferroalloy, 680,000; cement, 661,000; mineral fertilizer, 200,000; chemical fibre, 1,900 (1993); cardboard, 7,400

(1996); lead, 85,000; fabrics, 24·6m. sq. metres; leather footwear, 0·8m. pairs; tractors, 3,100 units; radio sets, 600 units; refrigerators and freezers, 12,900 units (1993); washing machines, 23,200 units.

Labour. In 1996 the population of working age was estimated as 7·4m. In 2000 the unemployment rate was 3·7%.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

In Jan. 1994 an agreement to create a single economic zone was signed with Kyrgyzstan and Uzbekistan. Since Jan. 1992 individuals and enterprises have been able to engage in foreign trade without needing government permission, except for goods 'of national interest' (fuel, minerals, mineral fertilizers, grain, cotton, wool, caviar and pharmaceutical products) which may be exported only by state organizations. Foreign debt was US$6,664m. in 2000.

Imports and Exports. In 2000 imports (f.o.b.) were valued at US$6,849·8m. and exports (f.o.b.) at US$9,615·4m. In 1999, 36·7% of imports came from Russia, 25·3% from the EU (Germany being the largest source) and 9·5% from the USA. Main export markets in 1999 were the EU (22·9% of all exports), Russia (19·8%) and China (8·5%). Main imports: machinery and parts, and industrial materials. Main exports: oil, ferrous and non-ferrous metals, and cotton.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. In 1998 there were estimated to be 119,390 km of motor roads, of which 18,884 were national roads. In 1997 an estimated 1bn. passengers used public transport and 1bn. tonnes of freight were carried. Passenger cars in use in 1998 numbered 971,170 (62 per 1,000 inhabitants), and there were also 270,198 trucks and vans and 44,295 buses and coaches. There were 2,026 fatalities as a result of road accidents in 1997.

Rail. In 1997 there were estimated to be 14,400 km of 1,520 mm gauge railways (3,528 km electrified 1994). Passenger-km travelled in 1998 came to 10·7bn. and freight tonne-km to 99·4bn.

Civil Aviation. The national carrier is Air Kazakhstan. There is an international airport at Almaty, which in 1996 handled 1,745,000 passengers and 20,800 tonnes of freight. In 1999 scheduled airline traffic of Kazakhstan-based carriers flew 33·2m. km, carrying 667,000 passengers (318,000 on international flights).

Shipping. There is one large port, Aktau. In 1993, 1·2m. passengers and 4m. tonnes of freight were carried on inland waterways. Merchant shipping totalled 12,000 GRT in 1995.

Telecommunications. Main telephone lines numbered 1,834,200 in 2000, or 113·1 per 1,000 persons. There were 49,500 mobile phone subscribers in 1998 and 1,600 fax machines in 1997. Kazakhstan had 70,000 Internet users in Dec. 1999.

Postal Services. In 1995 there were 4,355 post offices.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. In 1994, 201,796 crimes were reported; in 1996 there were 2,986 murders. The population in penal institutions in 1997 was 82,945 (495 per 100,000 of national population). The death penalty is in force.

Religion. There were some 4,000 mosques in 1996 (63 in 1990). An Islamic Institute opened in 1991 to train imams. A Roman Catholic diocese was established in 1991. In 1995 the Union of Evangelical Baptist Churches had 140 communities, the Russian Orthodox Church 177, and the Evangelical Lutheran Church 112.

Education. In Jan. 1994, 0·7m. children (39% of those eligible) were attending pre-school institutions. In 1996–97 there were 1,342,035 pupils at primary schools, 1,921,302 pupils at secondary schools and, in 1995–96, 419,460 students at higher education institutions. Adult literacy rate is more than 99%.

Health. In 1995 there were 62,290 doctors, and in Jan. 1994, 187,000 junior medical personnel and 1,899 hospitals with 225,000 beds.

Welfare. In Jan. 1994 there were 2·1m. age and 0·9m. other pensioners. Pension contributions are 20% of salary and are payable to the State Pension Fund.

CULTURE

Broadcasting. Broadcasting is the responsibility of the Kazakh State Radio and Television Co. There are three national and 13 regional radio programmes, a Radio Moscow relay and a foreign service, Radio Alma-Ata (Kazakh, English). There is one TV channel (colour by SECAM). There were 6·47m. radio receivers and 3·88m. television receivers in 1997.

Cinema. In 1995 there were 1,580 cinemas with an annual attendance of 6·2m.; gross box office receipts came to 39m. tenge. Ten full-length films were made.

Press. In 1995 there were 472 periodicals in Kazakh, 511 in Russian and 60 in both languages. There is frequent harassment of independent journalists.

Tourism. Foreign tourists brought in revenue of US$289m. in 1998.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Prior to colonialism, the area comprised African farming communities, notably the Kikuyu and the Masai. From the 16th century through to the 19th, they were loosely controlled by the Arabic rulers of Oman. In 1895 the British declared part of the region the East Africa Protectorate, which from 1920 was known as the Colony of Kenya. The influx of European settlers was resented by Africans not only for the whites' land holdings but also for their exclusive political representation in the colonial Legislative Council. A state of emergency existed between Oct. 1952 and Jan. 1960 during the period of the Mau Mau uprising. Over 13,000 Africans and 100 Europeans were killed. The Kenya African Union was banned and its president, Jomo Kenyatta, imprisoned. The state of emergency ended in 1960. Full internal self-government was achieved in 1962 and in Dec. 1963 Kenya became an independent member of the Commonwealth. In 1982 Kenya became a one-party state and in 1986 party preliminary elections were instituted to reduce the number of parliamentary candidates at general elections. Only those candidates obtaining over 30% of the preliminary vote were eligible to stand. On the death of Kenyatta in Aug. 1978 Daniel T. arap Moi, the vice-president, became acting president and was elected in 1979, and then re-elected in 1983, 1988, 1992 and 1997. An attempted coup in 1982 was unsuccessful. A multi-party election was permitted in 1992 and again in 1997, the first genuinely competitive elections since 1963.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Kenya is bounded by Sudan and Ethiopia in the north, Uganda in the west, Tanzania in the south and Somalia and the Indian Ocean in the east. The total area is 582,646 sq. km, of which 571,416 sq. km is land area. In the 1989 census the population was 21,443,636 (19% urban; up to 32·1% by 1999). The 1999 census gave a population of 28,686,607 (14,481,018 females).

The UN gives a projected population for 2010 of 36·941m.

The land areas, populations and capitals of the provinces are:

Province	Sq. km	Census 1999	Capital	Census 1989
Rift Valley	182,413	6,987,036	Nakuru	163,927
Eastern	154,354	4,631,779	Embu	26,525
Nyanza	12,507	4,392,196	Kisumu	192,733
Central	13,236	3,724,159	Nyeri	91,258
Western	8,285	3,358,776	Kakamega	58,862
Coast	84,113	2,487,264	Mombasa	461,753
Nairobi	693	2,143,254
North-Eastern	126,186	962,143	Garissa	31,319

In 1999 Nairobi had a population of 2,205,000. Other towns (1989): Machakos (116,293), Eldoret (111,882), Meru (94,947), Thika (57,603).

Most of Kenya's 26·44m. people belong to 13 tribes, the main ones including Kikuyu (about 22% of the population), Luhya (14%), Luo (13%), Kalenjin (12%), Kamba (11%), Gusii (6%), Meru (5%) and Mijikenda (5%).

Swahili is the official language, but people belonging to the different tribes have their own language as their mother tongue. English is spoken in commercial centres.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

1995 births, 1,013,000; deaths, 312,000. Birth rate (per 1,000 population), 1995, 37·3; death rate, 11·5. Annual population growth rate, 1990–99, 2·6%. Expectation of life at birth in 1999 was 50·4 years for males and 52·2 years for females. Infant mortality, 1999, 76 per 1,000 live births. Fertility rate, 1999, 4·2 births per woman, down from 6·1 in 1990. In 2000 more than half of Kenyans lived below the poverty line, up by over 10% in the space of 10 years.

CLIMATE

The climate is tropical, with wet and dry seasons, but considerable differences in altitude make for varied conditions between the hot, coastal lowlands and the plateau, where temperatures are very much cooler. Heaviest rains occur in April and May, but in some parts there is a second wet season in Nov. and Dec. Nairobi, Jan. 65°F (18·3°C), July 60°F (15·6°C). Annual rainfall 39" (958 mm). Mombasa, Jan. 81°F (27·2°C), July 76°F (24·4°C). Annual rainfall 47" (1,201 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

There is a unicameral National Assembly, which until the Dec. 1997 elections had 200 members, comprising 188 elected by universal suffrage for a five-year term, ten members appointed by the President, and the Speaker and Attorney-General ex officio. Following a review of constituency boundaries, the National Assembly now has 210 elected members, 12 members appointed and the two ex officio members, making 224 in total. The President is also directly elected for five years; he appoints a Vice-President and other Ministers to a Cabinet over which he presides. A constitutional amendment of Aug. 1992 stipulates that the winning presidential candidate must receive a nationwide majority and also the vote of 25% of electors in at least five of the eight provinces. The sole legal political party had been the Kenya African National Union (KANU), but after demonstrations by the pro-reform lobby which led to extreme violence, KANU agreed to legalize opposition parties. A Constitutional Review Commission was established in 1997 to amend the Constitution before elections that were scheduled for 2002. In Sept. 2002 the Commission recommended changes to Kenya's system of government, including the curbing of presidential powers and the introduction of an executive prime ministerial position. However, in Oct. 2002 President Daniel arap Moi announced the dissolution of parliament before the Commission had completed its task, preventing a new constitution from being in place in time for the elections.

National Anthem. 'Ee Mungu nguvu yetu' ('Oh God of all creation'); words by a collective, tune traditional.

RECENT ELECTIONS

Presidential elections held on 27 Dec. 2002 were won by Mwai Kibaki of the opposition National Rainbow Coalition (NARC) with 62·2% of the vote, against 31·3% for Uhuru Kenyatta, candidate of the ruling Kenya African National Union (KANU), and 5·9% for Simeon Nyachae of the Forum for the Restoration of Democracy-People (FORD-People). Turn-out was 56·1%. Mwai Kibaki's victory ended nearly 40 years of KANU rule since Kenya became independent in 1963.

In parliamentary elections also held on 27 Dec. 2002 NARC won 125 of 210 seats, KANU 64, FORD-People 14, Sisi Kwa Sisi 2, Safina 2, Forum for the Restoration of Democracy-Asili 2 and Shirikisho Party of Kenya 1.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

President: Mwai Kibaki; b. 1931 (NARC; sworn in 30 Dec. 2002).

Following the elections of 27 Dec. 2002 a new cabinet was formed, composed in March 2003 as follows:

Vice President: Michael Kijana Wamalwa.

Minister of Agriculture and Livestock Development: Kipruto Kirwa. Co-operative Development: Peter Njeru Ndwiga. Education, Science and Technology: George Saitoti. Energy: Ochilo Ayacko. Environment, Natural Resources and Wildlife: Dr Newton Kulundu. Finance: David Mwiraria. Foreign Affairs: Kalonzo Musyoka. Gender, Sports, Culture and Social Services: Najib Balala. Health: Charity Ngilu. Home Affairs and National Heritage: Moody Awori. Justice and Constitutional Affairs: Kiraitu Murungi. Labour and Manpower Development: Vacant. Lands and Settlement: Amos Kimunya. Local Government: Emmanuel Karisa Maitha. Planning and National Development: Peter Anyang Nyongo. Roads, Public Works and Housing: Raila Odinga. Tourism and Information: Raphael Tuju. Trade and Industry: Dr Mukhisa Kituyi. Transportation and Communication: John Michuki. Water Resources: Martha Karua. Attorney-General: Amos Wako.

DEFENCE

In 2000 defence expenditure totalled US$307m. (US$10 per capita), representing 2·9% of GDP.

Army. Total strength (1999) 20,500. In addition there is a paramilitary Police General Service Unit of 5,000.

Navy. The Navy, based in Mombasa, consisted in 1999 of 1,200 personnel.

Air Force. An air force, formed on 1 June 1964, was built up with RAF assistance. Equipment includes F-5E/F-5F attack jets. Personnel (1999) 2,500, with 30 combat aircraft and 34 armed helicopters.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

Kenya is a member of the UN, WTO, the Commonwealth, the African Union, African Development Bank, COMESA, EAC, the Intergovernmental Authority on Development, IOM and is an ACP member state of the ACP-EU relationship.

In Nov. 1999 a treaty was signed between Kenya, Tanzania and Uganda to create a new East African Community as a means of developing East African trade, tourism and industry and laying the foundations for a future common market and political federation.

ECONOMY

Services contributed 57·7% of GDP in 1998, agriculture 26·1% and industry 16·2%.

Kenya used to have one of the strongest economies in Africa but years of mismanagement and corruption have had a detrimental effect, made worse in 2000 by one of the longest droughts in living memory. Up to US$1bn. in international aid was frozen during the Moi era because Kenya failed to pass anti-corruption legislation.

Overview. Since a privatization programme was launched in 1992, the government has completed the sale of the majority of the 207 enterprises originally targeted. In 1996 a Presidential Economic Commission was set up to implement reforms to public companies over 1996–98. A US$215m. IMF loan agreement signed in April 1995 was suspended in 1997 while the government considered measures against corruption. However, in July 2000 the IMF decided to release US$198m. and the World Bank announced in Aug. 2000 that it would lend a further US$150m.

Currency. The monetary unit is the Kenya shilling (KES) of 100 cents. The currency became convertible in May 1994. The shilling was devalued by 23% in April 1993. The annual rate of inflation was 5·8% in 2001. Foreign exchange reserves were US$1,120m. in June 2002. Gold reserves have been negligible since 1998. In May 2002 total money supply was 133,063m. shillings.

Budget. In 1998 total government revenue was 178,181m. shillings (145,545m. in 1997) and expenditure was 179,525m. shillings (152,888m. in 1997). The fiscal year ends on 30 June.

Performance. Real GDP growth was negative in 2000, at –0·1%, but 2001 then saw a slight recovery, with growth of 1·2%. Total GDP in 2001 was US$10·4bn.

Banking and Finance. The central bank and bank of issue is the Central Bank of Kenya (Governor, Dr Andrew Mulei, appointed March 2003). There are 50 banks, 40 non-banking financial institutions and a couple of building societies. In March 1995 their combined assets totalled £268,811m. shillings. In 1998 the government offloaded 25% of its stake in the Kenya Commercial Bank, which lowered its shareholding to 35%. The remaining 35% will be sold off before the end of the financial year 2002–03.

There is a stock exchange in Nairobi.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Environment. According to the World Bank Atlas Kenya's carbon dioxide emissions in 1998 were the equivalent of 0·3 tonnes per capita.

Electricity. Installed generating capacity was 1m. kW in 1997; mostly provided by hydropower from power stations on the Tana river, with some from oil-fired power stations and by geothermal power. Production in 1998 was 4·23bn. kWh, with consumption per capita 129 kWh. In 1999 it was decided to encourage the private sector to take part in electricity generation alongside the state-owned Kenya Electricity Generating Company as a means of bringing to an end the shortage of power and the frequent blackouts. In June 2000 a rationing scheme was introduced in much of the country restricting the power supply to 12 hours a day, and sometimes less.

Oil and Gas. Kenya signed an oil and gas exploration deal in 1997 with Canada's Tornado Resources Ltd, who pledged to commit a minimum of US$7m. over a three-year period.

Minerals. Production, 1995 (in 1,000 tonnes): soda ash, 218; fluorite, 80; salt, 71. Other minerals included gold, raw soda, lime and limestone, diatomite, garnets and vermiculite.

Agriculture. As agriculture is possible from sea-level to altitudes of over 2,500 metres, tropical, sub-tropical and temperate crops can be grown and mixed farming is pursued. In 1998 there were 4m. ha of arable land and 520,000 ha of permanent crop land. Four-fifths of the country is range-land which produces mainly livestock products and the wild game which is a major tourist attraction.

Tea and coffee are two of the big foreign exchange earners, along with tourism. Horticultural products, particularly flowers, are in fourth position.

Kenya has about 113,000 ha under tea production, and is the world's fourth largest producer and largest exporter of tea. The production is high quality tea, raised in near-perfect agronomic conditions. It is plucked the whole year round, and almost exclusively by hand. In 2000 production was 239,000 tonnes; in 1996 exports were worth US$350m.

Coffee output in 2000 was 67,000 tonnes; 165,000 ha is under coffee production. Some 70% of the total hectarage under coffee is cultivated by 335,000 smallholders, although their production has been in decline in recent years.

Other major agricultural products (2000, in 1,000 tonnes): sugarcane, 4,750; maize, 1,800; cassava, 950; sweet potatoes, 535; plantains, 370; potatoes, 360; pineapples, 280; bananas, 210; sorghum, 133; wheat, 105.

Maize is Kenya's most important food crop with about 1·3m. ha under cultivation and annual production of nearly 2m. tonnes. Sisal, pyrethrum, maize and wheat are crops of major importance in the Highlands, while coconuts, cashew nuts, cotton, sugar, sisal and maize are the principal crops grown at the lower altitudes.

Livestock (2000): cattle, 13·79m.; sheep, 7·0m.; goats, 9·6m.; camels, 850,000; chickens, 27m.

More than half the agricultural labour force is employed in the livestock sector, accounting for 10% of GDP.

Forestry. Forests covered 1·29m. ha in 1995 (2·3% of the land area), mainly between 1,800 and 3,300 metres above sea-level. There are coniferous, broad-leaved, hardwood and bamboo forests. Timber production was 29·91m. cu. metres in 1999.

Fisheries. Catches in 1999 totalled 205,287 tonnes, of which 198,653 tonnes were freshwater fish. While the aggregate landings from Kenya's inland waters (more than 90% from Lake Victoria) have grown over the past 20 years, marine fishing has not reached its full potential, despite a coastline of 680 km. Fish landed from the sea totals between 5,000 and 7,000 tonnes annually, but there is an estimated potential of 200,000 tonnes in tuna and similar species.

INDUSTRY

In 1994 there were 648 manufacturing firms employing more than 50 persons. The main products are textiles, chemicals, vehicle assembly and transport equipment, leather and footwear, printing and publishing, food and tobacco processing and oil refining. Production included (in tonnes): cement (1997), 1,506,000; sugar (1998), 488,187; maize meal (1994), 233,200; wheat flour (1994), 191,400; animal feed (1988), 184,266; cotton (1996), 28m. sq. metres.

Labour. The labour force in 1996 was 13,953,000 (54% males). In 1997 the unemployment level was close to 3m. The average Kenyan earns US$350 a year.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Foreign debt was US$6,295m. in 2000. Foreign investment on the stock exchange has been permitted since 1 Jan. 1995. Export Processing Zones were introduced in 1990, offering foreign companies exemption from taxes and duties for ten years.

Imports and Exports. Imports and exports for calendar years in US$1m.:

	1996	1997	1998	1999	2000
Imports f.o.b.	2,598·2	2,948·4	3,028·7	2,731·8	3,044·0
Exports f.o.b.	2,083·3	2,062·6	2,017·0	1,748·6	1,773·4

Principal exports (in 1,000m. shillings) 1994: tea, 16·9; coffee, 13; horticultural produce, 8·3. Imports: petroleum, 18·6; machinery and transport equipment, 31·8; chemicals (1993), 19·9; manufactures, 14·7.

Main import suppliers, 1996: UK, 13·2%; United Arab Emirates, 8·2%; Japan, 7·4%; Germany, 6·1%. Main export markets, 1996: Uganda, 15·4%; Tanzania, 12·0%; UK, 10·8%; Germany, 7·7%.

The UK is the largest foreign investor in Kenya with over US$1,500m. in more than 60 enterprises.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. Of some 63,800 km of roads in 1996, only about 8,900 km, or 14%, have been surfaced. More than 80,000 km of roads are unclassified. The network has seriously deteriorated since the mid 1980s through poor maintenance. Urban roads comprise around 7,000 km, or about 5% of the total road network, but less than half of them are classified as ‘good’ or in ‘fair’ condition. Yet more than 70% of all vehicles in the country use urban roads because of the heavy concentration of economic activities in urban areas. Overall, more than 80% of passengers and freight are carried on the roads. There were, in 1996, 278,000 passenger cars, 32,000 motorcycles, 62,000 vans and trucks and 19,200 buses and coaches. There were 11,785 road accidents in 1994 (2,424 fatal).

Rail. In 1994 route length was 2,506 km of metre-gauge. Passenger-km travelled in 1998 came to 432m. and freight tonne-km to 1,111m. Kenya Railways Corporation (KRC) is restructuring in preparation for privatization. In 2003 the Kenyan and Ugandan governments agreed to sell KRC and Uganda Railways Corporation to a single investor.

Civil Aviation. There are international airports at Nairobi (Jomo Kenyatta International) and Mombasa (Moi International). The national carrier is the now privatized Kenya Airways. KLM has a 26% share of Kenya Airways. In 1999 Kenya Airways flew 22·5m. km and carried 1,246,000 passengers (807,600 on international flights). In 2000 Jomo Kenyatta International handled 2,734,108 passengers and 135,619 tonnes of freight, and Moi International 853,944 passengers and 2,716 tonnes of freight.

Shipping. The main port is Mombasa, which handled 8·5m. tonnes of cargo in 1998. Container traffic has nearly doubled since 1990 to 217,028 TEUs (twenty-foot equivalent units) in 1996. The merchant marine totalled 21,000 GRT in 1998, including oil tankers 5,000 GRT. In 1998 vessels totalling 8,413,000 NRT entered ports.

Telecommunications. Kenya had 321,500 main telephone lines in 2000, or 10·5 per 1,000 persons. The government aims to improve telephone availability in rural areas from 0·16 lines per 100 persons in 1997 to 1 line per 100 by 2015, and in urban areas from 4 lines to 20 lines per 100 persons. There were 150,000 PCs in 2000 (4·9 per 1,000 persons) and 3,800 fax machines in 1995. In Dec. 2000 there were 200,000 Internet users, and in Nov. 1999 mobile phone subscribers numbered 9,000.

Postal Services. In 1995 there were 1,061 post offices, or one for every 26,000 persons.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. The courts of Justice comprises the court of Appeal, the High Court and a large number of subsidiary courts. The court of Appeal is the final Apellant court in the country and is based in Nairobi. It comprises seven Judges of Appeal. In the course of its Appellate duties the court of Appeal visits Mombasa, Kisumu, Nakuru and Nyeri. The High court with full jurisdiction in both civil and criminal matters comprises a total of 28 puisne Judges. Puisne Judges sit in Nairobi (16), Mombasa (two), Nakuru, Kisumu, Nyeri, Eldoret, Meru and Kisii (one each).

The Magistracy consists of approximately 300 magistrates of various cadres based in all provincial, district and some divisional centres. In addition to the above there are the Kadhi courts established in areas of concentrated Muslim populations: Mombasa, Nairobi, Malindi, Lamu, Garissa, Kisumu and Marsabit. They exercise limited jurisdiction in matters governed by Islamic Law.

There were 17,589 criminal convictions in 1993; the prison population was 41,064 in 1996 (140 per 100,000 of national population).

Religion. In 1992 there were 7·12m. Roman Catholics, 1·94m. Protestants and 1·62m. Muslims. Traditional beliefs persist.

Education. The adult literacy rate in 1999 was 81·5% (88·3% among males and 74·8% among females). In 1994 there were 19,083 pre-primary schools with 27,829 teachers and 951,997 pupils. 5,544,998 pupils were in primary schools in 1995 with 181,975 teachers. In 1995 there were also 632,388 pupils and 41,484 teachers in secondary schools; 20 teacher training schools with 16,461 students; 20 technical training institutes with 8,148 students. There were three polytechnics with 10,836 students, and five universities (Nairobi, Moi, Kenyatta, Egerton and Jomo Kenyatta University College of Agriculture and Technology) with 39,340 students.

Health. In 1994 there were 4,558 doctors and 630 dentists. There were 324 hospitals (with 37,271 beds), 522 health centres and 2,868 sub-centres and dispensaries. Free medical service for all children and adult out-patients was launched in 1965.

CULTURE

Broadcasting. Broadcasting is the responsibility of KBC, which transmits the following services: National (in Swahili), General (English), Central (four languages), Western (six languages), North-Eastern and Coastal (four languages). KBC also provides television programmes, mainly in English and Swahili (colour by PAL). There are several private broadcasting stations, including Kenya Television Network (which broadcasts CNN), Stellavision (which broadcasts Sky News), Capital Radio and Metro FM. The BBC has been awarded a licence to broadcast on the FM frequency. Number of sets in 1997: TV, 730,000; radio, 3·07m.

Press. In 1996 there were four daily papers with a total circulation of 263,000. In May 2002 the Kenyan parliament passed a law making it illegal to sell books, newspapers or magazines that had not been submitted to the government for review.

Tourism. In 1999 there were 943,000 holiday visitors. Once Kenya's fastest growing source of foreign exchange, receipts from tourism had dropped from US$500m. a year to US$256m. a year by 1999. A European Union grant is helping to revive the industry. In 1998 tourism employed approximately 200,000 people and contributed 11% of GDP.

KIRIBATI

Ribaberikin Kiribati
(Republic of Kiribati)

Capital: Bairiki (Tarawa)
Population estimate, 2000: 87,000
GDP per capita: not available
GNP per capita: $910

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The islands that now constitute Kiribati were first settled by early Austronesian-speaking peoples long before the 1st century AD. Fijians and Tongans arrived about the 14th century and subsequently merged with the older groups to form the traditional I-Kiribati Micronesian society and culture. The Gilbert and Ellice Islands were proclaimed a British protectorate in 1892 and annexed at the request of the native governments as the Gilbert and Ellice Islands Colony on 10 Nov. 1915. On 1 Oct. 1975 the Ellice Islands severed constitutional links with the Gilbert Islands and took on a new name, Tuvalu. The Gilberts achieved full independence as Kiribati in 1979. Internal self-government was obtained on 1 Nov. 1976 and independence on 12 July 1979 as the Republic of Kiribati.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Kiribati (pronounced Kiribahss) consists of three groups of coral atolls and one isolated volcanic island, spread over a large expanse of the Central Pacific with a total land area of 717·1 sq. km (276·9 sq. miles). It comprises Banaba or Ocean Island (5 sq. km), the 16 Gilbert Islands (295 sq. km), the 8 Phoenix Islands (55 sq. km), and 8 of the 11 Line Islands (329 sq. km), the other 3 Line Islands (Jarvis, Palmyra Atoll and Kingman Reef) being uninhabited dependencies of the USA. The capital is the island of Bairiki in Tarawa. The gradual rise in sea levels in recent years is slowly reducing the area of the islands.

Population, 2000 census (provisional), 84,678 (42,851 females); density, 118·1 per sq. km.

In 1995 an estimated 64·3% of the population lived in rural areas. Between 1995 and 2000 the number of people living in urban areas increased by 6·4%. Between 1988 and 1993, 4,700 people were resettled on Teraina and Tabuaeran atolls because the main island group was overcrowded. Since then the government's programme has been suspended owing to the need to improve the physical infrastructure and housing.

The population distribution at the 2000 census was 49·4% in the Outer Islands, 42·9% in South Tarawa (urban area) and 7·7% in the Line and Phoenix Islands. Banaba, all 16 Gilbert Islands, Kanton (or Abariringa) in the Phoenix Islands and 3 atolls in the Line Islands (Teraina, Tabuaeran and Kiritimati—formerly Washington, Fanning and Christmas Islands respectively) are inhabited; their populations in 1995 (census) were as follows:

Banaba (Ocean Is.)	339	Abemama	3,442	Nikunau	2,009
Makin	1,830	Kuria	971	Onotoa	1,918
Butaritari	3,909	Aranuka	1,015	Tamana	1,181
Marakei	2,724	Nonouti	3,042	Arorae	1,248
Abaiang	6,020	Tabiteuea	4,787	Kanton	83
Tarawa	32,354	North Tabiteuea	3,383	Teraina	978
North Tarawa	4,004	South Tabiteuea	1,404	Tabuaeran	1,615
South Tarawa	28,350	Beru	2,784	Kiritimati	3,225
Maiana	2,184

The remaining 12 atolls have no permanent population; the seven Phoenix Islands comprise Birnie, Rawaki (formerly Phoenix), Enderbury, Manra (formerly Sydney), Orona (formerly Hull), McKean and Nikumaroro (formerly Gardner), while the others are Malden and Starbuck in the Central Line Islands, and Millennium Island (formerly Caroline), Flint and Vostok in the Southern Line Islands. The population is almost entirely Micronesian.

English is the official language; I-Kiribati (Gilbertese) is also spoken.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

1997 births (estimate), 2,200; deaths, 600. 1997 estimated birth rate, 26·8 per 1,000 population; death rate, 7·7 per 1,000; infant mortality rate, 51·5 per 1,000 live births; life expectancy, 62·3 years. Annual population growth rate, 1990–99, 1·4%; fertility rate, 1999, 4·2 births per woman.

CLIMATE

The Line Islands, Phoenix Islands and Banaba have a maritime equatorial climate, but the islands further north and south are tropical. Annual and daily ranges of temperature are small; mean annual rainfall ranges from 50" (1,250 mm) near the equator to 120" (3,000 mm) in the north. Typhoons are prevalent (Nov.–March) and there are occasional tornadoes. Tarawa, Jan. 83°F (28·3°C), July 82°F (27·8°C). Annual rainfall 79" (1,977 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

Under the constitution founded on 12 July 1979 the republic has a unicameral legislature, the House of Assembly (Maneaba ni Maungatabu), comprising 41 members, 39 of whom are elected by popular vote, and two (the Attorney-General ex officio and a representative from the Banaban community) appointed for a four-year term. The President is directly elected and is both Head of State and government.

National Anthem. 'Teirake kain Kiribati' ('Stand up, Kiribatians'); words and tune by U. Ioteba.

RECENT ELECTIONS

The last House of Assembly elections were held on 29 Nov. and 6 Dec. 2002. As a result Boutokanto Koaava (Pillars of Truth) now dominates parliament, having defeated the ruling Mwaneaaban te Mauri Party (MTM). At the presidential election of 25 Feb. 2003 Teburoro Tito (MTM) was re-elected with 50·4% of votes cast, ahead of Taberannang Timeon (Boutokanto Koaava) with 48·4% and Bakeua Bakeua Tekita with 1·2%.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

On 28 March 2003 President Teburoro Tito was defeated in a no-confidence motion, the opposition winning 21 out of 40 votes. A caretaker government led by the Speaker of Parliament, Taomati Iuta, was installed. New elections were to take place within three months.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

Kiribati is a member of the UN, Commonwealth, Asian Development Bank, the Pacific Islands Forum and the Pacific Community (formerly the South Pacific Commission), and is an ACP member state of the ACP-EU relationship.

ECONOMY

Agriculture accounted for an estimated 14% of GDP in 1996, industry 7% and services 79%.

Currency. The currency in use is the Australian dollar. In 2001 the inflation rate was 7·7%, up from 0·4% in 1999.

Budget. Foreign financial aid, mainly from the UK and Japan, has amounted to 25–50% of GDP in recent years. Budget estimates for 1996 showed revenue at US$33·3m.; expenditure at US$47·7m.

Performance. Real GDP growth was negative in 2000, at –1·7%, but 2001 then saw a slight recovery, with growth of 1·5%.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Environment. According to the World Bank Atlas carbon dioxide emissions were the equivalent of 0·3 tonnes per capita in 1998.

Electricity. Capacity (1994), 5,000 kW; production (1998), 7m. kWh.

Agriculture. Copra and fish represent the bulk of production and exports. The principal tree is the coconut; other food-bearing trees are the pandanus palm and the breadfruit. The only vegetable which grows in any quantity is a coarse calladium (alocasia) with the local name ‘bwabwai’, which is cultivated in pits; taro and sweet potatoes are also grown. Coconut production (2000), 77,000 tonnes; copra, 12,000 tonnes; bananas, 5,000 tonnes; taro, 2,000 tonnes. Principal livestock: pigs (12,000 in 2000).

Fisheries. Tuna fishing is an important industry; licenses are held by the USA, Japan and the Republic of Korea. Catches in 1999 totalled 48,205 tonnes, exclusively from sea fishing.

INDUSTRY

Industry is concentrated on fishing and handicrafts.

Labour. The economically active population in paid employment (not including subsistence farmers) totalled 11,167 in 1990. In 1994, 11% were employed in agriculture, 4% in industry and 85% in services. Some 70% of the labour force are underemployed; 2% unemployed.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Imports and Exports. Total exports (1995 est.), US$6·3m.; imports, US$38·6m. Main trading partners: the Fiji Islands, USA, Australia, Japan and New Zealand. Principal exports: copra, seaweed, fish; imports: foodstuffs, machinery and equipment, manufactured goods and fuel.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. There were (1996) 670 km of roads.

Civil Aviation. There were 20 airports in 1996 (nine paved). In 1998 there were scheduled services from Tarawa (Bonriki) to Tuvalu, the Marshall Islands and to the Fiji Islands.

Shipping. The main port is at Betio (Tarawa). Other ports of entry are Banaba, English Harbor and Kanton. There is also a small network of canals in the Line Islands. The merchant marine fleet totalled 4,000 GRT in 1998.

Telecommunications. Main telephone lines numbered 3,400 in 2000, or 40·3 per 1,000 population. There were 200 fax machines in 1995 and 2,000 PCs in use in 2000 (18·0 per 1,000 persons). Kiribati had 1,000 Internet users in July 2000.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. In 1989 Kiribati had a police force of 232 under the command of a Commissioner of Police. The Commissioner of Police is also responsible for prisons, immigration, fire service (both domestic and airport) and firearms licensing. There is a Court of Appeal and High Court, with judges at all levels appointed by the President.

The population in penal institutions in 1995 was 91 (equivalent to 130 per 100,000 of national population).

Religion. In 1990, 53% of the population were Roman Catholic, 39% Protestant (Congregational); there are also small numbers of Seventh-Day Adventists, Latter-day Saints (Mormons) (6%), Baha’i and Church of God.

Education. In 1997 there were 17,594 pupils and 624 teachers at 86 primary schools and 4,403 pupils in general secondary education with (1996) 260 teachers. There is also a teachers’ training college with 110 students (1995) and a marine training centre offering training for about 100 merchant seamen a year. The Tarawa Technical Institute at Betio (389 students in 1986) offers part-time technical and commercial courses.

Health. In 1993 there were 10 doctors and 147 nurses. There was one hospital in 1990.

Welfare. The government maintains free medical and other services. In 1990 there were 16 doctors and 1 hospital on Tarawa with 283 beds, and dispensaries on other islands.

CULTURE

Broadcasting. Radio Kiribati, a division of the Broadcasting and Publications Authority, transmits daily in English and I-Kiribati from Tarawa. A satellite link to Australia was established in 1985. There were 17,000 radio receivers and 1,000 TV receivers in 1997.

Cinema. There are no cinemas. There is a private-owned projector with film shows once a week in every village on South Tarawa.

Press. There was (1991) one bilingual weekly newspaper. There is one independent newspaper, the weekly Kiribati Newstar.

Tourism. Tourism is in the early stages of development. In 1998 there were 5,000 foreign tourists bringing in revenue of US$1m.

DIPLOMATIC REPRESENTATIVES

Of Kiribati in the United Kingdom
Acting High Commissioner: David Yeeting (resides in Kiribati).

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Korea was united in a single kingdom under the Silla dynasty from 668. China, which claimed a vague suzerainty over Korea, recognized the latter's independence in 1895. After the Russo-Japanese war of 1904–05, Korea was virtually a Japanese protectorate. It was formally annexed on 29 Aug. 1910. Following the collapse of Japan in 1945, American and Soviet forces entered Korea dividing the country into portions separated by the 38th parallel of latitude. Negotiations between the Americans and the Russians regarding the future of Korea broke down in May 1946. In 1948 two separate states were proclaimed. In the south, Syngman Rhee, former president of the Korean government in exile, was elected president of the Republic of Korea, while in the north, Kim Il-sung, a major in the Red Army who had marched back into Korea with the Soviet forces, was proclaimed premier of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea. The US occupation forces withdrew from South Korea in June 1949. Military equipment promised by the USA as part of their aid programme was still on its way to Korea when the North Koreans launched, in June 1950, a full-scale invasion across the 38th parallel. The war, in which North Korea received support from the Chinese army and South Korea from the UN forces and the USA, lasted for three years, killed some 5m. people and destroyed an estimated 43% of Korea's industrial plants and 33% of her homes. It was concluded by an armistice signed on 27 July 1953 which implicitly recognized the 38th parallel and the de facto boundary between North and South Korea.

Syngman Rhee's authoritarian rule collapsed after student demonstrations brought the country to the brink of civil war in April 1960. A military coup in May 1961 led to the dissolution of the National Assembly, the introduction of martial law and the establishment of Gen. Park Chung Hee as president for the next 17 years. Park's assassination in Oct. 1979 threw the country into a state of crisis. A new, more democratic, constitution, approved by both ruling and opposition parties, came into force in 1988. Since then, Korea has created a lively free market economy which has largely avoided East Asia's recent financial troubles.

On 13 June 2000 South Korea's President Kim Dae-jung flew to North Korea to meet the North Korean leader, Kim Jong Il, in the first ever meeting between the heads of state of the two countries. During the three-day summit South Korea agreed to help to rebuild the economy of North Korea in exchange for an end to the threat of war, the opportunity for families to be reunited and the reconnection of the railway link severed since the division of the Korean peninsula in 1945. Co-operation between the two Koreas is increasing, particularly on the economic front through joint business and infrastructure ventures. In Sept. 2002 as relations between the Koreas improved troops began to clear minefields on either side of the border in preparation for the construction of new transport links. In spite of increasing tension between the USA and North Korea, in Feb. 2003 the land border between the two Koreas was opened for the first time in half a century when a group of South Korean tourism officials visited a tourist resort in the North.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

South Korea is bounded in the north by the demilitarized zone (separating it from North Korea), east by the East Sea, south by the Korea Strait (separating it from Japan) and west by the Yellow Sea. The area is 99,538 sq. km. The population (census, 1 Nov. 2000) was 46,136,101 (22,977,519 females); density, 463·5 per sq. km (one of the highest in the world). In 2000 the urban population was 46·3%. The population estimate for July 2002 was 47·64m.

The UN gives a projected population for 2010 of 49·62m.

The official language is Korean. In July 2000 the Korean government introduced a new Romanization System for the Korean Language to romanize Korean words into English.

There are nine provinces (do) and seven metropolitan cities with provincial status. Area and population in 2000:

Province	Area (in sq. km)	Population (in 1,000)	Province	Area (in sq. km)	Population (in 1,000)
Gyeonggi	10,135	8,984	Jeju	1,846	513
Gyeongsangnam	10,516	2,909	Seoul (city)	606	9,895

Seoul: Located in the northwest of the country on the Han River, Seoul has been the capital of Korea since 1394. After Korea was annexed by Japan in 1910, Seoul became the centre for Japanese rule until 1945. The Korean War proved devastating for the city but since then it has expanded rapidly and is now a modern metropolis with one of the highest population densities in the world.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

2001: births, 557,228; deaths, 242,730; marriages, 320,063; divorces, 135,014. Rates per 1,000 population in 2001: birth, 11·6; death, 5·1; marriage, 6·9; divorce, 2·8. Expectation of life at birth, 1999, 79·2 years for females and 71·7 for males. In 1955 life expectancy had been 47 and 62 in 1971. Infant mortality, 2001, 5·1 per 1,000 live births; fertility rate, 1·3 births per woman. Annual population growth rate in 2002 was 0·6%. In 2001 the average age of first marriage was 29·6 for men and 26·8 for women, with 28·0 years being the average age that women had their first child. South Korea has one of the most rapidly ageing populations in the world. In 2002, 7·9% of the population were over 65, up from 2·9% in 1960. There were 14·31m. households in 2000, with on average 3·1 members per household. 11,584 South Koreans emigrated in 2001, down from 15,307 in 2000. Between 1962 and 1998 a total of 847,714 Koreans emigrated, 77·8% of them to the USA. 5·65m. Koreans lived abroad in 2001, including 2·1m. in the USA, 1·9m. in China and 640,000 in Japan.

CLIMATE

The country experiences continental temperate conditions. Rainfall is concentrated in the period April to Sept. and ranges from 40" (1,020 mm) to 60" (1,520 mm). Busan, Jan. 36°F (2·2°C), July 76°F (24·4°C). Annual rainfall 56" (1,407 mm). Seoul, Jan. 23°F (–5°C), July 77°F (25°C). Annual rainfall 50" (1,250 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The 1988 Constitution provides for a President, directly elected for a single five-year term, who appoints the members of the State Council and heads it, and for a National Assembly (Gukhoe), currently of 273 members, directly elected for four years (227 from constituencies and 46 from party lists in proportion to the overall vote).

The minimum voting age is 20.

National Anthem. 'Aegukga' ('A Song of Love for the Country'); words anonymous, tune by Ahn Eaktay.

RECENT ELECTIONS

Presidential elections were held on 19 Dec. 2002. Roh Moo-hyun of the ruling Millennium Democratic Party won with 48·9% of votes cast, against 46·6% for Lee Hoi Chang of the Grand National Party. Turn-out was 70·2%.

Elections to the National Assembly were held on 13 April 2000. 1,179 candidates stood. The electorate was 33,482,387. Turn-out was 57·2%. The Grand National Party (GNP) won 133 seats with 39·0% of votes cast; the Millennium Democratic Party (MDP) 115 (35·9%); the United Liberal Democrats (ULD) 17 (9·8%); the Democratic People's Party (DPP) 2 (3·7%); the New Korea Party of Hope 1 (0·4%). The Democratic Labour Party and the Youth Progress Party both polled a higher percentage than the Party of Hope but failed to claim any seats. Non-partisans took five seats. Only 16 seats were held by women in the National Assembly.

DEFENCE

Peacetime operational control, which had been transferred to the United Nations Command (UNC) under a US general in July 1950 after the outbreak of the Korean War, was restored to South Korea on 1 Dec. 1994. In the event of a new crisis, operational control over the Korean armed forces will revert to the Combined Forces Command (CFC). Conscription is 26 months in the Army, 28 months in the Navy and 30 months in the Air Force. Conscripts may choose or be required to exchange military service for civilian work. There were 37,140 US personnel based in South Korea in 2002.

Defence expenditure in 2001 totalled US$15,388m. (US$259 per capita), representing 2·8% of GDP.

Army. Strength (31 Dec. 2000) 560,000 (140,000 conscripts). Paramilitary Civilian Defence Corps, 6·28m. The armed forces reserves numbered 3·04m.

Navy. In 2000 the navy had a substantial force of 67,000 (19,000 conscripts), including 25,000 marine corps troops; it continued its steady modernization programme. Current strength includes 160 surface vessels, 20 support vessels, 10 submarines/submersibles and 70 aircraft.

The main bases are at Jinhae, Incheon and Busan.

Air Force. In 2000 the Air Force had a strength of 63,000 men and 540 combat aircraft including 560 fighters, 40 special aircraft and 210 support aircraft.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

Defections to South Korea from North Korea totalled 1,141 in 2002 (583 in 2001, 312 in 2000, 41 in 1995 and 8 in 1993).

South Korea is a member of the UN, WTO, BIS, OECD, Asian Development Bank, Colombo Plan, APEC, IOM and the Antarctic Treaty.

The aim of Korea's foreign policy is to secure international support for peace and stability in Northeast Asia, including a means to reunify the Korean Peninsula without confrontation.

ECONOMY

Agriculture, forestry and fishing accounted for 4·4% of GDP in 2001, industry (including mining, construction and power and water supply) 41·4% and services 54·1%.

Overview. South Korea aims to match competition from China and to achieve a peaceful reunification with North Korea. Inflationary pressures are muted following lower world oil prices and subdued domestic demand. The economy is dependent on international trade. Demand for chips used in mobile phones and computers did boost the economy, but demand has fallen. The chaebol (conglomerates), controlled by their founding families, are dominant in the economy. The most troubled chaebols are disappearing, having been allowed to borrow too heavily against inadequate returns. During 1997 and 1998 more than a dozen of the 64 chaebol went bankrupt and Hyundai was broken up into independent businesses. In Dec. 1997 Korea's international debts were estimated at US$200,000m. An IMF and World Bank rescue was tied to undertakings to transform the economy into one based on market principles instead of state directives. Korea's lack of foreign reserves was also identified as a major problem. Assistance from the IMF and other global financial institutions totalled US$58·3bn.

Reforms so far approved by the National Assembly include greater freedom for the central bank to set monetary policy and the lifting of the 50% ceiling on foreign ownership of listed Korean companies. The Bank of Korea has moved from targeting monetary aggregates to an interest-based policy with a floating exchange rate. The tax system has been reformed, although the ten-year plan to increase competition in the electricity sector (introduced in 1999) has fallen behind.

Currency. The unit of currency is the won (KRW). There was inflation in 2001 of 4·3%. Foreign exchange reserves were US$111,934m. in June 2002 (US$31,928m. in 1995) and gold reserves 442,000 troy oz. Total money supply in May 2002 was 53,335bn. won.

Budget. Revenue and expenditure (in 1,000,000m. won), including bond issuances, at the 2002 budget: 105·8 and 105·8. Sources of revenue: national tax, 93·8; non-tax, 12·0. Expenditure includes: economic development, 27·4; education, 18·5; defence, 17·1; infrastructure, 13·9; general administration, 10·0; contingency, 2·5.

External liabilities in Dec. 2002 were 154,114m. won.

Performance. Total GDP in 2001 was US$422·2bn. GDP growth rate was 5·0% in 1997 (6·8% in 1996 and 8·9% in 1995), but fell to –6·7% for 1998. It was 10·9% in 1999, the highest rate of any of the southeast Asian economies, 9·3% in 2000 and 3·0% in 2001. The 1998 economic performance was the worst since the 1960s.

Banking and Finance. The central bank and bank of issue is the Bank of Korea (Governor, Park Seung). In Oct. 2002 bank deposits totalled 498,886bn. won, of which 447,329bn. won were savings and time deposits.

In Dec. 2001 there were 20 national and provincial commercial banks. The largest bank is Kookmin Bank, with assets in Sept. 2002 of 204,337bn. won (US$171·47bn.). Other major banks are the National Agricultural Cooperative Federation (NACF), Woori (formerly Hanvit) Bank and Chohung Bank. There were 40 foreign banks in Dec. 2002. In Dec. 2001 non-bank financial institutions included 44 insurance companies, 45 securities companies and three merchant banks. The use of real names in financial dealings has been required since 1994.

South Korea has started to open up once protected industries to foreign ownership, and in 2002 attracted US$9·1bn. in foreign direct investment.

There is a stock exchange in Seoul.

Weights and Measures. The metric system is in use alongside traditional measures. 1 gwan = 3·75 kg. 1 pyeong = 3·3 sq. metres.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Environment. According to the World Bank, South Korea's carbon dioxide emissions in 1998 were the equivalent of 7·8 tonnes per capita. An Environmental Sustainability Index compiled for the World Economic Forum meeting in Feb. 2002 ranked South Korea 135th in the world out of 142 countries analysed, with 35·9%. The index measured the ability of countries to maintain favourable environmental conditions and examined various factors including pollution levels and the use or abuse of natural resources.

Electricity. Installed capacity in 2001 was 51m. kW. Electricity generated (2001) was 285,224m. kWh. Sources of power in 2001: nuclear, 39·3%; oil, 9·8%; coal, 38·7%; liquefied natural gas, 10·7%; hydro-electric, 1·5%. There were 17 nuclear reactors in use in 2001. Consumption per capita in 2001 was estimated to be 5,444 kWh.

Oil and Gas. In 2001 the imports of petroleum products amounted to 1,099m. bbls., of which crude oil was 859·4m. bbls. The output of petroleum products was 892·8m. bbls., consumption 743·6m. bbls. and the volume of exports 295·0m. bbls. In 2001, 873·4m. bbls. of crude oil were imported. In Sept. 1999 a massive crude oil terminal was opened at Yeosu, Jeollanam-do. It has a capacity to store more than 30m. bbls.

In 2001 imports of natural gas totalled 16·1m. tonnes, consumption 16·0m. tonnes. The total output of city gas in 2001 was 12,657m. cu. metres as was consumption, of which 8,964m. cu. metres was used for household purposes, 3,376m. cu. metres for industrial use and 1,761m. cu. metres for commercial use. In April 1999 a large underwater gas deposit was discovered off the southeastern coast of the country, which was estimated to contain up to 60bn. cu. metres of natural gas.

Water. Water consumption in 2000 was 33,100m. cu. metres, of which 15,800m. cu. metres was for agricultural purposes, 7,300m. cu. metres was supplied to households and 2,900m. cu. metres was for industrial use. Of the total population, 87·8% had tap water in 2001 and per capita supply was 374 litres per day. As of 2001 there were 1,206 dams with walls higher than 15 metres and containing a total of 17·96bn. cu. metres of water.

Minerals. In 2001, 599 mining companies employed 12,103 people. Output, 2001, included (in tonnes): limestone, 82m.; anthracite coal, 3·82m.; iron ore, 0·2m.; zinc ore, 10,259; lead ore, 1,975; gold, 28,595 kg. The largest gold deposits in South Korea were discovered in Suryun Mine near Daegu in June 1999. The mine contained an estimated 9·9 tonnes of gold, worth approximately US$81m. Salt production averages 500,000 tonnes a year.

Agriculture. Cultivated land was 1·88m. ha in 2001, of which 1·15m. ha were rice paddies. In 2001 the farming population was 3·93m. and there were 1·35m. farms. The agricultural workforce was 2·1m. in 2001. There were 201,089 tractors in 2001.

In 2001, 1·08m. ha were sown to rice. Production (2001, in 1,000 tonnes): rice, 5,515; cabbages, 3,450; onions, 1,078; melons and watermelons, 972; tangerines and mandarins, 645; potatoes, 604; barley, 593; grapes, 454; cucumbers and gherkins, 451; pears, 419; chillies and green peppers, 411; garlic, 406; sweet potatoes, 273.

Livestock in 2001 (in 1,000): cows, 1,954; pigs, 8,720; sheep, 441; chickens, 102,393.

Forestry. Forest area was 6·42m. ha in 2001 (64% of the land area). Total stock was 428·3m. cu. metres. In 1997, 70% of the total forest area was privately owned. Timber production was 1·5m. cu. metres in 2001.

Fisheries. In 2001 there were a total of 94,835 boats (864,853 gross tonnes). 482 deep-sea fishing vessels were operating overseas as of Dec. 2002. The fish catch was 1,907,925 tonnes in 2001, mainly from marine waters.

INDUSTRY

The leading companies by market capitalization in South Korea, excluding banking and finance, in Jan. 2002 were: Samsung Electronics Company Ltd (53trn. won); SK Telecom Company Ltd (24trn. won); and Korea Telecom Corporation (18trn. won).

Manufacturing industry is concentrated primarily on oil, petro-chemicals, chemical fibres, construction, iron and steel, mobile phones, cement, machinery, chips, shipbuilding, automobiles and electronics. Tobacco manufacture is a semi-government monopoly. Industry is dominated by giant conglomerates (chaebol). There were 3·01m. businesses in 2000, of which 261,119 were incorporated. 916,688 businesses were in wholesale and retail trades, 607,718 in dining and accommodation, 329,488 in services, 313,246 in manufacturing and 265,598 in transport and communications. The leading chaebol are Samsung, with assets in early 2001 of 69,873bn. won, Hyundai, with assets of 53,632bn. won, and LG, with assets of 51,965bn. won.

Production in 2001: petroleum products, 857·5m. bbls.; cars (2002), 3·15m.; mobile phones, 90m. Production in 1,000 tonnes: cement, 52,046; crude steel, 43,852; pig iron, 25,898; artificial fertilizers, 3,500.

Shipbuilding orders totalled 6·41m. GT in 2001.

Labour. At Dec. 2001 the population of working age (15 to 59 years) was 36·48m. The economically-active population was 22·18m.; 0·82m. (2001) were registered unemployed. At Nov. 2002, 13·92m. persons were employed in services, 4·2m. in manufacturing, 2·17m. in agriculture, fisheries and forestry, 1·81m. in construction and 19,000 in mining. 6·34m. persons were self-employed in Nov. 2002; unemployment was 2·7%. An annual legal minimum wage is set by the Minimum Wage Act (enforced from 1988), which applies to all industries. From Sept. 2002 to Aug. 2003 it is 18,200 won per day and 514,500 won per month. In Dec. 2001 the average monthly wage was 1·75m. won. In 2001 the working week averaged 47 hours. In 2001 the government announced that a five-day working week would be introduced by 2003. It was implemented in the financial sector in July 2002. Workers in South Korea put in the longest hours of any OECD country.

Trade Unions. At Dec. 2001 there were 6,150 unions with a total membership of 1,568,723. 877,827 workers belong to the government-recognized Federation of Korean Trade Unions. Since 1997 unions have been permitted to engage in political activities, and the ban on more than one union in a work place has been extended up to 2006. The Korean Confederation of Trade Unions (President, Kwon Young-kil), with 643,506 members, is applying pressure on the government to reduce working hours to 40 a week with a five-day week.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Total external foreign debt was US$134,417m. in 2000 (the seventh highest in the world). In May 1998 the government removed restrictions on foreign investment in the Korean stock market. It also began to allow foreign businesses to engage in mergers and acquisitions. From July 1998 foreigners were allowed to buy plots of land for both business and non-business purposes. Since Aug. 1990 South Korean businesses and individuals have been permitted to make investments and set up branch offices in North Korea, on an approval basis. According to the Unification Ministry, the overall volume of inter-Korean trade was US$641m. in 2002 (US$342m. in business transactions and US$298m. in non-profit transactions), a 59·3% increase on 2001.

Imports and Exports. Exports in 2002 (provisional figures) were US$162·8bn.; imports, US$152·0bn. Main import suppliers (in US$1bn.): Japan, 28·83; USA, 22·29; China, 16·86. Main export markets: USA, 31·4; China, 22·77; EU, 20·73; Japan, 16·51 (2001).

Major exports in 2002 included (in US$1bn.): semi-conductor chips, 16·6; continuous woven man-made fibres, 15·6; automobiles, 14·8; codeless communication apparatus, 13·6; computers, 12·9; electrical appliances, 10·7; machinery, 9·2; petro-chemicals, 9·1. Major imports (as of 20 Dec. 2002) included: crude oil, 18·6; semi-conductor chips, 17·0; computers, 5·5; petroleum products, 4·9; liquefied natural gas, 4·0. Rice imports were prohibited until 1994, but following the GATT Uruguay Round the rice market opened to foreign imports in 1995.

Trade Fairs. In 2001 there were about 100 trade fairs hosted by COEX and 30 hosted by BEXCO (Busan). 3,187 Korean companies participated in 145 trade fairs held in other countries supported by KOTRA, the Korea Trade-Investment Agency.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. In 2001 there were 91,396 km of roads, of which 77% (70,146 km) were paved. 10·7m. passengers (2000) and 535·76m. tonnes of freight were carried in 2001. In Dec. 2001 motor vehicles registered totalled 12,914,115, including 8,889,327 passenger cars. There were 991,590 new car registrations in 2002 (by Nov.). In 2001 there were 8,097 fatalities as a result of road accidents (9,353 in 2000). At 16·9 deaths per 100,000 people, South Korea has among the highest death rates in road accidents of any industrialized country.

The first of two planned cross-border roads between the two Koreas opened in Feb. 2003.

Rail. In 2001 the National Railroad totalled 3,127 km of 1,435 mm gauge (667·5 km electrified) and 20 km of 762 mm gauge. In 2001 railways carried 912m. passengers and 45m. tonnes of freight. In June 2000 it was agreed to start consultations to restore the railway from Seoul to Sinuiju, on the North Korean/Chinese border, by rebuilding a 12 km long stretch from Munsan, in South Korea, to Jangdan, on the South Korean/North Korean border, and an 8 km long stretch in North Korea. Work on the restoration began in Sept. 2000 but was delayed in part because of the diplomatic crisis between North Korea and the USA, which escalated in Oct. 2002.

There are metros in Seoul (287 km), and smaller ones in Busan (70·5 km), Daegu (25·7 km) and Incheon (24·6 km).

Civil Aviation. There are six international airports in South Korea: at Seoul (Incheon), Busan (Gimhae), Daegu, Jeju, Yangyang and Cheongju. The new Incheon airport, 50 km to the west of Seoul, built on reclaimed land made up of four small islands, opened in March 2001 and is the largest airport in Asia. It has replaced Gimpo Airport as Seoul's International Airport. The national carrier is Korean Air. Another Korean carrier, Asiana Airlines, also provides services, as did in 2002 around 57 foreign airlines. In 2001, 28·5m. passengers and 423,692 tonnes of cargo were carried on domestic routes and 19·7m. passengers and 1·8m. tonnes of cargo on international routes.

In 2000 Seoul's Gimpo airport handled 36,639,067 passengers (18,738,579 on domestic flights), making it the 13th busiest airport in the world for passenger traffic. It handled 1,846,896 tonnes of freight, making it the fourth busiest for freight. Busan handled 9,358,152 passengers (8,015,414 on domestic flights) and 182,402 tonnes of freight. Jeju handled 9,125,939 passengers (8,793,142 on domestic flights) and 280,031 tonnes of freight.

Shipping. In 2002 there were 51 ports (28 for international trade), including Busan, Incheon, Gunsan, Mokpo, Yeosu, Pohang, Donghae, Jeju, Masan, Ulsan and Daesan. In 1997 the merchant marine comprised 562 vessels totalling 25·15m. DWT, representing 3·4% of the world's tonnage. 298 vessels (66·87% of gross tonnage) were registered under foreign flags. Total GRT, 7·42m., including oil tankers 0·38m. GRT and container ships 1·42m. GRT. In 1997 vessels totalling 578,373,000 NRT entered ports and vessels totalling 584,164,000 NRT cleared. The busiest port is Busan, which in 1999 was visited by 69,429 vessels of 450,033,000 GRT. It is the world's third busiest container port, after Hong Kong and Singapore.

In 2001, 9,340,000 domestic passengers and 1,075,000 international passengers took ferries and other ocean-going vessels. There were 6,586 registered vessels accounting for a tonnage of 6,592,758.

Telecommunications. There were 22,725,000 main telephone lines in 2001 (480 per 1,000 persons). In 2001 public telephones totalled 516,000. By the end of 2001 the number of mobile phone subscribers had risen to 29·0m. (62% of the population). The largest operator, SK Telecom, has 39·5% of the market share, ahead of KTF, with 33·7%. 60·1% of households had PCs in 2002. There were approximately 25·6m. Internet users in July 2002.

Postal Services. As of 2001 there were 3,688 post offices operating, with each myon (administrative unit comprising several villages) having one or more post offices. In 2002 the mail volume totalled 4,498m. items.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. Judicial power is vested in the Supreme Court, High Courts, District Courts and Family Court, as well as the Administrative Court and Patent Court. The single six-year term Chief Justice is appointed by the President with the consent of the National Assembly. The other 13 Justices of the Supreme Court are appointed by the President with the consent of the National Assembly, upon the recommendation of the Chief Justice, for renewable six-year terms; the Chief Justice appoints other judges. The death penalty is authorized. In Jan. 2002 there were 1,508 judges, 1,134 prosecutors and about 3,800 private practising lawyers.

The population in penal institutions in June 1998 was 70,303 (155 per 100,000 of national population).

Religion. Traditionally, Koreans have lived under the influence of shamanism, Buddhism (introduced AD 372) and Confucianism, which was the official faith from 1392 to 1910. Catholic converts from China introduced Christianity in the 18th century, but a ban on Roman Catholicism was not lifted until 1882. The Anglican Church was introduced in 1890 and became an independent jurisdiction in 1993 under the Archbishop of Korea. In 1998 it had 110 churches, 175 priests and some 65,000 faithful. There were also 69,000 Latter-day Saints (Mormons) in 1998. Religious affiliations of the population in 1995 (and 1985): Buddhism, 23·2% (27·7%); Protestantism, 19·7% (18·6%); Roman Catholicism, 6·6% (5·7%); Confucianism, 0·5% (1%); others, 0·7% (1%); no religion, 49·3% (46%).

Education. The Korean education system consists of a six-year elementary school, a three-year middle school, a three-year high school and college and university (two to four years). Elementary education for 6–11 year olds is compulsory. Mandatory middle school education began in 2002.

The total number of schools has increased sixfold from 3,000 in 1945 to 19,124 in 2002, with 11,957,388 enrolled students. In 2002 there were 8,343 kindergartens with 550,256 pupils and 29,673 teachers; 5,384 elementary schools with 4,138,366 pupils and 147,497 teachers; 1,841,030 pupils and 95,283 teachers at 2,809 middle schools; and 1,995 high schools with 1,795,509 pupils and 44,177 teachers. In 2002 there were 163 colleges and universities with 1,771,738 students and 44,177 teachers; 11 teacher training colleges with 23,259 students and 721 teachers; 945 graduate schools with 262,867 students; and 19 industrial universities with 187,040 students and 2,543 teachers. In 1996, 5·6% of the population was enrolled in tertiary education, up from just 0·6% in 1970.

In 1995 total expenditure on education came to 3·1% of GNP and 22·8% of total government spending.

The adult literacy was 98% in 2000 (99% among males and 96% among females).

Around 150,000 South Koreans were studying abroad in 2001.

Health. In 2000 there were 285 general hospitals (with 113,518 beds), 20,053 other hospitals and clinics (130,162 beds), 7,412 oriental medical hospitals and clinics (8,436 beds) and 10,527 dental hospitals and clinics. In 2000 there were 72,503 physicians (648 people per doctor), 10,108 oriental medical doctors, 18,039 dentists, 8,728 midwives (1992), 160,295 nurses and 50,623 pharmacists.

In 1998, 67·6% of all adult men smoked (the highest proportion in any country in the world), but only 6·7% of women were smokers.

Welfare. In Dec. 2001, 16·3m. persons were covered by the National Pension System introduced in 1988. Employers and employees make equal contributions; persons joining by choice or in rural areas pay their own contributions. The System covers age pensions, disability pensions and survivors' pensions.

Under a system of unemployment insurance introduced in July 1995, workers laid off after working at least six months for a member employer are entitled to benefits averaging 50% of their previous wage for a period of 90 up to 240 days.

CULTURE

Broadcasting. The Korean Broadcasting System (KBS) is a public corporation which broadcasts 7 radio channels, 2 terrestrial TV channels and 2 satellite TV channels. KBS maintains a nationwide network that connects the key station in Seoul with 25 local stations. It also maintains ten bureaux overseas. In addition to KBS, there is a semi-public TV broadcaster, Munhwa Broadcasting Corporation (MBC), and one commercial TV network, Education Broadcasting System (EBS). Cable TV was inaugurated in March 1995. It had 3·5m. paying subscribers in 2000 and provided 44 channels. In 2000 there were 950 radio receivers for every 1,000 people and 90 television sets for every 100 people.

Cinema. In 2000 there were 376 cinemas with a seating capacity of 193,775. 48 full-length films were produced in 1999.

Press. There were 123 dailies in 2001 and 6,913 periodicals. The main dailies are Chosun Ilbo (average circulation of 2·4m. per issue), JoongAng Ilbo (average circulation of 2·1m. per issue) and Dong-A Ilbo (average circulation of 2·0m. per issue).

A total of 36,185 book titles and 118m. books were published in 2002.

Tourism. In 2001, 6,084,476 Koreans travelled abroad and 5,147,204 foreign nationals visited South Korea. In 2001 tourist revenues from foreign visitors totalled US$6·4bn.; overseas travel expenditure by Koreans going abroad totalled US$6·5bn. On 18 Nov. 1998 the first South Korean tourists to visit North Korea set sail on a cruise and tour organized by the South Korean firm Hyundai.

Libraries. There were 9,337 libraries in 2001, including 1 national library, 1 congressional, 420 public, 420 university and 7,918 libraries at primary, middle and high schools. There were also 578 specialized and professional libraries.

Theatre and Opera. There are 316 theatres nationwide. 47 have 1,200 seats that can accommodate large-scale dramas, operas, dances and musicals. The Seoul Arts Centre has an opera house.

Museums and Galleries. In 2001 there were 249 museums, including 25 national museums, 36 public museums, 107 private museums and 81 university museums. There were an estimated 500 art galleries in 2001.

Population estimate, 2000: 22·17m.
GDP per capita: not available

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Following the collapse of Japan in 1945 Soviet forces arrived in North Korea, one month ahead of the Americans, and established a Communist-led provisional government. A Democratic People's Republic was proclaimed on 9 Sept. 1948 and Kim Il-sung became premier, purging all rivals. On 25 June 1950 North Korea invaded the south; its advance was stopped with the aid of UN forces. Chinese Communist 'volunteers' joined the war in Oct. 1950. Truce negotiations were begun in 1951 and concluded on 27 July 1953. A demilitarized zone was set up along the final battle line between North and South Korea. On 13 Dec. 1991 the prime ministers of North and South Korea signed a declaration of non-aggression, agreeing not to interfere in each other's internal affairs. Three agreements were reached between the North and South Korean prime ministers in 1992 on proposals for military, economic, political and social co-operation. Kim Il-sung, head of state, Communist Party and the military since 1948, died on 8 July 1994, and was succeeded by his son, Kim Jong Il. On 21 Oct. 1994 an agreement to restrict nuclear power to peaceful purposes in Korea was signed by North Korea and the USA. Since then, negotiations have foundered on evidence of continuing nuclear activity, and in Oct. 2002 North Korea admitted that it had a secret nuclear weapons programme. As the last refuge of Stalinism, North Korea needs a radical economic shake-up to survive but fears the consequences of reform.

Although food aid has been stepped up, the UN World Food Programme estimated in 1997 that 2m. North Koreans face starvation. Good Friends, a Buddhist aid group in Seoul, claims that up to 3·5m. North Koreans have died of starvation since 1995.

On 13 June 2000 South Korea's President Kim Dae-jung flew to North Korea to meet the North Korean leader, Kim Jong Il, in the first ever meeting between the heads of state of the two countries. During the three-day summit South Korea agreed to help to rebuild the economy of North Korea in exchange for an end to the threat of war, the opportunity for families to be reunited and the reconnection of the railway link severed since the division of the Korean peninsula in 1945. In Sept. 2002 as relations between the Koreas improved troops began to clear minefields on either side of the border in preparation for the construction of new transport links. But US suspicion of North Korea as a terrorist haven may slow north–south co-operation. In Oct. 2002 the USA claimed that North Korea acknowledged the existence of a secret nuclear programme, and tension increased in Dec. 2002 when North Korea removed monitoring devices at Yongbyon nuclear plant, a move that the international community feared might represent the restarting of its nuclear-weapons programme. In Jan. 2003 North Korea pulled out of the Nuclear Nonproliferation Treaty. In spite of increasing tension between North Korea and the USA, in Feb. 2003 the land border between the two Koreas was opened for the first time in half a century when a group of tourism officials from the South visited a tourist resort in North Korea.

Since 1995 hunger has been widespread and 300,000 North Koreans have fled to China. Around a third of the population are fed through outside aid.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

North Korea is bounded in the north by China, east by the sea of Japan, west by the Yellow Sea and south by South Korea, from which it is separated by a demilitarized zone of 1,262 sq. km. Its area is 122,762 sq. km.

The UN gives a projected population for 2010 of 23·69m.

The census population in 1993 was 21,213,378; density 172·8 per sq. km. In the elections to the Supreme People's Assembly held on 26 July 1998, 687 deputies were elected, as was the case in 1990. The South Korean weekly NEWSREVIEW stated that North Korea has made it a rule that there should be one deputy per 30,000 people, suggesting that the population has remained stable since 1990. 30,000 multiplied by 687 would give a population of 20·61m., more than 1·5m. less than official estimates. In 1999, 81·1% of the population were urban.

The area, 1987 population (in 1,000) and chief towns of the provinces and cities with provincial status:

	Area in sq. km	Population	Chief Town
Chagang	16,968	1,156	Kanggye
North Hamgyong	17,570	2,003	Chongjin
South Hamgyong	18,970	2,547	Hamhung
North Hwanghae	8,007	1,409	Sariwon
South Hwanghae	8,002	1,914	Haeju
Kaesong (city)	1,255	331
Kangwon	11,152	1,227	Wonsan
Nampo (city)	753	715
North Pyongan	12,191	2,408	Sinuiju
South Pyongan	11,577	2,653	Pyongsan
Pyongyang (city)	2,000	2,355
Yanggang	14,317	628	Hyesan

Pyongyang, the capital, had a 1999 population of 3,136,000. Other large towns (estimate, 1987): Hamhung (701,000); Chongjin (520,000); Nampo (370,000); Sunchon (356,000).

The official language is Korean.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

1995 births, 477,000; deaths, 122,000. 1995 birth rate, 21·6 per 1,000 population; death rate, 5·5. Annual population growth rate, 1990–99, 1·6%. Marriage is discouraged before the age of 32 for men and 29 for women. Life expectancy at birth, 1997, was 59·8 years for males and 64·5 years for females. Infant mortality, 1990–95, 24 per 1,000 live births; fertility rate, 1999, 2·0 births per woman. It was estimated in 1999 that up to 300,000 North Korean food-seeking refugees had gone to China to escape the famine. 27% of the population is classified as 'hostile' by the regime and 45% as 'unstable'.

CLIMATE

There is a warm temperate climate, though winters can be very cold in the north. Rainfall is concentrated in the summer months. Pyongyang, Jan. 18°F (–7·8°C), July 75°F (23·9°C). Annual rainfall 37" (916 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The political structure is based upon the Constitution of 27 Dec. 1972. Constitutional amendments of April 1992 delete references to Marxism-Leninism but retain the Communist Party's monopoly of rule. The Constitution provides for a Supreme People's Assembly elected every five years by universal suffrage. Citizens of 17 years and over can vote and be elected. The government consists of the Administration Council directed by the Central People's Committee.

The head of state is the President, elected for four-year terms. On the death of Kim Il-sung on 8 July 1994 his son and designated successor, Kim Jong Il (b. 1942), assumed all his father's posts. On 5 Sept. 1998 he took over as President and 'Supreme Leader'.

Party membership was 2m. in 1995. There are also the puppet religious Chongu and Korean Social Democratic Parties and various organizations combined in a Fatherland Front.

National Anthem. 'A chi mun bin na ra i gang san' ('Shine bright, o dawn, on this land so fair'); words by Pak Se Yong, tune by Kim Won Gyun.

RECENT ELECTIONS

Elections to the Supreme People's Assembly were held on 26 July 1998, the first ones since 1990. Only the list of the Democratic Front for the Reunification of the Fatherland was allowed to participate. 687 deputies were elected. 443 out of the 687, or 64%, were elected to the Assembly for the first time. In 1990 only 31·4% of the deputies were elected for the first time.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

President: Kim Jong Il. He also holds the posts of Supreme Commander of the Korean People's Army and Chairman of the National Defence Commission.

In Feb. 1997 Hong Song Nam (b. 1923) became Prime Minister. In March 2003 the government also included:

Vice Prime Ministers: Cho Ch'ang-tok, Kwak Pom-ki, Sin Il-nam. Agriculture: Kim Ch'ang-sik. Chemical Industry: Pak Pong-chu. City Management: Ch'oe Chong-kon. Commerce: Yi Yong-son. Construction and Building Materials Industry: Cho Yun-hui. Culture: Kang Nung-su. Education: Pyon Yong-rip. Electronic Industry: O Su-yong. Extractive Industries: Son Chong-ho. Finance: Mun Il-Pong. Fisheries: Yi Song-un. Foreign Affairs: Paek Nam-sun. Foreign Trade: Yi Kwang-kun. Forestry: Yi Sang-mu. Labour: Yi Won-il. Land and Environment Protection: Il-Son Chang. Land and Marine Transport: Kim Yong-il. Light Industry: Yi Chu-su. Metal and Machine-Building Industries: Chong Sung-hun. People's Armed Forces: V. Mar. Kim Il-ch'ol. Post and Telecommunications: Yi Kum-pom. Power and Coal Industries: Sin T'ae-nok. Procurement and Food Administration: Nam-Kyun Choe. Public Health: Kim Su-hak. Public Security: V. Mar. Paek Hak-nim. Railways: Kim Yong-sam. State Construction Control: Pae Tal-chun. State Inspection: Kim Ui-sun.

President, Supreme People's Assembly Praesidium: Kim Yong-nam. Vice Presidents: Yang Hyong-sop, Kim Yong-t'ae.

In practice the country is ruled by the Korean Workers' (i.e., Communist) Party which elects a Central Committee which in turn appoints a Politburo.

DEFENCE

The Supreme Commander of the Armed Forces is Kim Jong Il. Military service is compulsory at the age of 16 for periods of 5–8 years in the Army, 5–10 years in the Navy and 3–4 years in the Air Force, followed by obligatory part-time service in the Pacification Corps to age 40. Total armed forces troops were estimated to number 1,082,000 in 2002, up from 840,000 in 1986 although down from 1,160,000 in 1997.

Defence expenditure in 2001 totalled US$2,049m. (US$91 per capita), and represented 11·6% of GDP.

In 1998 North Korea tested a medium-range nuclear-capable Taepo Dong-1 missile. It has also developed a shorter-range No-Dong ballistic missile in addition to Scud B and Scud C missiles, and is known to be developing a longer-range inter-continental ballistic missile, the two-stage Taepo Dong-2, which experts believe could reach Alaska and the westernmost Hawaiian islands.

Nuclear Weapons. North Korea was for many years suspected of having a secret nuclear-weapons programme, and perhaps enough material to build two warheads. In Oct. 2002 it revealed that it had developed a nuclear bomb in violation of an arms control pact agreed with the USA in 1994. North Korea, known to have a nuclear weapons programme, has not signed the Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban-Treaty, which is intended to bring about a ban on any nuclear explosions. North Korea is widely suspected of having biological and chemical weapons.

Army. One of the world's biggest, the Army was estimated at 950,000 personnel in 2002 with around 600,000 reserves. There is also a paramilitary worker-peasant Red Guard of some 3·5m. and a Ministry of Public Security force of 189,000 including border guards.

Equipment includes some 3,500 T-34, T-54/55, T-62 and Type-59 main battle tanks.

Navy. The Navy, principally tasked to coastal patrol and defence, comprises 26 diesel submarines, 3 small frigates and 6 corvettes. Personnel in 2002 totalled about 46,000 with 65,000 reserves.

Air Force. The Air Force had a total of 621 combat aircraft and 86,000 personnel in 2002. Combat aircraft include J-5/6/7s (Chinese built versions of MiG-17/19/23s), MiG-29s, Su-7s and Su-25s.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

In Sept. 1999 following negotiations between Pyongyang and Washington in Berlin, Pyongyang agreed to put off its plan to test-fire an advanced long-range missile whilst the USA agreed gradually to lift economic sanctions imposed in 1950. The gesture on the part of the USA was the most significant since the end of the Korean War.

In 2000 North Korea received US$220m. in foreign aid, of which US$114m. came from South Korea.

North Korea is a member of the UN and the Antarctic Treaty.

ECONOMY

Agriculture is estimated to account for approximately 25% of GDP, industry 60% and services 15%.

Overview. In Dec. 1993 it was officially admitted that the third seven-year plan had failed to achieve its industrial targets owing to the disappearance of Communist markets and aid. Policy now concentrates on the development of agriculture, light industry and foreign trade, but progress is impeded by an all-powerful bureaucracy and a reluctance to depart from the Marxist-Stalinist line. However, in July 2002 signs emerged of changes in the economy, as the authorities revoked the rationing system for rice and began to sell it on the free market. New measures centred on large wage increases and even larger increases in prices for food, electricity and housing.

Currency. The monetary unit is the won (KPW) of 100 chon. Banknotes were replaced by a new issue in July 1992. Exchanges of new for old notes were limited to 500 won. Inflation was an estimated 5% in 1998.

Budget. Estimated revenue, 1994, 41,525·2m. won; expenditure, 41,525·2m. won.

Performance. The real GDP growth rate was 6·2% in 1999 following a decade of negative growth. This was followed in 2000 by growth of 1·3%, rising in 2001 to 3·7%. GDP per head was put at US$741 in 1997, or about a thirteenth of that of South Korea.

Banking and Finance. The bank of issue is the Central Bank of Korea (Governor, Kim Wan-su).

Weights and Measures. While the metric system is in force traditional measures are in frequent use. The jungbo = 1 ha; the ri = 3,927 metres. A new yearly calendar was announced on 9 July 1997 based on Kim Il-sung's birthday on 15 April 1912. Thus 15 April 2003–14 April 2004 is Year 92.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Environment. According to the World Bank Atlas carbon dioxide emissions in 1997 were the equivalent of 11·4 tonnes per capita. An Environmental Sustainability Index compiled for the World Economic Forum meeting in Feb. 2002 ranked North Korea 140th in the world out of 142 countries analysed, with 32·3%. The index measured the ability of countries to maintain favourable environmental conditions and examined various factors including pollution levels and the use or abuse of natural resources.

Electricity. There are three thermal power stations and four hydro-electric plants. Installed capacity was 10m. kW in 1997. Production in 2000 was 19·4bn. kWh. Consumption per capita was an estimated 1,394 kWh in 1995. Hydro-electric potential exceeds 8m. kW. A hydro-electric plant and dam under construction on the Pukhan River near Mount Kumgang has been denounced as a flood threat by the South Koreans, who constructed a defensive 'Peace Dam' in retaliation. American aid to increase energy supply slowed after evidence that North Korea had broken its promise to freeze its nuclear weapons programme. But in Oct. 1998 Japan agreed to contribute US$1bn. towards building two nuclear power stations and the US Congress agreed to funds to supply fuel oil on condition that North Korea abandons its nuclear ambitions. In Aug. 2002 work began on the construction of the two western-designed light-water nuclear reactors. In Feb. 2003 North Korea reactivated its nuclear reactor at Yongbyon that had been dormant since 1994.

Oil and Gas. Oil wells went into production in 1957. An oil pipeline from China came on stream in 1976. Crude oil refining capacity was 70,000 bbls. a day in 1990.

Minerals. North Korea is rich in minerals. Estimated reserves in tonnes: coal, 11,990m.; manganese, 6,500m.; iron ore, 3,300m.; uranium, 26m.; zinc, 12m.; lead, 6m.; copper, 2·15m. 62m. tonnes of coal were mined in 1997, 11m. tonnes of iron ore in 1996 and 16,000 tonnes of copper ore in 1995. 1997 production of gold was 5,000 kg; silver, 50 tonnes; salt (1997 estimate), 590,000 tonnes.

Agriculture. In 1997 there were 1·7m. ha of arable land and 300,000 ha of permanent crop land. In 1995 there were 0·65m. ha of paddy fields. In 1995, 4·09m. persons were economically active in agriculture.

Collectivization took place between 1954 and 1958. 90% of the cultivated land is farmed by co-operatives. Land belongs either to the State or to co-operatives, and it is intended gradually to transform the latter into the former, but small individually-tended plots producing for ‘farmers’ markets’ are tolerated as a ‘transition measure’.

There is a large-scale tideland reclamation project. In 1997, 1·46m. ha were under irrigation, making possible two rice harvests a year. There were 75,000 tractors in 1998. The technical revolution in agriculture (nearly 95% of ploughing, etc., is mechanized) has considerably increased the yield of wheat (sown on 103,000 ha). Production (2000, in 1,000 tonnes): rice, 1,690; potatoes, 1,402; maize, 1,041; apples, 650; cabbages, 630; sweet potatoes, 468; soybeans, 350; dry beans, 280; melons and watermelons, 214.

Livestock, 2000: pigs, 2·97m.; goats, 2·10m.; cattle, 600,000; sheep, 190,000; 10m. chickens.

A chronic food shortage has led to repeated efforts by UN agencies to stave off famine. In Jan. 1998 the UN launched an appeal for US$378m. for food for North Korea, the largest ever relief effort mounted by its World Fund Programme.

Forestry. Forest area in 1995 was 6·17m. ha (51·2% of the land area). Timber production was 7m. cu. metres in 1999.

Fisheries. In 1999 total catch was approximately 210,000 tonnes, of which 90% were sea fish.

INDUSTRY

Industries were intensively developed by the Japanese occupiers, notably cotton spinning, hydro-electric power, cotton, silk and rayon weaving, and chemical fertilizers. Production in 1995: cement, 17m. tonnes; pig iron (1997), 6·6m. tonnes; crude steel (2000), 1·11m. tonnes; textile fabrics (1994), 350m. metres; motor cars (2000), 6,600 units; TV sets, 240,000 units; ships, 50,000 GRT. Annual steel production capacity was 4·3m. tonnes in 1987. Industrial production is estimated to have halved between 1990 and 2000.

Labour. The labour force totalled 11,881,000 (55% males) in 1996. Nearly 35% of the economically active population in 1995 were engaged in agriculture, fisheries and forestry.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Joint ventures with foreign firms have been permitted since 1984. A law of Oct. 1992 revised the 1984 rules: foreign investors may now set up wholly-owned facilities in special economic zones, repatriate part of profits and enjoy tax concessions. Economic zones have been set up at the ports of Sonbong and Najin. In 1996 foreign debt was estimated at US$11,830m. The USA imposed sanctions in Jan. 1988 for alleged terrorist activities. Since June 1995 South Korean businesses and individuals have been permitted to make investments and set up branch offices in North Korea.

Imports and Exports. Exports in 2000 were US$560m.; imports, US$1,410m. In 1995 China was the biggest import supplier (33%), followed by Japan (17%) and Russia (5%); Japan was the main export destination (28%), ahead of South Korea (21%) and China (5%). The chief exports are metal ores and products, the chief imports machinery and petroleum products.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. There were around 31,200 km of road in 1996, of which 2,000 km were paved. There were 262,000 passenger cars in 2000. The first of two planned cross-border roads between the two Koreas opened in Feb. 2003.

Rail. The railway network totalled 8,533 km in 1990, of which 3,250 km were electrified. In 1990, 38·5m. tonnes of freight and 35m. passengers were carried. In June 2000 it was agreed to start consultations to restore the railway from Sinuiju, on the North Korean/Chinese border, to Seoul by rebuilding an 8 km long stretch from Pongdong-ni to Changdan, on the North Korean/South Korean border, and a 12 km long stretch in South Korea. The first two rail links between the two Koreas are currently under construction.

There is a metro and tramway in Pyongyang.

Civil Aviation. There is an international airport at Pyongyang (Sunan). There were flights in 1998 to Bangkok, Beijing, Berlin, Dalian, Macao, Moscow, Sofia and Vladivostok. The national carrier is Air Koryo.

Shipping. The leading ports are Chongjin, Wonsan and Hungnam. Pyongyang is connected to the port of Nampo by railway and river. In 1998 the ocean-going merchant fleet totalled 631,000 GRT, including oil tankers 6,000 GRT.

The biggest navigable river is the Yalu, 698 km up to the Hyesan district.

Telecommunications. An agreement to share in Japan's telecommunications satellites was reached in Sept. 1990. There were 1,100,000 main telephone lines in 2000, or 45·8 per 1,000 population. In 1995 there were 3,000 fax machines. North Korea's first Internet cafe opened in May 2002.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. The judiciary consists of the Supreme Court, whose judges are elected by the Assembly for three years; provincial courts; and city or county people's courts. The procurator-general, appointed by the Assembly, has supervisory powers over the judiciary and the administration; the Supreme Court controls the judicial administration.

In Jan. 1999 approximately 200,000 political prisoners were being held at ten detention camps in the country.

Religion. The Constitution provides for 'freedom of religion as well as the freedom of anti-religious propaganda'. In 1986 there were 3m. Chondoists, 400,000 Buddhists and 200,000 Christians. Another 3m. followed traditional beliefs.

Education. Free compulsory universal technical education lasts 11 years: 1 pre-school year, 4 years primary education starting at the age of 6, followed by 6 years secondary. In 1994–95 there were 37 universities, 31 specialized universities and 108 specialized colleges.

The adult literacy rate is 95%.

Health. Medical treatment is free. In 1993 there were 61,200 doctors, giving a doctor/inhabitant ratio of 1:370. The hospital bed provision in 1989 of 135 per 10,000 population was one of the highest in the world.

North Korea has been one of the least successful countries in the battle against undernourishment in the past 20 years. Between 1980 and 1996 the proportion of undernourished people rose from 16% of the population to 48%. Many people have had to resort to eating twigs, bark and leaves.

CULTURE

Broadcasting. The government-controlled Korean Central Broadcasting Station and Korean Central Television Station are responsible for radio and TV broadcasting. In 1991 there were 34 radio and 11 TV stations (colour by PAL). There were 3·36m. radio and 1·2m. TV sets in 1997. All radio and television stations being government-run, North Koreans know very little of the outside world. They have been told that the food shortages of recent years were a global catastrophe and that they are comparatively well-off.

Cinema. There were 1,778 cinemas in 1985 and 3,515 mobile cinemas.

Press. There were three daily newspapers in 1996. The party newspaper is Nodong (or Rodong) Sinmun (Workers' Daily News). Circulation is about 600,000.

Tourism. A 40-year ban on non-Communist tourists was lifted in 1986. In 1999 there were 130,000 foreign tourists. On 19 Nov. 1998 North Korea received its first tourists from South Korea, on a cruise and tour organized by the South Korean firm Hyundai.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The ruling dynasty was founded by Shaikh Sabah al-Awwal, who ruled from 1756 to 1772. In 1899 Shaikh Mubarak concluded a treaty with Great Britain wherein, in return for the assurance of British protection, he undertook to support British interests. In 1914 the British Government recognized Kuwait as an independent government under British protection. On 19 June 1961 an agreement reaffirmed the independence and sovereignty of Kuwait and recognized the Government of Kuwait's responsibility for the conduct of internal and external affairs. On 2 Aug. 1990 Iraqi forces invaded the country. Following the expiry of the date set by the UN for the withdrawal of Iraqi forces, an air offensive was launched by coalition forces, followed by a land attack on 24 Feb. 1991. Iraqi forces were routed and Kuwait City was liberated on 26 Feb. On 10 Nov. 1994 Iraq recognized the independence and boundaries of Kuwait.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Kuwait is bounded in the east by the Arabian (Persian) Gulf, north and west by Iraq and south and southwest by Saudi Arabia, with an area of 17,818 sq. km. In 1992–93 the UN Boundary Commission redefined Kuwait's border with Iraq, moving it slightly northwards in conformity with an agreement of 1932. The population at the census of 1995 was 1,575,570 (97·4% urban in 1999), of whom about 58% were non-Kuwaitis. Population density, 88 per sq. km.

The UN gives a projected population for 2010 of 2·47m.

The country is divided into six governorates: the capital (comprising Kuwait City, Kuwait's nine islands and territorial and shared territorial waters) (population 385,675, 1999 estimate); Hawalli (624,962); Ahmadi (368,190); Jahra (287,566), Farwaniya (586,751) and Mubarak Al-Kabir (created in 2000). The capital city is Kuwait, with a population in 1995 of 28,559. Other major cities are (1995 populations): as-Salimiya (130,215), Jahra (111,222), Qalib ash-Shuyukh (102,178), Hawalli (82,238), Hitan-al-Janubiyah (63,628).

The Neutral Zone (Kuwait's share, 2,590 sq. km), jointly owned and administered by Kuwait and Saudi Arabia from 1922 to 1966, was partitioned between the two countries in May 1966, but the exploitation of the oil and other natural resources continues to be shared.

Over 78% speak Arabic, the official language. English is also used as a second language.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Births, 1999, 41,135; deaths, 4,187. In 1997 the birth rate was 19·5 per 1,000 population. Kuwait's 1999 death rate, at 2·0 per 1,000 population, was the second lowest in the world (only Qatar's was lower). Expectation of life at birth, 1999, 74·3 years for males and 78·4 years for females. Infant mortality, 1999, 9·4 per 1,000 live births. Annual population growth rate, 1990–99, –1·3%; fertility rate, 1999, 2·8 births per woman. Kuwait has had one of the largest reductions in its fertility rate of any country in the world over the past 25 years, having had a rate of 6·3 births per woman in 1975. Kuwait has a young population, with 60% of the population being under 16.

CLIMATE

Kuwait has a dry, desert climate which is cool in winter but very hot and humid in summer. Rainfall is extremely light. Kuwait, Jan. 56°F (13·5°C), July 99°F (36·6°C). Annual rainfall 5" (125 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The ruler is HH Shaikh Jaber al-Ahmed al-Jaber al-Sabah, the 13th Amir of Kuwait, who succeeded on 31 Dec. 1977.

In 1990 the National Council was established, consisting of 50 elected members and 25 appointed by the Amir. It was replaced by a National Assembly or Majlis al-Umma in 1992, consisting of 50 elected members. The franchise is limited to men over 21 whose families have been of Kuwaiti nationality since before 1920 and the sons of persons naturalized since 1992. In May 1999 the cabinet approved a draft law giving women the right to vote and run for parliament. However, in Dec. 1999 parliament rejected the bill allowing women to vote by a margin of 32 to 20.

National Anthem. 'Watanil Kuwait salemta lilmajdi, wa ala jabeenoka tali ossaadi,' ('Kuwait, my fatherland! May you be safe and glorious! May you always enjoy good fortune!'); words by Moshari al-Adwani, tune by Ibrahim Nassar al-Soula.

RECENT ELECTIONS

At the all-male National Assembly elections on 3 July 1999 Islamist candidates won 20 seats, Liberals 14 (up from 4 at the previous election), the government camp 12 and independents 4. As a result the likelihood of the legislature supporting voting rights for women in the near future increased.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

Executive authority is vested in the Council of Ministers.

The prime minister and the whole government resigned in Jan. 2001 but the Amir asked the prime minister to form a new cabinet.

In March 2003 the government comprised:

Prime Minister: HRH Crown Prince Shaikh Saad al-Abdullah al-Salim al-Sabah; b. 1930 (appointed 8 Feb. 1978).

First Deputy Prime Minister and Foreign Minister: Shaikh Sabah al-Ahmed al-Jaber al-Sabah. Deputy Prime Minister and Defence Minister: Shaikh Jabar Mubarak al-Hamad al-Sabah. Deputy Prime Minister and State Minister for Cabinet Affairs and National Assembly Affairs: Muhammad Dayfallah al-Sharar. Deputy Prime Minister and Interior Minister: Shaikh Mohammed al-Khalid al-Hamad al-Sabah.

DEFENCE

In Sept. 1991 the USA signed a ten-year agreement with Kuwait to store equipment, use ports and carry out joint training exercises. Conscription is for two years. There were over 5,000 US and UN personnel based in Kuwait in 1999 as well as a UK RAF Tornado squadron.

Defence expenditure in 2001 totalled US$5,029m. (US$2,514 per capita), representing 12·1% of GDP. The expenditure per capita in 2001 was the highest in the world.

Army. Strength (1999) about 11,000 including 1,600 foreign personnel. In addition there is a National Guard of 5,000.

Navy. Personnel in 1999 numbered 1,800, including 400 Coast Guard personnel.

Air Force. From a small initial combat force the Air Force has grown rapidly, although it suffered heavy losses after the Iraqi invasion of 1990–91. Equipment includes F/A-18 Hornet strike aircraft and Mirage F-1s. Personnel strength was estimated (1999) at 2,500, with 76 Combat aircraft and 20 armed helicopters.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

Kuwait is a member of the UN, WTO, the League of Arab States, Gulf Co-operation Council, OPEC and OIC.

Kuwait claims that 605 prisoners of war have been held by the former Iraqi regime since the last few days of the Iraqi occupation in Feb. 1991.

ECONOMY

Industry accounted for 55% of GDP in 1996 and services 45%.

Overview. Kuwait's Planning Ministry released a five-year plan in 2001 calling for the development of information technology and modern education to create a suitable environment for a free economy.

Currency. The unit of currency is the Kuwaiti dinar (KD) of 1,000 fils. Inflation in 2001 was 2·5%. Foreign exchange reserves were US$10,260m. in June 2002, gold reserves were 2·54m. troy oz and total money supply was KD 2,156m.

In 2001 the six Gulf Arab states—Kuwait, along with Bahrain, Oman, Qatar, Saudi Arabia and the United Arab Emirates—signed an agreement to establish a single currency by 2010.

Budget. The fiscal year begins on 1 July. Revenue and expenditure over a five-year span (in KD 1m.):

	1995	1996	1997	1998	1999
Revenue	2,987	3,306	4,271	3,461	3,064
Expenditure	3,790	3,845	3,827	3,902	3,930

Expenditure by function (in 1996): defence, 1,163; social security and welfare, 656; education, 476; public order and safety, 331; health, 247.

Performance. Real GDP growth in negative in 2001, at –1·0%. Total GDP in 2000 was US$37·8bn. In 1997 there was a current account surplus of US$7,816m.

Banking and Finance. The Governor of the Central Bank is Sheikh Salem AbdulAziz Al-Sabah. There is also the Kuwait Finance House. In 2001 there were six commercial banks and one Islamic banking firm. The combined assets of banks operating in Kuwait totalled KD 14,133m. in Feb. 2001. Foreign banks are banned.

There is a stock exchange, linked with those of Bahrain and Oman.

Weights and Measures. The metric system is in force.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Environment. According to the World Bank Atlas Kuwait's carbon dioxide emissions were the equivalent of 26·3 tonnes per capita in 1998. An Environmental Sustainability Index compiled for the World Economic Forum meeting in Feb. 2002 ranked Kuwait 142nd in the world out of the 142 countries analysed, with 23·9%. The index measured the ability of countries to maintain favourable environmental conditions and examined various factors including pollution levels and the use or abuse of natural resources.

Electricity. There are four power stations with a total installed capacity of 7m. kW in 1997. Production in 1999 was 31·6bn. kWh; consumption per capita in 1998 was 13,800 kWh.

Oil and Gas. Crude oil production in 1999, 683·5m. bbls. Kuwait produced 3·2% of the world total oil output in 1996, and had reserves amounting to 96·5bn. bbls. at the end of 2001. Only Saudi Arabia and Iraq have greater reserves. Most of the oil is in the Great Burgan area (reserves of approximately 70bn. bbls.), comprising the Burgan, Maqwa and Ahmadi fields located south of Kuwait City. Natural gas production was 7·0bn. cu. metres in 1999 with 1,490bn. cu metres of proven reserves.

Water. The country depends upon desalination plants. In 1993 there were four plants with a daily total capacity of 216m. gallons. Fresh mineral water is pumped and bottled at Rawdhatain. Underground brackish water is used for irrigation, street cleaning and livestock. Production, 1996, 89,684m. gallons (67,674m. gallons fresh, 22,010m. gallons brackish). Consumption, 1996, 80,298m. gallons (62,423m. gallons fresh, 17,875m. gallons brackish).

Agriculture. There were 6,000 ha of arable land in 1998 and 1,000 ha of permanent crops. Production of main crops, 2000 (in 1,000 tonnes): cucumbers and gherkins, 33; tomatoes, 32; potatoes, 29; aubergines, 12; dates, 9; chillies and green peppers, 5; pumpkins and squash, 5; cauliflowers, 4.

Livestock (2000): cattle, 20,000; sheep, 450,000; goats, 150,000; camels, 9,000; poultry, 33m. Milk production (2000), 46,000 tonnes.

Forestry. Forests covered 5,000 ha in 1995, or 0·3% of the land area.

Fisheries. The total catch in 1999 was 6,271 tonnes, exclusively from sea fishing. In the space of a month in 2001 more than 2,000 tonnes of dead fish were washed ashore. Some experts claimed the cause was the alleged pumping of raw sewage into the Gulf while others attributed it to waste from the oil industry. Shrimp fishing was important, but has declined since the 1990–91 war through oil pollution of coastal waters. Before the discovery of oil, pearls were at the centre of Kuwait's economy, but today pearl fishing is only on a small scale.

INDUSTRY

According to the Financial Times Survey (FT 500), the largest companies by market capitalization in Kuwait on 4 Jan. 2001 were: The National Bank of Kuwait (US$3,579·8m.); Mobile Telephone (US$2,466·7m.); and Kuwait Finance House (US$1,489·6m.).

Industries, apart from oil, include boat building, fishing, food production, petrochemicals, gases and construction. Production figures in 1997 (in 1,000 tonnes): distillate fuel oil, 13,116; residual fuel oil, 11,623; jet fuel oil, 8,156; liquefied petroleum gas, 3,650; petrol, 1,830; kerosene, 1,496.

Labour. In 1999 the labour force totalled 1,226,000 (82% non-Kuwaitis). Of the total labour force, 50·1% worked in social, community and personal services, 16·0% in trade, hotels and restaurants, 9·6% in construction and 6·4% in manufacturing. Approximately 93% of the workforce are civil servants. Registered unemployment was 1·4% in 1996.

Trade Unions. In 1986 there were 16 trade unions and 17 labour federations.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

In 2001 Kuwait, along with Bahrain, Oman, Qatar, Saudi Arabia and the United Arab Emirates agreed to the complete implementation of a customs union by 2003.

Imports and Exports. Imports (f.o.b.) were valued at US$6,846m. in 2000 (US$6,705m. in 1999) and exports (f.o.b.) at US$19,576m. (US$12,276m. in 1999). Oil accounts for 93% of revenue from exports, and oil exports account for approximately 40% of GDP. The main non-oil export is chemical fertilizer.

Main export markets, 1999: Japan, 22·8%; USA, 11·5%; Singapore, 8·2%. Main import suppliers, 1999: USA, 15·4%; Japan, 10·2%; Germany, 7·3%.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. There were 4,450 km of roads in 1996, 80·6% of which was paved. Number of vehicles in 1996 was 693,000 (538,000 passenger cars, or 359 per 1,000 inhabitants, and 155,000 trucks and vans). There were 15,921 road accidents in 1993 with 290 fatalities.

Civil Aviation. There is an international airport (Kuwait International). The national carrier is the state-owned Kuwait Airways. In 1999 it flew 36·5m. km and carried 2,130,000 passengers (all on international flights). Kuwait International airport handled 3,747,374 passengers in 2000 and 112,478 tonnes of freight.

Shipping. The port of Kuwait formerly served mainly as an entrepôt, but this function is declining in importance with the development of the oil industry. The largest oil terminal is at Mina Ahmadi. Three small oil ports lie to the south of Mina Ahmadi: Mina Shuaiba, Mina Abdullah and Mina Al-Zor. The merchant fleet totalled 2,459,000 GRT in 1998, of which 1,662,000 GRT were tankers. In 1998 vessels totalling 9,357,000 NRT entered ports and vessels totalling 1,178,000 NRT cleared.

Telecommunications. Kuwait had 467,100 main telephone lines in 2000, or 244·0 per 1,000 population, and there were 250,000 PCs (130·6 for every 1,000 persons).

In 1999 mobile phone subscribers numbered 300,000 and in 1997 there were 42,000 fax machines. The number of Internet users in March 2001 was 165,000.

Postal Services. In 1999 there were 94,402 post office boxes. There were 124,820 outgoing telegrams and 75,322 incoming.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. In 1960 Kuwait adopted a unified judicial system covering all levels of courts. These are: Courts of Summary Justice, Courts of the First Instance, Supreme Court of Appeal, Court of Cassation and a Constitutional Court. Islamic Sharia is a major source of legislation. The death penalty is still in use.

The population in penal institutions in 1997 was 1,735 (100 per 100,000 of national population).

Religion. In 1996, 810,000 people were Sunni Muslims, 540,000 Shia Muslims, 180,000 other Muslims, and 270,000 other (mostly Christian and Hindu).

Education. Education is free and compulsory from 6 to 14 years. In 1999–2000 there were 222 pre-primary schools with 3,800 teachers for 59,666 pupils, 269 primary schools with 10,176 teachers for 140,182 pupils, 244 intermediate schools with 10,749 teachers for 132,904 pupils, and 10,708 teachers in 197 secondary schools for 100,804 pupils. There were 15,808 students at Kuwait University in 1998–99. A pan-Arab Open University based in Kuwait and with branches in several other Middle Eastern countries was opened in Nov. 2002 with an initial enrolment of 3,000 students. Adult literacy rate in 1999 was 81·9% (84·0% among men and 79·4% among women). Total expenditure on education in 1995: KD 490,000,000 or 5·7% of GDP.

Health. Medical services are free to all residents. In 1999 there were 15 hospitals and sanatoria, with a provision of 4,433 beds (21 per 10,000 population); there were 3,178 doctors (15 per 10,000 population), 492 dentists, and (1995) 8,337 nurses and 19 midwives. There were 70 clinics and other health centres and 1,295,132 people were admitted to public hospitals during the year.

CULTURE

Broadcasting. The government-controlled Radio Kuwait and Kuwait Television broadcast a main and a second radio programme, a Koran programme and a service in English and two TV programmes (colour by PAL). In 1997 there were 875,000 TV receivers and 1,175,000 radios.

Cinema. In 1996 there were six cinemas, with a total annual attendance of 800,000.

Press. In 1996 there were eight daily newspapers, with a combined circulation of about 535,000. Formal press censorship was lifted in Jan. 1992.

Tourism. There were 79,000 foreign tourists in 1998, bringing revenue of US$207m. There were 20 hotels providing 3,222 beds in 1999.

Libraries. In 1992 there were 11 non-specialized and 18 public libraries, stocking 407,000 books for 12,500 registered users.

Museums and Galleries. There were six museums attracting 36,000 visitors in 1995.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

After the establishment of the Soviet regime, Kyrgyzstan became part of Soviet Turkestan, which itself became a Soviet Socialist Republic within the Russian Soviet Federal Socialist Republic (RSFSR) in April 1921. In 1924, when Central Asia was reorganized territorially on a national basis, Kyrgyzstan was separated from Turkestan. In Dec. 1936 Kyrgyzstan was proclaimed one of the constituent Soviet Socialist Republics of the USSR. With the collapse of the Soviet Empire, the republic asserted its claim to sovereignty in 1990 and declared independence in Sept. 1991. Askar Akaev became president in 1990 and has since expanded presidential powers substantially. Kyrgyzstan became a member of the CIS in Dec. 1991.

Incursions into Kyrgyz territory by Islamic rebels and border skirmishes in the Fergana Valley are a cause for concern for all Central Asian governments. Kyrgyzstan tripled its defence budget for 2001 to combat terrorism.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Kyrgyzstan is situated on the Tien-Shan mountains and bordered in the east by China, west by Kazakhstan and Uzbekistan, north by Kazakhstan and south by Tajikistan. Area, 199,900 sq. km (77,180 sq. miles). Population (census 1999), 4,822,938; density, 24 per sq. km. In 1999, 66·4% of the population lived in rural areas.

The UN gives a projected population for 2010 of 5·51m.

The republic comprises seven provinces: Batken, Djalal-Abad, Issyk-Kul, Naryn, Osh, Talas and Chu. Its capital is Bishkek (formerly Frunze; 1999 population estimate, 619,000). Other large towns are Osh (238,200), Djalal-Abad (74,200), Tokmak (71,200), Przhevalsk (64,300) and Kyzyl-Kiya.

The Kyrgyz are of Turkic origin and formed 64·9% of the population in 1999; the rest included Uzbeks (13·8%), Russians (12·5%), Dungans (1·1%) and Ukrainians (1·0%).

The official languages are Kyrgyz and Russian. After the breakup of the Soviet Union, Russian was only the official language in provinces where Russians are in a majority. However, in May 2000 parliament voted to make it an official language nationwide, mainly in an attempt to stem the ever-increasing exodus of skilled ethnic Russians. The Roman alphabet (in use 1928–40) was re-introduced in 1992.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

1998 births, 104,183; deaths, 34,596; marriages, 25,726. Rates, 1998 (per 1,000 population): birth, 21·7; death, 7·2; infant mortality (per 1,000 live births), 55 (1999). CLIMATE

The climate varies from dry continental to polar in the high Tien-Shan, to subtropical in the southwest (Fergana Valley) and temperate in the northern foothills. Bishkek, Jan. 9°F (–13°C), July 70°F (21°C). Annual rainfall 14·8" (375 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

A new Constitution was adopted on 5 May 1993. The Presidency is executive, and directly elected for renewable five-year terms. At a referendum on 30 Jan. 1994, 96% of votes cast favoured President Akaev's serving out the rest of his term of office; turn-out was 95%. At a referendum on 22–23 Oct. 1994 turn-out was 87%. 75% of votes cast were in favour of instituting referendums as a constitutional mechanism, and 73% were in favour of establishing a new bicameral parliament (Jogorku Kenesh), with a 35-member directly-elected legislature, and a 70-member upper house elected on a regional basis and meeting twice a year. 94·5% of votes cast at a referendum on 10 Feb. 1996 were in favour of giving the President the right to appoint all ministers except the Prime Minister without reference to parliament.

National Anthem. 'Ak möngülüü aska yoolor, talaalar' ('High mountains, valleys and fields'); words by Z. Sadikova and S. Kulueva, tune by N. Davlyesova and K. Moldovasanova.

RECENT ELECTIONS

Elections for the Legislative Assembly were held on 20 Feb. and 12 March 2000. Turn-out was 64·4%. The Communists (PKK) won 27·7% of the vote and 15 of the available 60 seats, the Union of Democratic Forces (SDS) 18·6% (4), the Women's Democratic Party (DPZK) 12·7% (2), the Party of War Veterans in Afghanistan (PPVVAA) 8·0% (2), Socialist Party Ata Meken (AM) 6·5% (1) and My Country Party (MS) 5·0% (1). Five other parties received 5% of the vote or less. The remaining seats were taken by non-partisans. Elections to the People's Representative Assembly were held on 20 Feb. 2000 and all 45 seats were taken by non-partisans.

Presidential elections were held on 29 Oct. 2000. President Akaev was re-elected for a third term in office by 74·4% of votes cast against two opponents. Independent monitors said the election did not comply with democratic standards. In June 2000 a special commission had been created to test the knowledge of the Kyrgyz language of the candidates for the presidency. Several potential candidates failed the test, and the strongest rival to President Akaev declined to take the test and was barred from standing.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The Kingdom of Laos, once called Lanxang (the Land of a Million Elephants), was founded in the 14th century. In 1893 Laos became a French protectorate and in 1907 acquired its present frontiers. In 1945, after French authority had been suppressed by the Japanese, an independence movement known as Lao Issara (Free Laos) set up a government which collapsed with the return of the French in 1946. Under a new constitution of 1947 Laos became a constitutional monarchy under the Luang Prabang dynasty and in 1949 became an independent sovereign state within the French Union. An almost continuous state of war began in 1953 between the Royal Lao Government, supported by American bombing and Thai mercenaries, and the Patriotic Front Pathet Lao, supported by North Vietnamese troops. Peace talks resulted in an agreement on 21 Feb. 1973 providing for the formation of a provisional government of national union and the withdrawal of foreign troops. A provisional coalition government was duly formed in 1974. However, after the Communist victories in neighbouring Vietnam and Cambodia in April 1975, the Pathet Lao took over the running of the whole country, maintaining only a façade of a coalition. On 29 Nov. 1975 HM King Savang Vatthana abdicated and the People's Congress proclaimed a People's Democratic Republic of Laos on 2 Dec. 1975. Since then the country has been run by a regime with zero tolerance for dissent and a fierce distrust of foreigners.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Laos is a landlocked country of about 91,400 sq. miles (236,800 sq. km) bordered on the north by China, the east by Vietnam, the south by Cambodia and the west by Thailand and Myanmar. Apart from the Mekong River plains along the border of Thailand, the country is mountainous, particularly in the north, and in places densely forested.

The population (1995 census) was 4,581,258 (2,315,931 females); density, 19 per sq. km. Population, 1997 estimate; 5,117,000. In 1999, 77·1% of the population lived in rural areas.

The UN gives a projected population for 2010 of 6·61m.

There are 16 provinces and 1 prefecture divided into 133 districts and one special region (khetphiset). Area, population and administrative centres in 1996:

Province	Sq. km	Population (in 1,000)	Administrative centre

INDUSTRY

Production in 2002: cement, 201,000 tonnes; salt, 22,100 tonnes; iron bars, 13,000 tonnes; detergent, 650 tonnes; nails, 650 tonnes; corrugated iron, 2·8m. sheets; plywood, 2·1m. sheets; mineral water, 235m. litres; beer, 60·49m. litres; soft drinks, 13·15m. litres; oxygen, 21,500 cylinders; cigarettes, 38·3m. packets; lumber, 155,000 cu. metres.

Labour. The working age is 16–55 for females and 16–60 for males. At the 1995 census there were 1,086,172 females and 1,051,112 males within those age groups. Over 75% of the economically active population in 1995 were engaged in agriculture, fishing and forestry.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Since 1988 foreign companies have been permitted to participate in Lao enterprises. From Dec. 1988 to Feb. 2002 total foreign investments (project costs) were US$7,257,081,090. Total foreign debt was US$2,499m. in 2000.

Imports and Exports. Imports were estimated at US$534·60m. in 2002 (US$528·27m. in 2001) and exports at US$319·60m. (US$324·89m. in 2001). The main imports in 1995 were: electricity, 43·1m. kWh; lorries, 105; motor cars, 1,390; motorcycles, 4,288; bicycles, 17,501; (in tonnes) fuel, 43,200; iron, 4,900; cement, 4,400; medicines, 3,621; sugar, 2,433; fabrics, 2,098; rice, 1,172; paper, 617. Main exports: electricity, 705·2m. kWh; timber, 86,100 cu. metres; lumber, 88,200 cu. metres; plywood, 1,512,000 sheets; gypsum, 110,000 tonnes; coffee, 2,830 tonnes; tin, 653 tonnes. Main import suppliers, 1996: Thailand, 45·0%; Japan, 7·6%; Vietnam, 3·7%, China, 3·4%. Main export markets, 1996: Vietnam, 49·1%; Thailand, 30·2%; France, 2·6%; UK, 2·1%.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. In 1996 there were 22,231 km of roads. Classified as: national highways, 4,459 km; provincial roads, 7,650 km. 955,000 tonnes of freight were transported by road in 1995. In 1996 there were 16,320 passenger cars (3·4 per 1,000 inhabitants), 4,200 trucks and vans and 231,000 motorcycles. There were 1,820 traffic accidents with 600 fatalities in 1992. A bridge over the River Mekong, providing an important north-south link, was opened in 1994.

Rail. The Thai railway system extends to Nongkhai, on the Thai bank of the Mekong River.

Civil Aviation. There are two international airports at Vientiane (Wattay) and Luang Prabang. The national carrier is Lao Aviation, which in 2002 operated domestic services and international flights to Bangkok, Chiang Mai, Hanoi, Ho Chi Minh City, Kunming, Phnom Penh and Siem Reap (Cambodia). In 1999 scheduled airline traffic of Laos-based carriers flew 2·0m. km, carrying 197,000 passengers (54,000 on international flights).

Shipping. The River Mekong and its tributaries are an important means of transport. 898,000 tonnes of freight were carried on inland waterways in 1995. Merchant shipping totalled 3,000 GRT in 1995.

Telecommunications. In 2000 there were 40,900 main telephone lines (7·5 per 1,000 persons) and 14,000 PCs in use (2·6 for every 1,000 persons). Laos had 6,000 Internet users in Dec. 2000. There were 6,500 mobile phone subscribers in 1998 and 500 fax machines in 1995.

Postal Services. There were 417 post offices in 1995.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. Criminal legislation of 1990 established a system of courts and a prosecutor's office. Polygamy became an offence.

Religion. In 1999 some 3·13m. were Buddhists (Hinayana), but about a third of the population follow tribal religions.

Education. In 2000 there were 723 kindergartens with 38,000 pupils and 2,000 teachers, 9,737 primary schools with 891,000 pupils and 27,000 teachers, and 248,000 pupils and 11,400 teachers at general secondary level.

There are eight teacher training institutes (four teacher training colleges and four teacher training schools) and one college of Pali. In June 1995 the National University of Laos (NUOL) was established by merging nine existing higher education institutes and a centre of agriculture. NUOL comprises faculties in agriculture, pedagogy, political science, economics and management, forestry, engineering and architecture, medical science, humanities and social science, science, and literature.

Adult literacy in 1999 was 47·3% (male, 63·0%; female, 31·7%). Laos has only a small educated elite.

Health. In 1995 there were 25 hospitals, 131 health centres, 542 dispensaries and 3,100 doctors.

CULTURE

Broadcasting. The government-controlled National Radio of Laos broadcasts a national and six regional programmes and an external service (six languages). Lao National TV transmits for three hours daily. There were 730,000 radio sets and 52,000 television receivers in 1997 (colour by PAL).

Press. In 1996 there were three dailies (one in English).

Tourism. There were 673,823 foreign visitors in 2001 (270,000 in 1999) and revenue from tourism amounted to US$103·8m.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The territory that is now Latvia was controlled by crusaders, primarily the German Order of Livonian Knights, until 1561 when Latvia fell into Polish and Swedish hands. Between 1721 and 1795 Latvia was absorbed into the Russian empire. Soviet rule was proclaimed in Dec. 1917, but was overthrown when the Germans occupied all Latvia (Feb. 1918). Restored when the Germans withdrew (Dec. 1918), the Soviets were again overthrown, this time by combined British naval and German military forces (May–Dec. 1919), when a democratic government was set up. This regime was in turn replaced by a coup which took place in May 1934. The secret protocol of the Soviet–German agreement of 23 Aug. 1939 assigned Latvia to the Soviet sphere of interest. On 4 May 1990 the Latvian Supreme Soviet declared, by 138 votes to nil with 58 abstentions, that the Soviet occupation of Latvia on 17 June 1940 was illegal, and resolved to re-establish the 1922 Constitution. In a referendum in March 1991 the principle of independence was supported by 73·6%. A fully independent status was conceded by the USSR State Council in Sept. 1991. The large Russian minority was initially disadvantaged by the introduction of citizenship and language laws which have since been repealed. President Vike-Freiberga was elected as the former Communist bloc's first female president in June 1999. In 2002, as part of a proposed EU expansion plan, Latvia was chosen as one of ten countries nominated for membership in 2004, and one of seven invited to join NATO in the same year.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Latvia is situated in northeastern Europe. It is bordered by Estonia on the north and by Lithuania on the southwest, while on the east there is a frontier with the Russian Federation and to the southeast with Belarus. Territory, 64,600 sq. km (larger than Denmark, the Netherlands, Belgium and Switzerland). Population (1996), 2,479,870; density, 38 per sq. km.

The UN gives a projected population for 2010 of 2·29m.

In 1999, 69·0% of the population were urban. Nationalities: Latvians 55·3%, Russians 32·5%, Belarussians 4%, Ukrainians 2·9%, Poles 2·2%, Lithuanians 1·3%, Jews 0·4%, Roma 0·3%, Estonians 0·1%, Germans 0·1%.

There was a population of over 700,000 ethnic Russians in 1998.

There are 26 districts, 56 towns and 37 urban settlements. The capital is Riga (805,9977 in Jan. 1998); other principal towns, with Jan. 1998 populations, are Daugavpils (116,530), Liepāja (96,268), Jelgava (71,004), Jurmala (58,975) and Ventspils (46,600).

The official language is Latvian.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

1999: births, 19,530 (rate of 8·0 per 1,000 population); deaths, 32,850 (13·5 per 1,000 population). 1998: marriages, 9,641 (3·9 per 1,000 population); divorce, 6,211 (2·5 per 1,000 population); infant mortality, 11·4 per 1,000 live births (1999). In 1999 life expectancy was 64·3 years for males but 75·6 years for females. In 1998 the most popular age range for marrying was 20–24 for both males and females. Annual population growth rate, 1990–99, –1·3%; fertility rate, 1999, 1·3 births per woman. In 1995 there were 2,799 immigrants and 13,346 emigrants.

CLIMATE

Owing to the influence of maritime factors, the climate is relatively temperate but changeable. Average temperatures in Jan. range from –2·8°C in the western coastal town of Liepāja to –6·6°C in the inland town of Daugavpils. The average summer temperature is 20°C.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The Declaration of the Renewal of the Independence of the Republic of Latvia dated 4 May 1990, and the 21 Aug. 1991 declaration re-establishing de facto independence, proclaimed the authority of the Constitution (Satversme). The Constitution was fully re-instituted as of 6 July 1993, when the 5th Parliament (Saeima) was elected.

The head of state in Latvia is the President, elected by parliament for a period of four years.

The highest legislative body is the one-chamber parliament comprised of 100 deputies and elected in direct, proportional elections by citizens 18 years of age and over. Deputies serve for four years and parties must receive at least 5% of the national vote to gain seats in parliament.

In a referendum on 3 Oct. 1998, 53% of votes cast were in favour of liberalizing laws on citizenship, which would simplify the naturalization of the Russian-speakers who make up nearly a third of the total population and who were not granted automatic citizenship when Latvia regained its independence from the former Soviet Union in 1991.

Executive power is held by the Cabinet of Ministers.

National Anthem. ‘Dievs, svēti Latviju’ (‘God bless Latvia’); words and tune by Kārlis Baumanis.

RECENT ELECTIONS

Vaira Vike-Freiberga, a Canadian professor who had fled Latvia as a seven-year-old, was elected President of the Republic of Latvia on 17 June 1999.

Parliamentary elections were held on 5 Oct. 2002. Former central bank governor Einars Repše’s newly-formed liberal ‘New Era’ (Jaunais laiks; JL) party won 26 seats with 23·9% of votes cast; For Human Rights in a United Latvia (Par cilvēka tiesībām vienotā Latvijā; PCTVL) won 24 with 18·9%; the People’s Party (Tautas partija; TP), 21 with 16·7%; Latvia’s First Party (Latvijas Pirmā Partija; LPP), 10 with 9·6%; the Green and Farmer’s Union (Zaļo un Zemnieku savienība; ZZS), 12 with 9·5%; and Fatherland and Freedom Alliance/LNNK (Apvienība ‘Tēvzemei un Brīvībai’; TB/LNNK), 7 with 5·4%. Prime Minister Andris Berzins Latvia’s Way party (Savienība ‘Latvijas ceļš’; LC) failed to secure a single seat. Turn-out was 55%.

A seven-member Constitutional Court was established in 1996 with powers to invalidate legislation not in conformity with the constitution. Its members are appointed by parliament for ten-year terms.

DEFENCE

Since Latvia gained its independence in Aug. 1991, a renewal process for Latvia’s armed forces, including the National Armed forces, the Home Guard and Border Guard, has been under way. Military service is compulsory for male citizens from the age of 19 (women and men 18 years and older can join the national defence forces voluntarily) and the duration of military service is 18 months. Conscientious objectors have the option of serving in non-military service. Latvia has signed a defence co-operation treaty with Lithuania and Estonia to co-ordinate Baltic States' defence and security activities. A sub-unit of Latvia's National Armed Forces is participating in the NATO led IFOR operations in the former Yugoslavia as a part of a joint Latvian-Danish military battalion.

In 2000 military expenditure totalled US$70m. (US$30 per capita), representing 1·0% of GDP.

Army. The Army was 2,550 strong in 1999. There is a National Guard reserve of five brigades, and a paramilitary Frontier Guard of 3,500.

Navy. A small coastal protection force, based at Riga and Liepāja, numbered 840 in 1999.

Air Force. Personnel numbered 210 in 1999. There are no combat aircraft.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

Latvia is a member of the UN, WTO, BIS, OSCE, Council of Europe, Council of the Baltic Sea States, IOM and the NATO Partnership for Peace (and is seeking full NATO membership), an Associate Partner in WEU, and an Associate Member of the EU. At the European Union's Helsinki Summit in Dec. 1999 Latvia, along with five other countries, was invited to begin full negotiations for membership in Feb. 2000, and is scheduled to become a member on 1 May 2004.

ECONOMY

Services accounted for 70·5% of GDP in 2000, industry 25% and agriculture 4·5%.

The Latvian Privatization Agency, established in 1994 to oversee the privatization process, has adopted a case-by-case approach. 97% of all state enterprises have been assigned for privatization. The private sector constitutes 66% of GDP and 70% of employment.

Overview. By 1994, 70% of industrial capacity was still state-owned, and a Privatization Agency was set up to accelerate the transfer to private hands. By Jan. 1995, 86·9% of residents had taken out privatization vouchers. 230 state enterprises were privatized in 1995, realising 37·3m. lats, of which 21·8m. lats were provided by vouchers. There have been successful privatizations in banking, transport and gas.

Currency. The unit of currency is the lats (LVL) of 100 santims. The lats has been pegged to the SDR basket. In 2001 inflation was 2·5%, down from 35·8% in 1994. Gold reserves were 249,000 troy oz in June 2002 and foreign exchange reserves US$1,145m. Total money supply in June 2002 was 924m. lats.

Budget. The financial year is the calendar year. The fiscal deficit in 2000, according to the law 'On State Budget', was projected to be 2% of GDP, declining in 2001 to 1·7% of GDP. In 1999 the fiscal deficit was 4·0% of GDP, mostly as a consequence of the Russian financial crisis.

Government revenue and expenditure (in 1m. lats), year ending 31 Dec.:

	1997	1998	1999	2000
Revenue	1,088·5	1,245·6	1,232·8	1,238·9
Expenditure	1,028·4	1,246·5	1,379·9	1,371·1

Performance. GDP growth of 6·6% was recorded in 2000, rising to 7·6% in 2001. Total GDP was US$7·5bn. in 2001.

Banking and Finance. The Bank of Latvia both legally and practically is a completely independent institution. Governor of the Bank and Council members are appointed by Parliament for office for six years (present Governor, Ilmars Rimševičs). In 1999 there were 24 banks in Latvia, including the Riga branches of Société Générale and Vereinsbank. 19 banks out of 24 ended 1999 with a profit. In 1999 the transitional period which had been given for banks to ensure they have capital of 5m. euros ended with 14 banks fulfilling the requirement. Latvia's largest bank is Parex Bank, with assets in July 1998 of US$531·5m.

There is a stock exchange in Riga.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Environment. According to the World Bank Atlas Latvia's carbon dioxide emissions in 1998 were the equivalent of 3·2 tonnes per capita. An Environmental Sustainability Index compiled for the World Economic Forum meeting in Feb. 2002 ranked Latvia tenth in the world, with 63·0%. The index measured the ability of countries to maintain favourable environmental conditions and examined various factors including pollution levels and the use or abuse of natural resources.

Electricity. Electricity production in 1998 totalled 4·77bn. kWh, with consumption per capita 1,879 kWh. 75% of electrical power produced in Latvia is generated in hydro-electric power stations. The largest consumers are industry (34%) and private users (23%).

Oil and Gas. Nearly 29% of the Latvian energy resources come from gas. 60% of gas is used for heat generation, 25% in industry and the remaining 15% by other consumers.

The market share of oil products is about 38%, including heavy fuel oil. 70% of oil is used for heat generation, 20% in industry and the remaining 10% in transport.

Minerals. Peat deposits extend over 645,000 ha or about 10% of the total area, and it is estimated that total deposits are 3bn.–4bn. tons. The average annual output of peat at the moment reaches 450,000–550,000 tonnes.

Resources:

	Deposits (in 1m.)	Production (in 1,000)
		1995	1996
Dolomite (metres^3)	661·3	379·7	429·4
Clay for bricks (metres^3)	218·5	70·5	72·9
Clay for cement (tonnes)	416·6	85·8	120·0
Sand and gravel mix (metres^3)	413·2	534·5	775·4
Sand (metres^3)	72·8	184·3	153·5

Agriculture. In 1998 there were 1·8m. ha of arable land and 30,000 ha of permanent crops. Cattle and dairy farming are the chief agricultural occupations. Oats, barley, rye, potatoes and flax are the main crops.

On 1 Jan. 1989 there were 248 state farms and 331 (including 11 fishery) collective farms. There were 47,429 tractors in 1999 and 5,639 harvester-threshers in 1998. Large state and collective farms have been converted into shareholding enterprises; the remainder have been divided into small private holdings for collective farm workers or former owners. In 1999 there were 101,167 peasant farms, 147,366 household plots, 644 specialized state-owned farms and 17,186 allotments for auxiliary farming.

Persons employed in agriculture, 2000, 15·7%.

In 1996 there were 41% household plots and private subsidiary farms, 35% peasant farms and 24% state farms, collective farms and statutory companies.

Output of crops (in 1,000 tonnes) 2000: grain 927 (made up of: wheat, 385; barley, 322; oats, 115; rye, 105); potatoes, 747; sugarbeets, 408; cabbages, 66; apples, 24; carrots, 21.

Livestock, 2000: cattle, 378,000; pigs, 405,000; sheep, 27,000; poultry, 3m. Livestock products (2000, in 1,000 tonnes): meat, 61; milk, 825; eggs, 26.

Forestry. Latvia's total forest area is 2·9m. ha, or 45% of the land area. The overall resources of wood amount to 502m. cu. metres (an increase of 118m. cu. metres since 1984), including 304m. cu. metres of softwood. Private forests account for 44·2% or 1·27m. ha and comprise about 153,000 holdings. Timber production in 1999 was 14·01m. cu. metres.

The share of the forest sector in gross industrial output is between 13 and 15%. Timber and timber products exports account for 37–38% of Latvia's total exports.

To provide the protection of forests there are three forest categories: commercial forests, 70·4%; restricted management forests, 18·6%; protected forests, 11·0%.

Fisheries. There are seven fishing ports in Latvia. In 1999 the total catch (in tonnes) was 125,389, of which marine fish 124,779. Fish catch in 1996 by fishing ground (1,000 tonnes): inland waters, 0·9; northwest Atlantic, 1; northeast Atlantic 71 of which Baltic Sea, 69·7; East central Atlantic, 63·7; southwest Atlantic, 4·1.

INDUSTRY

In 1996 the decline of production in manufacturing was stopped for the first time since the beginning of economic reforms. Structure of sectors of industry by output in 1999: food products, 33·5%; wood and wood articles, 16·6%; light industry, 13·2%; metal and metal products, 10·2%; manufacture of machinery and equipment, 6·7%; chemical industry, 4·9%.

Labour. In May 1999 there were 1,160,800 economically active persons in Latvia, constituting 58·4% of the total population over the age of 15. Of those in employment, 57% worked in services, 26% in industry and construction, and 17% in agriculture, hunting, forestry and fisheries. In 1999 women constituted 50% of the workforce, a higher percentage than in any other European country. In Jan. 1999 there was a monthly minimum wage of 50 lats. Average monthly salary was 139 lats in 1999. The official unemployment rate in June 2002 was 12·7%. The average monthly salary in the public sector in early 2000 was 168·39 lats.

Trade Unions. The Free Trade Union Federation of Latvia, LBAS (President: Pēteris Krīgers) was established in 1990. In 2003 there were 28 branch trade unions and professional employee unions representing more than 250,000 members.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

External debt of Latvia decreased from 9·6% of GDP in 1998 to 9·5% in 1999. Total central government debt at the end of 1999 was US$850m., or 13·3% of GDP. Total external debt was US$3,379m. in 2000. Foreign direct investment inflow in 1999 was 5·9% of GDP (335m. euros). The accumulated FDI in Jan. 2000 reached 1,099m. lats, representing 453 lats per capita.

A liberal foreign trade regime is a very important precondition for a successful restructuring of the economy.

Imports and Exports. Imports (f.o.b.) were valued at US$3,116m. in 2000 (US$2,916m. in 1999) and exports (f.o.b.) at US$2,058m. (US$1,889m. in 1999). The main exports are wood and wood products (38·8%), textiles and textile articles (13·8%), base metals and articles of base metals (13·3%). The leading imports are machinery and mechanical appliances (20·6%), mineral products (12·4%), products of chemical and allied industries (11·1%), metals and products thereof (8·3%). Main export markets (Jan.–Aug. 2000): UK, 17·9%; Germany, 17·2%; Sweden, 11·1%, Lithuania, 7·6%; Denmark, 5·8%. Main import suppliers (Jan.–Aug. 2000): Germany, 16·0%; Russia, 12·0%; Finland, 8·8%; Lithuania, 7·3%; Sweden, 6·8%. In 1997, 48·9% of exports went to the EU and 53·2% of imports were from the EU. Since 1997 trade with the EU has continued to grow and trade with Russia and other former Soviet republics has declined, with trade between Latvia and Russia halving between 1997 and 2001.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. In 1998 there were 59,178 km of roads. In the first nine months of 1999 cargo carried by road transport totalled 26·4m. tonnes. In 1998 there were 4,540 traffic accidents with 627 fatalities. With 21·3 deaths per 100,000 population in 1997 Latvia has one of the highest death rates in road accidents of any industrialized country. In 1996, 213·5 km of road was repaired and 13·1 km of new road built. Passenger cars in 1998 numbered 482,670 (198 per 1,000 inhabitants), in addition to which there were 19,400 motorcycles and mopeds and 11,500 buses and coaches.

Rail. In 1996 there were 2,413 km of 1,520 mm gauge route (271 km electrified). In the first nine months of 1999, 24·9m. tonnes of cargo and 19·9m. passengers were carried by rail. The main groups of freight transported are oil and oil products, mineral fertilizers, ferrous metals and ferrous alloys.

Civil Aviation. There is an international airport at Riga. A new national carrier, Air Baltic, assumed control of Latavio and Baltic International Airlines in 1995 and began flying in Oct. 1995. In 1998 it flew 4·7m. km, carrying 175,000 passengers, on scheduled services to Copenhagen, Frankfurt, Hamburg, Helsinki, Kyiv, London, Minsk, Munich, Stockholm, Tallinn, Vilnius, Warsaw and Zürich. It is 51% state-owned, with SAS owning the remainder. In 2000 Riga handled 574,356 passengers and 3,618 tonnes of freight.

Shipping. There are three large ports (with 54m. tonnes of cargo handled, 1998): Ventspils (35m.), Riga (12m.) and Liepāja (7m.). 4,600 ships in all docked at Riga and Ventspils in 1997. In 1996, 10·06m. tonnes of cargo were transported. In 1998 the merchant marine totalled 118,000 GRT, including oil tankers 9,000 GRT (oil tankers 279,000 GRT in 1996 out of a total of 723,000 GRT).

Ventspils can handle up to 100,000 containers a year and it is estimated that it will be able to handle 250,000 a year when the second stage of a US$70m. development project is completed. This project will change Ventspils from a port principally designed for the export of oil and other products from Russia to one which is also a major import centre.

Telecommunications. Telecommunications are conducted by companies in which the government has a 51% stake, under the aegis of the state-controlled Lattelekom. In 2000 main telephone lines numbered 734,700 (303·1 per 1,000 inhabitants) and 340,000 PCs were in use (140·3 per 1,000 persons). There were 274,300 mobile phone subscribers in 1999 and 900 fax machines in 1995. The number of Internet users in Oct. 2001 was 312,000.

Postal Services. In 1997 there were 993 post offices.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. A new criminal code came into force in 1998. Judges are appointed for life. There are a Supreme Court, regional and district courts and administrative courts. The death penalty is retained but has been subject to a moratorium since Oct. 1996; it was abolished for peacetime offences in 1999. 36,865 crimes were reported in 1997 (38,205 in 1996), 51·4% of which were solved. There were 382 murders in 1996. The murder rate, at 15·3 per 100,000 population in 1996, is one of the highest in Europe. In Dec. 1997 there were 10,070 people in penal institutions, giving a prison population rate of 410 per 100,000 population.

Religion. In order to practise in public, religious organizations must be licensed by the Department of Religious Affairs attached to the Ministry of Justice. New sects are required to demonstrate loyalty to the state and its traditional religions over a three-year period. Traditionally Lutherans constitute the largest church, with 304,000 members in 1997. Congregations in Jan. 1997: Lutherans, 304; Roman Catholics, 231; Russian Orthodox, 112; Baptists, 78; Old Believers, 62; Adventists, 44; Jews, 5; others, 43.

Education. Adult literacy rate in 1998 was over 99%. The Soviet education system has been restructured on the UNESCO model. Education may begin in kindergarten. From the age of six or seven education is compulsory for nine years in comprehensive schools. This may be followed by three years in special secondary school or one to six years in art, technical or vocational schools. In 1995–96 there were 716 comprehensive schools with 0·35m. pupils and 52 special secondary schools with 17,200 pupils, with a combined total of 34,700 teachers. 188,700 pupils were attending Latvian-language schools, 108,000 Russian and 41,300 mixed. 25,000 pupils were attending vocational schools. Schools for ethnic minorities were established in 1990: there were eight in 1994–95.

In 1997 in the whole field of higher education there were 33 institutions with 64,900 students.

Total expenditure on education in 1996 came to 6·3% of GNP and represented 14·1% of total government expenditure.

Health. In 1995 there were 8,400 doctors, 18,300 paramedics and 166 hospitals with 27,800 beds.

The rate of cigarette smoking among males is one of the highest in the world, at 67% in 1993. However, only 12% of women smoked in 1993.

Welfare. Benefits are paid from the State Social Insurance Fund and the government Budget. It is a statutory requirement that the rate of pensions be reviewed twice a year, taking inflation into account. A compulsory contributory health insurance scheme was inaugurated on 1 Jan. 1997. In 1995 there were 666,000 pensioners, including retirement, 497,000; disability, 103,400; survivors, 38,400; social, 19,600. The average monthly pension was 36 lats in 1996. Legislation of 1995 provides for the phasing in of a new retirement pension scheme which links benefits to contributions made during working years and average life expectancy.

CULTURE

Broadcasting. Broadcasting is overseen by the nine-member National Radio and Television Council appointed by parliament for four-year terms. There are 26 TV broadcasting companies and 23 radio broadcasting companies. Latvijas Radio broadcasts three programmes and an external service (English, German, Swedish). Latvijas Televizija transmits on two networks (colour by PAL). There were 1·76m. radio receivers and 1·22m. television receivers in 1997.

Cinema. In 1997 there were 35 cinemas; attendances totalled 1·27m. In 1995 gross box office receipts came to 700,000 lats and two full-length films were made.

Press. Latvia had 229 newspapers and periodicals in 1997, including 22 dailies, 38 published two–four times a week and one English-language weekly. 2,320 book titles were published in 1997.

Tourism. In 1999 there were 489,000 foreign tourists who brought in revenue of US$111m. 98,002 Latvian nationals travelled abroad in 1997. At the end of 1997 there were 220 hotels and other accommodation facilities.

Festivals. There is an annual Riga Opera Festival in June. The National Song Festival (held every five years) will next be held in 2006.

Libraries. In 1997 there were 998 public libraries with 15·1m. volumes and 514,000 members.

Theatre and Opera. There are a National Opera and Ballet and nine professional theatres.

Museums and Galleries. There are 96 museums.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The Ottomans invaded Lebanon, then part of Syria, in 1516–17 and held nominal control until 1918. After 20 years' French mandatory regime, Lebanon was proclaimed independent on 26 Nov. 1941. In early May 1958 the Muslim opposition to President Chamoun rose in insurrection and for five months the Muslim quarters of Beirut, Tripoli, Sidon and the northern Bekaa were in insurgent hands. On 15 July the US Government landed army and marines who re-established Government authority. Internal problems were exacerbated by the Palestinian problem. An attempt to regulate the activities of Palestinian fighters through the secret Cairo agreement of 1969 was frustrated both by the inability of the Government to enforce its provisions and by an influx of battle-hardened fighters expelled from Jordan in Sept. 1970. From March 1975 Lebanon was beset by civil disorder by which the economy was brought to a virtual standstill.

By Nov. 1976 large-scale fighting had been brought to an end by the intervention of the Syrian-dominated Arab Deterrent Force. Large areas of the country, however, remained outside governmental control, including West Beirut, which was the scene of frequent conflict between opposing militia groups. In March 1978 there was an Israeli invasion following a Palestinian attack inside Israel. Israeli troops eventually withdrew in June, but instead of handing over all their positions to UN Peacekeeping Forces, they installed Israeli-controlled Christian Lebanese militia forces in border areas. In June 1982 Israeli forces once again invaded, this time in massive strength, and swept through the country, eventually laying siege to and bombing Beirut. In Sept. Palestinian forces, together with the PLO leadership, evacuated Beirut. Israeli forces started a withdrawal on 16 Feb. 1985 but it was not until the end of 1990 that the various militias which had held sway in Beirut withdrew. A new Government of National Reconciliation was announced on 24 Dec. 1990. The dissolution of all militias was decreed by the National Assembly in April 1991, but the Shia Muslim militia Hizbollah was allowed to remain active. Following a 17-day Israeli bombardment of Hizbollah positions in April 1996, a US-brokered unsigned 'understanding' of 26 April 1996 guaranteed that Hizbollah guerrillas and Palestinian radical groups would cease attacks on civilians in northern Israel and granted Israel the right to self-defence. Hizbollah maintained the right to resist Israel's occupation of Lebanese soil. In May 2000 Israel completed its withdrawal from south Lebanon, 22 years after the first invasion.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Lebanon is mountainous, bounded on the north and east by Syria, on the west by the Mediterranean and on the south by Israel. The area is 10,452 sq. km (4,036 sq. miles). Population (1991 estimate), 2·84m.; density, 265 per sq. km. In 1999, 89·3% of the population were urban.

The UN gives a projected population for 2010 of 4·02m.

The principal towns, with estimated population (1998), are: Beirut (the capital), 1·5m.; Tripoli, 160,000; Zahlé, 45,000; Saida (Sidon), 38,000.

The official language is Arabic. French and, increasingly, English are widely spoken in official and commercial circles. Armenian is spoken by a minority group.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

1995 births, 77,000; deaths, 20,000. Birth rate per 1,000 population, 1995, 25·6; death rate, 6·8. Infant mortality was 29 per 1,000 live births in 1999; expectation of life, 71·3 years for males and 74·4 for females. Annual population growth rate, 1990–99, 2·7%; fertility rate, 1999, 2·6 births per woman.

CLIMATE

A Mediterranean climate with short, warm winters and long, hot and rainless summers, with high humidity in coastal areas. Rainfall is largely confined to the winter months and can be torrential, with snow on high ground. Beirut, Jan. 55°F (13°C), July 81°F (27°C). Annual rainfall 35·7" (893 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The first Constitution was established under the French Mandate on 23 May 1926. It has since been amended in 1927, 1929, 1943 (twice), 1947 and 1990. It is based on a separation of powers, with a President, a single-chamber National Assembly elected by universal suffrage at age 21 in 12 electoral constituencies, and an independent judiciary. In Oct. 1995 the National Assembly extended the President's term of office from six to nine years. The executive consists of the President and a Prime Minister and Cabinet appointed after consultation between the President and the National Assembly. The system is adapted to the communal balance on which Lebanese political life depends by an electoral law which allocates deputies according to the religious distribution of the population, and by a series of constitutional conventions whereby, e.g., the President is always a Maronite Christian, the Prime Minister a Sunni Muslim and the Speaker of the Assembly a Shia Muslim. There is no party system. In Aug. 1990, and again in July 1992, the National Assembly voted to increase its membership, and now has 128 deputies with equal numbers of Christians and Muslims.

On 21 Sept. 1990 President Hrawi established the Second Republic by signing constitutional amendments which had been negotiated at Taif (Saudi Arabia) in Oct. 1989. These institute an executive collegium between the President, Prime Minister and Speaker, and remove from the President the right to recall the Prime Minister, dissolve the Assembly and vote in the Council of Ministers.

National Anthem. 'Kulluna lil watan lil 'ula lil 'alam' ('All of us for our country, flag and glory'); words by Rashid Nachleh, tune by W. Sabra.

RECENT ELECTIONS

Elections were held on 27 Aug. and 3 Sept. 2000. Resistance and Development (Amal–Hizbollah alliance) won 23 seats; al-Karamah (Dignity) won 18; Baalbeck–Hermel al Ii'tilafiah (Baalbeck–Hermel Coalition) 9; al-Jabhar al-Nidal al-Watani (National Defence Front) 8; Wahdal al-Jabal (Mountain Union) 7. Non-partisans won 20 seats. A number of smaller parties won 43 seats between them.

DEFENCE

There were 22,000 Syrian troops in the country in 1999. In the Israeli-occupied southern strip the pro-Israeli South Lebanese Army is estimated to number 2,500. Conscription is for 12 months.

Defence expenditure in 2000 totalled US$553m. (US$168 per capita), representing 3·5% of GDP.

Army. The strength of the Army was 65,000 in 1999 and includes a Presidential Guard and three special forces regiments. There is an internal security force, run by the Ministry of the Interior, some 13,000 strong.

Navy. A force of 1,200 personnel (1999) operate a handful of small craft.

Air Force. The Air Force had (1999) about 1,700 personnel. No combat aircraft were operated.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

A Treaty of Brotherhood, Co-operation and Co-ordination with Syria of May 1991 provides for close relations in the fields of foreign policy, the economy, military affairs and security. The treaty stipulates that Lebanese government decisions are subject to review by six joint Syrian-Lebanese bodies.

Lebanon is a member of the UN, the League of Arab States, OIC and the International Organization of the Francophonie.

ECONOMY

Agriculture accounted for 12·4% of GDP in 1998, industry 26·5% and services 61·1%.

Overview. The semi-autonomous Council of Development and Reconstruction, originally set up in 1977, was revived in 1991 to oversee a post-civil war rehabilitation programme 'Horizon 2000'. In 1995 this programme was revised and extended up to 2007.

Currency. The unit of currency is the Lebanese pound (LBP) of 100 piastres. There was deflation of 0·4% in both 2000 and 2001. In June 2002 foreign exchange reserves totalled US$4,604m., gold reserves were 9·22m. troy oz and total money supply was £Leb.2,231·10bn. There is a fluctuating official rate of exchange, fixed monthly; in practice it is used only for the calculation of ad-valorem customs duties on Lebanese imports and for import statistics. For other purposes the free market is used.

Budget. The fiscal year is the calendar year.

Government revenue and expenditure (in £Leb.1m.):

	1995	1996	1997	1998	1999
Revenue	3,003	3,534	3,753	4,449	4,868
Expenditure	6,342	7,732	9,728	8,385	8,910

Performance. Total GDP was US$16·7bn. in 2001. In 2000 the economy contracted by 0·5%, but there was a slight recovery in 2001, with growth of 2·0% recorded.

Banking and Finance. The Bank of Lebanon (Governor, Riad Salameh) is the bank of issue. In 1994 there were 52 domestic banks, 14 subsidiaries and 12 foreign banks, with 590 branches in all. Commercial bank deposits in June 1998 totalled £Leb.41,836,800m. There is a stock exchange in Beirut (closed 1983–95).

Lebanon was one of 15 countries and territories named in a report in June 2000 as failing to co-operate in the fight against international money laundering. The Financial Action Task Force on Money Laundering was set up by the G7 group of major industrialized nations.

Weights and Measures. The use of the metric system is legal.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Environment. According to the World Bank Atlas Lebanon's carbon dioxide emissions in 1998 were the equivalent of 3·9 tonnes per capita.

Electricity. Installed capacity in 1997 was 1m. kW. Production in 1998 was 9·7bn. kWh and consumption per capita 1,820 kWh.

Minerals. There are no commercially viable deposits.

Agriculture. In 1998 there were 180,000 ha of arable land and 128,000 ha of permanent crop land. Crop production (in 1,000 tonnes), 2000: tomatoes, 335; sugarbeets, 330; potatoes, 270; grapes, 245; cucumbers and gherkins, 190; oranges, 165; watermelons, 135; apples, 120; lemons and limes, 111; bananas, 110; olives, 105; onions, 85; cabbages, 83.

Livestock (2000): goats, 485,000; sheep, 380,000; cattle, 77,000; pigs, 64,000; chickens, 32m.

Forestry. The forests of the past have been denuded by exploitation and in 1995 covered 52,000 ha (78,000 ha in 1990). The annual deforestation rate during the years from 1990 to 1995, at 7·8%, was the highest anywhere in the world over the same period. Timber production was 412,000 cu. metres in 1999.

Fisheries. The catch in 1999 was 3,560 tonnes, of which 3,540 tonnes were sea fish.

INDUSTRY

According to the Financial Times Survey (FT 500), the largest company by market capitalization in Lebanon on 4 Jan. 2001 was SOLIDERE (US$1,051·9m.), a Beirut development and reconstruction company.

In 1994 there were 23,518 factories operating. Industrial production (in 1,000 tonnes): cement, 2,703 (1997); residual fuel oil, 156 (1992); distillate fuel oil, 85 (1993).

Labour. The workforce was some 650,000 in 1995, of whom 72,000 worked in agriculture. Following considerable labour unrest, an agreement on wage increases and social benefits was concluded between the government and the GCLW in Dec. 1993.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The Basotho nation was constituted in the 19th century under the leadership of Moshoeshoe I, bringing together refugees from disparate tribes scattered by Zulu expansionism in southern Africa. After war with land-hungry Boer settlers in 1856 (and again in 1886), Moshoeshoe appealed for British protection. This was granted in 1868, and in 1871 the territory was annexed to the Cape Colony (now Republic of South Africa), but in 1883 it was restored to the direct control of the British government through the High Commissioner for South Africa. In 1965 full internal self-government was achieved under King Moshoeshoe II. On 4 Oct. 1966 Basutoland became an independent and sovereign member of the British Commonwealth as the Kingdom of Lesotho. Chief Leabua Jonathan, leader of the Basotho National Party and prime minister from 1965, suspended the constitution when the elections of 1970 were declared invalid. On 20 Jan. 1986, after a border blockade by the Republic of South Africa, Chief Jonathan was deposed in a bloodless military coup led by Maj.-Gen. Justin Lekhanya who granted significant powers to the king. King Moeshoeshoe II was deposed in Nov. 1990 and replaced by King Letsie III. Maj.-Gen. Lekhanya was deposed in May 1991. A democratic constitution was promulgated in April 1993. The elections in May 1998 were won by the ruling Lesotho Congress for Democracy. In Sept. 1998 an army mutiny prompted intervention from South Africa to support the government.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Lesotho is an enclave within South Africa. The area is 11,720 sq. miles (30,355 sq. km).

The census in 1996 showed a total population of 1,968,000 persons; density, 64·8 per sq. km. In 1999 the population was 72·9% rural.

The UN gives a projected population for 2010 of 2·18m.

There are ten districts, all named after their chief towns, except Berea (chief town, Teyateyaneng). Area and population:

Region	Area (in sq. km.)	Population (1986 census, in 1,000)	Population (1995 estimate, in 1,000)
Berea	2,222	194·6	206·2
Butha-Buthe	1,767	100·6	135·4
Leribe	2,828	258·0	349·5
Mafeteng	2,119	195·6	259·0

LIBERIA

Republic of Liberia

Capital: Monrovia
Population estimate, 2000: 2·91m.
GDP per capita: not available

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The Republic of Liberia had its origin in efforts to establish freed American slaves in a colony on the West African coast. In 1822 a settlement was formed near the spot where Monrovia now stands. On 26 July 1847 the State was constituted as the Free and Independent Republic of Liberia.

On 12 April 1980 President Tolbert was assassinated and his government overthrown in a coup led by Master-Sergeant Samuel Doe, who was later installed as Head of State. At the beginning of 1990 rebel forces entered Liberia from the north and fought their way successfully southwards to confront President Doe's forces in Monrovia. The rebels comprised the National Patriotic Front of Liberia (NPFL) led by Charles Taylor, and the hostile breakaway Independent National Patriotic Front led by Prince Johnson. A peacekeeping force dispatched by the Economic Community of West African States (ECOWAS) disembarked at Monrovia on 25 Aug. 1990, and attempts to form a new provisional government were made. On 9 Sept. 1990 President Doe was assassinated by Prince Johnson's rebels. ECOWAS installed a provisional government led by Amos Sawyer. Charles Taylor also declared himself president, as did the former vice-president, Harry Moniba. A succession of ceasefires was negotiated and broken. A peace agreement was signed on 17 Aug. 1996 under the auspices of ECOWAS in Abuja which provided for the disarmament of all factions by the end of Jan. 1997 and the election of a president on 31 May 1997. By the end of Jan. 1997 some 20,000 out of perhaps 60,000 insurgents had surrendered their arms. Possession of arms after that date became a criminal offence. The civil war is reckoned to have killed up to 200,000 people and made 1m. homeless. A presidential election was held in July 1997. Charles Taylor was elected by an overwhelming majority. In Feb. 2002 President Taylor declared a state of emergency after an attack by a group of rebels on the town of Kley, the site of refugee camps for thousands of refugees from Sierra Leone.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Liberia is bounded in the northwest by Sierra Leone, north by Guinea, east by Côte d'Ivoire and southwest by the Atlantic ocean. The total area is 99,067 sq. km. At the census (1984) the population was 2,101,628. Estimate (1997) 2,602,100, of whom some 25% were refugees abroad. Density, 26 per sq. km.

The UN gives a projected population for 2010 of 4·68m.

In 1995 an estimated 55% of the population were rural. English is the official language spoken by 15% of the population. The rest belong in the main to three linguistic groups: Mande, West Atlantic, and the Kwa. These are in turn subdivided into 16 ethnic groups: Bassa, Bella, Gbandi, Mende, Gio, Dey, Mano, Gola, Kpelle, Kissi, Krahn, Kru, Lorma, Mandingo, Vai and Grebo.

Monrovia, the capital, had (1999) a population of 479,000.

There are 13 counties, whose areas, populations (1986 estimate) and capitals were as follows:

County	Sq. km	1986 population	Chief town
Bomi	1,955	67,300	Tubmanburg
Bong	8,099	268,100	Gbarnga

Grand Gedeh	17,029	109,000	Zwedru
Lofa	19,360	261,000	Voinjama
Margibi	3,263	104,000	Kakata
Maryland	5,351	137,700	Harper
Montserrado	2,740	582,400	Bensonville

County	Sq. km	1986 population	Chief town
Nimba	12,043	325,700	Saniquillie
Rivercess	4,385	39,900	Rivercess
Sinoe	10,254	65,400	Greenville

The county of Grand Kru (chief town, Barclayville) was created in 1985 from the former territories of Kru Coast and Sasstown.

Jamahiriya Al-Arabiya Al-Libiya Al-Shabiya Al-Ishtirakiya Al-Uzma (Great Socialist People's Libyan Arab Republic)

Capital: Tripoli
Population estimate, 2000: 5·29m.
GDP per capita, 2000: (PPP$) 7,570
HDI/world rank: 0·773/64

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Tripoli fell under Ottoman domination in the 16th century and although in 1711 the Arab population secured some measure of independence, the country came under the direct rule of Turkey in 1835. In 1911 Italy occupied Tripoli and in 1912, by the Treaty of Ouchy, Turkey recognized the sovereignty of Italy in Tripoli. During the Second World War, the British army expelled the Italians and their German allies, and Tripolitania and Cyrenaica were placed under British, and Fezzan under French, military administration. This continued until 1950 under a UN directive. Libya became an independent, sovereign kingdom with the former Amir of Cyrenaica, Muhammad Idris al Senussi, as king on 24 Dec. 1951. King Idris was deposed in Sept. 1969 by a group of army officers, 12 of whom formed the Revolutionary Command Council which, chaired by Col. Muammar Qadhafi, proclaimed the Libyan Arab Republic. In 1977 the Revolutionary Command Council was superseded by a more democratic People's Congress. Qadhafi remained head of state. Throughout the 1980s Libya had constant disagreements with its neighbours and its relations with the USA and other Western countries deteriorated, culminating in the US bombing of the capital in April 1987 to punish Qadhafi for his alleged support of international terrorism. A US trade embargo was enforced in 1986. In 1992 the UN imposed sanctions after Libya refused to surrender suspects in the 1988 bombing of a Pan Am flight over Lockerbie in Scotland. In April 1999 Libya handed over the two suspects to be tried in the Netherlands but under Scottish law. In Jan. 2001 Abdelbaset Ali Mohmed al Megrahi was sentenced to life imprisonment after being found guilty of murder. The UN has responded to Libya's disavowal of terrorism with a promise to lift sanctions but a US trade embargo remains in place.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Libya is bounded in the north by the Mediterranean Sea, east by Egypt and Sudan, south by Chad and Niger and west by Algeria and Tunisia. The area is estimated at 1,775,500 sq. km. The population at the census on 31 July 1984 was 3,637,488. Estimate (2000), 5·29m. (47·9% female); density, 3·0 per sq. km. In 1999, 87·2% of the population lived in urban areas. Ethnic composition, 1995: Libyan Arab and Berber, 79%; other (mainly Egyptians, Sudanese and Chadians), 21%.

The UN gives a projected population for 2010 of 6·53m.

The country was formerly divided into 13 administrative regions, but following reforms in 1998 there are now 26 administrative regions (Shabiyat). They are Shabiya Al-Batan, Shabiya Jabal Al-Akhdar, Shabiya Al-Wahad, Shabiya Al-Jofra, Shabiya Wadi Al-Hait, Shabiya Al-Morqib, Shabiya Tripoli, Shabiya Sabrata/Sorman, Shabiya Yefrin, Shabiya Derna, Shabiya Al-Marj, Shabiya Al-Kofra, Shabiya Murzaq, Shabiya Wadi Al-Shaati, Shabiya Ben Walid, Shabiya Al-Jafarah, Shabiya Nikat Al-Khams, Shabiya Nalout, Shabiya Al-Qoba, Shabiya Benghazi, Shabiya Sirte, Shabiya Sabah, Shabiya Musrata, Shabiya Tarhouna/Msallata, Shabiya Zawiyah and Shabiya Gharyan.

The two largest cities are Tripoli, the capital (population of 1,773,000 in 1999); Benghazi (804,000 in 1995).

The official language is Arabic.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

1997 births, 255,000; deaths, 43,000. Birth rate, 1997 (per 1,000 population), 43·9; death rate, 7·5. Life expectancy (1999), 68·6 years for men and 66·9 for women. Annual population growth rate, 1990–99, 2·64%; infant mortality, 1999, 19 per 1,000 live births; fertility rate, 1999, 3·7 births per woman.

CLIMATE

The coastal region has a warm temperate climate, with mild wet winters and hot dry summers, although most of the country suffers from aridity. Tripoli, Jan. 52°F (11·1°C), July 81°F (27·2°C). Annual rainfall 16" (400 mm). Benghazi, Jan. 56°F (13·3°C), July 77°F (25°C). Annual rainfall 11" (267 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

In 1977 a new form of direct democracy, the state of the masses, was promulgated and the name of the country was changed to Great Socialist People's Libyan Arab Jamahiriya. Under this system, every adult is supposed to be able to share in policy making through the Basic People's Congresses of which there are some 2,000. These Congresses appoint People's Committees to execute policy. Provincial and urban affairs are handled by People's Committees responsible to Municipality People's Congresses, of which there are 26, now called Shabiyat. Officials of these Congresses and Committees form at national level the 3,000-member General People's Congress which normally meets for about a week early each year (usually in March). This is the highest policy-making body in the country. The General People's Congress appoints its own General Secretariat and the General People's Committee, whose members (the equivalents of ministers elsewhere) head the government departments which execute policy at national level.

Until 1977 Libya was ruled by a Revolutionary Command Council (RCC) headed by Col. Muammar Qadhafi. Upon its abolition in that year the five surviving members of the RCC became the General Secretariat of the General People's Congress, still under Qadhafi's direction. In 1979 they stood down to be replaced by officials elected by the Congress. Since then, Col. Qadhafi has retained his position as Leader of the Revolution. Neither he nor his former RCC colleagues have any formal posts in the present administration, although they continue to wield considerable authority.

National Anthem. 'Allah Akbar' ('God is Great'); words by Abdullah Al-Din, tune by Mahmoud Al-Sharif.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

Leader: Col. Muammar Abu Minyar al-Qadhafi; b. 1942 (came to power 1 Sept. 1969).

In March 2003 the General People's Congress comprised:

Secretary: Muhammad al-Zanati. Assistant: Ahmad Mohamed Ibrahim.

In March 2003 the General People's Committee comprised:

Secretary: Mubarak Abdullah Al-Shamikh. Secretary for African Unity: Ali Abd Al-Salam Al-Turayki. Finance: Al-Ujayli Abd Al-Salam Al-Burayni. Economy and Trade: Shukri Mohamed Ghanim. Foreign Liaison and International Co-operation: Abd Al-Rahman Mohamed Shalgam. Justice and Public Security: Mohamed Ali Al-Masirati. Human Resources: Boghdadi Ali Mahmoudi. Infrastructure, Urban Planning and Environment: Salem Ahmed Bouig. Social Affairs: Selma Chabane Abduljabbar.

DEFENCE

There is selective conscription for one–two years. Defence expenditure in 2000 totalled US$1,176m. (US$210 per capita), representing 3·2% of GDP.

Nuclear Weapons. It is still thought that Libya is interested in acquiring nuclear weapons, but a UN embargo has hampered progress. According to Deadly Arsenals, published by the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace, Libya has both biological and chemical weapons research programmes.

Army. There are seven military districts. Strength (1999) 35,000 (25,000 conscripts). In addition there is a People's Militia of 40,000 which acts as a reserve force.

Navy. The fleet, a mixture of Soviet and West European-built ships, includes 4 diesel submarines, 2 frigates and 4 corvettes. There is a small Naval Aviation wing operating 32 armed helicopters.

Personnel in 1999 totalled 8,000, including coastguard. The forces are based at Tripoli, Benghazi, Derna, Tobruk, Sidi Bilal and Al Khums.

Air Force. The Air Force has over 420 combat aircraft, including MiG-21s, MiG-23s, MiG-25s and Mirage 5Ds, but most are in storage. Personnel total (1999) about 22,000, with some of the combat aircraft operated by Syrian aircrew.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

Libya is a member of the UN, the African Union, OPEC, Arab Maghreb Union, African Development Bank and OIC.

ECONOMY

Agriculture accounted for an estimated 5% of GDP in 1996, industry 55% and services 40%.

Overview. An enactment of the People's General Congress in Sept. 1992 authorizes the privatization of enterprises.

Currency. The unit of currency is the Libyan dinar (LYD) of 1,000 millemes. The dinar was devalued 15% in Nov. 1994, and alongside the official exchange rate a new rate was applied to private sector imports. Foreign exchange reserves were US$13,146m. in June 2002 and total money supply was 7,249m. dinars. Inflation was negative in 2001, at –8·5%.

Budget. In 1995 revenues were estimated to be US$10·4bn. and expenditures US$10·3bn.

Performance. GDP growth was 0·6% in 2001. Total GDP in 2000 was an estimated US$38bn.

Banking and Finance. A National Bank of Libya was established in 1955; it was renamed the Central Bank of Libya in 1972. All foreign banks were nationalized by Dec. 1970. In 1972 the government set up the Libyan Arab Foreign Bank whose function is overseas investment and to participate in multinational banking corporations. The National Agricultural Bank has been set up to give loans and subsidies to farmers to develop their land and to assist them in marketing their crops.

Weights and Measures. Although the metric system has been officially adopted and is obligatory for all contracts, the following weights and measures are still used: oke = 1·282 kg; kantar = 51·28 kg; draa = 46 cm; handaza = 68 cm.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Environment. According to the World Bank Atlas Libya's carbon dioxide emissions in 1998 were the equivalent of 7·2 tonnes per capita.

Electricity. Installed capacity in 1997 was 5m. kW. Production was 16·92bn. kWh in 1998 and consumption per capita 3,677 kWh.

Oil and Gas. Out of a total GDP of US$32,280·8m. in 1996, the oil sector accounted for US$7,731·5m. Crude oil production (1998) 511m. bbls. (1·4m. bbls. a day). Reserves (2001) 29·5bn. bbls. The Libyan National Oil Corporation (NOC) is the state's organization for the exploitation of oil resources. Since US oil companies withdrew owing to sanctions, European rivals have been quick to move in.

Proven natural gas reserves totalled 1,310bn. cu. metres in 1999. Agip, the Italian oil company, is investing US$3bn. in a project to export natural gas to Europe. Production (1999) 5·9bn. cu. metres.

Water. Since 1984 a US$20bn. project has been under way to bring water from aquifers underlying the Sahara to the inhabited coastal areas of Libya. This scheme, called the 'Great Man-Made River', is intended, on completion, to bring 6,000 cu. metres of water a day along some 4,000 km of pipes. Phase I was completed in Aug. 1991; Phase II of the project (covering the west of Libya) was announced in Sept. 1989. The river is providing Libya's main centres of population with clean water for the first time in their history as well as making possible the improvement and expansion of agriculture. The whole project is more than three-quarters complete.

Minerals. Iron ore deposits have been found in the south.

Agriculture. Only the coastal zone, which covers an area of about 17,000 sq. miles, is really suitable for agriculture. Of some 25m. acres of productive land, nearly 20m. are used for grazing and about 1m. for static farming. The sub-desert zone produces the alfalfa plant. The desert zone and the Fezzan contain some fertile oases. In 1998 there were 1·82m. ha of arable land and 0·3m. ha of permanent crops.

Cyrenaica has about 10m. acres of potentially productive land and is suitable for grazing. Certain areas are suitable for dry farming; in addition, grapes, olives and dates are grown. About 143,000 acres are used for settled farming; about 272,000 acres are covered by natural forests. The Agricultural Development Authority plans to reclaim 6,000 ha each year for agriculture. In the Fezzan there are about 6,700 acres of irrigated gardens and about 297,000 acres are planted with date palms.

Production (2000, in 1,000 tonnes): tomatoes, 250; watermelons, 215; potatoes, 210; olives, 190; onions, 180; wheat, 160; dates, 133; barley, 70; oranges, 43.

Livestock (2000): 5·1m. sheep, 1·9m. goats, 143,000 cattle, 71,000 camels, 25m. chickens.

Forestry. Forest area in 1995 was 6,000 ha (0·2% of the land area). In 1999, 652,000 cu. metres of roundwood were cut.

Fisheries. The catch in 1999 was approximately 32,450 tonnes, entirely from marine waters.

INDUSTRY

Industry is nationalized. Small scale private sector industrialization in the form of partnerships is permitted. Output (1997, in 1,000 tonnes): residual fuel oil, 5,240; distillate fuel oil, 4,272; cement, 2,524; petrol, 1,970.

Labour. The labour force in 1996 was 1,601,000 (79% males).

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Since 1986 the USA has applied a trade embargo on the grounds of Libya's alleged complicity in terrorism. In 1992 UN sanctions were imposed for Libya's refusal to deliver suspected terrorists for trial in the UK or USA. In Feb. 1989 Libya signed a treaty of economic co-operation with the four other Maghreb countries; Algeria, Mauritania, Morocco and Tunisia.

Imports and Exports. In 1999 imports (f.o.b.) were valued at US$3,996m. (US$5,857m. in 1998) and exports (f.o.b.) at US$6,758m. (US$6,328m. in 1998). Some 80% of GDP derives from trade. Oil accounts for over 95% of exports, worth 3,578·8m. dinars in 1996. Main export markets in 1996 were Italy (41%), Germany (18%), Spain (10%), France (4%) and Turkey (4%); main import suppliers were Italy (21·7%), Germany (13·9%), UK (8·4%), France (6·8%) and Turkey (5·8%).

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. There were 6,798 km of national roads in 1996, 10,186 km of secondary roads and 7,500 km of other roads. Passenger cars numbered 809,500 in 1996 (154·1 per 1,000 inhabitants), in addition to which there were 356,000 trucks and vans. There were 1,080 deaths as a result of road accidents in 1996.

Civil Aviation. The UN ban on air traffic to and from Libya enforced since April 1992 was lifted in April 1999 following the handing over for trial of two suspected Lockerbie bombers. Libyan Arab Airlines provides both international and domestic services. In 1999 scheduled airline traffic of Libya-based carriers flew 3·8m. km, carrying 571,000 passengers.

Shipping. Sea-going vessels totalled 567,000 GRT in 1998, including oil tankers 395,000 GRT.

Telecommunications. In 2000 main telephone lines numbered 605,000 (107·9 per 1,000 population) and in 1998 there were 20,000 mobile phone subscribers. Internet users numbered 20,000 in March 2001.

Postal Services. In 1994 there were 383 post offices, or one for every 13,700 persons.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. The Civil, Commercial and Criminal codes are based mainly on the Egyptian model. Matters of personal status of family or succession matters affecting Muslims are dealt with in special courts according to the Muslim law. All other matters, civil, commercial and criminal, are tried in the ordinary courts, which have jurisdiction over everyone.

There are civil and penal courts in Tripoli and Benghazi, with subsidiary courts at Misurata and Derna; courts of assize in Tripoli and Benghazi, and courts of appeal also in Tripoli and Benghazi.

Religion. Islam is declared the State religion, but the right of others to practise their religions is provided for. In 1990, 97% were Sunni Muslims.

Education. In 1995–96 there were 1,460,433 primary and preparatory (called basic education) school pupils, and in 1992–93 there were 310,556 secondary level pupils. In 1994–95 there were 3 universities and 1 medical and 1 technological university. There were 3 other institutes of higher education. In 1994–95 there were 31,140 university students and 1,710 academic staff. Adult literacy in 1999 was 79·1% (male, 90·2%; female, 66·9%).

Health. In 1990 there were 4,749 physicians, 686 dentists and 13,849 nurses. Provision of hospital beds in 1990 was 41 per 10,000 population.

CULTURE

Broadcasting. Broadcasting is controlled by the government Libyan Jamihiriya Broadcasting and People's Revolution Broadcasting-Television. Radio has a home service, external services in English, French and Arabic and a Holy Koran programme. In 1997 there were estimated to be 1·35m. radio and 730,000 TV receivers (colour by SECAM H).

Press. In 1996 there were four daily newspapers with a combined circulation of 71,000.

Tourism. In 1999 there were 40,000 foreign tourists, spending US$28m.

LIECHTENSTEIN

Fürstentum Liechtenstein
(Principality of Liechtenstein)

Capital: Vaduz
Population estimate, 2000: 33,000
GDP per capita: not available

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Liechtenstein is a sovereign state with a history dating back to 1342 when Count Hartmann III became ruler of the county of Vaduz. Additions were later made to the count's domains and by 1434 the territory reached its present boundaries. On 23 Jan. 1719 the Emperor Charles VI constituted the two counties as the Principality of Liechtenstein. In 1862 the constitution established an elected diet. After the First World War, Liechtenstein was represented abroad by Switzerland. Swiss currency was adopted in 1921. On 5 Oct. 1921 a new constitution based on that of Switzerland extended democratic rights, but in March 2003 the people of Liechtenstein voted in a referendum to give their prince the power to govern without reference to elected representatives.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Liechtenstein is bounded on the east by Austria and the west by Switzerland. Total area 160 sq. km (61·8 sq. miles). The population (census 1997) was 31,320 (16,113 females), including 10,730 resident foreigners, giving a density of 195 per sq. km.

The population of Liechtenstein is predominantly rural. Population of Vaduz (1997) 4,975. The language is German.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

In 1997 there were 435 births and 230 deaths (rates of 13·9 per 1,000 population and 7·3 respectively). The annual population growth rate was 1·0% over the period 1995–99.

CLIMATE

There is a distinct difference in climate between the higher mountains and the valleys. In summer the peaks can often be foggy while the valleys remain sunny and warm, while in winter the valleys can often be foggy and cold whilst the peaks remain sunny and comparatively warm. Vaduz, Jan. 0°C, July 20°C. Annual rainfall 1,090 mm.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

Liechtenstein is a constitutional monarchy ruled by the princes of the House of Liechtenstein.

The reigning Prince is Hans-Adam II, b. 14 Feb. 1945; he succeeded his father Prince Francis-Joseph, 13 Nov. 1989 (he exercised the prerogatives to which the Sovereign is entitled from 26 Aug. 1984); married on 30 July 1967 to Countess Marie Kinsky von Wchinitz und Tettau. Offspring: Hereditary Prince Alois (b. 11 June 1968), married Duchess Sophie of Bavaria on 3 July 1993. (Offspring: Prince Joseph Wenzel, b. 24 May 1995; Marie Caroline, b. 17 Oct. 1996; Georg Antonius, b. 20 April 1999; Nikolaus Sebastian, b. 6 Dec. 2000); Prince Maximilian (b. 16 May 1969), married Angela Brown on 29 Jan. 2000 (offspring: Alfons, b. 18 May 2001); Prince Constantin (b. 15 March 1972), married Countess Marie Kálnoky de Köröspatak on 17 July 1999; Princess Tatjana (b. 10 April 1973), married Philipp von Lattorff on 5 June 1999 (offspring: Lukas, b. 13 May 2000; Elisabeth, b. 25 Jan. 2002). The monarchy is hereditary in the male line.

The present constitution of 5 Oct. 1921 provided for a unicameral parliament (Landtag) of 15 members elected for four years, but this was amended to 25 members in 1988. Election is on the basis of proportional representation. The prince can call and dismiss the parliament, and following a referendum held on 16 March 2003, dismiss the government and veto bills. On parliamentary recommendation, he appoints the prime minister and the four councillors for a four-year term. Any group of 1,000 persons or any three communes may propose legislation (initiative). Bills passed by the parliament may be submitted to popular referendum. A law is valid when it receives a majority approval by the parliament and the prince's signed concurrence. The capital is Vaduz.

National Anthem. 'Oben am jungen Rhein' ('Up above the young Rhine'); words by H. H. Jauch; tune, 'God save the Queen'.

RECENT ELECTIONS

At the elections on 9 and 11 Feb. 2001 the Progressive Citizens' Party (FBPL) gained 13 seats (49·90% of votes cast); the Patriotic Union (VU), 11 (41·34% of votes); Free List (FL), 1 (8·76% of votes).

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

Head of Government, Minister for Finance and Construction, Family Affairs and Equal Rights: Otmar Hasler; b. 1953 (FBPL; sworn in 5 April 2001).

In March 2003 the cabinet comprised:

Deputy Head of Government, Minister for Education, Transport and Communication, and Justice: Rita Kieber-Beck. Health, Social Services, Economy: Hansjörg Frick. Interior, Culture, Sport, Environment, Agriculture and Forestry: Alois Ospelt. Foreign Relations: Ernst Walch.

Princely House Website: http://www.fuerstenhaus.li/

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

Liechtenstein is a member of the UN, WTO, OSCE, EFTA, EEA and the Council of Europe.

ECONOMY

Liechtenstein is one of the world's richest countries with a well diversified economy. Low taxes and strict bank secrecy laws have made Liechtenstein a successful offshore financial centre.

Currency. Swiss currency has been in use since 1921.

Budget. Budget (in Swiss francs), 1998: revenue, 591,317,000; expenditure, 557,492,000. There is no public debt.

Performance. Real GDP growth was 2·1% in 2001.

Banking and Finance. There were eight banks in 1998. Combined total assets were 29,076m. Swiss francs in 1997.

Liechtenstein was one of 15 countries and territories named in a report in June 2000 as failing to co-operate in the fight against international money laundering. The Financial Action Task Force on Money Laundering was set up by the G7 group of major industrialized nations.

Weights and Measures. The metric system is in force.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Electricity. In 1997 imported capacity was 1,171,569 MW; electricity produced was 77,816 MWh.

Agriculture. In 1996 there were 4,000 ha of cultivated land. In 2000 approximately 660 ha (17% of all agricultural land—the highest proportion of any country) was set aside for organic farming. The rearing of cattle on the Alpine pastures is highly developed. In 1997 there were 5,489 cattle (including 2,614 milch cows), 342 horses, 3,608 sheep, 287 goats, 2,056 pigs. Total production of dairy produce in 1997 was 13,079 tonnes.

Forestry. In 1995 there were 5,560 ha of forest (34·7% of the land area). Timber production in 1999 was 13,000 cu. metres.

INDUSTRY

The country is highly industrialized, and has a great variety of light industries (textiles, ceramics, steel screws, precision instruments, canned food, pharmaceutical products, heating appliances, etc.).

Labour. The farming population went down from 70% in 1930 to 1·3% in 1997. The rapid change-over has led to the immigration of foreign workers (Austrians, Germans, Italians, Spaniards). The workforce was 15,922 in 1997, excluding employees commuting from abroad (8,743 in 1997). Industrial undertakings affiliated to the Liechtenstein Chamber of Commerce in 1996 employed 6,825 workers earning 469·83m. Swiss francs.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Liechtenstein has been in a customs union with Switzerland since 1923.

Imports and Exports. Exports of home produce in 1996 (in Swiss francs), for member companies affiliated to the Chamber of Industry and Commerce, amounted to 3,510m. Swiss francs: 458m. (13%) went to Switzerland, 1,584m. (45·2%) went to EEA countries and 1,468m. (41·8%) went to other countries. Imports in 1997 amounted to 1,179m. Swiss francs.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. There are 250 km of roads. Postal buses are the chief means of public transportation within the country and to Austria and Switzerland. There were 19,926 cars in 1997. There were 367 road accidents in 1997 (6 fatal).

Rail. The 18·5 km of main railway passing through the country is operated by Austrian Federal Railways.

Telecommunications. In 1996 there were 19,916 telephones and 129 telex machines.

Postal Services. Post and telegraphs are administered by Switzerland.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. The principality has its own civil and penal codes. The lowest court is the county court, Landgericht, presided over by one judge, which decides minor civil cases and summary criminal offences. The criminal court, Kriminalgericht, with a bench of five judges is for major crimes. Another court of mixed jurisdiction is the court of assizes (with three judges) for misdemeanours. Juvenile cases are treated in the Juvenile Court (with a bench of three judges). The superior court, Obergericht, and Supreme Court, Oberster Gerichtshof, are courts of appeal for civil and criminal cases (both with benches of five judges). An administrative court of appeal from government actions and the State Court determines the constitutionality of laws.

The death penalty was abolished in 1989.

Police. The principality has no army. 1998: police force 62, auxiliary police 14.

Religion. In 1997 there were 24,962 Roman Catholics and 2,279 Protestants.

Education. In 1997 there were 14 primary, 3 upper, 5 secondary and 1 grammar schools, with 3,955 pupils and 367 teachers. There is also an evening technical school, a music school and a children's pedagogic-welfare day school.

Health. There is an obligatory sickness insurance scheme. In 1989 there was one hospital, but Liechtenstein has an agreement with the Swiss cantons of St Gallen and Graubünden and the Austrian Federal State of Vorarlberg that her citizens may use certain hospitals. In 1995 there were 32 doctors, 12 dentists and 2 pharmacists.

CULTURE

Broadcasting. In 1997 there were 21,000 radios and 12,000 TV sets.

Cinema. There were two cinemas in 1998.

Press. In 1998 there were two daily newspapers with a total circulation of 17,900, and one weekly with a circulation of 13,900.

Tourism. In 1999, 60,000 tourists visited Liechtenstein.

DIPLOMATIC REPRESENTATIVES

In 1919 Switzerland agreed to represent the interests of Liechtenstein in countries where it has diplomatic missions and where Liechtenstein is not represented in its own right. In so doing Switzerland always acts only on the basis of mandates of a general or specific nature, which it may either accept or refuse, while Liechtenstein is free to enter into direct relations with foreign states or to set up its own additional diplomatic missions.

Of the United Kingdom in Liechtenstein
Ambassador: Basil Eastwood, CMG (resides at Berne).

Of Liechtenstein to the USA (633 Third Avenue, 27th Floor, New York, NY, 10017)
Ambassador: Claudia Fritsche.

Of Liechtenstein to the United Nations

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

At the time of Tatar-Mongol domination of Russia, Lithuania annexed Russian lands until by the middle of the 15th century Belorussia, along with those parts of Russia and Ukraine as far as the Black Sea, were under its rule. Lithuania united with Poland dynastically in 1385 and politically in 1569. During the partitions of the Polish-Lithuanian Commonwealth by Russia, Prussia and Austria in the 18th century, Lithuania yielded its Russian territories and was absorbed into the Russian empire in 1795. Following the German occupation during the First World War and the Russian revolution on 16 Feb. 1918, heavy fighting occurred between the Soviet, German, Polish and Lithuanian forces. In April 1919 the Soviets withdrew and the re-formed Lithuanian government established a democratic republic. Lithuanian independence was recognized by the Treaty of Versailles. In Dec. 1926 the democratic regime was overthrown by a coup. The secret protocol of the Soviet-German frontier treaty of 23 Sept. 1939 assigned the greater part of Lithuania to the Soviet sphere of influence. Lithuania became a Soviet Socialist Republic of the USSR on 3 Aug. 1940.

On 11 March 1990 the newly-elected Lithuanian Supreme Soviet proclaimed independence, a decision unacceptable to the USSR government. Initially dispatched to Vilnius to enforce conscription, Soviet army units occupied key buildings in the face of mounting popular unrest. On 13 Jan. 1991 the army fired on demonstrators and there were fatal casualties. A referendum on independence was held in Feb. 1991 at which 90·5% voted in favour. A fully independent status was conceded by the USSR on 6 Sept. 1991. The first presidential elections were held in 1993 and won by Algirdas Brazauskas, who was subsequently elected to be the current prime minister. In Oct. 2002 Lithuania was invited to join both the EU and NATO in 2004.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Lithuania is bounded in the north by Latvia, east and south by Belarus, and west by Poland, the Russian enclave of Kaliningrad and the Baltic Sea. The total area is 65,300 sq. km (25,170 sq. miles) and the population (2001 census) 3,483,972 (1,854,824 females; 2,332,098, or 66·9%, urban); density, 53·4 per sq. km. Of the 2001 census, Lithuanians accounted for 83·5%, Poles 6·7%, Russians 6·3% (9·4% in 1989), Belorussians 1·2%, Ukrainians 0·7%, and Jews 0·1%.

The UN gives a projected population for 2010 of 3·60m.

There are 10 counties (with capitals of the same name): Alytus; Kaunas; Klaipėda; Marijampolė; Panevėžys; Šiauliai; Tauragė; Telšiai; Utena; Vilnius.

The capital is Vilnius (Jan. 2002 population, 553,373). Other large towns are Kaunas (376,575), Klaipėda (192,498), Šiauliai (133,528) and Panevėžys (119,417).

The official language is Lithuanian, but ethnic minorities have the right to official use of their language where they form a substantial part of the population. All residents who applied by 3 Nov. 1991 received Lithuanian citizenship, requirements for which now are ten years' residence and competence in Lithuanian.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

2001: births, 31,546; deaths, 40,399; marriages, 15,764; divorces, 11,024; infant deaths, 250. Rates (per 1,000 population): birth, 9·1; death, 11·6; marriage, 4·5; divorce, 3·2. The population started to decline in 1994, a trend which is set to continue. Annual population growth rate, 1990–2002, –0·6%. In 2001, 8,006 births were registered to unmarried mothers and there were 20,513 legally induced abortions. Life expectancy at birth in 2001 was 65·88 years for males and 77·41 years for females. In 2001 the most popular age range for marrying was 20–24 for both males and females. Infant mortality, 2001, 7·8 per 1,000 live births; fertility rate, 1·29 births per woman. In 2001 there were 7,253 emigrants and 24,694 immigrants.

Lithuania has the world's highest suicide rate, at 44·1 per 100,000 inhabitants in 2001 (a rate of 77·2 among males but only 15 among women).

CLIMATE

1999: Vilnius, Jan. –2·8°C, July 20·5°C. Annual rainfall 520 mm. Klaipėda, Jan. –0·6°C, July 19·4°C. Annual rainfall 770 mm.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

A referendum to approve a new constitution was held on 25 Oct. 1992. Parliament is the 141-member Seimas. Under a new electoral law passed in July 2000, 71 of the parliament's 141 members will defeat rivals for their seats if they receive the most votes in a single round of balloting. Previously they had to win 50% of the votes or face a run-off against the nearest competitor. The parliament's 70 other seats are distributed according to the proportional popularity of the political parties at the ballot box.

The Constitutional Court is empowered to rule on whether proposed laws conflict with the constitution or existing legislation. It comprises nine judges who serve nine-year terms, one third rotating every three years.

National Anthem. 'Lietuva, tėvyne mūsų' ('Lithuania, our fatherland'); words and tune by V. Kurdirka.

RECENT ELECTIONS

Presidential elections were held in two rounds on 22 Dec. 2002 and 5 Jan. 2003. In the first round incumbent Valdas Adamkus won 35·3% of the vote, Rolandas Paksas 19·7% and Artûras Paulauskas 8·3%. Turn-out was 53·9%. In the run-off between the two leading candidates from the first round, former prime minister Rolandas Paksas of the Liberal Democratic Party won 54·9% of the vote against 45·1% for Valdas Adamkus.

Parliamentary elections were held on 8 Oct. 2000. Turn-out was 55·9%. The A. Brazauskas Social Democratic Coalition won 51 seats with 31·1% of the vote; New Union (social liberals) won 29 with 19·6%; the Lithuanian Liberal Union, 34 with 17·3%; the Homeland Union–Conservatives of Lithuania, 9 with 8·6%. Other parties and non-partisans won four seats or fewer.

Air Force. The Air Force consisted of 1,081 personnel in 2002, divided into three functional categories: military aviation; airspace surveillance; and air defence.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

Lithuania is a member of the UN, WTO, BIS, the NATO Partnership for Peace, EBRD, IMF, UNESCO, FAO, IMO, Council of Europe, OSCE, Council of the Baltic Sea States, IOM and EAPC, is an Associate Member of the EU and Associate Partner of the WEU. In Dec. 1995 Lithuania applied to join the EU. At the European Union's Helsinki Summit in Dec. 1999 Lithuania, along with five other countries, was invited to begin full negotiations for membership in Feb. 2000, and is scheduled to become a member on 1 May 2004. It also received an invitation on 21 Nov. 2002 to start accession negotiations towards NATO membership.

ECONOMY

Agriculture accounted for 7% of GDP in 2001, industry 24% and services 60%.

Overview. Privatization in Lithuania is close to completion. Currently as much as 80% of GDP in Lithuania is generated by the private sector. The restructuring of priority sectors of the Lithuanian economy is facilitated by the second stage of privatization, which gives equal rights to local and foreign investors. The State Property Fund co-ordinates the privatization process and organizes the privatization of the largest state-controlled entities in industry and infrastructure.

Currency. The unit of currency is the litas (plural: litai) of 100 cents, which was introduced on 25 June 1993 and became the sole legal tender on 1 Aug. The litas was pegged to the US dollar on 1 April 1994 at US$1 = 4 litai, but since 2 Feb. 2002 it has been pegged to the euro at 3·4528 litai = one euro. Inflation, which reached a high of 1,161% in the early 1990s, was 1·3% in 2001. Total money supply was 6,678m. litai in May 2002. Gold reserves were 186,000 troy oz in June 2002 and foreign exchange reserves US$2,230m.

Budget. Total revenue in 2002 amounted to 10,330m. litai and and expenditure to 11,466m. litai. Revenue in 2002 included: VAT, 37%; personal income tax, 24%. Expenditure in 2002 included (in 1m. litai): education, 3,073; social welfare, 1,149; public order, 1,009; general public services, 903; defence, 857; transport and communications, 844; health, 613.

VAT is 18%.

Performance. Among the wealthiest provinces of the former Soviet Union, Lithuania has weathered the economic crisis overspilling from Russia. 47·8% of exports in 2001 went to the EU compared to just 11% to Russia. The GDP growth rate for 1998 was 5·1% but in 1999 was negative, at –3·9%. There was then a recovery in 2000, with growth of 3·9%, rising to 5·7% in 2001. Total GDP in 2001 was US$11·8bn.

Banking and Finance. The central bank and bank of issue is the Bank of Lithuania (Governor, Reinoldijas Šarkinas). There are two state banks—the Savings Bank and the Agricultural Bank. A programme to restructure and privatize the state banks was started in 1996. There were ten commercial banks and four foreign bank branches in 2002. The largest private bank in Lithuania is JSC Vilniaus Bankas, which controls approximately 37% of the total banking assets in the country.

A stock exchange opened in Vilnius in 1993. In Oct. 1999 its capitalization was US$3·5bn. The trading volume in 1999 was US$575m.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Environment. According to Lithuania's Ministry of Environment, carbon dioxide emissions were the equivalent of 4·4 tonnes per capita in 2000.

Electricity. Installed capacity was 6·57m. kW in 2001; production was 14·7bn. kWh. A nuclear power station (with two reactors) in Ignalina was responsible for 77·1% of total output in 2001, and there are also two hydro-electric, five public and six autoproducer thermal plants. No other country has such a high percentage of its electricity generated through nuclear power. However, at the EU's insistence the government is committed to closing down Ignalina, with the first reactor being closed in 2005. Electricity consumption per capita in 2001 was 1,852 kWh.

Oil and Gas. Oil production started from a small field at Kretinga in 1990. In Jan. 2002 remaining recoverable reserves were estimated at 3·7m. tonnes; potential recoverable resources, 80m. tonnes. Production in 2001 was 471,000 tonnes.

Minerals. Peat reserves totalled 173·7m. tonnes in Jan. 2002. Output, 1991, 259,000 tonnes.

Agriculture. In 2001 agriculture employed about 16·1% of the workforce. As of 1 Jan. 2002 the average farm size was 17·2 ha, one of the lowest in eastern Europe; the agricultural land area was 3,956,200 ha. In 2001, 260,700 persons were employed in agriculture and forestry.

Output of main agricultural products (in 1,000 tonnes) in 2001: wheat, 1,076; potatoes, 1,054; sugarbeets, 880; barley, 776; rye, 231; cabbages, 121; oats, 84; rapeseed, 65. Value of agricultural production, 2001 (in 1m. litai), was 4,501·7, of which from agricultural partnerships and enterprises, 944·7; and from individual farm holdings, 3,557·0.

Livestock, Jan. 2002 (in 1,000): cattle, 751·7 (of which milch cows, 441·8); pigs, 1,010·8; sheep and goats, 36·0; horses, 64·5; poultry, 6,576·1. There were 102,227 tractors in use in 2002. Animal products, 2001 (in 1,000 tonnes): meat, 150·5; milk, 1,729·8; and 742,300 eggs.

Forestry. In 2002 forests covered 2·0m. ha, or 30·6% of Lithuania's territory, and consist of conifers, mostly pine. Timber production in 2001, 3·1m. cu. metres.

Fisheries. In Jan. 2001 the fishing fleet comprised 86 vessels averaging 650 GRT. Total catch in 2001 amounted to 153,931 tonnes (mainly from sea fishing), compared to 57,477 tonnes in 1995.

INDUSTRY

Industrial output included, in 1998 (in 1,000 tonnes): petrol, 6,433; mineral and chemical fertilizers, 783; cement, 714 (1997); sulphuric acid, 504; extraction of peat, 202; sugar, 137; quarrying of stone, clay and sand, 1·47m. cu. metres; television picture tubes, 1,794,000 units; silk, 7·8m. sq. metres; linen, 15·9m. sq. metres; woollen fabrics,14·3m. sq. metres; cotton fabrics, 63·8m. cu. metres; TV sets, 84,100 units; bicycles, 150,000 units; refrigerators, 238,900 units.

Labour. In 2001 the workforce was 1·74m. (70·1% in private enterprises and 29·9% in the public sector). Employed population by activity (as a percentage): manufacturing, 17·9; wholesale and retail trade, 15·4; education, 10·7; health and social work, 7·0; construction, 6·2; transport and communications, 6·0; real estate, 3·7. Employment skills, 72·7% with tertiary education, 55·9% with upper secondary education, 20·8% with lower secondary, primary education. In 2001 the average monthly wage was 991·2 litai; legal minimum wage was 430 litai.

In 2001 old age pension for men started at 61·5 years and for women at 57·5. Average number of persons entitled to pensions in 2001 was 636,900. The unemployment rate in June 2002 was 13·0%.

Trade Unions. On 1 Jan. 2001 there were 655 registered unions (339 in operation) affiliated with four federations: the Lithuanian Trade Union Centre (LPSC); the Lithuanian Trade Union Unification (LPSS); the Lithuanian Workers Union (LDS); the Lithuanian Labour Federation (LDF). A merger is planned between LPSC and LPSS.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

In order to foster export growth, Lithuania maintains a fairly liberal foreign trade regime. There is no quantitative import restriction and the import duties are one of the lowest in central Europe. By the end of 1998 free trade agreements with the European Union, EFTA, neighbouring Latvia and Estonia, as well as with Central European Free Trade Agreement countries (CEFTA) and Ukraine were signed. Meanwhile, most favoured-nation status is applied to trade with Russia.

Foreign investors may purchase up to 100% of the equity companies in Lithuania. By mid-1999, US$2·1bn. of foreign capital had been invested.

Total foreign debt was US$4,855m. in 2000.

Individual laws on three free economic zones (namely the laws on Šiauliai, Klaipėda and Kaunas) have been cleared by Lithuania's Parliament, the Seimas.

Imports and Exports. In 2001 imports were valued at €7·1bn. and exports at €5·1bn. Main export markets, 2001: UK, 13·8%; Latvia, 12·6%; Germany, 12·6%, Russia, 11·0%; Poland, 6·3%. Main import suppliers: Russia, 25·3%; Germany, 17·2%; Poland, 4·9%; Italy, 4·2%. Main exports are mineral products, textiles and textile articles, electrical equipment, TV sets, chemical products and prepared foodstuffs.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. In 2002 there were 76,573 km of roads, of which 91·3% were paved. The Via Baltica, a US$180m. project, will upgrade a 1,000 km (620 mile) international highway linking Finland, Estonia, Latvia, Lithuania and Poland, and there are plans to continue the link to western and southern Europe.

In 2001 there were 1,133,477 passenger cars, 15,171 buses, 470 trolley buses, 100,389 goods vehicles and 20,244 motorcycles. In 2001 public transport carried 346·4m. passengers. There were 5,972 traffic accidents in 2001, with 706 fatalities.

Rail. There are 1,696 km of railway track in operation in Lithuania. The majority of rail traffic is diesel propelled, although 122 km of track are electrified. In 2001, 7·7m. passengers and 29,200 tonnes of freight were carried.

Civil Aviation. The main international airport is based in the capital, Vilnius. Other international airports are at Kaunas, Palanga and Šiauliai. The largest airline, a state-owned joint stock company, Lithuanian Airlines (on the list of privatization), has regular scheduled flights to most of Europe's main transit hubs, and in 2002 a number of other international airlines ran regular scheduled flights. In 1999 Lithuanian Airlines flew 7·7m. km, carrying 201,500 passengers (201,300 on international flights). In 2002 Vilnius was the busiest airport for passenger traffic, handling 634,991 passengers, but Kaunas (which handles approximately 8,500 tonnes per annum) was the busiest for freight.

Shipping. The ice-free port of Klaipėda plays a dominant role in the national economy and Baltic maritime traffic. It has the second largest tonnage in the Baltic region and a cargo capacity of 30m. tonnes per annum. A 205 ha site at the port is dedicated a Free Economic Zone, which offers attractive conditions to foreign investors.

In 2002 the merchant fleet numbered 95 ships totalling 377,942 GRT, including 10 bulkers, 54 general cargo ships, 5 tankers and 20 reefers. The turnover of the port in 1999 was 15·7m. tonnes (up from under 13m. in 1995).

In 1999 there were 788 km of navigable inland waterways. The inland fleet comprised 89 vessels.

Telecommunications. A majority stake in Lithuanian Telecom (the only fixed telephone service provider) was sold to the Finnish and Swedish consortium SONERA in 1998 and by Jan. 2003 the telecommunications market was fully liberalized. Lithuanian Telecom had 994,000 subscribers in Jan. 2003. In 1999 there were 332,000 mobile phone subscribers. In 2000 there were 240,000 PCs in use (64·9 per 1,000 persons) and in 1995 there were 6,200 fax machines. The number of Internet users in Oct. 2001 was 297,000.

Postal Services. In 2002 there were 944 post offices.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

LUXEMBOURG

Grand-Duché de Luxembourg

Capital: Luxembourg
Population estimate, 2000: 435,700
GDP per capita, 2000: (PPP$) 50,061
HDI/world rank: 0·925/16

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Lying at the heart of Western Europe between Belgium, France and Germany, the Grand-Duchy of Luxembourg has been an independent State ever since the Treaty of London of 19 April 1839. The origins of Luxembourg stretch back to AD 963 when Count Sigfried founded the castle of Lutzilinburhurch. The House of Luxembourg was most prominent on the European scene during the 14th and 15th centuries, when four Counts of the House of Luxembourg became Emperors of the Holy Roman Empire and Kings of Bohemia. The House of Luxembourg subsequently went into decline and was successively occupied by Burgundy, Spain, Austria and finally by revolutionary France. In 1815 the Vienna Treaty decided that the Grand Duchy of Luxembourg would come under the Netherlands ruling house of Orange-Nassau. In 1839 the Walloon-speaking area was joined to Belgium. The union with the Netherlands ended in 1890. In both world wars (1914–18 and 1939–45) Luxembourg, a neutral country, was invaded and occupied by German forces. In June 1942 Luxembourg became the only Nazi-occupied country to stage a general strike against the occupation. In 1948 a Benelux customs union formed by Belgium, the Netherlands and Luxembourg allowed for standardization of prices, taxes and wages and the free movement of labour among the three countries. Luxembourg was a founder member of the European Union.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Luxembourg has an area of 2,586 sq. km (999 sq. miles) and is bounded on the west by Belgium, south by France, east by Germany. A census took place on 15 Feb. 2001; the population was 439,539 (including 162,285 foreigners); density, 170 per sq. km. The percentage of foreigners living in Luxembourg has increased dramatically in recent years, from 26% in 1986 to 36·9% in 2001. The main countries of origin of foreigners living in Luxembourg are Portugal (58,657 in Feb. 2001), France (19,979) and Italy (18,996).

In 1999, 91·0% of the population were urban. The capital, Luxembourg, has (Feb. 2001) 76,688 inhabitants; Esch-sur-Alzette, the centre of the mining district, 27,146; Dudelange, 17,230; Differdange, 10,284; Diekirch, 6,068; and Echternach, 4,610.

The UN gives a projected population for 2010 of 490,000.

Lëtzebuergesch is spoken by most of the population, and since 1984 has been an official language with French and German.

2001 rates per 1,000 population; birth, 12·9; death, 8·4; marriage, 4·5; divorce, 2·3. In 2001 the most popular age range for marrying was 25–29 for both males and females. Life expectancy at birth in 1999 was 73·9 years for males and 80·4 years for females. Annual population growth rate, 1990–2001, 1·4%. Infant mortality, 2001, 5·7 per 1,000 live births; fertility rate, 7·6 births per 1000 women. In 2001 Luxembourg received 686 asylum applications.

A UNICEF report published in 2000 showed that only 1·2% of children in Luxembourg live in poverty (in households with incomes below the US official poverty line converted into national currencies), the lowest percentage of any country.

CLIMATE

In general the country resembles Belgium in its climate, with rain evenly distributed throughout the year. Average temperatures are Jan. 0·8°C, July 17·5°C. Annual rainfall 30·8" (782·2 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The Grand Duchy of Luxembourg is a constitutional monarchy.

The reigning Grand Duke is Henri, b. 16 April 1955, son of the former Grand Duke Jean and Princess Joséphine-Charlotte of Belgium; succeeded 7 Oct. 2000 on the abdication of his father; married Maria Teresa Mestre 14 Feb. 1981. (Offspring: Prince Guillaume, b. 11 Nov. 1981; Prince Felix, b. 3 June 1984; Prince Louis, b. 3 Aug. 1986; Princess Alexandra, b. 16 Feb. 1991; Prince Sebastian, b. 16 April 1992).

The constitution of 17 Oct. 1868 was revised in 1919, 1948, 1956, 1972, 1983, 1988, 1989, 1994, 1996 and 1998.

The separation of powers between the legislature and the executive is not very strong, resulting in much interaction between the two bodies. Only the judiciary is completely independent.

The 12 cantons are divided into four electoral districts: the South, the East, the Centre and the North. Voters choose between party lists of candidates in multi-member constituencies. The parliament is the Chamber of Deputies, which consists of a maximum of 60 members elected for five years. Voting is compulsory and there is universal suffrage. Seats are allocated according to the rules of proportional representation and the principle of the smallest electoral quote. There is a Council of State of 21 members appointed by the Sovereign. Membership is for a maximum period of 15 years, with retirement compulsory at the age of 72. It advises on proposed laws and any other question referred to it.

The head of state takes part in the legislative power, exercises executive power and has a part in the judicial power. The constitution leaves to the sovereign the right to organize the government, which consists of a Minister of State, who is Prime Minister, and of at least three Ministers. Direct consultation by referendum is provided for in the Constitution.

National Anthem. 'Ons Hemecht' ('Our Homeland'); words by M. Lentz, tune by J. A. Zinnen.

RECENT ELECTIONS

Elections took place on 13 June 1999. The Christian Social Party (CSV) gained 19 seats, the Democratic Party (DP) 15, the Socialist Workers' Party (LSAP) 13, the Action Committee for Democracy and Pensions Justice (ADR) 7, the Greens (Déi Gréng) 5, and the Left (DL) 1. The Christian Social Party and the Democratic Party subsequently formed a coalition government.

European Parliament. Luxembourg has six representatives. At the June 1999 elections turn-out was 90%. CSV won 2 seats with 31·9% of votes cast (group in European Parliament: European People's Party); LSAP, 2 with 23·2% (Party of European Socialists); the Democratic Party, 1 with 20·8% (Liberal, Democrat and Reform Party); the Greens, 1 with 10·7% (Greens).

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

In March 2003 the Christian Social Party–Democratic Party coalition comprised:

Prime Minister, Minister of State, Finance and the Exchequer: Jean-Claude Juncker; b. 1954 (CSV; sworn in 20 Jan. 1995).

Deputy Prime Minister, Minister of Foreign Affairs and External Commerce, Civil Service and Administrative Reform: Lydie Polfer (DP). Agriculture, Viticulture, Rural Development, Middle Classes, Housing and Tourism: Fernand Boden (CSV). Treasury and Budget, Justice: Luc Frieden (CSV). The Family, Social Solidarity and Youth, Promotion of Women: Marie-Josée Jacobs (CSV). Culture, Higher Education, Vocational Training and Research, Public Works: Erna Hennicot-Schoepges (CSV).

Interior: Michel Wolter (CSV). Economy and Transport: Henri Grethen (DP). Health and Social Security: Carlo Wagner (DP). Environment, Co-operation, Humanitarian Action, Defence: Charles Goerens (DP). Religious Affairs, Relations with Parliament, Employment and Labour, and Communications: François Biltgen (CSV). National Education, Professional Training and Sports: Anne Brasseur (DP).

The Speaker is Jean Spautz.

DEFENCE

There is a volunteer light infantry battalion of (2001) 842, of which only the career officers are professionals. In recent years Luxembourg soldiers and officers have been actively participating in peacekeeping missions, mainly in the former Yugoslavia. There is also a Gendarmerie of 612. In 2000 the Gendarmerie and the police force merged to form the Police grand-ducale. NATO maintains a squadron of E-3A Sentries.

In 2000 military expenditure totalled US$126m. (US$291 per capita), representing 0·8% of GDP.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

Luxembourg is a member of the UN, WTO, NATO, Benelux, the EU, OECD, the Council of Europe, WEU, OSCE, IOM and the International Organization of the Francophonie. The Schengen Accord of June 1990 abolished border controls between Luxembourg, Austria, Belgium, Denmark, Finland, France, Germany, Greece, Iceland, Italy, the Netherlands, Norway, Portugal, Spain and Sweden.

ECONOMY

Services accounted for 81·5% of GDP in 2001, industry 17·9% and agriculture 0·6%.

According to the anti-corruption organization Transparency International, Luxembourg ranked equal 7th in the world in a 2002 survey of the countries with the least corruption in business and government. It received 9·0 out of 10 in the annual index.

Overview. The world economic crisis of 1973–74 hit the then monolithic Luxembourg economy very hard. The previously strong steel sector had to be thoroughly restructured and this, along with industrial diversification and the emergence of the new service sector, helped recovery. The financial sector is the country’s biggest employer. Other buoyant sectors of the Luxembourg economy include telecommunications, audio-visual and multimedia, industrial plastics, float glass and air transports.

Currency. On 1 Jan. 1999 the euro (EUR) became the legal currency in Luxembourg; irrevocable conversion rate 40·3399 Luxembourg francs to 1 euro. The euro, which consists of 100 cents, has been in circulation since 1 Jan. 2002. There are seven euro notes in different colours and sizes denominated in 500, 200, 100, 50, 20, 10 and 5 euros, and eight coins denominated in 2 and 1 euros, then 50, 20, 10, 5, 2 and 1 cents. On the introduction of the euro there was a ‘dual circulation’ period before the Luxembourg franc ceased to be legal tender on 28 Feb. 2002. Euro banknotes in circulation on 1 Jan. 2002 had a total value of €5·6bn.

Inflation in 2001 was 2·7%. Foreign exchange reserves were US$24m. in 1997. Gold reserves were 76,000 troy oz in June 2002 and total money supply €505m.

Budget. Revenue and expenditure for calendar years in €1m.:

	1999	2000	2001	2002
Revenue	4,976	5,687	5,709	5,977
Expenditure	4,855	5,595	5,148	5,999

Public debt in 2002 was €640·11m.

VAT is 15%, with reduced rates of 6% and 3% (for books). According to government projections, the general government surplus was expected to be €14,930,500 in 2001. Income taxes and business taxes have been reduced to preserve competitiveness in the international environment. The normal tax rate for companies came down to 37·45% in 1998, compared with 40·3% in 1996.

Performance. In terms of GDP per head, Luxembourg is the richest country in the world, with a per capita PPP (purchasing power parity) GDP of €48,700 in 2001.

Real GDP growth was 6·0% in 1999, 8·9% in 2000 but only 1·0% in 2001. Total GDP in 2001 was US$19·8bn.

The OECD Economic Survey of 2001 reported: 'Luxembourg continues to build on a remarkable economic performance, maintaining high growth rates and low unemployment. Nevertheless, multi-factor productivity growth has slowed and labour market institutions expose the country to the risk of a large increase in structural unemployment if the leading industries were to be hit by an adverse shock.'

Banking and Finance. Luxembourg's Central Bank (formerly the Monetary Institute) was established in July 1998 (Director-General, Yves Mersch). In Nov. 2002 there were 179 banks. German banks make up nearly a third of all the banks. Total deposits in 1998 were €8,262·9m.; net assets in unit trusts, €482·1bn. (2001); net assets in investment companies, €441·5bn. (2001). There is a stock exchange.

In 2001 the financial sector accounted for 21·5% of gross added value at basic prices and the banks showed a net profit of €3·6bn. The total number of approved insurance companies in 2001 was 93, with reinsurance companies numbering 264; the amount of premiums due was €6,333·9m.

According to the OECD Economic Survey of 1999: 'Tax advantages in comparison with neighbouring countries, strict bank secrecy rules, a liberal regulatory environment and the rapid implementation of EU directives in Luxembourg law, combined with a favourable geographical location at the heart of Europe and a qualified and multilingual labour force, have been central in creating competitive advantages in financial services.'

Weights and Measures. The metric system is in force.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Environment. According to the World Bank Atlas carbon dioxide emissions in 1998 were the equivalent of 18·0 tonnes per capita.

Electricity. Apart from hydro-electricity and electricity generated from fossil fuels, Luxembourg has no national energy resources. Installed capacity in 2001 was 1·6m. kW. Net electricity production was 1,592m. kWh in 2001 and consumption per capita was 13·4 kWh.

Minerals. The national steel industry mainly relies on imported ore. In 2001 production (in tonnes) of steel, 2,724,679; of pig-iron (1997), 438,030.

Agriculture. The contribution of agriculture, viticulture and forestry to the economy has been gradually declining over the years, accounting for only 0·6% of gross added value at basic prices in 2001. However, the actual output of this sector has nearly tripled during the past 30 years, a trend common to many EU countries. There were 5,289 workers engaged in agricultural work (including wine-growing and forestry) in 2001 (726 wage-earners), and 638 farms with an average area of 55·2 ha; 127,942 ha were under cultivation in 2001.

Production, 2001 (in tonnes) of main crops: grassland and pasturage, 450,761; forage crops, 247,858; maize, 129,272; bread crops, 58,825; potatoes, 22,770; colza (rape), 8,780. Production, 2001 (in 1,000 tonnes) of meat, 27·1; milk, 269·7. In 2001, 134,826 hectolitres of wine were produced. In 2001 there were 7,534 tractors, 706 harvester-threshers, 1,553 manure spreaders and 1,721 gatherer-presses.

Livestock (15 May 2001): 3,126 horses, 205,193 cattle, 78,540 pigs, 8,476 sheep.

Forestry. In 1999 there were 88,620 ha of forests, which in 2000 produced 191,716 cu. metres of broadleaved and 163,504 cu. metres of coniferous wood.

INDUSTRY

According to the Financial Times Survey (FT 500), the largest company by market capitalization in Luxembourg on 4 Jan. 2001 was SES (US$4,557·7m.), the global satellite communications company.

In 2001 there were 2,920 industrial enterprises, of which 1,888 were in the building industry. Production, 2001 (in tonnes): steel, 2,724,679; rolled steel products, 4,518,537. The world's largest steel producer, Arcelor, has its headquarters in Luxembourg. Created in Feb. 2002 through the merger of Arbed of Luxembourg, Aceralia of Spain and Usinor of France, it expects to produce in excess of 40m. tonnes of steel annually and to account for approximately 5% of world steel output.

Labour. In 2001 the estimated total workforce was 277,000. The government fixes a legal minimum wage. Retirement is at 65. Employment creation averaged 3·5% every year between 1985 and 2001, with a total increase in jobs of 58·1% over the period. In Jan. 2003 the standardized unemployment rate was 2·7%. Luxembourg has the lowest rate of unemployment of any EU member country. The OECD Economic Survey of 2001 reported: 'Buoyed by the strength in economic activity, domestic employment growth rose to record 5% in 1999. As usual, cross-border workers took most of the new jobs. Unemployment continued to edge down to less than 3%. Economic activity appears to have strengthened further this year. Again, growth has been very strong in the private services sectors, notably finance.'

Between 1989 and 1998 strikes cost Luxembourg an average of just six days per 1,000 employees a year (the second lowest in the European Union, with Austria having 4 per 1,000), compared to the EU average of 85 per 1,000.

There was a 5·8% increase in employment in 2001. Of the new jobs created, around two-thirds went to so-called frontaliers, workers living in surrounding countries who commute into Luxembourg to work. More than 100,000 people cross into Luxembourg every day from neighbouring France, Germany and Belgium to work, principally in the financial services industry.

Trade Unions. The main trade unions are the OGB-L (Socialist) and the LCGB (Christian-Social). Other sectorial unions include ALEBA (the banking sector), FNCTTFEL (railworkers), and FEP (private employers). In Oct. 1998 union representatives were elected in both the private and public sectors.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Luxembourg is in the process of turning itself into a centre for electronic commerce, the world's fastest-growing industry.

Imports and Exports. Exports in 2001 (provisional figures) totalled €9,081·9m. and imports €12,335·0m. In 2000, 84·2% of exports went to other EU member countries and 83·1% of imports were from other EU member countries.

Principal imports and exports by standard international trade classification (provisional figures) in €1m.:

Trade Fairs. The Foires Internationales de Luxembourg occurs twice a year, and there are a growing number of specialized fairs.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. On 1 Jan. 2002 there were 2,875 km of roads of which 126 km were motorways. Motor vehicles registered at 1 Jan. 2002 included 341,272 passenger cars, 21,730 trucks, 1,122 coaches and 11,945 motorcycles. In 2001 there were 774 road accidents with 70 fatalities.

Rail. In 2001 there were 274 km of railway (standard gauge) of which 261 km were electrified; 13·6m. passengers were carried.

Civil Aviation. Findel is the airport for Luxembourg. 1,625,323 passengers and 510,965 tonnes of freight were handled in 2001. The national carrier is Luxair, 23·1% state-owned. Cargolux has developed into one of the major international freight carriers. In 1999 scheduled airline traffic of Luxembourg-based carriers flew 57·1m. km, carrying 843,000 passengers (all on international flights).

Shipping. A shipping register was set up in 1990. In 2001 merchant shipping totalled 1,591,281 tonnes. 159 vessels were registered at 25 June 2002.

Telecommunications. Luxembourg had 346,763 main telephone lines in 2001, or 785 for every 1,000 population. There were 200,000 PCs in use in 2000 (453·2 per 1,000 persons), 209,000 mobile phones in 1999 and 25,000 fax machines in 2001. In Dec. 2000 Luxembourg had 100,000 Internet users.

Postal Services. In 2001 there were 108 post offices. In 2001 a total of 153·2m. items of mail were processed.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. The Constitution makes the Courts of Law independent in performing their functions, restricting their sphere of activity, defining their limit of jurisdiction and providing a number of procedural guarantees. The Constitution has additionally laid down a number of provisions designed to ensure judges remain independent of persons under their jurisdiction, and to ensure no interference from the executive and legislative organs. All judges are appointed by Grand-Ducal order and are irremovable.

The judicial organization comprises three Justices of the Peace (conciliation and police courts). The country is, in addition, divided into two judicial districts—Luxembourg and Diekirch. District courts deal with matters such as civic and commercial cases. Offences which are punishable under the Penal Code or by specific laws with imprisonment or hard labour fall within the jurisdiction of the criminal chambers of District Courts, as the Assize Court was repealed by law in 1987. The High Court of Justice consists of a Supreme Court of Appeal and a Court of Appeal.

The judicial organization of the Grand-Duchy does not include the jury system. A division of votes between the judges on the issue of guilt/innocence may lead to acquittal. Society before the Courts of Law is represented by the Public Prosecutor Department, composed of members of the judiciary directly answerable to the government.

In 1999 a new Administrative Tribunal, Administrative Court and Constitutional Court were established.

The population in penal institutions in 2001 was 341.

Religion. The population is mostly Roman Catholic. There are small Protestant, Jewish, Greek, Russian Orthodox and Muslim communities as well.

Education. The adult literacy rate in 1998 was at least 99%. Education is compulsory for all children between the ages of 6 and 15. In 2000–01 there were 10,706 children in pre-primary school with 751 teachers; 31,218 pupils in primary schools; 31,278 pupils in secondary schools. In higher education (2001–02) the Higher Institute of Technology (IST) had 360 students and there were 394 students in teacher training. In 2001–02 the University Centre of Luxembourg had 1,778 students. Luxembourg does not have a full-time university, so many students have to go abroad, predominantly to France, Germany and Belgium. In 2000–01, 5,017 students pursued university studies abroad.

Health. In 2001 there were 1,140 doctors (389 GPs and 751 specialists) and 289 dentists. There were 19 hospitals and 3,035 hospital beds in 2000.

Welfare. In Luxembourg the social security system was built in several stages. It has been extended with regard to both the socio-professional categories and the risk groups covered. The law of 26 July 1986 introduced the minimum wage, a mechanism to guarantee private means. It consists of a supplementary benefit paid up to a set threshold determined according to the composition of the household. This benefit is awarded irrespective of the causes of the need.

Public contributions play a growing role in financing the system. In 1995 they accounted for 40% of the resources, with employees' and employers' contributions forming just over half. Around 50% of social security benefits goes towards pension schemes, and around 25% goes to health insurance. Nearly half the ordinary budget is absorbed by social security.

CULTURE

Broadcasting. The major broadcaster of TV and radio programmes is RTL Group, formerly CLT (Compagnie Luxembourgeoise de Télédiffusion), along with local and regional radio stations that have emerged since the 1991 Law on Electronic Media. CLT was set up in 1929 and started broadcasting in 1932. In the same year Radio Luxembourg started broadcasting its multilingual programmes. In 1954 CLT received an exclusive licence for broadcasting radio and TV in the Grand-Duchy, which was extended until the end of 2010 in 1995.

With 24 television and 14 radio stations in eight countries, RTL Group is Europe's largest TV, radio and production company. Listed on the London Stock Exchange, the Luxembourg-based media group operates TV channels and radio stations in Germany, France, Belgium, the Netherlands, UK, Luxembourg, Spain and Hungary. CLT-UFA S.A. also broadcast four TV channels and three radio stations via the ASTRA satellite system. The 1991 Law on Electronic Media allowed the creation of four new radio networks and 15 local radio stations, and thus ended the CLT monopoly.

The commercial Radio-Télé-Luxembourg broadcasts one programme in Lëtzebuergesch on FM. There are commercial and religious programmes in French, German, English, Italian, Portuguese and Spanish. More than 40 international TV programmes are broadcast by cable. The country's cable penetration is 90%, while satellite amounts to 15·5% and terrestrial to 2·5%. Luxembourg has over 150 local, independent cable networks and counts four major cable operators.

In 1997 there were 163,000 TV sets in use and 285,000 radio receivers. Satellite and cable TV is widespread (colour by SECAM V).

Cinema. In 2000 there were 25 cinema screens throughout the country. Cinema attendances in 2000 totalled 1,362,006.

Press. There were six daily newspapers in 2001 with a circulation of 162,934, equivalent to 369 per 1,000 inhabitants. There are a number of weekly titles with a circulation of 124,166.

Tourism. In 2001 there were 858,686 tourists, and 7,568 hotel rooms and 1,221,852 overnight stays. Tourists spent US$297m. in 1997. Camping is widespread, and weekend and short-stay tourism accounts for many tourists. There were 1,015,300 overnight stays at campsites in 2001.

Festivals. The Festival International Echternach (May–June) and the Festival of Wiltz (June–July) are annual events. Both feature a variety of classical music, jazz, theatre and recitals.

Libraries. In 1998 there were 33 libraries (excluding higher education libraries). There were 298,197 library loans in 1997.

Theatre and Opera. There are several theatres in Luxembourg City, including the Grand Théâtre de la Ville, Théâtre des Capucins and Théâtre du Centaure. There are also a number of smaller theatres elsewhere, notably in Esch/Alzette and Echternach.

Museums and Galleries. The main museums in Luxembourg City are the Musée d'Histoire de la Ville, the Villa Vauban, the Musée National d'Histoire Naturelle and the Musée National d'Histoire et d'Art. There are smaller museums in the rest of the country. In 2000 there were two national museums, 11 public museums and three private museums, which had 189,403 visitors.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The history of Macedonia can be traced to the reign of King Karan (808–778 BC), but the country was at its most powerful at the time of Philip II (359–336 BC) and Alexander the Great (336–323 BC). At the end of the 6th century AD Slavs began to settle in Macedonia. There followed a long period of internal fighting but the spread of Christianity led to consolidation and the creation of the first Macedonian Slav state, the Kingdom of Samuel, 976–1018. In the 14th century it fell to Serbia, and in 1355 to the Turks. After the Balkan wars of 1912–13 Turkey was ousted and Serbia received part of the territory, the rest going to Bulgaria and Greece. In 1918 Yugoslav Macedonia was incorporated into Serbia as South Serbia, becoming a republic in the Socialist Federal Republic of Yugoslavia. Claims to the historical Macedonian territory have long been a source of contention with Bulgaria and Greece. Macedonia declared its independence on 18 Sept. 1991. In April 1999 the Kosovo crisis which led to NATO air attacks on Yugoslavian military targets set off a flood of refugees into Macedonia, although most returned home after the end of the crisis.

In March 2001 there were a series of clashes between government forces and ethnic Albanian separatists near the border between Macedonia and Kosovo. As violence escalated Macedonia found itself on the brink of civil war. In May 2001 the new national unity government gave ethnic Albanian rebels a 'final warning' to end their uprising. As the crisis worsened, a stand-off within the government between the Macedonian and the ethnic Albanian parties was only resolved after the intervention of Javier Solana, the EU's foreign and security policy chief. A number of Macedonian soldiers were killed in clashes with the rebels, and following reverses in the military campaign the commander of the Macedonian army, Jovan Andrevski, resigned in June 2001. In Aug. 2001 a peace accord was negotiated.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Macedonia is bounded in the north by Serbia and Montenegro, in the east by Bulgaria, in the south by Greece and in the west by Albania. Its area is 25,713 sq. km. According to the 1994 census final results, the population on 20 June 1994 was 1,945,932. The ethnic groups were Macedonians (1,295,964), Albanians (441,104), Turks (78,019), Rhomas (43,707), Serbs (40,228), Vlachs (8,601). There were 36,427 others and 1,882 not stated. Ethnic Albanians predominate on the western side of Macedonia. Minorities are represented in the Council for Inter-Ethnic Relations. In Dec. 2000 the population estimate was 2·03m.; density, 79 per sq. km. In 1999, 61·6% of the population lived in urban areas.

The UN gives a projected population for 2010 of 2·07m.

The major cities (with 1994 census population) are: Skopje, the capital, 485,000 (in 1999); Bitola, 77,464; Kumanovo, 71,853; Prilep, 68,148; Tetovo, 50,344.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

At a referendum held on 8 Sept. 1991 turn-out was 74%; 99% of votes cast were in favour of a sovereign Macedonia. On 17 Nov. 1991 parliament promulgated a new constitution which officially proclaimed Macedonia's independence. This was replaced by a constitution adopted on 16 Nov. 2001 which for the first time included the recognition of Albanian as an official language. It also increased access for ethnic Albanians to public-sector jobs.

The President is directly elected for five-year terms. Candidates must be citizens aged at least 40 years. The parliament is a 120-member single-chamber Assembly (Sobranie), elected by universal suffrage for four-year terms. There is a Constitutional Court whose members are elected by the assembly for non-renewable eight-year terms, and a National Security Council chaired by the President. Laws passed by the Assembly must be countersigned by the President, who may return them for reconsideration, but cannot veto them if they gain a two-thirds majority.

Political Parties. The Law on Political Parties makes a distinction between a political party and an association of citizens. The signatures of 500 citizens with the right to vote must be produced for a party to be legally registered. Presently the country has 34 legally registered parties.

National Anthem. 'Denes nad Makedonija se radja novo sonce na slobodata' ('Today a new sun of liberty appears over Macedonia'); words by V. Maleski, tune by T. Škalovski.

RECENT ELECTIONS

In the presidential election held between 31 Oct. and 5 Dec. 1999 Boris Trajkovski (Internal Macedonian Revolutionary Organization-Democratic Party for Macedonian National Unity) gained 52·9% of votes cast in the final run-off, against 45·9% for Tito Petkovski (Social Democratic League of Macedonia). This was despite having been behind after the previous round. Turn-out was 69·6%.

Parliamentary elections were held on 5 Sept. 2002. The Together for Macedonia coalition, comprising the Social Democratic League of Macedonia (SDSM) and the Liberal-Democratic Party (LDP), won 59 seats with 40·5% of votes cast, defeating Prime Minister Ljubčo Georgievski's Internal Macedonian Revolutionary Organization-Democratic Party for Macedonian National Unity (VMRO-DMPNE-LPM) with 34 seats and 24·4%. The Democratic Union for Integration (DUI) won 16 seats with 11·9%; the Democratic Party of Albanians (PDS), 7 with 5·2%; the Democratic Prosperity Party (PDP), 2 with 2·3%; the National-Democratic Party (NDP), 1 with 2·1%; and the Socialist Party of Macedonia (SPM), 1 with 2·1%. Turn-out was 73·5%.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The island was settled by people of African and Indonesian origin when it was visited by the Portuguese explorer, Diego Diaz, in 1500. The island was unified under the Imérina monarchy between 1797 and 1861, but a French protectorate was established in 1895. Madagascar became a French colony on 6 Aug. 1896 and achieved independence on 26 June 1960.

In Feb. 1975 Col. Richard Ratsimandrava, Head of State, was assassinated. The 1975 Constitution instituted a 'Democratic Republic' in which only a single political party was permitted.

After six months of anti-government unrest an 18-month transitional administration was agreed. A new Constitution instituted the Third Republic in Sept. 1992.

Following the presidential election of Dec. 2001 the opposition candidate Marc Ravalomanana claimed victory, although the High Constitutional Court ruled that a run-off was needed. On 22 Feb. 2002 Ravalomanana declared himself president and imposed a state of emergency. However, incumbent Didier Ratsiraka and his government set up a rival capital in Toamasina. In April 2002 both men agreed to a recount of votes to solve the dispute. Ravalomanana was declared president following the recount.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Madagascar is situated 400 km (250 miles) off the southeast coast of Africa, from which it is separated by the Mozambique channel. Its area is 587,041 sq. km (226,658 sq. miles). At the 1993 census the population was 12,092,157 (50·45% female); density, 20·6 per sq. km. Estimate (1997), 14,062,000 (71·0% rural, 1999). Population density, 24·0 per sq. km.

The UN gives a projected population for 2010 of 21·10m.

The indigenous population is of Malayo-Polynesian stock, divided into 18 ethnic groups of which the principal are Merina (26%) of the central plateau, the Betsimisaraka (15%) of the east coast, and the Betsileo (12%) of the southern plateau. Foreign communities include Europeans, mainly French (30,000), Indians (15,000), Chinese (9,000), Comorians and Arabs.

The official language is Malagasy. French is the language of international communication.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

1997 estimated births, 595,000; deaths, 198,000. Rates, 1997 estimates (per 1,000 population): births, 42·3; deaths, 14·1. Infant mortality, 1999 (per 1,000 live births), 95. Expectation of life in 1999 was 51·1 years for males and 53·4 for females. Annual population growth rate, 1990–99, 3·2%. Fertility rate, 1999, 5·3 births per woman.

CLIMATE

A tropical climate, but the mountains cause big variations in rainfall, which is very heavy in the east and very light in the west. Antananarivo, Jan. 70°F (21·1°C), July 59°F (15°C). Annual rainfall 54" (1,350 mm). Toamasina, Jan. 80°F (26·7°C), July 70°F (21·1°C). Annual rainfall 128" (3,256 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

Following a referendum, a Constitution came into force on 30 Dec. 1975 establishing a Democratic Republic. It provided for a National People's Assembly elected by universal suffrage from the single list of the Front National pour la Défense de la Révolution Socialiste Malgache. Executive power was vested in the President with the guidance of a Supreme Revolutionary Council.

Under a convention of 31 Oct. 1991 the powers of the National People's Assembly and the Supreme Revolutionary Council were delegated to a High State Authority for a Provisional government. Following a referendum on 19 Aug. 1992 at which turn-out was 77·68% and 75·44% of votes cast were in favour, a new Constitution was adopted on 21 Sept. 1992 establishing the Third Republic. Under this the National Assembly has 160 seats (increased from 150 for the 2002 election). There is also a Senate of 90 members.

A referendum on 17 Sept. 1995 was in favour of the President appointing and dismissing the Prime Minister, hitherto elected by parliament. The electorate was 6m.; turn-out was 50%.

National Anthem. 'Ry tanindrazanay malala ô!' ('O our beloved Fatherland'); words by Pastor Rahajason, tune by N. Raharisoa.

RECENT ELECTIONS

At the first round of presidential elections on 16 Dec. 2001 there were six candidates. Turn-out was 66·7%. Official results gave Marc Ravalomanana 46·2% of votes cast against 40·9% for Didier Ratsiraka, forcing the two men into a run-off, but Marc Ravalomanana himself claimed to have won the election outright. Ravalomanana declared himself president on 24 Feb. 2002 but with Ratsiraka refusing to accept defeat there were effectively two presidents. On 18 April 2002 the two men signed a deal designed to end the bitter power struggle. Following the announcement by the Supreme Court of a recount of the votes cast in the presidential election, the two candidates agreed that in the event of neither obtaining a majority, a referendum would be held to settle the issue. In the recount the High Constitutional Court declared Marc Ravalomanana the winner with 51·5% of votes against 35·9% for Didier Ratsiraka, with others obtaining 12·6% between them, although the result was not recognized by Ratsiraka. On 6 May 2002 Marc Ravalomanana was sworn in as president. In protest, four of Madagascar's six provinces declared independence. In June 2002 US President George W. Bush gave formal recognition of Ravalomanana's claim to the presidency. On 5 July 2002 Ratsiraka left Madagascar for the Seychelles amidst warnings of arrest from Ravalomanana's government.

In parliamentary elections held on 15 Dec. 2002 President Marc Ravalomanana's I Love Madagascar party won 103 of the 160 seats, his allies within the National Unity coalition 22, ind. also 22 and minor parties 13. Turn-out was 67·6%.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The explorer David Livingstone reached Lake Nyasa, now Lake Malaŵi, in 1859 and it was the land along the lake's western shore that became, in 1891, the British Protectorate of Nyasaland. In 1884 the British South Africa Company applied for a charter to trade. Pressure on land, the colour bar and other grievances generated Malaŵian resistance. In 1953 Nyasaland was joined with Southern Rhodesia (Zimbabwe) and Northern Rhodesia (Zambia) to form the Federation of Rhodesia and Nyasaland, under British control. This union was dissolved in 1963 when Nyasaland was for a year self-governing, until on 6 July 1964 it became independent, adopting the name of Malaŵi. In 1966 Malaŵi was declared a republic and Dr Hastings Banda became the first president, establishing a one party dictatorship which lasted for 30 years. In 1994 Malaŵi returned to multi-party democracy.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Malaŵi lies along the southern and western shores of Lake Malaŵi (the third largest lake in Africa), and is otherwise bounded in the north by Tanzania, south by Mozambique and west by Zambia. Area (including the inland water areas of Lake Malombe, Chilwa, Chiuta and the Malaŵi portion of Lake Malaŵi, which total 24,208 sq. km), 118,484 sq. km (45,747 sq. miles).

Population at census 1998, 9,933,868; density, 83·8 per sq. km. In 1999, 76·5% of the population was rural.

The UN gives a projected population for 2010 of 14·02m.

Population of main towns (estimated 1998): Blantyre, 2m.; Lilongwe, 1m.; Mzuzu, 100,000; Zomba, 70,000. Population of the regions (1998 census): Northern, 1,233,560; Central, 4,066,340; Southern, 4,633,968.

The official languages are Chichewa, spoken by over 50% of the population, and English.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

1998 births, 537,000; deaths, 243,000. The birth rate in 1998 was 50·2 per 1,000 population and the death rate 22·7. Annual population growth rate, 1990–99, 1·5%. Expectation of life at birth in 2000 was 46 years. Infant mortality, 1999, 132 per 1,000 live births; fertility rate, 1999, 6·6 births per woman.

CLIMATE

The tropical climate is marked by a dry season from May to Oct. and a wet season for the remaining months. Rainfall amounts are variable, within the range of 29–100" (725–2,500 mm), and maximum temperatures average 75–89°F (24–32°C), and minimum temperatures 58–67°F (14·4–19·4°C). Lilongwe, Jan. 73°F (22·8°C), July 60°F (15·6°C). Annual rainfall 36" (900 mm). Blantyre, Jan. 75°F (23·9°C), July 63°F (17·2°C). Annual rainfall 45" (1,125 mm). Zomba, Jan. 73°F (22·8°C), July 63°F (17·2°C). Annual rainfall 54" (1,344 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The President is also head of government. Malaŵi was a one-party state, but following a referendum on 14 June 1993, in which 63% of votes cast were in favour of reform, a new Constitution was adopted on 17 May 1994 which ended Hastings Banda's life presidency and provided for the holding of multi-party elections. At these Bakili Muluzi was elected President by 47·16% of votes cast against President Banda and two other opponents.

National Anthem. 'O God Bless our Land of Malaŵi'; words and tune by M.-F. Sauka.

RECENT ELECTIONS

Parliament is composed of 193 members. At the elections of 15 June 1999 the United Democratic Front (UDF) won 93 seats (47·3% of the vote); the Malaŵi Congress Party (MCP—the former single party), 66 (33·8%); and the Alliance for Democracy (AFORD), 29 (10·6%). Independents took 4 seats.

At the presidential elections of 15 June 1999 Bakili Muluzi (UDF) won with 52·4% of the vote, ahead of Gwanda Chakuamba (MCP/AFORD) with 45·2% and Kampelo Kalua (Malaŵi Democratic Party) with 1·4%.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

President: Dr Bakili Muluzi; b. 1943 (UDF; sworn in 21 May 1994 and re-elected in 1999).

In Nov. 2000 the President dismissed the entire cabinet after it was revealed that aid money had been used to buy Mercedes-Benz limousines for government officials. In April 2003 he again dismissed the entire cabinet, two days after naming a little-known politician as his successor. He subsequently appointed a new cabinet consisting of members of the ruling United Democratic Front and the opposition Alliance for Democracy. The cabinet comprised:

Vice President and Minister of Privatization: Justin Malewezi. Second Vice President and Minister of Agriculture, Irrigation and Water Safety: Chakufwa Chihana.

Minister of Commerce and Industry: Sam Mpasu. Defence: Rodwell Munyenyembe. Economic Planning and Development: Bingu Wa Mutharika. Education, Science and Technology: Dr George Mtafu. Finance: Friday Jumbe. Foreign Affairs and International Co-operation: Lilian Patel. Gender and Community Services: Alice Sumani. Health and Population: Yusuf Mwawa. Housing: Kaliyoma Phumisa. Information: Bernard Chisale. Internal Affairs and Security: Monjeza Maluza. Justice: Paul Maulidi. Labour and Vocational Training: Lee Mlanga. Lands, Physical Planning and Surveys: Thengo Maloya. Natural Resources and Environmental Affairs: Uladi Mussa. Sports, Youth and Culture: Henderson Mabeti. Tourism, Parks and Wildlife: Wallace Chiume. Transport and Public Works: Clement Stambuli. Water Development: Dumbo 'Cowboy' Lemani. Minister Without Portfolio: Chipimpha Mughogho. Dumbo Lemani, who entered the cabinet in Nov. 2001, is nicknamed 'Cowboy' for drawing a gun in parliament to threaten opposition MPs.

Banking and Finance. The central bank and bank of issue is the Reserve Bank of Malaŵi (founded 1964). The Governor is Dr Elias Ngalande. There are six commercial banks and an Investment Development Bank of Malaŵi.

Weights and Measures. The metric system is in use.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Environment. Carbon dioxide emissions in 1998 were the equivalent of 0·1 tonnes per capita according to the World Bank Atlas.

Electricity. The Electricity Supply Commission of Malaŵi is the sole supplier. Capacity is 220 MW with demand at 180 MW. Production was 922m. kWh in 1998; consumption per capita in 1997 was 87 kWh. Only 4% of the population has access to electricity.

Oil and Gas. In 1997 Malaŵi and Mozambique came to an agreement on the construction of an oil pipeline between the two countries.

Minerals. Mining operations have been limited to small-scale production of coal, limestone, rubies and sapphires, but companies are now moving in to start exploration programmes. Bauxite reserves are estimated at 29m. tonnes and there are proven reserves of clays, diamonds, glass and silica sands, graphite, limestone, mercurate, phosphates, tanzanite, titanium and uranium. Output, 1995: limestone, 173,800 tonnes; rubies, sapphires and aquamarines, 550 kg (1994).

Agriculture. Malaŵi is predominantly an agricultural country. Agricultural produce contributes 90% of export earnings. There were 1·88m. ha of arable land in 1998 and 125,000 ha of permanent crops. Maize is the main subsistence crop and is grown by over 95% of all smallholders. Tobacco is the chief cash crop, employing 80% of the workforce, generating 35% of GDP and providing 70% of export earnings. Also important are groundnuts, cassava, millet and rice. There are large plantations which produce sugar, tea and coffee. Production (2000, in 1,000 tonnes): maize, 2,300; sugarcane, 2,000; potatoes, 1,700; cassava, 900; plantains, 200; tobacco, 120; groundnuts, 110; bananas, 93; rice, 87; dry beans, 84; sorghum, 55; tea, 50.

Livestock in 2000: cattle, 760,000; goats, 1,270,000; pigs, 240,000; sheep, 115,000; chickens, 15m.

Forestry. In 1995 the area under forests was 3·34m. ha, or 35·5% of the total land area (down from 38·4% in 1990). Timber production in 1999 was 9·96m. cu. metres.

Fisheries. Landings in 1999 were 45,392 tonnes, entirely from inland waters.

INDUSTRY

Index of industrial production in 2001 (1984 = 100): total general industrial production, 101·9; of this goods for the domestic market were at 73·2 and export goods were at 101·5. Electricity and water were at 231·7.

Labour. The labour force in 1996 was 4,807,000 (51% males). Approximately 85% of the economically active population in 1995 were engaged in agriculture, fisheries and forestry.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Principal destinations for exports in 1995 were South Africa (16·2%), Germany (14·7%), Japan (11·1%), USA (10·9%). Main sources of imports were South Africa (44·4%), Germany (4·5%), UK (4·3%), USA (3·7%).

Trade Fairs. The annual Malaŵi International Trade Fair takes place in Blantyre, the commercial capital.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. The road network consisted of 16,451 km in 1997, of which 4,520 km were highways and main roads, 2,768 km were secondary roads and 9,163 km were other roads. Approximately 5,250 km of roads are paved. A major repair programme is under way. There were 27,000 passenger cars and 29,700 trucks and vans in 1996. 1,090 people died in road accidents in 1996.

Rail. Malaŵi Railways operate 797 km on 1,067 mm gauge, providing links to the Mozambican ports of Beira and Nacala. In 1995 railways carried 0·4m. passengers and 0·3m. tonnes of freight.

Civil Aviation. The national carrier is Air Malaŵi. It flies to a number of regional centres in Mozambique, Zambia, Zimbabwe, South Africa, Tanzania and Kenya and in 1998 operated a service to London. In 1999 scheduled airline traffic of Malaŵi-based carriers flew 2·4m. km, carrying 112,000 passengers (63,000 on international flights). There are international airports at Lilongwe (Lilongwe International Airport) and Blantyre (Chileka). In 2000 Lilongwe handled 175,915 passengers (120,575 on international flights) and 4,182 tonnes of freight, and Blantyre had 101,809 passengers (53,426 on international flights) and 680 tonnes of freight.

Shipping. In 1995 lake ships carried 169,000 passengers and 6,000 tonnes of freight.

Telecommunications. Malaŵi had 45,000 main telephone lines in 2000, or 4·4 for every 1,000 population, and 12,000 PCs were in use (1·2 per 1,000 persons). Mobile phone subscribers numbered 20,000 in Dec. 1999, and there were Internet users 10,000 in July 2000. There were 1,200 fax machines in 1997.

Postal Services. In 1995 there were 307 post offices.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. Justice is administered in the High Court and in the magistrates' courts. Traditional courts were abolished in 1994. Appeals from magistrates' courts lie to the High Court, and appeals from the High Court to Malaŵi's Supreme Court of Appeal.

The population in penal institutions in 1998 was 6,505 (65 per 100,000 of national population).

Religion. 1997 estimates: 1,970,000 Protestant (mostly Presbyterian); 1,920,000 Muslim; 1,730,000 Roman Catholic; 960,000 traditional beliefs; 950,000 African Christian; 2,080,000 other.

Education. The adult literacy rate in 1999 was 59·2% (73·8% among males and 45·3% among females). Fees for primary education were abolished in 1994. In 1995–96 the number of pupils in primary schools was 3m. The primary school course is of eight years' duration, followed by a four-year secondary course. In 1995–96 there were 141,911 pupils in secondary schools. English is taught from the 1st year and becomes the general medium of instruction from the 4th year.

The University of Malaŵi had 3,657 students and 366 academic staff in 1994–95. A new university at Mzuzu opened in 1998 and provides courses for secondary school teachers. There were also four colleges and one polytechnic.

Health. In 1989 there were 186 doctors, giving a provision of one doctor for every 49,118 persons—the lowest ratio in the world. There are 3 central hospitals, 1 mental hospital, 2 leprosaria and 45 hospitals of which 21 are government district hospitals.

CULTURE

The dances of the Malaŵi are a strong part of their culture. The National Dance Troupe (formerly the Kwacha Cultural Troupe) formed in Nov. 1987 as a part of the Department of Arts and Crafts of the Ministry of Education.

Broadcasting. The Malaŵi Broadcasting Corporation, a statutory body, broadcasts in English, Chichewa, Yao, Tumbuka, Lomwe Sena and Tonga. There were 3·2m. radio sets in 1998, up from 260,000 in 1980. No other country had such a large percentage increase in the number of radio receivers in use over the same period. There is a national radio station in Blantyre providing two channels and five private radio stations have been operating since 1997.

A national television station opened in 1999. There were 23,000 sets in use in 1996.

Press. There are more than 16 newspapers in circulation, the main four being: The Daily Times (English, Monday to Friday), 17,000 copies daily; The Nation (English, Monday to Friday), 16,000 copies daily; Malaŵi News (English and Chichewa, Saturdays), 23,000 copies weekly; and Weekend Nation (English and Chichewa, Saturdays), 16,000 copies weekly. In addition there is Odini (English and Chichewa), 8,500 copies fortnightly; Boma Lathu (Chichewa), 150,000 copies monthly; Za Alimi (English and Chichewa), 10,000 copies monthly.

Tourism. There were 150,000 tourists in 1999 bringing in revenue of US$20m.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Malaysia is a federation consisting of the eleven States of Peninsular Malaysia and the two states of Sabah and Sarawak. The Portuguese were the first Europeans to settle in the area and Malacca became a Portuguese possession in 1541. The Dutch took Malacca in 1641 and held it until 1794 when it was occupied by the British. Although Malacca was returned to the Dutch in 1814, it was finally ceded to Britain in 1824. At the same time (1814–24) Stamford Raffles established a settlement and Singapore became British territory.

Singapore and what is now Malaysia were occupied by the Japanese from 1941 to 1945. Soon thereafter, in Jan. 1946, plans were published to create a Malaysian Union excluding Singapore. The Union came into being in April 1946 but was soon abandoned in the face of opposition. However, in Jan. 1948 the Union was reconstituted as the Federation of Malaya. From 1948 to 1960 a State of Emergency existed to counter a revolt by Malayan Communists. Following lengthy negotiations independence was granted to the Federation of Malaya on 31 Aug. 1957. On 31 Aug. 1963 Malaysia was created from the Federation of Malaya, Singapore, North Borneo (renamed Sabah) and Sarawak. Malaysia became a member of the Commonwealth. Singapore left Malaysia on 9 Aug. 1965 to become an independent sovereign state. Under the leadership of Mahathir Mohamad, southeast Asia's longest-serving leader, Malaysia entered on a period of economic prosperity, broken eventually by the 1997–98 recession. Economic turbulence caused political dissent within the government. In Sept. 1998 Anwar Ibrahim was sacked from his job as finance minister and deputy prime minister and was subsequently jailed for six years.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The federal state of Malaysia comprises the 13 states and 3 federal territories of Peninsular Malaysia, bounded in the north by Thailand, and with the island of Singapore as an enclave on its southern tip; and, on the island of Borneo to the east, the state of Sabah (which includes the federal territory of the island of Labuan), and the state of Sarawak, with Brunei as an enclave, both bounded in the south by Indonesia and in the northwest and northeast by the South China and Sulu Seas.

The area of Malaysia is 329,758 sq. km (127,317 sq. miles) and the population (2000 census) is 23·27m.; density, 70·6 per sq. km. Malaysia's national waters cover 515,256 sq. km. In 1999, 56·7% of the population lived in urban areas.

The UN gives a projected population for 2010 of 26·15m.

The growth of the population has been:

Year	Peninsular Malaysia	Sarawak	Sabah/Labuan	Total Malaysia
1980	11,426,613	1,307,582	1,011,046	13,745,241
1990	14,127,556	1,648,217	1,791,209	17,566,982
1997	17,047,400	1,954,300	2,663,800	21,665,500

The areas, populations and chief towns of the states and federal territories are:

Other large cities (1997 estimate): Petaling Jaya (254,350), Kelang (243,355), Taiping (183,261), Sibu (126,381), Sandakan (125,841) and Miri (87,167).

Putrajaya, a planned new city described as an 'intelligent garden city', became the administrative capital of Malaysia in 1999 and was created a federal territory on 1 Feb. 2001.

Malay is the national language of the country—60% of the population are Malays. The government promotes the use of the national language to foster national unity. However, the people are free to use their mother tongue and other languages. English as the second language is widely used in business. In Peninsular Malaysia Chinese dialects and Tamil are also spoken. In Sabah there are numerous tribal dialects and Chinese (Mandarin and Hakka dialects predominate). In Sarawak Mandarin and numerous tribal languages are spoken.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

1999 births, 554,200; deaths, 100,900. 1999 rates (per 1,000 population): birth, 24·4; death, 4·4. Life expectancy, 1999: males, 69·9 years; females, 74·8 years. Annual population growth rate, 1991–2000, 2·6%. Infant mortality, 1999, 8 per 1,000 live births; fertility rate, 1999, 3·2 births per woman. Today only 8% of Malaysians live below the poverty line, compared to 50% in the early 1970s.

CLIMATE

Malaysia lies near the equator between latitudes 1° and 7° North and longitudes 100° and 119° East. Malaysia is subject to maritime influence and the interplay of wind systems which originate in the Indian Ocean and the South China Sea. The year is generally divided into the South-East and the North-East Monsoon seasons. The average daily temperature throughout Malaysia varies from 21°C to 32°C. Humidity is high.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The Constitution of Malaysia is based on the Constitution of the former Federation of Malaya, but includes safeguards for the special interests of Sabah and Sarawak. It was amended in 1983.

The Constitution provides for one of the Rulers of the Malay States to be elected from among themselves to be the Yang di-Pertuan Agong (Supreme Head of the Federation). He holds office for a period of five years. The Rulers also elect from among themselves a Deputy Supreme Head of State, also for a period of five years.

In Feb. 1993 the Rulers accepted constitutional amendments abolishing their legal immunity.

RECENT ELECTIONS

Parliamentary and 11 state assembly elections were held on 28–29 Nov. 1999. The 14-party National Front Coalition (BN), in which the United Malays National Organization (UMNO) was the predominant partner, gained 148 of the available 193 seats, obtaining 56% of the votes cast. The three-party Alternative Front (BA), dominated by the Islamic Party of Malaysia (PAS), gained 42 seats and the Bersatu Sabah Party (PBS) won 3. In gaining 45 seats, the opposition almost doubled the number of seats which it won in the 1995 election. The National Front Coalition also gained a majority in every state assembly except Kelantan and Terengganu which were gained by the Islamic Party of Malaysia (PAS).

DEFENCE

The Constitution provides for the Head of State to be the Supreme Commander of the Armed Forces who exercises his powers in accordance with the advice of the Cabinet. Under their authority, the Armed Forces Council is responsible for all matters relating to the Armed Forces other than those relating to their operational use. The Ministry of Defence has established bilateral defence relations with countries within as well as outside the region. Malaysia is a member of the Five Powers Defence Arrangement with Australia, New Zealand, Singapore and the UK.

The Malaysian Armed Forces (MAF) are currently undergoing restructuring (1999). The MAF has participated in 16 UN peacekeeping missions in Africa, the Middle East, Indo-China and Europe. Five of the operations are military contingents, the remainder are Observer Groups.

In 2000 defence expenditure totalled US$2,708m. (US$122 per capita), representing 3·1% of GDP.

Army. Strength (1999) about 85,000. There is a paramilitary Police Field Force of 11,000 and a People's Volunteer Corps of 240,000 of which 17,500 are armed.

Navy. The Royal Malaysian Navy is commanded by the Chief of the Navy from the integrated Ministry of Defence in Kuala Lumpur. There are four operational areas: No. 1, Kuantan Naval Base, covering the eastern peninsular coast; No. 2, Labuan naval Base, covering the East Malaysia coast; No. 3, Lumut Naval Base, covering the western peninsular coast; and No. 4, Kuching Naval Base, covering Sarawak's coast. The peacetime tasks include fishery protection and anti-piracy patrols. The fleet includes four frigates. A Naval aviation squadron operates 12 armed helicopters.

Navy personnel in 1999 totalled 12,500 including 160 Naval Air personnel. There were 2,200 naval reserves.

Air Force. Formed on 1 June 1958, the Royal Malaysian Air Force is equipped primarily to provide air defence and air support for the Army, Navy and Police. Its secondary role is to render assistance to government departments and civilian organizations.

Personnel (1999) totalled about 12,500, with 120 combat aircraft including F-5Es, MiG-29s and Bae Hawks. There were 600 Air Force reserves.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

Malaysia is in dispute with Indonesia over sovereignty of two islands in the Celebes Sea. Both countries have agreed to accept the Judgment of the International Court of Justice.

Malaysia is a member of the UN, WTO, BIS, the Commonwealth, Asian Development Bank, Colombo Plan, APEC, ASEAN, Mekong Group and the Organization of Islamic Conference.

ECONOMY

In 1998 agriculture accounted for 13·2% of GDP, industry 43·5% and services 43·3%.

Overview. Malaysia's response to the economic crisis that swept Asia in 1997–98 was to put much of the blame on foreign speculators. After a fall in the value of the ringgit by 48% between July 1997 and July 1998, Prime Minister Dr Mahathir announced tough restrictions on currency transactions. In 1998 the economy shrank by over 5% and bank debt remains one of the highest in southeast Asia.

Currency. The unit of currency is the Malaysian ringgit (RM) of 100 sen, which is pegged to the US dollar at 3·8 ringgit = 1 US$. Foreign exchange reserves were US$32,287m. and gold reserves 1·17m. troy oz in June 2002. In 2001 there was inflation of 1·4%. Total money supply in June 2002 was RM85,913m.

Budget. 1998 budget: revenue, RM65·7bn.; expenditure, RM59·1bn. Revenue and expenditure for calendar years, in RM1bn.:

	1995	1996	1997	1998	1999
Revenue	50·9	58·2	65·7	56·7	59·9
Operating expenditure	36·6	43·3	44·7	44·6	48·9

Sources of revenue in 1996: direct taxes, 45·6% (47·5%—1999 est.); indirect taxes, 36% (30·8%—1999 est.); non-tax revenue, 18·4 % (21·7%—1999 est.).

Federal government net development (in addition to operating) expenditure in 1996: RM11,156m. (RM 21,508m. 1999), of which economic services 49·9% (50·9%—1999 est.), social services, 25·3% (27·0%—1999 est.), security, 19·0% (14·3%—1999 est.) and general administration, 5·8% (6·9%—1999 est.).

Performance. Between 1990 and 1996 the average annual real growth in GNP per capita was 6·1%. Malaysia was badly affected by the Asian financial crisis, with the economy contracting by 7·4% in 1998. However, there was a recovery in 1999, with growth of 5·6%, rising to 8·5% in 2000. There was a recession in the second half of 2001 although the economy still expanded by 0·4% in the year as a whole. Total GDP in 2001 was US$87·5bn.

Banking and Finance. The central bank and bank of issue is the Bank Negara Malaysia (Governor, Dr Zeti Akhtar Aziz). 37 commercial banks were operating at 31 Dec. 1996 (including 16 foreign) with a total of 1,433 branches. Number of employees 69,154. Total deposits with commercial banks at 31 Dec. 1996 were RM194,974m. There were 12 merchant banks at 31 Dec. 1996. Number of employees 2,592. The Islamic Bank of Malaysia began operations in July 1983. There were 40 finance companies in 1996 with 1,096 offices. Number of employees 26,728.

There is a stock exchange at Kuala Lumpur, known as BSKL, running about RM2bn. daily (Jan. 2000).

Weights and Measures. The metric system is standard, but British imperial units are still in residual use.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Environment. According to the World Bank Atlas Malaysia's carbon dioxide emissions in 1998 were the equivalent of 5·4 tonnes per capita.

Electricity. Installed capacity in 1997, 14m. kW. In 1999, 62,546m. kWh were generated. Electricity consumption in 1999 was 54,433,400 kWh.

Oil and Gas. Crude petroleum reserves, 1999, 3·9bn. bbls. Estimated oil production (1996) 718,600 bbls. a day; 1997, 713,900 bbls.; 1998 (estimate), 726,100 bbls. Natural gas reserves, 2000, 2,300bn. cu. metres. Production of natural gas in 1999 was 43·0bn. cu. metres. In April 1998 Malaysia and Thailand agreed to share equally the natural gas jointly produced in an offshore area which both countries claim as their own territory. It was expected that from 2001 around 18m. cu. metres of natural gas would be produced in the area every day.

Minerals. In 1998 mining contributed 6·9% of GDP. Bauxite production in 1997 was 279,066 tonnes; iron ore, 269,087 tonnes; copper concentrates, 80,675 tonnes; tin, 5,756 tonnes (1998); coal, 83,000 tonnes (1996).

Agriculture. In 1998 agriculture contributed 6·9% of GDP. There were 1·82m. ha of arable land in 1998 and 5·79m. ha of permanent crops. In 1998 approximately 365,000 ha were irrigated. Production in 2000 (in 1,000 tonnes): palm kernels, 3,175; rice, 2,037; sugarcane, 1,600; rubber, 749; coconuts, 683; bananas, 545; cassava, 380. Livestock (2000): pigs, 1·83m.; cattle, 723,000; goats 232,000; sheep, 175,000; buffaloes, 155,000; chickens, 120m. Malaysia's output of palm kernels is the highest of any country. Only Thailand and Indonesia produce more rubber.

Forestry. In 1998 there were 187,612 sq. km of forests, down from 187,752 sq. km in 1997. Timber production in 1999 was 29·46m. cu. metres.

Fisheries. Total catch in 1999 amounted to 1,251,768 tonnes, almost entirely from sea fishing.

INDUSTRY

In 1998 manufacturing contributed 82·9% of gross exports led by electronics products (39·8%). Production figures for 1997 (in 1,000 tonnes): palm oil, 14,870 (1999); cement, 10,104; refined sugar, 1,266; wheat flour, 768; plywood, 3,706,803 cu. metres; radio sets, 33m. units; cigarettes, 20·2bn. units; pneumatic tyres, 13,518,000 units.

Labour. In 1999 the workforce was 8·8m. (44·2% female), of whom 8,741,000 were employed (27·1% in manufacturing, 16·0% in agriculture and 9·2% in construction). Unemployment was 3·4%. It is estimated that Malaysia has some 500,000 illegal workers.

Trade Unions. Membership was 737,484 at 30 Sept. 1997, of which the Malaysian Trades Union Congress, an umbrella organization of 158 unions, accounted for 0·4m. Number of unions was 536.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Privatization policy permits foreign investment of 25–30% generally; total foreign ownership is permitted of export-oriented projects. External debt was US$41,797m. in 2000.

Imports and Exports. In 1998 exports reached over 115% of GDP, with exports to the USA worth around 25% of GDP.

In 2000 exports totalled RM373·3bn. and imports RM312·4bn., up from RM321·6bn. and RM248·5bn. respectively in 1999.

In 1999 imports of consumer goods totalled RM13,970m.; intermediate goods, RM175,832m.; capital goods, RM32,317m.

Chief exports, 1998 (in RM1m.): electronics and electrical products, 185,314; palm oil, 13,792; chemicals and chemical products, 10,364; crude oil, 8,734; textiles, clothing and footwear, 8,562; manufactures of metal, 7,535; liquefied natural gas, 5,981; saw logs and sawn timber, 4,787; wood products, 4,772; rubber, 2,195.

In 1999 major imports (in RM1m.) came from Japan (54,803), USA (43,318) and Singapore (34,817). Principal exports went to USA (70,391), Singapore (53,106), Japan (37,288), EU (50,522), ASEAN countries (76,362). Malaysia exports 23% of its GDP to the USA.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. Total road length in 1999 was 69,699 km, of which 49,816 km were paved and 16,883 km were unpaved. In 1999 there were 9,929,951 registered motor vehicles. There were 6,035 deaths as a result of road accidents in 2000, which at 29 per 100,000 people ranks among the highest rates in the world.

Rail. In 1999 there were 2,265 km of railway tracks. Passenger-km travelled in 1998 came to 1,397m. and freight tonne-km to 992m.

Civil Aviation. There are a total of 19 airports of which 5 are international airports and 14 are domestic airports at which regular public air transport is operated. International airports; Kuala Lumpur, Penang, Kota Kinabalu, Kuching and Langkawi. Domestic airports; Johor Bharu, Alor Setar, Ipoh, Kota Bharu, Kuala Terengganu, Kuantan, Melaka, Sandakan, Lahad Datu, Tawau, Labuan, Bintulu, Sibu and Miri. There are 39 Malaysian airstrips of which 10 are in Sabah, 15 in Sarawak and 14 in peninsular Malaysia.

33 international airlines operate through Kuala Lumpur (KLIA-Sepang). Malaysia Airlines, the national airline, is 39% state-owned, and operates domestic flights within Malaysia and international flights to nearly 40 different countries. In 1999 it flew 206·9m. km, carrying 14,984,600 passengers (6,770,550 on international flights). In 2000 Kuala Lumpur handled 14,353,000 passengers (10,249,000 on international flights) and 510,600 tonnes of freight. Kota Kinabalu handled 2,970,000 passengers in 2000 and Penang 2,682,000.

Shipping. The major ports are Port Kelang, Pulau Pinang, Johor Pasir Gudang, Tanjung Beruas, Miri, Rajang, Pelabuhan Sabah, Port Dickson, Kemaman, Teluk Ewa, Kuantan, Kuching and Bintulu. In 1996 there were 2,429 marine vessels including 118 oil tankers (0·73m. GRT), 198 passenger carriers (0·03m. GRT) and 426 general cargo ships (0·76m. GRT), with a total GRT of 4·27m. In 1996, 167·9m. tonnes of cargo were loaded and unloaded. In 1998 merchant shipping totalled 5,209,000, including oil tankers 854,000 GRT.

Telecommunications. In 2000 there were 4,634,300 telephones, or 199·2 per 1,000 inhabitants, and 2·4m. PCs were in use (103·1 for every 1,000 persons). There were 3,092 telex subscribers in 1999 and 150,000 fax machines in 1997. Malaysia had 3·7m. Internet users in Dec. 2000 and 3·5m. mobile phone subscribers in March 2001.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. The judicial power is vested in the Federal Court, the High Court of Malaya, the High Court of Borneo and subordinate courts: Sessions Courts, Magistrates' Courts and Mukim chiefs' Courts.

The Federal Court comprises the Lord President—who is also the head of the Judiciary—the Chief Justice of the High Courts and the Judge of the Federal Court. It has jurisdiction to determine the validity of any law made by Parliament or by a State legislature and disputes between States or between the Federation and any State. It also has jurisdiction to hear and determine appeals from the High Courts.

The death penalty is authorized and was used in 2002. The population in penal institutions in Dec. 1997 was 24,400 (115 per 100,000 of national population).

Religion. Malaysia has a multi-racial population divided between Islam, Buddhism, Taoism, Hinduism and Christianity. Under the Federal constitution, Islam is the official religion of Malaysia but there is freedom of worship. In 2000 there were an estimated 12·30m. Muslims, 4·02m. Buddhists, 2·70m. adherents of Chinese traditional religions, 1·63m. Hindus and 1·49m. Christians.

Education. School education is free; tertiary education is provided at a nominal fee. There are 6 years of primary schooling starting at age 7, 3 years of universal lower secondary, 2 years of selective upper secondary and 2 years of pre-university education. During the Seventh Plan period (1996–2000), a number of major changes were introduced to the education and training system with a view to strengthening and improving the system. These efforts are expected to improve the quality of output to meet the manpower needs of the nation, particularly in the fields of science and technology. In addition, continued emphasis will be given to expand educational opportunities for those in the rural and remote areas. Under the Seventh Plan, the Education Ministry allocated RM8,437,200 on this education programme and RM1,661,600 for training purposes.

In 1999 there were 2,897,927 pupils at 7,192 primary schools with 157,415 teachers, 1,957,483 pupils at secondary schools and, in 1997, 229,814 students and 16,175 teachers at higher education institutions.

Adult literacy was 87·0% in 1999 (91·1% among males and 82·8% among females).

In 1998 total expenditure on education was RM9,866,300 (20·9% from the total budget).

Health. In 1998 there were 15,016 doctors, 2,058 dentists and 18,134 nurses. In 1995 there were 42,878 allied health professionals. These were divided into dental, paramedics and auxiliary (2,720), medical assistants and laboratory technologists (5,392), nurses (32,401), occupational therapists and physiotherapists (410), public health inspectors (1,418) and radiographers (537). At the end of 1995 the Ministry of Health ran a total of 1,375 dental clinics. In the same year there were 39,738 beds in hospitals, clinics and other medical institutions.

Welfare. The Employment Injury Insurance Scheme (SOCSO) provides medical and cash benefits and the Invalidity Pension Scheme provides protection to employees against invalidity as a result of disease or injury from any cause. Other supplementary measures are the Employees' Provident Fund, the pension scheme for all government employees, free medical benefits for all who are unable to pay and the provision of medical benefits particularly for workers under the Labour Code. In 1998 there were 49 welfare service institutions with capacity for 7,170.

CULTURE

Broadcasting. There are five TV Stations (colour by PAL). The government-controlled Radio Television Malaysia broadcasts radio and TV programmes nationally. The Voice of Malaysia (broadcasting in eight languages) is beamed internationally. System TV Malaysia Berhad transmits from Kuala Lumpur and is also beamed throughout the country. There were 9·1m. radio receivers and 3·6m. television receivers in 1997.

Cinema. In 1996 there were 233 cinemas with a gross value output of RM115,087m. English, Malay, Chinese, Hindi and Indonesian films are shown.

Press. The Malaysian Media Agencies are comprised of the press, magazine and press agencies/local media, which are further divided into home and foreign news. In 1996 a total of 5,843 book titles were published in 29·04m. copies.

Tourism. In 1999 there were 7,931,000 foreign tourists, spending US$2,822m.

Festivals. National Day (31 Aug.) is celebrated in Kuala Lumpur at the Dataran Merdeka and marks Malaysia's independence.

Libraries. The National Library of Malaysia is strong on information technology. The 14 state public libraries and 31 ministry and government department libraries are linked in a Common User Scheme called Jaringan Ilmu (Knowledge Network).

Theatre and Opera. Performances by the National Budaya Group include premiere theatre staging, dance drama, national choir concerts, national symphony orchestra, chamber music, and traditional and folk music. Local theatre groups regularly stage contemporary Asian and western dramas, dance dramas and the bangsawan (traditional Malay opera).

Museums and Galleries. There is a National Museum for preserving, restoring and imparting knowledge on the historical and cultural heritage of Malaysia. The National Art Gallery promotes Malaysian visual arts through exhibitions, competitions and support programmes which are held locally and abroad.

MALI

République du Mali

Capital: Bamako
Population estimate, 2000: 11·35m.
GDP per capita, 2000: (PPP$) 797
HDI/world rank: 0·386/164

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Mali's power reached its peak between the 11th and 13th centuries when its gold-based empire controlled much of the surrounding area. The country was annexed by France in 1904. The region became the territory of French Sudan as part of French West Africa. The country became an autonomous state within the French Community on 24 Nov. 1958, and on 4 April 1959 joined with Senegal to form the Federation of Mali. The Federation achieved independence on 20 June 1960, but Senegal seceded on 22 Aug. and Mali proclaimed itself an independent republic on 22 Sept. There was an army coup on 19 Nov. 1968, which brought Moussa Traoré to power. Ruling the country for over 22 years, he wrecked the economy. A further coup followed in March 1991.

In Jan. 1991 a ceasefire was signed with Tuareg insurgents in the north and in April 1992 a national pact was concluded providing for a special administration for the Tuareg north.

Under President Alpha Oumar Konaré, two elections for the National Assembly were held. The first (April 1997) was cancelled by the Constitutional Court and the second, in July 1997, was boycotted by opposition parties. Amadou Toumani Touré, a former military ruler, won presidential elections held in April and May 2002.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Mali is bounded in the west by Senegal, northwest by Mauritania, northeast by Algeria, east by Niger and south by Burkina Faso, Côte d'Ivoire and Guinea. Its area is 1,248,574 sq. km (482,077 sq. miles) and it had a population of 9,790,492 (4,943,056 females) at the 1998 census (70·6% rural). Density, 7·8 per sq. km.

The UN gives a projected population for 2010 of 12·23m.

The areas, populations and chief towns of the regions are:

Region	Sq. km	1995 population	Chief town
Gao	170,572	408,000[1]	Gao
Kayes	119,743	1,245,000	Kayes
Kidal	151,430	...[1]	Kidal
Koulikoro	95,848	1,462,000	Koulikoro
Mopti	79,017	1,423,000	Mopti
Ségou	64,821	1,579,000	Ségou
Sikasso	70,280	1,521,000	Sikasso
Tombouctou	496,611	462,000	Tombouctou
Capital District	252	913,000	Bamako

[1]Kidal was created from the northern half of Gao in 1991.
No separate population figure available.

In 1999 the capital, Bamako, had an estimated population of 1,083,000.

In 1996 the principal ethnic groups numbered (in 1,000): Bambara, 2,930; Fulani, 1,290; Senufo, 1,100; Soninke, 800; Tuareg, 675; Songhai, 660; Malinke, 610; Dogon, 370. The official language is French; Bambara is spoken by about 60% of the population.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

1997 estimates: births, 492,000; deaths, 191,000. Vital statistics rates, 1997 estimates (per 1,000 population): births, 50·3; deaths, 19·5. Infant mortality, 1999 (per 1,000 live births), 143. Expectation of life in 1999 was 50·2 years for males and 52·2 for females. Annual population growth rate, 1990–99, 2·4% per annum; fertility rate, 1999, 6·4 children per woman.

CLIMATE
A tropical climate, with adequate rain in the south and west, but conditions become increasingly arid towards the north and east. Bamako, Jan. 76°F (24·4°C), July 80°F (26·7°C). Annual rainfall 45" (1,120 mm). Kayes, Jan. 76°F (24·4°C), July 93°F (33·9°C). Annual rainfall 29" (725 mm). Tombouctou, Jan. 71°F (21·7°C), July 90°F (32·2°C). Annual rainfall 9" (231 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT
A constitution was approved by a national referendum in 1974; it was amended by the National Assembly on 2 Sept. 1981. The sole legal party was the Union démocratique du peuple malien (UDPM).

A national conference of 1,800 delegates agreed a draft constitution enshrining multi-party democracy in Aug. 1991, and this was approved by 99·76% of votes cast at a referendum in Jan. 1992. Turn-out was 43%.

The President is elected for not more than two terms of five years.

There is a National Assembly, consisting of 147 deputies (formerly 116) plus 13 Malinese living abroad.

A Constitutional Court was established in 1994.

National Anthem. 'A ton appel, Mali' ('At your call, Mali'); words by S. Kouyate, tune by B. Sissoko.

RECENT ELECTIONS
Presidential elections were held in two rounds on 28 April and 12 May 2002. In the first round Amadou Toumani Touré won 28·0% of votes cast, against 22·7% for Soumaïla Cissé and 20·7% for Ibrahim Boubacar Keita. Turn-out was 38·6%. In the run-off between Touré and Cissé on 12 May, Touré won with 64·4% of the vote against 35·7% for Cissé.

Parliamentary elections were held in two rounds on 14 and 28 July 2002. Initial results indicated victory for the Alliance for Democracy in Mali (ADEMA) with 67 seats (down from 128 in 1997) and 47 seats for the Hope 2002 coalition. On 10 Aug. 2002 the Constitutional Court ruled these results invalid and released new results giving 66 seats to the Hope Coalition 2002 against 51 for the Alliance for Democracy in Mali. Turn-out was 25·7%.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION
President: Amadou Toumani Touré; b. 1948 (sworn in 8 June 2002, having previously been president from March 1991–June 1992 following a coup).

In March 2003 the government comprised:

Principal export commodities are cotton, livestock and gold. The main export markets are the franc zone, western Europe and the People's Republic of China. Principal import commodities are machinery and equipment, foodstuffs, construction materials, petroleum and textiles. Main import suppliers are also the franc zone (in particular Côte d'Ivoire and France), western Europe and the People's Republic of China.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. There were (1996 estimate) 15,100 km of classified roads, of which 1,827 km were paved. In 1996 there were 26,190 passenger cars (three per 1,000 inhabitants) and 18,240 trucks and vans. There were 72 road accident deaths in 1994.

Rail. Mali has a railway from Kayes to Koulikoro by way of Bamako, a continuation of the Dakar–Kayes line in Senegal; total length 642 km (metre-gauge). In 1990 it carried 184m. passenger-km and 273m. tonne-km of freight.

Civil Aviation. There is an international airport at Bamako (Senou), which handled 315,000 passengers (306,000 on international flights) and 5,400 tonnes of freight in 2000. Air Mali operates domestic services to eight other airports. Mali is also a member of Air Afrique. In 1998 there were international flights to Abidjan, Accra, Addis Ababa, Algiers, Banjul, Bobo-Dioulasso, Bouaké, Brazzaville, Brussels, Casablanca, Conakry, Cotonou, Dakar, Douala, Johannesburg, Libreville, N'Djaména, Néma, Niamey, Nouakchott, Ouagadougou, Paris and Zürich. In 1999 scheduled airline traffic of Mali-based carriers flew 3·0m. km, carrying 84,000 passengers (all on international flights).

Shipping. For about seven months in the year small steamboats operate a service from Koulikoro to Tombouctou and Gao, and from Bamako to Kouroussa.

Telecommunications. Mali had 39,200 main telephone lines in 2000, or 3·5 per 1,000 population. In 1998 there were 4,500 mobile phone subscribers and in 2000 there were 13,000 PCs in use (1·2 per 1,000 persons). In July 2000 there were 10,000 Internet users, up from 1,500 in May 1999.

Postal Services. In 1995 there were 124 post offices.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. The Supreme Court was established at Bamako in 1969 with both judicial and administrative powers. The Court of Appeal is also at Bamako, at the apex of a system of regional tribunals and local juges de paix.

The population in penal institutions in 1995 was 4,384 (40 per 100,000 of national population).

Religion. The state is secular, but predominantly Sunni Muslim. About 15% of the population follow traditional animist beliefs and there is a small Christian minority.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Malta was held in turn by Phoenicians, Carthaginians and Romans, and was conquered by Arabs in 870. From 1090 to 1530 it was subject to the same rulers as Sicily. Subsequently, the Knights of St John ruled until dispersed by Napoleon in 1798. The Maltese rose in rebellion against the French and the island was blockaded by the British aided by the Maltese from 1798 to 1800. The Maltese people requested the protection of the British Crown in 1802 on condition that their rights and privileges be preserved. The islands were finally annexed to the British Crown by the Treaty of Paris in 1814. Malta became independent on 21 Sept. 1964 and a republic within the Commonwealth on 13 Dec. 1974. On 16 July 1990 Malta applied for full membership of the European Union. In 2002 Malta was one of ten countries nominated for membership in 2004. At a referendum in March 2003, EU entry won 53·6% support.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The three Maltese islands and minor islets lie in the Mediterranean 93 km (at the nearest point) south of Sicily and 288 km east of Tunisia. The area of Malta is 246 sq. km (94·9 sq. miles); Gozo, 67 sq. km (25·9 sq. miles) and the virtually uninhabited Comino, 3 sq. km (1·1 sq. miles); total area, 316 sq. km (121·9 sq. miles). The census population in 1995 was 376,335. Population, 31 Dec. 2000, 382,525; Malta island, 352,835; Gozo and Comino, 29,690. Density 1,203 per sq. km.

The UN gives a projected population for 2010 of 405,000.

In 1999, 90·3% of the population were urban. Chief town and port, Valletta, population 7,048 (2000) but the southern harbour district, 83,405. Other towns: Birkirkara, 21,566; Qormi, 17,982; Mosta, 17,314; Zabbar, 14,566; Sliema, 12,173.

The constitution provides that the national language and language of the courts is Maltese, but both Maltese and English are official languages.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

2000: births, 4,255; deaths, 2,957; marriages, 2,545; emigrants, 67; returned emigrants, 450. 2000 rates per 1,000 population: birth, 11·2; death, 7·8; marriage, 6·7. Divorce and abortion are illegal. In 2000 the most popular age range for marrying was 25–29 for males and 20–24 for females. Life expectancy at birth in 2000: 74·3 years for males and 80·2 years for females. Annual growth, 2000, 0·6%. Infant mortality in 2000: 6·1 per 1,000 live births; fertility rate, 2000, 1·8 births per woman.

CLIMATE

The climate is Mediterranean, with hot, dry and sunny conditions in summer and very little rain from May to Aug. Rainfall is not excessive and falls mainly between Oct. and March. Average daily sunshine in winter is six hours and in summer over ten hours. Valletta, Jan. 12·8°C (55°F), July 25·6°C (78°F). Annual rainfall 578 mm (23").

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

Malta is a parliamentary democracy. The Constitution of 1964 provides for a President, a House of Representatives of members elected by universal suffrage and a Cabinet consisting of the Prime Minister and such number of Ministers as may be appointed. The Constitution makes provision for the protection of fundamental rights and freedom of the individual, and for freedom of conscience and religious worship, and guarantees the separation of executive, judicial and legislative powers. In 2000 the House of Representatives had 65 members directly elected on a plurality basis.

National Anthem. 'Lil din l'art helwa, l'omm li tatna isimha' ('Guard her, O Lord, as ever Thou hast guarded'); words by Dun Karm Psaila, tune by Dr Robert Samut.

RECENT ELECTIONS

At the elections of 12 April 2003 turn-out was 96·2%. The Nationalist Party (NP) gained 34 seats with 51·7% of votes cast; the Labour Party (MLP), 31 with 47·6%.

DEFENCE

On 1 Jan. 2000 the Armed Forces of Malta (AFM) had a strength of about 1,777 (including 119 reserves) and consisted of Headquarters and three Regiments. An Emergency Volunteer Reserve Force was introduced in 1998; initial intake, 60. In addition to infantry and low level air defence artillery weapons, the AFM are equipped with helicopters, fixed wing and trainer aircraft. There is no conscription.

Apart from normal military duties, AFM are also responsible for Search and Rescue, airport security, surveillance of Malta's territorial and fishing zones, harbour traffic control and anti-pollution duties.

In 2000 military expenditure totalled US$26m. (US$67 per capita), representing 0·7% of GDP.

Navy. There is a maritime squadron numbering 204 personnel.

Air Force. Italy has an Air Force presence on the island of 17 personnel.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

Malta is a member of the UN, WTO, the Commonwealth, the Council of Europe, the Organization for Security and Co-operation in Europe, the International Atomic Energy Agency, the Organization for the Prohibition of Chemical Weapons, the Comprehensive Test-Ban Treaty Organization and the Inter-Parliamentary Union.

Accession negotiations for Malta to join the EU were formally opened in Feb. 2000. The report on Malta's progress towards accession issued by the Commission in Nov. 2001 and endorsed by the European Council in Laeken in Dec. 2001 confirmed that Malta fulfils all the political and economic criteria for membership. Malta held a referendum on EU membership on 9 March 2003, in which 53·6% of votes cast were in favour of accession, with 46·4% against. Malta is scheduled to become a member of the EU on 1 May 2004.

ECONOMY

Agriculture accounted for an estimated 3% of GDP in 1997, industry 26% and services 71%.

Overview. The prime objectives of economic strategy are the achievement of a sustainable rate of economic growth, high employment and low stable inflation. To compete internationally, the private sector must be the prime mover of the economy. In the 1999 budget, the government committed itself to reducing the budget deficit to 4% of GDP by 2004. To maximize the benefits from privatization, the government aims at strategic partnerships with international enterprises.

An Institute for the Promotion of Small Enterprises (IPSE) has been established and a number of supporting incentive schemes are being implemented. A Business Promotion Act (BPA) has been enacted to update the Industrial Development Act (IDA) of 1988. The aim is to promote industries that demonstrate growth and employment potential. To maintain Malta's competitive position as a tourist attraction, the Malta Tourism Authority launched its first Strategic Plan for the period 2000–02. The Malta Financial Services Centre regulates and supervises credit and financial institutions with effect from 1 Jan. 2002. In preparation for EU membership, the government has embarked on a three-year capital account liberalization.

Currency. The unit of currency is the Maltese lira (formerly pound) (MTL) of 100 cents. Total money supply was Lm644m. in March 2002. Inflation was 2·4% in 2000 and 2·9% in 2001. Gold reserves were 4,000 troy oz in June 2002 and foreign exchange reserves US$1,769m.

Budget. Revenue and expenditure (in Lm1m.):

	1996	1997	1998	1999	2000
Revenue	541·5	684·8	659·1	721·6	642·9
Expenditure	578·7	641·7	666·0	691·0	719·5

The most important sources of revenue are VAT, customs and excise duties, income tax, social security and receipts from the Central Bank of Malta. Also significant in certain years are proceeds from the sale of Government shares, foreign grants and foreign and local loans.

Performance. The average annual GDP growth in 1994–98 was 5·5%, with growth in 1998 itself of 3·4%. Total GDP in 2000 was US$3·6bn. In 2001 real GDP growth was negative, at –0·8%.

Banking and Finance. The Central Bank of Malta (Governor, Michael C. Bonello) was founded in 1968. In Dec. 2001 there were five domestic credit institutions undertaking business in the local market. 13 local financial institutions, licensed in terms of the Financial Institutions Act 1994, also provided services that ranged from exchange bureau-related business to merchant banking. There are also 13 international credit institutions that are licensed to undertake business in foreign currency and with non-residents.

Weights and Measures. The metric system is used.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Environment. According to the World Bank Atlas Malta's carbon dioxide emissions in 1998 were the equivalent of 4·7 tonnes per capita.

Electricity. Electricity is generated at two interconnected thermal power stations located at Marsa (272 MW) and Delimara (305 MW). The primary transmission voltages are 132,000, 33,000 and 11,000 volts while the low-voltage system is 400/230V, 50Hz with neutral point earthed. Installed capacity was 577,000 kW in 2000. Production in 2001 was 1·94bn. kWh; consumption per capita was 4,757 kWh.

Oil and Gas. Malta covers a large offshore area, representing the extensions of southeast Sicily, east Tunisia and northwest Libya where significant hydrocarbon reserves and production exist. Active exploration is at present being undertaken by AGIP and Hardman Resources NL in areas to the northwest, southwest and east of Malta. Discussions are also under way with other oil companies. Eni, an Italian distributor, drilled a well during 2002 in search of a hydrocarbon play similar to the one found in Sicily. An extensive seismic survey was carried out in 2001 to evaluate the hydrocarbon potential of the Maltese offshore and subsequently provide a framework for future exploration. Malta intends to intensify exploration by offering companies competitive terms and returns that are commensurate with the risk undertaken.

Water. The demand for water during 2000–01 was 33·7m. cu. metres, a reduction of 9% over the previous year, mainly as a result of improved leakage control. Seawater desalination (Reverse Osmosis Plants) provided 49% of the total potable water requirements.

Agriculture. Malta is self-sufficient in fresh vegetables, pig-meat, poultry, eggs and fresh milk. The main crops are potatoes (the spring crop being the country's primary agricultural export), vegetables and fruits, with some items such as tomatoes serving as the main input in the local canning industry. In 2000 there were about 2,375 full-time farmers and 15,519 part-time. There were around 11,513 agricultural holdings and 950 intensive livestock farm units.

Agriculture contributes around Lm30·8m. annually towards GDP, or 2·6%. 2000 production figures (in 1,000 tonnes): potatoes, 35; tomatoes, 21; melons, 14; wheat, 10; cauliflowers, 6; onions, 6.

Livestock in 2000: cattle, 19,000; pigs, 80,000; sheep, 16,000; chickens, 1m. Livestock produce accounted for 68·5% of the total value of agricultural production during 1998.

Fisheries. In 2001 the fishing industry employed 1,747 power-propelled fishing boats, engaging around 365 full time and 1,598 part-time fisherman. The catch for 2001 was 841 tonnes, valued at Lm1,587,044. It is estimated that during 2001 the local aqua-culture industry produced a total of about 1,235 tonnes of sea bass and bream. 95% of the local production was exported to EU countries in 2000, especially to Italy.

INDUSTRY

Besides manufacturing (food, clothing, chemicals, electrical machinery parts and electronic components and products), the mainstays of the economy are ship repair and shipbuilding, agriculture, small crafts units, tourism and the provision of other services such as the freeport facilities. The majority of state-aided manufacturing enterprises operating in Malta are foreign-owned or with foreign interests. The Malta Development Corporation is the government agency responsible for promoting investment, while the Malta Export Trade Corporation serves as a catalyst to the export of local products.

Labour. The labour supply in Sept. 2001 was 144,692 (females, 41,163), including 37,882 in private direct production (agriculture and fisheries, 2,198; manufacturing, 29,263; oil drilling, construction and quarrying, 6,421), 50,182 in private market services, 48,641 in the public sector (including government departments, armed forces, revenue security corps, independent statutory bodies and companies with public sector majority shareholding), and 1,003 in temporary employment. There were 6,984 registered unemployed (4·8% of labour supply).

Trade Unions. At the end of June 2001 there were 33 Trade Unions with a total membership of 87,158 and 24 employers' associations with a total membership of 8,547. In 1999–2000 the largest union was the General Workers' Union representing 57% of workers in industry and services.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Imports are being liberalized. Marsaxlokk is an all-weather freeport zone for transhipment activities. The Malta Export Trade Corporation promotes local exports. External debt was US$10,600m. in 1999.

Imports and Exports. In 2000 imports (f.o.b.) were valued at US$3,097·0m. (US$2,588·4m. in 1999) and exports (f.o.b.) at US$2,476·2m. (US$2,016·9m. in 1999). In 2000 the principal items of imports were: machinery and transport equipment, Lm852·6m.; manufactures, Lm146·8m.; semi-manufactures, Lm145·0m.; fuels, Lm106·5m; foodstuffs, Lm103·6m.; chemicals, Lm92·5m. Of domestic exports: machinery and transport equipment, Lm736·1m.; manufactures, Lm151·3m.; semi-manufactures, Lm53·9m.; foodstuffs, Lm17·1m.; chemicals, Lm13·0m.; beverages and tobacco, Lm3·5m.

In 2000 imports valued at Lm281·9m. came from France; Lm249·7m. from Italy; Lm158·5m. from USA; Lm122·1m. from Germany; Lm119·7m. from UK. Main export markets: USA, Lm286·5m.; Singapore, Lm164·7m.; Germany, Lm96·7m.; France, Lm84·1m.; UK, Lm70·0m.; Italy, Lm33·1m.

Trade Fairs. The Malta Trade Fairs Corporation organizes the International Fair of Malta (1–15 July).

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. In 2002 there were 2,254 km of roads, including 185 km of motorways. About 94% of roads are paved. Motor vehicles licensed up to 31 Dec. 2001 totalled 254,405 including: private cars, 188,495; commercial vehicles, 44,016; motorcycles, 15,257; buses and minibuses, 1,132. There were 16 deaths as a result of road accidents in 1998.

Civil Aviation. The national carrier is Air Malta, which is 96·4% state-owned. There were scheduled services in 2000 to around 30 different countries. In 2000 there were 36,489 commercial aircraft movements at Malta International Airport. 3,004,714 passengers, 13,699 tonnes of freight and 835 tonnes of mail were handled. In 1999 Air Malta flew 24·0m. km and carried 1,421,300 passengers.

Shipping. There is a car ferry between Malta and Gozo. The number of vessels registered on 31 Dec. 2001 was 3,031 totalling 27,042,430 GT, a total only exceeded by Panama, Liberia and the Bahamas. Ships entering harbour, excluding yachts and fishing vessels, during 2001, 5,565. 357 cruise vessels put in during 2000.

The Malta Freeport plays an important role in the economy as it is effectively positioned to act as a distribution centre in the Mediterranean. Apart from providing efficient transhipment operations to the major shipping lines, the Freeport offers warehouse facilities and the storage and blending of oil products.

Telecommunications. The Maltacom plc group is Malta's leading telecommunications and ancillary services provider. Malta's national network consist of 12 AXE10 Ericsson Digital Exchanges and 1 Siemens EWSD Exchange. Maltacom provides various data services including packet switching, frame relay and high-speed leased lines. The company has an optical fibre-based SDH backbone and large companies are connected to the Network. Maltacom's International Network includes two fully digital gateways, two satellite Standard B Earth Stations (one transmitting to the Atlantic Ocean Region and the other to the Indian Ocean Region) and an optic fibre submarine cable linking Malta to Sicily (Italy) and terrestrially extending to Palermo which is the hub of international submarine cables passing through the Mediterranean.

In 2000 main telephone lines in use numbered 204,200 (521·7 per 1,000 inhabitants) and there were 200,000 PCs (453·2 per 1,000 persons). Mobile phone subscribers numbered 37,500 in 1999 and there were 6,000 fax machines in 1996. In Dec. 2001 there were 59,000 Internet users.

Postal Services. In 1994 there were 50 post offices operated by Maltapost plc. Airmail dispatches are forwarded once daily to the UK, Canada, Australia, USA and Italy. Airmails from most countries are received daily or every other day. There are branch post offices and sub post offices in most towns and villages in Malta and Gozo.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. The number of persons arrested between 1 Jan. 2001 and 31 Oct. 2001 was 5,451; those found guilty numbered 2,180. 184 persons were committed to prison.

In Jan. 2002 police strength numbered 103 officers (15 women) and 1,451 other ranks (183 women).

Malta abolished the death penalty for all crimes in 2000.

Religion. 98% of the population belong to the Roman Catholic Church, which is established by law as the religion of the country, although full liberty of conscience and freedom of worship are guaranteed.

Education. Adult literacy rate, 1999, 91·8% (male, 91·1%; female, 92·4%).

Education is compulsory between the ages of 5 and 16 and free in government schools from kindergarten to university. Kindergarten education is provided for three- and four-year old children. The primary school course lasts six years. In Oct. 2000 there were 5,300 children in state kindergartens and 21,300 in 79 state primary schools. There are education centres for children with special needs, but they are taught in ordinary schools if possible.

Secondary schools, trade schools and junior lyceums provide secondary education in the state sector. At the end of their primary education, pupils sit the 11+ examination to start a secondary education course. Pupils who qualify are admitted in the junior lyceum, while the others attend secondary schools. In 2001, 11 junior lyceums had a total of 9,200 students (5,600 girls and 3,600 boys). About 8,300 pupils attend secondary schools (3,960 girls, 4,340 boys), and in 1998 there were five centres catering for 1,300 children (400 girls and 900 boys) at secondary level whose cultural capital was low. Secondary schools and junior lyceums offer a five-year course leading to the Secondary Education Certificate and the General Certificate of Education, Ordinary Level.

At the end of the five-year secondary course, students may opt to follow a higher academic or technical or vocational course of from one to four years. The academic courses generally lead to Intermediate and Advanced Level examinations set by the British universities. The junior college, administered by the University, prepares students specifically for a university course. The Matriculation Certificate, which qualifies students for admission to university, is a broad-based holistic qualification covering—among others—the humanities and the sciences, together with systems of knowledge.

About 30% of the student population attend non-state schools, from kindergarten to higher secondary level. In Oct. 2000 there were about 25,900 pupils attending non-state schools, 800 of whom were at post-compulsory secondary level, 17,500 were in schools run by the Roman Catholic Church, while 8,300 students were attending private schools. Under an agreement between the government and the Church, the government subsidizes Church schools and students attending these schools do not pay any fees. During 2001 the government introduced tax rebates for parents whose children attended independent schools.

Nearly 8,500 students (including 550 from overseas) were following courses at the University in 2000. University students receive a stipend.

In Oct. 2000 about 7,600 students were attending adult or evening courses covering a very wide spectrum of studies at different levels. Many of these courses lead to a recognized certification.

In 1996 total expenditure on education came to 5·1% of GNP and represented 10·8% of total government expenditure.

Health. In 2000 there were 2,220 doctors, 157 dentists, 690 pharmacists, 230 midwives and 4,050 nursing personnel. There were eight hospitals (three private) with 2,122 beds. There are also nine health centres.

Welfare. Legislation provides a national contributory insurance scheme and also for the payment of non-contributory allowances, assistances and pensions. It covers the payment of marriage grants, maternity benefits, child allowances, parental allowances, handicapped child allowance, family bonus, sickness benefit, injury benefits, disablement benefits, unemployment benefit, contributory pensions in respect of retirement, invalidity and widowhood, and non-contributory medical assistance, free medical aids, social assistance, a carers' pension and pensions for the handicapped, the blind and the aged.

CULTURE

Broadcasting. Radio and TV services are under the control of the Broadcasting Authority, an independent statutory body. The government-owned Public Broadcasting Services Ltd was set up in 1991 and operates three radio stations and a TV station (colour by PAL). Legislation of 1991 introduced private commercial broadcasting. In 2001 there were 13 radio and 5 TV services and a cable TV network. In 1997 there were 280,000 television sets and 255,000 radio receivers.

Cinema. In 2000 there were five cinemas.

Press. In 2000 there were 2 English and 2 Maltese dailies, 5 Maltese and 3 English weeklies and 2 financial weeklies in English.

Tourism. Tourism is the major foreign currency earner, and accounts for more than 25% of Malta's GDP.

In 2000 an estimated 1·2m. tourists (34·7% from the UK) visited Malta, generating earnings of Lm268·5m. Cruise passenger visits totalled 170,782. In 2000 there were 9,321 persons directly employed by the tourism industry.

Festivals. Major festivals include the Malta Song Festival; Carnival Festivals at Valletta (Feb.); History and Elegance Festival at Valletta and Mdina (April); National Folk Singing (May); Malta International Arts Festival, Malta Jazz Festival, International Food and Beer Festival (June/July); Festa Season (June–Sept.); Malta International Choir Festival, Amateur Film and Video Festival (Nov.).

Libraries. The National Library, housed in one of Valletta's 18th century buildings, is Malta's foremost research Library, founded in 1763. MARSHALL ISLANDS

Republic of the Marshall Islands

Capital: Majuro Atoll
Population estimate, 2000: 652,000
GDP per capita: not available
GNP per capita: $1,950

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

A German protectorate was formed in 1886 which was occupied at the beginning of the First World War by Japan. Japan was awarded a mandate by the League of Nations in 1919. During the Second World War the Islands were occupied by Allied forces in 1944, and became part of the UN Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands created on 18 July 1947 and administered by the USA. On 21 Oct. 1986 the islands gained independence and a Compact of Free Association with the USA came into force.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The Marshall Islands lie in the North Pacific Ocean north of Kiribati and east of Micronesia, and consist of an archipelago of 31 coral atolls, 5 single islands and 1,152 islets strung out in two chains, eastern and western. The land area is 181 sq. km (70 sq. miles). The capital is Majuro Atoll in the eastern chain (population, 1999 estimate, 33,000). The principal atoll in the western chain is Kwajalein, containing the only other town, Ebeye (population estimate, 1997, 15,000). The two archipelagic island chains of Bikini and Enewetak are former US nuclear test sites; Kwajalein is now used as a US missile test range. The islands lay claim to the US territory of Wake Island. At the census of 1999 the population was 50,840; density, 281 per sq. km.

In 1995 some 69% of the population lived in urban areas. About 97% of the population are Marshallese, a Micronesian people.

English is universally spoken and is the official language. Two major Marshallese dialects from the Malayo-Polynesian family, and Japanese, are also spoken.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

1997 births, estimate, 1,607; deaths, 243. 1997 rates per 1,000 population, estimates: birth, 26·4; death, 4·0; infant mortality rate, 31 per 1,000 live births; life expectancy, 64·1 years. Annual population growth rate, 1990–99, 3·4%; fertility rate, 1999, 5·4 births per woman.

CLIMATE

Hot and humid, with wet season from May to Nov. The islands border the typhoon belt. Jaluit, Jan. 81°F (27·2°C), July 82°F (27·8°C). Annual rainfall 161" (4,034 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

Under the constitution which came into force on 1 May 1979, the Marshall Islands form a republic with a President as head of state and government, who is elected for four-year terms by the parliament. The parliament consists of a 33-member House of Assembly (Nitijela), directly elected by popular vote for four-year terms. There is also a 12-member appointed Council of Chiefs (Iroij) which has a consultative and advisory capacity on matters affecting customary law and practice.

RECENT ELECTIONS

The last presidential election was held on 14 Jan. 1997. At the House of Assembly elections on 22 Nov. 1999 only non-partisans were elected.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

President: Kessai Note (elected on 3 Jan. 2000; sworn in 10 Jan. 2000).

In March 2003 the government comprised:

Minister of Assistance to the President: Tadashi Lometo. Education: Wilfred Kendall. Finance: Michael Konelios. Foreign Affairs and Trade: Gerald Zackios. Health and Environment: Alvin Jacklick. Internal Affairs and Social Welfare: Nidal Lorak. Public Works: Rien Morris. Resources, Development and Works: John Silk. Transportation and Communications: Brenson Wase.

DEFENCE

The Compact of Free Association gave the USA responsibility for defence in return for US assistance. There is a police force.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

The Marshall Islands are a member of the UN, Asian Development Bank, Pacific Community (formerly the South Pacific Commission) and the Pacific Islands Forum.

ECONOMY

Agriculture accounts for approximately 15% of GDP, industry 13% and services 72%.

Overview. Fisheries and tourism offer the best potential for economic growth and the government plans to devote increased resources to these activities.

Currency. US currency is used. The average annual inflation rate during the period 1990–96 was 6·4%.

Budget. 1995–96 estimate: revenue, US$80·1m.; expenditure: US$77·4m. Under the terms of the Compact of Free Association, the USA provides approximately US$65m. a year in aid.

Performance. Real GDP growth was 0·6% in 2001 (0·7% in 2000).

Banking and Finance. There are three Banks: the Bank of Marshall Islands, the Bank of Hawaii and the Bank of Guam.

The Marshall Islands were one of 15 countries and territories named in a report in June 2000 as failing to co-operate in the fight against international money laundering. The Financial Action Task Force on Money Laundering was set up by the G7 group of major industrialized nations.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Mexico's history falls into four epochs: the era of the Indian empires (before 1521), the Spanish colonial phase (1521–1810), the period of national formation (1810–1910), which includes the war of independence (1810–21) and the long dictatorship of Porfirio Díaz (1876–80, 1884–1911), and the present period which began with the social revolution of 1910–21. Mexico was conquered for Spain by Cortés in 1521 and became part of the viceroyalty of New Spain. A substantial part of Mexico's territory (including the present state of California) was lost to the USA by the Mexican War of 1846–48. In the 1860s France, Britain and the USA declared war on Mexico; France invaded the country and declared Maximilian, Archduke of Austria, to be Emperor. When the French withdrew in 1867 Maximilian was executed. The constitution of 1917 established a representative, democratic and federal republic, comprising 31 states and a federal district. The PRI (Partido Revolucionario Institucional) remained in power for 71 years until it was defeated by the conservative National Action party in the elections of July 2000. An uprising by the Zapatista National Liberation Army (EZLN) in 1994 sparked off a cycle of violence that has continued to this day despite a supposed ceasefire in Jan. 2002.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Mexico is bounded in the north by the USA, west and south by the Pacific Ocean, southeast by Guatemala, Belize and the Caribbean Sea, and northeast by the Gulf of Mexico. It comprises 1,967,375 sq. km (759,603 sq. miles), including uninhabited islands (5,127 sq. km) offshore.

Population at recent censuses: 1970, 48,225,238; 1980, 66,846,833; 1990, 81,249,645; 2000, 97,361,711 (50,007,325 females). Population density, 49·5 per sq. km (2000). 74·2% of the population were urban in 1999.

The UN gives a projected population for 2010 of 112·89m.

Mexico City: Located on a plateau more than 2,400 metres above sea level, Mexico City was built on the site of the Aztec City of Tenochtitlán which was destroyed in 1521 by Cortés. One of the most highly populated cities in the world, Mexico City suffers from pollution and atmospheric problems. However, that has not prevented it from hosting the Olympic Games and two series of football World Cup Finals.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Statistics for calendar years:

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

A new Constitution was promulgated on 5 Feb. 1917 and has been amended from time to time. Mexico is a representative, democratic and federal republic, comprising 31 states and a federal district, each state being free and sovereign in all internal affairs, but united in a federation established according to the principles of the Fundamental Law. The head of state and supreme executive authority is the President, directly elected for a non-renewable six-year term. The constitution was amended in April 2001, granting autonomy to 10m. indigenous peoples. The amendment was opposed both by the National Congress of Indigenous Peoples and Zapatista rebels who claimed it would leave many indigenous people worse off.

There is complete separation of legislative, executive and judicial powers (Art. 49). Legislative power is vested in a General Congress of two chambers, a Chamber of Deputies and a Senate. The Chamber of Deputies consists of 500 members directly elected for three years, 300 of them from single-member constituencies and 200 chosen under a system of proportional representation. In 1990 Congress voted a new Electoral Code. This establishes a body to organize elections (IFE), an electoral court (TFE) to resolve disputes, new electoral rolls and introduce a voter's registration card. Priests were enfranchised in 1991.

The Senate comprises 128 members, four from each state and four from the federal district, directly elected for six years. Members of both chambers are not immediately re-eligible for election. Congress sits from 1 Sept. to 31 Dec. each year; during the recess there is a permanent committee of 15 deputies and 14 senators appointed by the respective chambers.

National Anthem. 'Mexicanos, al grito de guerra' ('Mexicans, at the war-cry'); words by F. González Bocanegra, tune by Jaime Nunó.

RECENT ELECTIONS

At the presidential elections of 2 July 2000, Vicente Fox of the Partido Acción Nacional (National Action Party/Alliance for Change) won approximately 42·5% of the vote, defeating Francisco Labastida of the Partido Revolucionario Institucional (Institutional Revolutionary Party/PRI) who gained 36·1%. There were four other candidates. It was the first time in 71 years that the PRI had lost power.

Elections were also held on 2 July 2000 for the Chamber of Deputies and for the Chamber of Senators. In the Chamber of Deputies, Alianza por el Cambio (Alliance for Change, consisting of the National Action Party and the Ecologist Green Party of Mexico) claimed 224 of the 500 seats (44·8%), PRI took 208 (41·6%) and Alianza por México (Alliance for Mexico/AM) 68 (13·6%). Following the election the composition of the Senate was: PRI, 58 of the 128 seats (45·3%); Alliance for Change, 53 (41·4%); AM, 17 (13·3%).

Parliamentary and senate elections were scheduled to take place on 6 July 2003.

DEFENCE

In 2000 defence expenditure totalled US$5,229m. (US$53 per capita), representing 1·0% of GDP.

Army. Enlistment into the regular army is voluntary, but there is also one year of conscription (four hours per week) by lottery. Strength of the regular army (1999) 130,000 (60,000 conscripts). There are combined reserve forces of 300,000. In addition there is a rural defence militia of 14,000.

Navy. The Navy is primarily equipped and organized for offshore and coastal patrol duties. It includes three destroyers and six frigates. The naval air force, 1,100 strong, operates nine combat aircraft.

Naval personnel in 1999 totalled 37,000, including the naval air force and 10,000 marines.

Air Force. The Air Force had (1999) a strength of about 11,770 with over 125 combat aircraft, including F-5Es, and 95 armed helicopters.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

Mexico is a member of the UN (and most UN System organizations), WTO, BIS, OECD, OAS, Inter-American Development Bank (IADB), LAIA, ACS, APEC, NAFTA and IOM. A free trade agreement was signed with the European Union in 1999.

ECONOMY

Agriculture accounted for 4·9% of GDP in 1998, industry 26·6% and services 68·4%.

Overview. An economic programme for 1995 aimed to reduce inflation and to stimulate investment. After the peso was devalued in Dec. 1994 an emergency economic plan included an agreement between labour and employers to contain inflation, a fiscal adjustment to reduce the current account deficit, further privatization of infrastructural enterprises and the establishment of an international assistance fund. Between 1988 and 1997, 25 companies were privatized. An economic programme to attack ‘the roots of poverty’ was announced. Since the mid-1980s the economy has become one of the most open in Latin America.

Currency. The unit of currency is the Mexican peso (MXP) of 100 centavos. A new peso was introduced on 1 Jan. 1993: 1 new peso = 1,000 old pesos. The peso was devalued by 13·94% in Dec. 1994. Foreign exchange reserves were US$45,147m. and gold reserves 191,000 troy oz in June 2002. The annual inflation rate, which in 1995 was 35%, fell to 6·4% in 2001. Total money supply in June 2002 was 507,075m. new pesos.

Budget. Government revenue and expenditure (in 1m. new pesos), year ending 31 Dec.:

	1994	1995	1996	1997	1998	1999
Revenue	212,387	281,138	384,466	468,187	501,231	634,449
Expenditure	212,417	292,479	387,810	516,230	563,990	712,137

Performance. Real GDP grew by 6·9% in 2000, but in 2001 the economy contracted by 0·3%. In 2001 total GDP was US$617·8bn.

Banking and Finance. The Bank of Mexico, established 1 Sept. 1925, is the central bank of issue (Governor, Guillermo Ortíz Martínez). It gained autonomy over monetary policy in 1993. Exchange rate policy is determined jointly by the bank and the Finance Ministry. Banks were nationalized in 1982, but in May 1990 the government approved their reprivatization. The state continues to have a majority holding in foreign trade and rural development banks. Foreign holdings are limited to 49%. Mexico's largest bank is Banamex. In 2001 the American financial services company Citigroup bought Mexico's largest financial group, Banacci, and its second largest bank, Banamex, for US$12·5bn., but retained the name Banamex. Most of Mexico's leading banks are now foreign-owned.

There is a stock exchange in Mexico City.

Weights and Measures. The metric system is legal.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Environment. According to the World Bank Atlas Mexico's carbon dioxide emissions in 1998 were the equivalent of 3·9 tonnes per capita.

Electricity. Installed capacity, 1998, 35,256 MW. Output in 1998 was 180·5bn. kWh and consumption per capita 1,513 kWh. In 2001 there were two nuclear reactors in operation.

Oil and Gas. Crude petroleum production was 163m. tonnes in 1999. Mexico produced 4·7% of the world total oil output in 1999, and had reserves amounting to 26·9bn. bbls in 2001. Revenues from oil exports provide about a third of all government revenues. Natural gas production was 37·4bn. cu. metres in 1999 with 850bn. cu. metres in proven reserves.

Minerals. Output (in 1,000 tonnes), 1998: salt, 8,400; iron, 6,341; gypsum, 4,033; silica, 1,732; sulphur, 912·8; fluorite, 620·5; zinc, 370; copper, 344·9; manganese, 202·7; lead, 176·5; barite, 161·5; graphite, 41·9; silver, 2·9; gold, 26,111 kg; coal, 9,100; feldspar, 197·9. Mexico is the biggest producer of silver in the world.

Agriculture. In 1998 Mexico had 25·2m. ha of arable land and 2·10m. ha of permanent cropland. There were 6·5m. ha of irrigated land. There were 172,000 tractors and 19,500 harvester-threshers in 1998. In 1998 agriculture contributed 5·8% of GDP (6·0% in 1997). Some 60% of agricultural land belongs to about 30,000 ejidos (with 15m. members), communal lands with each member farming his plot independently. Ejidos can now be inherited, sold or rented. A land-titling programme (PROCEDE) is establishing the boundaries of 4·6m. plots of land totalling 102m. ha. Other private farmers may not own more than 100 ha of irrigated land or an equivalent in unirrigated land. There is a theoretical legal minimum of 10 ha for holdings, but some 60% of private farms were less than 5 ha in 1990. Laws abolishing the ejido system were passed in 1992.

Sown areas, 2000 (in 1,000 ha) included: maize, 8,661; beans, 2,252; sorghum, 2,170; coffee beans, 757; wheat, 749; sugarcane, 659; barley, 312; chick-peas, 210; chillies and green peppers, 142; safflower seeds, 103; rice, 98.

Production in 2000 (in 1,000 tonnes): sugarcane, 49,275; maize, 18,761; sorghum, 6,400; oranges, 3,390; wheat, 3,300; tomatoes, 2,401; chillies and green peppers, 1,813; bananas, 1,802; potatoes, 1,593; mangoes, 1,529; coconuts, 1,313; lemons and limes, 1,297; beans, 1,219; watermelons, 993; avocados, 939; papayas, 636; barley, 532; melons (excluding watermelons), 500.

Livestock (2000): cattle, 30·29m.; sheep, 5·90m.; pigs, 13·69m.; goats, 9·60m.; horses, 6·25m.; mules, 3·27m.; asses, 3·25m.; chickens, 476m. Meat production, 2000 (in 1,000 tonnes): beef and veal, 1,415; pork, bacon and ham, 1,035; horse, 79; goat, 39; lamb and mutton, 32; poultry meat, 1,896. Dairy production, 2000 (in 1,000 tonnes): cow milk, 9,474; goat milk, 134; eggs, 1,666; cheese, 148; honey, 57.

Forestry. Forests extended over 55·39m. ha in 1995, representing 29% of the land area (down from 57·93m. ha in 1990), containing pine, spruce, cedar, mahogany, logwood and rosewood. There are 14 forest reserves (nearly 0·8m. ha) and 47 national park forests of 0·75m. ha. Timber production was 24·12m. cu. metres in 1999.

Fisheries. The total catch in 1999 was 1,202,178 tonnes, of which 1,110,716 tonnes came from sea fishing.

INDUSTRY

The leading companies by market capitalization in Mexico, excluding banking and finance, in Jan. 2002 were: Teléfonos de México SA de CV (Telemex), 241bn. new pesos; Wal-Mart de México SA de CV (general retailers, formerly Cifra), 133bn. new pesos; and América Móvil SA de CV (a mobile phone company), 122bn. new pesos.

In 1998 the manufacturing industry provided 19·7% of GDP. Output in 1997 (in 1,000 tonnes): cement, 27,548; residual fuel oil, 24,760; petrol, 15,525; distillate fuel oil, 13,506; crude steel (1999), 15,300; crude iron (1996), 6,109; sugar (1998), 5,287; wheat flour (1996), 1,835; zinc (1996), 348·3; copper (1996), 328; lead (1996), 167·1; aluminium (1996), 95·8; butter (1996), 34; beer (1998), 5,456·9m. litres; soft drinks, 10,175·2m. litres; cigarettes, 57·6bn. units; passenger cars, 858,000 units; lorries, 468,931 units. Car production in particular has benefited from membership of NAFTA. Production has increased from 600,000 in 1993 to approaching 1·5bn. in 1999.

Labour. In 1996 the workforce was 24,063,283 (5,644,588 female). In 1997, 23·5% of the workforce were engaged in agriculture, 23·2% in services, public administration and defence, 20·5% in trade and 16·4% in manufacturing. 800,000 new jobs were created in 1997. Registered unemployment rate, 1998, 3·2% (1997, 3·7%). The daily minimum wage at the end of 1999 was 32 pesos.

Trade Unions. The Mexican Labour Congress (CTM) is incorporated into the Institutional Revolutionary Party, and is an umbrella organization numbering some 5m. An agreement, 'Alliance for Economic Recovery', was reached in Nov. 1995 between the government, trade unions and business, providing for an increase in the minimum wage of 10·1%, increased unemployment benefits, tax incentives, the staggering of price increases, and a commitment to reduce public spending. A breakaway from CTM took place in 1997 when rebel labour leaders set up the National Union of Workers (UNT) to combat what they saw as a sharp drop in real wages.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

In Sept. 1991 Mexico signed the free trade Treaty of Santiago with Chile, envisaging an annual 10% tariffs reduction from Jan. 1992. The North American Free Trade Agreement (NAFTA), between Canada, Mexico and the USA, was signed on 7 Oct. 1992 and came into effect on 1 Jan. 1994. A free trade agreement was signed with Costa Rica in March 1994. Some 8,300 products were free from tariffs, with others to follow over 10 years. The Group of Three (G3) free trade pact with Colombia and Venezuela came into effect on 1 Jan. 1995. Total foreign debt was US$150,288m. in 2000, a figure exceeded only by Brazil and Russia.

Imports and Exports. Trade for calendar years in US$1m.:

	1996	1997	1998	1999	2000
Imports f.o.b.	89,469	109,808	125,374	141,973	174,458
Exports f.o.b.	96,000	110,431	117,459	136,392	166,455

Of total imports in 1999, 74·3% came from USA, 3·5% from Germany, 3·3% from Japan, 1·9% from South Korea and 1·9% from Canada. Of total exports in 1999, 88·4% went to USA, 1·7% to Canada, 1·5% to Germany, 0·7% to Spain and 0·6% to Japan. In 1998 exports to the USA accounted for 21% of GDP.

The in-bond (maquiladora) assembly plants generate the largest flow of foreign exchange. Although originally located along the US border when the programme was introduced in the 1960s, they are now to be found in almost every state. In 2000 there were over 3,000 'foreign to Mexico' manufacturing companies, employing more than 1m. people. Manufactured goods account for 90% of trade revenues.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. Total length, 1997, was estimated at 323,977 km, of which 48,737 km were main roads, 61,375 km were secondary roads and 213,860 km by-roads. In 1998 there were 9,378,590 motor vehicles, 4,403,950 trucks and 108,690 buses and coaches.

Rail. The National Railway, Ferrocarriles Nacionales de Mexico, was split into five companies in 1996 as a preliminary to privatization. It comprises 26,623 km of 1,435 mm gauge (246 km electrified). In 1998 it carried 75·9m. tonnes of freight and 1·58m. passengers. There is a 178 km metro in Mexico City with ten lines. There are light rail lines in Guadalajara (48 km) and Monterrey (23 km).

Civil Aviation. There is an international airport at Mexico City (Benito Juárez) and 55 other international and 29 national airports. Each of the larger states has a local airline which links it with main airports. The national carriers are Aeromexico, Mexicana, Aeromar, Taesa, Aerocalifornia and Aerolíneas Internacionales; Aeromexico and Mexicana, both privatized in the late 1980s, are the main ones. In 1999 Aeromexico carried 8,672,000 passengers (1,959,300 on international flights) and Mexicana 7,359,700 passengers (2,901,500 international). In 2000 Mexico City handled 21,042,610 passengers (13,878,558 on domestic flights). Cancún was the second busiest airport for passengers in 2000, with 7,572,246 (5,915,439 on international flights). Guadalajara handled 5,021,004 passengers (3,279,602 on domestic flights).

Shipping. Mexico had 90 ocean ports in 1998, of which, on the Gulf coast, the most important include Tampico, Coatzacoalcos, Altamira, Progreso, Tuxpan, Morelos and Cozumel. Those on the Pacific Coast include Lazaro Cardenas, Manzanillo, Guaymas, La Paz-Pichilingue, Ensenada, Topolobampo, Mazatlán and Salina Cruz. The privatization of port operations has been taking place since the early 1990s.

Merchant shipping loaded 139·5m. tonnes and unloaded 62m. tonnes of cargo in 1996. In 1998 the merchant marine had a total tonnage of 1,085,000 GRT, including oil tankers 409,000 GRT. In 1997 vessels totalling 33,458,000 NRT entered ports and vessels totalling 125,671,000 NRT cleared.

Telecommunications. Telmex, previously a state-controlled company, was privatized in 1991. It controls about 98% of all the telephone service. There were 12,331,700 telephone main lines in 2000, or 124·7 for every 1,000 persons, and there were 5m. PCs in use (50·6 per 1,000 population). Mexico had 6·13m. mobile phone subscribers in Sept. 1999 and 3·5m. Internet users in Dec. 2001. There were 180,000 fax machines in 1995.

Postal Services. There were 9,149 post offices in 1998 (local administration, offices, agencies), equivalent to one for every 9,950 persons.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. Magistrates of the Supreme Court are appointed for six years by the President and confirmed by the Senate; they can be removed only on impeachment. The courts include the Supreme Court with 21 magistrates, 12 collegiate circuit courts with 3 judges each and 9 unitary circuit courts with 1 judge each, and 68 district courts with 1 judge each.

The penal code of 1 Jan. 1930 abolished the death penalty, except for the armed forces.

There were 15,596 murders in 1995 (a rate of 17·2 per 100,000 population). The population in penal institutions in Dec. 1996 was 103,262 (110 per 100,000 of national population).

Religion. In 1998 an estimated 89·6% of the population was Roman Catholic, down from 98% in 1950. In Feb. 2001 there were four Cardinals. The Church is separated from the State, and the constitution of 1917 provided strict regulation of this and all other religions. In Nov. 1991 Congress approved an amendment to the 1917 constitution permitting the recognition of churches by the state, the possession of property by churches and the enfranchisement of priests. Church buildings remain state property. In 1998 there were estimated to be 3·67m. Protestants, plus followers of various other religions. There were 811,000 Latter-day Saints (Mormons) in 1998.

Education. Adult literacy was 91·1% in 1999 (male, 93·1%; female, 89·1%). Primary and secondary education is free and compulsory, and secular, although religious instruction is permitted in private schools. By 2000 Mexicans were attending school for an average of 7·6 years, almost a year more than in 1994.

In 1999–2000 there were:

	Establishments	Teachers	Students (in 1,000)
Pre-school	69,916	170,559	3,394
Primary	98,286	596,164	14,766
Secondary	27,512	299,999	5,209
Baccalaureate	7,831	170,642	2,518
Vocational training	1,711	33,249	375

	Establishments	Teachers	Students (in 1,000)
Medium/Professional	607	17,481	216
Higher education	2,172	167,049	1,629
Postgraduate education	1,036	17,004	118

In 2000 total expenditure on education came to 6·1% of GDP, including 1,374m. new pesos on the Programa de Apoyo Federal a Entidades Federativas (Federal Support Program to the States).

Health. In 1997 there were 4,506 hospitals (1,539 public), with a total provision of 103,530 beds. In 1997 there were 147,618 doctors, 8,564 dentists and 182,171 nurses.

Welfare. In 1997, 51·43m. persons benefited from the National Health System (of which 39·46m. were beneficiaries of the Mexican Institute of Social Security).

CULTURE

Broadcasting. In 1997 there were 1,342 radio stations and 580 television stations licensed by the Dirección General de Concesiones y Permisos de Telecomunicaciones. Most radio stations carry the 'National Hour' programme. Television services are provided by the Televisa, Televisión Azteca and Multivision. There were 31m. radio receivers and 25·6m. TV sets (colour by NTSC) in 1997.

Cinema. In 1995 there were 1,495 cinemas and 63m. admissions; gross box office receipts came to 888m. new pesos. 14 full-length films were made.

Press. In 1996 there were 295 daily newspapers with a circulation of 9,030,000, equivalent to 97 per 1,000 inhabitants.

Tourism. There were 20·64m. tourists in 2000, putting Mexico 8th in the world list; gross revenue, including border visitors, amounted to US$7,223m. in 1999.

MICRONESIA

Federated States of Micronesia

Capital: Palikir
Population estimate, 2000: 133,000
GDP per capita: not available
GNP per capita: $1,830

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Spain acquired sovereignty over the Caroline Islands in 1886 but sold the archipelago to Germany in 1899. Japan occupied the Islands at the beginning of the First World War and in 1921 they were mandated to Japan by the League of Nations. Captured by Allied Forces in the Second World War, the Islands became part of the UN Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands created on 18 July 1947 and administered by the USA. The Federated States of Micronesia came into being on 10 May 1979. American trusteeship was terminated on 3 Nov. 1986 by the UN Security Council and on the same day Micronesia entered into a 15-year Free Association with the USA.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The Federated States lie in the North Pacific Ocean between 137° and 163° E, comprising 607 islands with a total land area of 702 sq. km (271 sq. miles). The population (1994 census) was 104,724; 1997 estimate, 127,600; density, 181 per sq. km.

In 1995 an estimated 72·3% of the population lived in rural areas.

The areas and populations of the four major groups of island states (east to west) are as follows:

State	Area (sq. km)	Population (1994 census)	Headquarters
Kosrae	109	7,354	Tofol
Pohnpei	344	33,372	Kolonia
Chuuk	127	52,870	Weno
Yap	119	11,128	Colonia

Kosrae consists of a single island. Its main town is Lelu (2,422 inhabitants in 1989). Pohnpei comprises a single island (covering 334 sq. km with 30,000 inhabitants in 1994) and eight scattered coral atolls. Kolonia (6,169 inhabitants in 1989) was the national capital of the Federated States. The new capital, Palikir, lies approximately 10 km southwest in the Palikir valley. Chuuk consists of a group of 14 islands within a large reef-fringed lagoon (44,000 inhabitants in 1994); the state also includes 12 coral atolls (8,000 inhabitants), the most important being the Mortlock Islands. The chief town is Weno (15,253 inhabitants in 1989). Yap comprises a main group of four islands (covering 100 sq. km with 7,000 inhabitants in 1994) and 13 coral atolls (4,000 inhabitants), the main ones being Ulithi and Woleai. Colonia is its chief town (3,456 inhabitants in 1989).

English is used in schools and is the official language. Trukese, Pohnpeian, Yapese and Kosrean are also spoken.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

In Dec. 1991 Moldova became a member of the CIS, a decision ratified by parliament in April 1994. Fighting took place in 1992 between government forces and separatists in the (largely Russian and Ukrainian) area east of the River Nistru (Transnistria). An agreement signed by the presidents of Moldova and Russia on 21 July 1992 brought to an end the armed conflict and established a 'security zone' controlled by peacekeeping forces from Russia, Moldova and Transnistria. On 21 Oct. 1994 a Moldo-Russian agreement obliged Russian troops to withdraw from the territory of Moldova over three years but the agreement was not ratified by the Russian Duma. On 8 May 1997 an agreement between Transnistria and the Moldovan government to end the separatist conflict stipulated that Transnistria would remain part of Moldova as it was territorially constituted in Jan. 1990. In 1997 some 7,000 Russian troops were stationed in Transnistria. In the autumn of 1999 Ion Sturza's centre-right coalition collapsed, along with privatization plans for the wine and tobacco industries. Communist President Vladimir Voronin, who was elected in 2001, has proposed giving the Russian language official status and joining the Russia–Belarus union.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Moldova is bounded in the east and south by Ukraine and on the west by Romania. The area is 33,700 sq. km (13,000 sq. miles). In Jan. 1994 the population was 4,353,000 (52·3% female).

The UN gives a projected population for 2010 of 4·19m.

In 1999, 53·8% of the population lived in rural areas. The 1989 census population was 4,335,360, of whom Moldovans accounted for 64·5%, Ukrainians 13·9%, Russians 13%, Gagauzi 3·5%, Bulgarians 2% and Jews 1·5%.

Apart from Chişinau, the capital (population of 655,000 in 1999), major towns are Tiraspol (185,000 in 1993), Beltsy (156,000 in 1993) and Bender (133,000 in 1992). The official Moldovan language (i.e. Romanian) was written in Cyrillic prior to the restoration of the Roman alphabet in 1989. It is spoken by 75% of the population; the use of other languages (Russian, Gagauz) is safeguarded by the Constitution.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

1999: births, 38,501; deaths, 41,314. Rates, 1999 (per 1,000 population): births, 8·8; deaths, 9·4. In 1998 the most popular age range for marrying was 20–24 for both males and females. Life expectancy at birth in 1999 was 62·8 years for males and 70·3 years for females. Infant mortality, 1998, 17·9 per 1,000 live births; fertility rate, 1999, 1·7 births per woman. By the end of 1998 more than 46% of the population were classified as living in absolute poverty.

CLIMATE

The climate is temperate, with warm summers, crisp, sunny autumns and cold winters with snow. Chişinau, Jan. –7°C, Jul. 20°C. Annual rainfall 677 mm.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

A declaration of republican sovereignty was adopted in June 1990 and in Aug. 1991 the republic declared itself independent. A new Constitution came into effect on 27 Aug. 1994, which defines Moldova as an 'independent, democratic and unitary state'. At a referendum on 6 March 1994 turn-out was 75·1%; 95·4% of votes cast favoured 'an independent Moldova within its 1990 borders'. The referendum (and the Feb. parliamentary elections) were not held by the authorities in Transnistria. In a further referendum on 4 June 1999, on whether to switch from a parliamentary system to a presidential one, turn-out was 58% with the majority of the votes cast being in favour of the change.

Parliament has 104 seats and is elected for four-year terms. There is a 4% threshold for election; votes falling below this are re-distributed to successful parties. The President is now elected for four-year terms by parliament, after the constitution had been amended to abolish direct presidential elections.

The 1994 Constitution makes provision for the autonomy of Transnistria and the Gagauz (Gagauzi Yeri) region.

Transnistria. In the predominantly Russian-speaking areas of Transnistria a self-styled 'Dniester Republic' was established in Sept. 1991, and approved by a local referendum in Dec. 1991. A Russo-Moldovan agreement of 21 July 1992 provided for a special statute for Transnistria and a guarantee of self-determination should Moldova unite with Romania. The population in 1998 was 670,000. Romanian here is still written in the Cyrillic alphabet. At a referendum on 24 Dec. 1995, 81% of votes cast were in favour of adopting a new constitution proclaiming independence.

On 17 June 1996 the Moldovan government granted Transnistria a special status as 'a state-territorial formation in the form of a republic within Moldova's internationally recognized border'.

Elections for chief regional executive were held on 9 Dec. 2001. Turn-out was 64%. Igor Smirnov (b. 1941) was re-elected for a third five-year term against two opponents winning nearly 82% of votes cast.

Gagauz Yeri. This was created an autonomous territorial unit by Moldovan legislation of 13 Jan. 1995. In 1995 the population was 153,000. There is a 35-member Popular Assembly directly elected for four-year terms and headed by a Governor, who is a member of the Moldovan cabinet. At the elections of 28 May and 11 June 1995 turn-out was 68%.

Governor. Gheorghe Tabunscic.

National Anthem. The Romanian anthem was replaced in 1994 by a traditional tune, 'Lîmbă noastră' ('Our Tongue'); words by Alexei Mateevici, tune by Alexandru Cristi.

RECENT ELECTIONS

At the parliamentary elections held on 25 Feb. 2001 the PCRM (communists) won 71 seats with 49·9% of the votes and the BEAB (centrists) 19 with 13·4%. The PPCD (conservative) won 11 seats with 8·3% of votes cast. Turn-out was 69%.

Following the parliamentary elections of Feb. 2001 parliament elected Vladimir Voronin, the Communist leader, as the new president on 4 April 2001. In so doing Moldova became the first former Soviet republic to choose a Communist as its head of state. Voronin received 71 votes against 15 for the prime minister, Dumitru Braghis, and 3 for another communist candidate, Valerian Cristea.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

President: Vladimir Voronin; b. 1941 (PCRM; sworn in 7 April 2001).

In March 2003 the government comprised:

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Temujin became khan of Hamag Mongolia in 1190. Having united by conquest various Tatar and Mongolian tribes he was confirmed as 'Universal' ('Genghis', 'Chingiz') khan in 1206. The expansionist impulse of his nomadic empire (Beijing captured in 1215; Samarkand in 1220) continued after his death in 1227. Tamurlaine (died 1405) was the last of the conquering khans. In 1368 the Chinese drove the Mongols from Beijing, and for the next two centuries Sino-Mongolian relations alternated between war and trade. In 1691 Outer Mongolia accepted Manchu rule. The head of the Lamaist faith became the symbol of national identity, and his seat ('Urga', now Ulan Bator) was made the Mongolian capital. When the Manchu dynasty was overthrown in 1911 Outer Mongolia declared its independence under its spiritual ruler and turned to Russia for support against China. Soviet and Mongolian revolutionary forces set up a provisional government in March 1921. On the death of the spiritual ruler a people's republic and new constitution were proclaimed in May 1924. With Soviet help Japanese invaders were fended off during the Second World War. The Mongols then took part in the successful Soviet campaign against Inner Mongolia and Manchuria. On 5 Jan. 1946 China recognized the independence of Outer Mongolia. Until 1990 sole power was in the hands of the Mongolian People's Revolutionary (Communist) Party (MPRP), but an opposition Mongolian Democratic Party, founded in Dec. 1989, achieved tacit recognition and held its first congress in Feb. 1990. Following demonstrations and hunger-strikes, on 12 March the entire MPRP Politburo resigned and political opposition was legalized.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Mongolia is bounded in the north by the Russian Federation, and in the east and south and west by China. Area, 1,565,008 sq. km (604,250 sq. miles). Population (2000 census), 2,373,493 (1,195,512 females). Density, 2000, 1·5 per sq. km. In 2000, 57·0% of the population were urban.

The UN gives a projected population for 2010 of 2·87m.

The population is predominantly made up of Mongolian peoples (81·5% Khalkh). There is a Turkic Kazakh minority (4·3% of the population) and 20 Mongol minorities. The official language is Khalkh Mongol.

The republic is administratively divided into three cities: Ulan Bator, the capital (2000 population, 760,077), Erdenet (68,000 in 2000) and Darhan (66,000 in 2000), and 18 provinces (aimag). The provinces are sub-divided into 334 districts or counties (suums).

ECONOMY

In 1998 agriculture accounted for 32·8% of GDP, industry 27·6% and services 39·6%.

Overview. Mongolia has for centuries had a traditional nomadic pastoral economy which the government aims to transform into a market economy. An Agency for National Development, headed by a minister of cabinet rank, co-ordinates economic policy. A law of May 1991 introduced privatization by the distribution of vouchers worth 10,000 tugriks to 2m. citizens to acquire holdings or to buy small businesses or livestock. About 45% of state-owned assets had been privatized by 2001.

Currency. The unit of currency is the tugrik (MNT) of 100 möngö. The tugrik was made convertible in 1993. In June 2002 foreign exchange reserves were US$210m., gold reserves totalled 41,000 troy oz and total money supply was 187,680m. tugriks. Inflation, which stood at 268% in 1993, had been brought down to below 10% by 1998 and in 2001 was 8·0%.

Budget. Total revenue and expenditure (in 1m. tugriks):

	1997	1998	1999	2000
Revenue	171,744	183,552	196,561	303,215
Expenditure	176,436	201,279	232,795	306,037

Sources of revenue, 1995 (in 1m. tugriks): taxes, 109,269·5 (comprising: income, profits and capital gains tax, 49,999·4; social security contributions, 18,906·1; payroll taxes, 43·5; taxes on goods and services, 27,364·7; taxes on foreign trade, 9,630·5; other, 3,325·3); non-tax revenue, 18,243·2; capital revenue, 3,751·2; grants, 5,010·5. KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The native people of Morocco are the Berbers, an ancient race who have suffered the attention of a succession of invaders. When the city of Carthage fell to Rome in the second century BC, the African Mediterranean coast was under Roman dominance for almost six hundred years. When the Roman Empire in turn fell into decline, the area was invaded first by the Vandals in AD 429 and later by Byzantium in AD 533. An Arab invasion of Morocco in AD 682 marked the end of Byzantium dominance and the first Arab rulers, the Idrisid dynasty, ruled for 150 years. Arab and Berber dynasties succeeded the Idrisids until the 13th century when the country was plunged into bitter civil war between Arab and Berber factions. The reign of Ahmed I al-Man-sur in the first Sharifian dynasty stabilized and unified the country between 1579 and 1603. Moors and Jews expelled from Spain settled in Morocco during this time and the country flourished. In 1415 the Moroccan port of Ceuta was captured by Portugal. Moroccan forces defeated the Portuguese in 1578 and by 1700 had regained control of many coastal towns which had previously been in Portuguese hands. During the 18th and early 19th centuries the Barbary Coast became the scene of widespread piracy.

By the beginning of the 20th century Britain had recognized Morocco as a French sphere of influence and in 1904 Morocco was divided between France and Spain, with the former receiving the larger area. From 1912 to 1956 Morocco was divided into a French protectorate, a Spanish protectorate, and the international zone of Tangier which was established by France, Great Britain and Spain in 1923. On 29 Oct. 1956 the international status of the Tangier Zone was abolished and Morocco became a kingdom on 18 Aug. 1957, with the Sultan taking the title Mohammed V. Succeeding his father on 3 March 1961, King Hassan tried to combine the various parties in government and established an elected House of Representatives but political unrest led him to discard any attempt at a parliamentary government and to rule autocratically from 1965 to 1977. In 1977 a new Chamber of Representatives was elected and under the constitution Morocco became a constitutional monarchy with a single elected chamber.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Morocco is bounded by Algeria to the east and southeast, Mauritania to the south, the Atlantic Ocean to the northwest and the Mediterranean to the north. Excluding the Western Saharan territory claimed and retrieved since 1976 by Morocco, the area is 458,730 sq. km and population at the 1994 census was 25,671,403. At the 1984 census Western Sahara had an area of 252,120 sq. km and 163,868 population. The Moroccan superficie is 710,850 sq. km. Population estimate, 1995, 28·3m. (55·3% urban in 1999); density, 61·7 per sq. km.

The UN gives a projected population for 2010 of 35·32m.

There was a census in Sept. 1994. The 49 provinces and 22 prefectures are grouped into seven economic regions (in parentheses). Area and population in 1994:

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The ruling King is Mohammed VI, born on 21 Aug. 1963, married to Salma Bennani on 21 March 2002; succeeded on 23 July 1999, on the death of his father Hassan II, who reigned 1961–99. The King holds supreme civil and religious authority, the latter in his capacity of Emir-el-Muminin or Commander of the Faithful. He resides usually at Rabat, but occasionally in one of the other traditional capitals, Fès (founded in 808), Marrakesh (founded in 1062), or at Skhirat.

A new Constitution was approved by referendum in March 1972 and amendments were approved by referendum in May 1980 and Sept. 1992. The Kingdom of Morocco is a constitutional monarchy. Parliament consists of a Chamber of Representatives composed of 325 deputies directly elected for five-year terms. For the Sept. 2002 elections a series of measures were introduced, including a new proportional representation voting system and a national list reserved for women candidates to ensure that at least 10% of new MPs are females.

A referendum on 13 Sept. 1996 established a second Chamber of Counsellors, composed of 270 members serving nine-year terms, of whom 162 are elected by local councils, 81 by chambers of commerce and 27 by trade unions. The Chamber of Counsellors has power to initiate legislation, issue warnings of censure to the government and ultimately to force the government's resignation by a two-thirds majority vote. The electorate was 12·3m. and turn-out was 82·95%. The King, as sovereign head of State, appoints the Prime Minister and other Ministers, has the right to dissolve Parliament and approves legislation.

A new electoral code of March 1997 fixed voting at 20 and made enrolment on the electoral roll compulsory. In Dec. 2002 King Mohammed VI announced that the voting age was to be lowered from 20 to 18.
